This Number of the Cynosure completes the report of the proceedings at Batavia, and contains in full Thurlow Weed's memorable letter, which will be read with interest almost as deep as that felt by the Convention when read in its hearing. The historical reminiscences at the monument fill another valuable page, and will be continued

IN OUR NEXT.

When will also appear Mrs. Mather's statement respecting the pretended Mrs. Monroe, and the experiences given by seceded Masons on the last evening which moved the soul of every listener. The addresses of Prof. E. D. Bailey and Elders Hinman and Browne are also promised for publication. Our edition last week was early exhausted, so that extra copies cannot be supplied, much to our regret.

The Abduction Number

Of the Cynosure, Sept. 7th, can be supplied in large quantities or small at 3c. each. Remember this is the illustrated paper, and the same matter in an an ordinary pamphlet would be worth five times the amount. Send for this paper, and scatter it among your neighbors. Friends who are canvassing for subscribers send your names and get some copies free, so many as you can wisely use to bring back returns.

NOTICES.

Indiana.

The annual State Convention for Indiana will be held at Carthage, Rush county, October 24th and 25th. Friends of the reform in the State are urged to make immediate preparations to attend. The place selected is a grand one for the convention.

Signed by Ex. Committee: S. L. Cook, J. W. Lowman, Benj. Ulsh, Wm. Small, E. Hansen.

New Hampshire.

The Sixth Annual Convention of the New Hampshire Christian Association will be held at Center Strafford Wednesday and Thursday, October 11th and 12th, A. D. 1882. President J. Blanchard, D.D., of Wheaton, Ill., Rev. J. P. Stoddard of Chicago, Prof. E. D. Bailey of Worcester, Mass., and other brethren will address the Convention. Friends coming on the Worcester and Nashua railroad please notify Deacon E. Smith, Center Strafford, N. H.; those coming on the Boston and Maine, Elder J. N. Bartlette, Center Barnstead, N. H.; and those on the Dover and Alton railroad, Frank Pugsley, Rochester, N. H. Teams will be waiting Tuesday the 10th at Barrington on the first named road, Dover on the second and Rochester on the third. Entertainment will be free. Friends in neighboring States are cordially invited to be present. Brethren in New Hampshire, come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. Come praying that the Holy Spirit may rest upon our convention with power and blessing. By order of the Executive Committee.

THE MONUMENT CONVENTION.

DALE, Wyoming County, N.Y.
Saturday, Sept. 16, 1882.

READERS OF THE CYNOSURE:—I am here to stop over Sabbath, among hills crested with woods, with springs in their valleys which outlive the drouth; old orchards, with their little hard, native seedling fruit, being now crowded out with young cultivated trees; in short, I am amid surroundings exactly like the hills of Vermont, where my young imaginations were all born. The air is balm; and the fountain in front of the house, fed by a spring up the hill, sends up its graceful curve of water. I am here as one transformed into a young man and may as well confess it.

I arose this morning by light, and, forgetting the many years walking with me, I went up some of these hills to their summits. In the midst of a cornfield on one hill I found a little grave-stone with this epitaph:

"Behold a sweet and lovely child,
Which once so fair serenely smiled,
Has bid the world adieu.
He feels no more the pangs of death,
Or breathes the agonizing breath;
No tears his cheek bedew."

This is indigenous poetry, evidently, which grew out of these hills like the shrubs and wild apple trees. I wandered on and climbed a fence into a hill-pasture, where, amid some stray Canada thistles (which, though hated, looked like old friends,) I found a few more grave-stones, broken and dilapidated, yet I read on the stone of a young man, perhaps brother to the babe sleeping in the corn-field, the following:

"Dear children, think as you pass by,
The lonely grave in which I lie;
As I am now soon you must be,
Therefore prepare to follow me."

In these and every other epitaph here I found no allusion to God, eternity or religion. On returning to the house I learned they were the unremoved remnants of an old hill grave-yard, and that the family to which they belonged were men of powerful frames, who drank enormous quantities of whisky, and so had no religion, and left no friends to remove their bones when the cemetery was removed. The curse of the liquor traffic thus follows beyond the grave.

I am here seven miles from Warsaw, the home of Seth M. Gates. I am going to speak in his church to-morrow if I can speak on the relation of the lodge to the Christian religion. If not, I will speak elsewhere. When through the Sabbath I will write an account of it, with other interesting matters. Here in the small village of Dale, at night I preached for Bro. Hyatt, whose name is familiar to the Cynosure readers. If I could crowd my thoughts and feelings into a letter, my readers would be as happy in the reading as I am in the experience.

SATURDAY EVE., Sept. 16.—I have to-day visited, in company with the able and unwearied Mr. Capwell, the several pastors in Warsaw, N. Y., and am to preach there to-morrow (Sunday) night. Messrs. Starry of Iowa, and Butler of Missouri, came down from Batavia with me. They have to-night gone over to Wyoming to exemplify the degrees, or one of them. These men have in them all, Capwell, Starry and Butler, elements of great power and will yet become prominent men in their respective States. The readers of the Cynosure will note this, and see if coming years do not fulfill the prediction.

I intended to speak at large and in detail of the Monument Convention, but must defer it until I see what Messrs. Stoddard and Kellogg have written. A thousand tokens indicate great and speedy enlargement of the reform.

MONDAY MORN., Sept. 18.—I preached yesterday evening in the M. E. church, Warsaw, N. Y., long the home of Hon. Seth M. Gates, to an apparently interested and intelligent congregation. Messrs. Starry and Butler, who exemplified the Entered Apprentice degree at Wyoming on Saturday night, give the first and third degrees at Irving Hall, Warsaw, on Monday and Tuesday evenings. Elder J. F. Browne, of Kentucky, is to be with them. Since Mr. Butler left his home in Albany, Missouri, the American party there have nominated him for Congress on the American ticket. He is a young, clear-thinking man; and in our judgment, if his life is spared he will yet hold and do honor to a seat in Congress. Next to Secretary Stoddard, here, who "Has won

Golden opinions from all sorts of people."

Mr. F.W. Capwell has accomplished and is accomplishing wonders in this part of the State. The meetings being held by Starry, Butler and Browne, are of his procuring. Mr. Capwell is a man of mature age, tireless energy, and excellent business talents. He has a beautiful home in the hills back of the village of Dale; and is blessed with a most excellent and happy family. He is a fair speaker, and if the American party succeeds, will yet adorn the highest office in the State.

The subject of Woman Suffrage was fully considered in the Convention, and not a word was said against it. The Convention unanimously passed a carefully drawn paper, offered by Pres. C. A. Blanchard, which was supplemented by a general resolution offered by Pres. Kephart, of Avalon College, Missouri, whose counsels in the Convention were of the utmost importance.

The Abdiels of our Reform.

BY P. S. FEEMSTER.

I once traveled alone through a wild mountain region on the headwaters of Broad river, North Carolina. The rocky cliffs rose high on either side and streams ploughed madly over them.

The laurel and ivy, beautiful but poisonous, were the principal growth, and wild beasts lurked in the dens by the roadside. In a quiet nook amidst those scenes of threatening grandeur one single violet grew and bloomed alone; that lone violet spoke volumes to me and has been a lasting inspiration.

In this work of reform many of the churches have looked down upon me cold and grim as rocky cliffs, and sometimes torrents of passion have dashed madly over them, and from the dark dens of the lodges angry men have hissed and growled. Thank God for the few lone witnesses, brave witnesses for truth and purity, who have helped and cheered me on my way.

It is wonderful how much can be accomplished by one fearless witness for truth in any community. At Montgomery, Ala., a wide door was opened to me by the judicious aid of one man, Rev. R. W. Fay. At Lyons, Kan., I was favored with a reasonably good hearing mainly through the influence of brother John Motter, who is ever a swift witness against the lodge power. In Sedgwick City I spoke to goodly congregations and was enabled to bear testimony to the truth in the very teeth of the lodge lion, with none to stand by me but the Kier family.

I mention these simply as illustrations, not because they are the only ones who have met me with bread and water and have stood bravely by me in the thickest of the fight. There have been many others just as brave and just as true whose names may not be known on earth but who will no doubt stand at last in that great company "who came out of great tribulation and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

At other points where many claimed in a quiet way that lodge worship was false worship, I have walked to the appointed place alone, opened the house and lit the lamps with my own hand, and bore my testimony against the devil worship to those who gathered there without one word of sympathy from any source whatever.

I have often wondered if Paul felt these things as keenly as I do when he wrote to Timoth, "At my first answer no man stood with me but all men forsook me. I pray God it may not be laid to their charge."

When I see lodges fattening on the cowardice of their foes, and growing strong in places where the faithful testimony of those who see and know their evil nature would wipe them out. I realize as I never did before why the fearful are classed in Rev. 21:8 with the unbelieving and abominable and murderers and whoremongers and sorcerers, and idolaters and all liars, and doomed to the lake which burns with fire and brimstone.

Business men are fearful that they will hurt their trade. Preachers are fearful that they will lose their salaries and congregations. Whole denominations are fearful that they will not be able to keep step with their sister denominations in the mad scramble for numbers, wealth and social power. Hence all unite to crowd out, frown out or freeze out the dreaded testimony to the truth. May the Lord grant grace to the faithful even unto death in this struggle for truth.

Where the Money Goes.

When secret society leaders fall we get some truth. The following from the Royal Templar is light on secret darkness.

"Members of the order bear in mind this fact, that while the self-elected Supreme Councilor, so-called, was drawing one hundred dollars a month from the order, and eating the bread of idleness, the editor of the Royal Templar was working day and night to earn money to publish a paper devoted to the order, and never received even his just dues from the Supreme Council, for work done.

While the would-be publisher of the official paper draws nearly fifteen hundred dollars a year from the order, the publisher of the Royal Templar has spent in hard cash nearly fifteen hundred dollars and years of time and more value than money.

That the Royal Templar has done more to build up the order than any other means, we call upon the man, C. K. Porter, who bears witness, and his evidence is true as published in his annual report.

Between the Royal Templar, the paper of the people, and the paper published by the Supreme Council, we call upon the members of the order to decide. From their verdict there is no appeal."

REFORM STORY.

Holden with Cords.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "LITTLE PEOPLE," "A SUNNY LIFE," ETC.

Chapter XXII—Continued.

Rachel uttered a low cry of horror. I was silent—struck dumb with the reflection of Elder Cushing's speech, and the coarse, horrible jesting which had succeeded it. Every allusion made by Darius Fox, and the group of which he was the center, most of them Royal Arch Masons like himself, grew clear as daylight. They were talking about the murder of Captain Morgan; Elder Cushing knew it and that benign smile and smooth speech was intended to blind me as well as some others in the lodge to a truth it was thought best not to have us learn too suddenly.

"How do you know Captain Morgan has been murdered?" I inquired at last.

"From the best authorities possible—Masons themselves. Full five weeks before he was kidnapped in Canandaigua, I heard the subject discussed at a meeting of the Chapter, in a way that left no doubt on my mind what the fraternity intended. A minister of the Gospel, a Royal Arch Mason, gave me my first information that Captain Morgan was writing out the secrets of Masonry. He said that Morgan had forfeited his life by the act, and he himself would be willing to be one of a number to put him out of the way; for he believed God regarded the Masonic institution with so much complacency that he would never allow his murderers—his executioners, I believe was the word he used—to suffer for the deed. I understood from a reliable source that Morgan and Miller were both apprised of this danger and prepared for defence or I should have sent them warning."

"But how does it happen—"

"That I know so much more about this horrible business than you?" said Mark, anticipating my unuttered question. "You are only a Master Mason; yon have promised to keep every secret of a brother Mason, murder and treason excepted. But I am a Royal Arch Mason; I have promised to keep all a companion's secrets, murder and treason not excepted. Furthermore I am what they call a high Mason; as high as Elder Cushing himself. I took the Ineffable Degrees in the city of New York. I am a Knight Templar; I have drank of wine from a human skull, and over the horrible draught I have invoked in awful terms a double damnation on my soul if I violate the least of my Masonic obligations. You and Rachel look horrified. I don't wonder; but I speak the words of truth and soberness when I affirm that this is actually what I and every other Knight Templar has done. It is called 'the sealed libation' because it seals all other obligations the candidate has taken or will take. Henceforth he is bound by double penalties,—a horrible death and perdition on his soul, both invoked by his own lips. What wonder that the secret of Morgan's murder can pass safely and silently from one Knight Templar to another without the smallest fear of disclosure!"

"But if this is so, Mark, how dare you—" And again I stopped while Mark completed the unfinished inquiry.

"How dare I reveal all this, you mean? But it is a very small part of what I intend to reveal to the world should God spare my life. I am Masonry's slave no longer, I am Christ's freeman. And if the foul institution whose hands are red to-day with the blood of Morgan should require my life also, may He give me strength not to shrink from the sacrifice!"

"But O, Mark! my brother, be careful!" cried Rachel, turning pale; while I put in a word or two of caution. "Don't go to throwing away your young life, Mark. You can bear testimony in a quiet way, and do just as much good, perhaps more than by testifying publicly."

But when once the martyr spirit is fully roused in man or woman words of mere worldly prudence will go as far towards quenching it as water poured on Greek fire.

"Ah, Rachel and Leander, you both love me but yon must forgive me if I have already taken counsel of a higher wisdom than yours. Why should I continue to deny the Lord that bought me? If I have let fear and shame govern me in the past, must they hold a base dominion over me all my life? Never!"

"But Mark—"

"He that loveth his life shall lose it. He that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal;" answered Mark, solemnly. "I have learned not to fear them which kill the body. And if you want to know where, it was in an encampment of Knight Templars, when I saw the sword of every Sir Knight in the room drawn to charge upon me, a poor, shivering, helpless wretch, because I refused either to drink wine from a human skull or take the blasphemous oath required of me; and was told by the Most Eminent, 'Pilgrim, you here see the swords of your companions drawn to defend you in the discharge of every duty we require of you. They are also drawn to avenge any violation of the rules of our order. We expect yon to proceed!' For one instant I thought I would submit to anything, even death itself first. And then a clergyman who was an acquaintance of mine, and had accompanied me—all the rest were utter strangers—stepped forward and told me that he and the rest of the Sir Knights had taken the oath and drank of the fifth libation; that it was all perfectly proper, and would be qualified to my satisfaction. Fear accomplished the rest. I drank the cup of a double curse, but better I had died a martyr's death on the points of those naked swords than have done it! Satan desired to have me that he might sift me as wheat; but now that I am converted shall I not strengthen my brethren, bound in these terrible meshes,—longing to escape, yet seeing no way of deliverance? Shall I not by revealing all I know of this monstrous system save other poor souls from being fooled and betrayed as I have been?"

I looked at Mark in a wonder which was due to the fact that while his Masonic obligations to secrecy seemed to rest on him with the lightness of a feather's weight, I felt them as binding as ever on me, and did not understand how he with his more delicate moral sense could dispose of them so easily. Mark must have understood the look, for he continued,—

"Not a single one of those unholy vows has the least binding force on my conscience. Once they bound my whole soul and mind and will as with fetters of adamant, but now the law of the spirit of liberty in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death. Those vows were made to Satan and not to God. Shall I by continuing to regard them acknowledge his authority over me? Shall I have secret fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness because too cowardly to come out boldly on the Lord's side and expose them? Shall I give the god of the lodge even a silent worship?—for it has a god, and lately I have found out his name. Not Jehovah, maker and preserver of men; not Jesus Christ, our ever blessed Redeemer. His name is Baal, the sun-god of ancient Moab and idolatrous Israel. And in every lodge all over the land are practiced rites borrowed from the old pagan mysteries; the same that Ezekiel described in his vision, 'Behold at the door of the temple of the Lord, between the porch and the altar were five and twenty men with their backs toward the temple of the Lord and their faces toward the east. And they worshipped the sun towards the east.' You and I, Leander, did exactly what those old idolatrous Jews did when we were conducted round the lodge three times with our faces towards the east. We too, were worshipping the sun, or call it by another name, Baal."

"But how did you find out all this, Mark?" said I, in mingled astonishment and perplexity, greater if possible than when I sat in Benjamin Hagan's cabin, and listened to the honest backwoods preacher as he weighed the boasted morality of the lodge in the scales of the Ten Commandments and found it—wanting.

"The murder of Morgan was the first thing that opened my eyes; and this little book," added Mark, at the same time drawing a small volume from his coat pocket which he handed to me; "has, under God, been the instrument of converting me forever from the worship of this false, unclean, red-handed deity of the lodge."

I turned it over. It was entitled: "An Inquiry into the Origin and Nature of Speculative Freemasonry, by Elder John G. Stearns." Mark continued,

"Quite as much for the crime of introducing this book to the notice of some of my Masonic acquaintances, as for my outspoken abhorrence of Captain Morgan's murder, a hint was soon dropped me by the Faculty—all high Masons—that my resignation would be acceptable. Of course I resigned at once, though I let them know at the same time that I understood perfectly well the reason of my dismissal. Now you and Rachel know the whole story. I have come home a humbler, wiser and I trust better man than when I went away. I believe the Lord has a work waiting for me. Till he shows me when and how to take it up I shall go back and fill my old place on the farm. And now, Leander, I have a question to ask. Are yon content to remain longer connected with the institution that has taken the life of Morgan?"

"No; and may heaven bear witness that I leave it henceforth forever," I answered solemnly. And then Rachel, who had sat silent hitherto, gazing in blank bewilderment from one to the other, as what woman would not on discovering that her nearest male relatives have been secretly practicing heathenism, turned to me with the quick tears of a sudden joy in her eyes,—

"Now you are mine, Leander, all mine! Nothing to come between us more. Thank God!"

I clasped her hand silently, and it was like a second sealing of our marriage vows.

"Leander," said Mark, as we were parting for the night, "I know your grandfather is a zealous Mason. What does he say about this affair of Morgan's?"

"Very little; but I think you will find it hard to convince him that Morgan is not alive and safe somewhere in Canada," I answered. For the fact was, my grandfather though hitherto the most easy and good natured of beings, had developed of late such a strange testiness in regard to this one particular subject, that I hardly knew what to think of him. He refused to listen to the least hint of any suspicion on my part that Morgan might have possibly fallen a victim to Masonic vengeance. "Don't talk nonsense to me, Leander," was his invariable way of disposing of the subject; and after a few attempts I finally shut my mouth and talked no more of the objectionable "nonsense."

The next morning we went over to see him. There had been a sharp frost during the night and my grandfather, who suffered much with rheumatism, and felt keenly the sudden oncoming of cold weather, we found seated in the kitchen—which no one au-fait in the domestic economy of those primitive days will need to be informed was, in ordinary cases, the family sitting room—enjoying the warmth of the bright fire blazing in the huge fire-place. He shook hands heartily with Mark, and the latter after replying to sundry surprised exclamations and inquiries from my mother and Miss Loker, took a seat beside him and quietly told the awful tidings.

But contrary to all my expectation there was no impatient outburst of disbelief on my grandfather's part. He sat for a moment not speaking a word, his head bowed and his eyes fixed on the floor.

"I can bring proof if that is necessary;" said Mark who felt as I, at a loss to interpret his silence.

"Proof! I want no proof." And my grandfather rose up, tall, straight as in the days of his youth; and taking off the glistening Masonic badge that he had worn for so many years, he walked up to the fire blazing on the hearth and deliberately flung it into the flames, while my mother and Miss Loker looked on, amazed.

"I want no proof;" he repeated. "It is all there,—in the Entered Apprentice oath. Fool that I was never to see it before!"

And tottering back to his chair, the excitement over, my grandfather bowed his gray head and wept.

Thurlow Weed's Recollections of the Abduction of William Morgan.

Prepared at the Request of the Secretary of the N. C. A. and read in the National Convention at Batavia, Sep. 14.

NEW YORK, September 9th, 1882.

DEAR SIR:—I have delayed the answer to your letter inviting me to attend the unveiling of the monument of Captain William Morgan in the hope that I should be able to be present on that occasion.

Impaired vision, added to other infirmities, prevents my going far from home. The occasion is one that recalls an event of startling interest, arousing deep, popular feeling, first at Batavia, Leroy, Canandaigua and Rochester; then pervading our own, and other States. After reading the proceedings of a meeting at Batavia with the Hon. David E. Evans as presiding officer, I wrote a six line paragraph for the Rochester Telegraph, in which I stated that a citizen of Batavia had been spirited away from his home and family and that after a mysterious absence of several days a village meeting had been held and a committee of citizens appointed to investigate the matter; adding, as it was known that Freemasons were concerned in this abduction, it behooved the fraternity whose good name was suffering to take the laboring oar in restoring the lost man to his liberty.

That paragraph brought dozens of our most influential citizens greatly excited to the office, stopping the paper and ordering the discontinuance of their advertisements. I inquired of my partner, Robert Martin, what I had done to exasperate so many of our friends. He brought me a book and directed my attention to an obligation involving severe penalties as a punishment for disclosing the secrets of Masons, inquiring what I thought of a man who after taking such obligation, violated it? I replied that I did not know any punishment too severe for such a perjurer. The discontinuance of the paper embraced so large a number of its patrons, I saw that my brief, and as I supposed, very harmless paragraph would ruin the establishment. Unwilling that my partner should suffer, I promptly withdrew, leaving the establishment in the hands of Mr. Martin. The papar was doing well, and until that paragraph appeared, my business future was all I could desire.

At that time an editor was wanted at Utica, where I had formerly worked and where I had many friends, but my offer to go there was declined. I was equally unfortunate in my application for employment at Troy. The objection in both cases was that I had been too busy in getting up an excitement about Morgan.

Meantime the mystery deepened and public meetings were held in several villages, Rochester included. In the meeting at Rochester it was assumed that all good citizens would unite in an effort to vindicate the law. A committee was appointed, consisting of seven, three of whom were Masons. It was soon discovered that the three Masons went from the committee, to the lodge rooms. It was subsequently ascertained that two of these gentlemen were concerned in the abduction; and that Morgan had been committed to the jail in Canandaigua on a false charge of larceny, and that he had been carried from thence secretly by night to Fort Niagara. The committee enconntered an obstacle in obtaining indictments in five of the six counties where indictments were needed. The sheriffs who summoned the grand juries were Freemasons. In four counties no indictments could be obtained. In Ontario, however, the District Attorney, Bowen Whiting, and the Sheriff, Joseph Garlinghouse, regarded obligations to the laws of the State paramount. Sheriff Garlinghouse and District Attorney Whiting discharged their duties independently and honestly. As the investigations proceeded the evidence increased that Morgan had been unlawfully confined in the Canandaigua jail and secretly conveyed to Fort Niagara, where he was confined in the magazine. There was every reason to believe that he was taken from the magazine and drowned in Lake Ontario. This, however, was so boldly and persistently denied —denials accompanied by solemn assurances that Morgan had been seen alive in several places that the public sentiment was divided.

At town meetings several months after Morgan's disappearance the question was carried into politics. A large number of zealous Antimasons determined to make political issue. Solomon Southwick was nominated for Governor. Our committee firmly resisted all such efforts, urging all who were connected with us in an effort to vindicate the law, to vote for the candidates of the party with which they had been previously connected. We endeavored to induce the Whig State Convention to nominate Francis Granger, but failing in that, we gave our support to Judge Smith Tompkins. Afterwards at a village election in Rochester, Dr. F. F. Backus, who had been treasurer by a unanimous vote of electors from the time the village charter had been obtained, was again the candidate of both parties. No whisper of oppcsition was heard before the election or at the polls, but when the votes were canvassed a majority appeared in favor of Dr. John B. Elwood. Dr. Backus was an active and influential member of the Morgan investigating committee; that astonding result produced an instantaneous change.

Political Anti-masonry from that moment and for that reason became an element in our elections. It was alleged and extensively believed of the "infected district," that the "Morgan Committee," to gratify personal aspirations went voluntarily into politics. Those allegations were as untruthful as they were unjust. It was not until we ascertained that the fraternity by a secret movement was strong enough to defeat the candidate of both political parties that we consented to join issue with them politically.

In the Autumn of 1827, the discovery of the body of an unknown man on the shore of Lake Ontario, near the mouth of Oak Orchard Creek, gave a new and absorbing aspect to the question. The description of that body, as published by the coroner who held an inquest over it, induced a belief that it was the body of Wm. Morgan. Our committee decided to hold another inquest. Impressed with the importance and responsibility of the question, I gave public notice of our intentions and personally invited several citizens who had known Morgan to be present. One of our committee went to Batavia to secure the attendance of Mrs. Morgan, and as many others who knew him as would attend. The body had been interred where it was found. The rude coffin was opened in the presence of between forty and fifty persons. When it was reached and before removing the lid, I received from Mrs. Morgan and others who knew him well, descriptions of his person. Mrs. Morgan described the color of his hair, a scar upon his foot, and that his teeth were double all round. Dr. Strong confirmed Mrs. Morgan's statement about double teeth, one of which he had extracted, while another was broken, indicating the position of the extracted and broken tooth. When the coffin was opened the body disclosed the peculiarities described by Mrs. Morgan and Dr. Strong.

This second inquest and the examinations of the body proceeded in open day, and in the presence of Masons and Anti-masons, not one of whom dissented from the coroner's jury by which the body was unanimously declared to be that of William Morgan. Mrs. Morgan in the testimony failed to recognize the clothes. The body was taken to Batavia where it was re-interred; no one as yet expressing any doubt of its identity.

Subseqnently, however, we were surprised by a statement that the body supposed to be that of Morgan was alleged to be a body of Timothy Monroe, who had been drowned in the Niagara River several weeks before holding the first inquest. This awakened general and intense feeling. Notice was given that a third inquest would be held at Batavia, where the widow and son of Timothy Monroe appeared as witnesses. Mrs. Monroe swore to a body essentially different from that found at Oak Orchard Creek. Her husband she said had black hair that had been recently cut and stood erect. Her testimony made her husband from three to four inches taller than that of the body in question. She testified that her husband had double teeth all round and described an extracted tooth from the wrong jaw and knew nothing of the broken tooth. The hair upon the head of the drowned man was long, silky and of a chestnut color. While that of Monroe, according to the testimony of Mrs. Monroe and son, was short, black and close cut. While Mrs. Monroe failed in describing the body, her description of the clothing was minutely accurate, the heel of a stocking was described as having been darned with yarn different in color. Her cross examination was very rigid, her answers throughout were found to be correct. The clothing thus described had been in possession of the coroner, who testified that it had not been seen either by Mrs. Monroe or any stranger from whom she could have obtained information. On the other hand Mrs. Morgan's description of the body, before she had seen it, was quite as satisfactory as Mrs. Monroe's description of the clothes. Our committee took no part in the inquest and the body, as is known, was declared to be that of Timothy Monroe.

This served to extend and intensify "excitement." It was everywhere charged and largely believed that I had mutilated the body in question for the purpose of making it resemble that of Captain William Morgan. I encountered prejudices thus created both in Paris and London twenty years afterward. Our investigations were embarrassed and protracted by the absence and concealment of important witnesses. One of those witnesses was an invalid soldier who had the care of Morgan while confined in the magazine at Fort Niagara; but he disappeared and every effort to find him was unavailing for more than a year. I finally traced him (Adams) to Brookfield, a mountain town in Vermont. On our way back, he at different times stated that hearing a noise in the magazine he reported it to Mr. Edward Giddins, keeper of the Fort, who told him that a stranger was lodged there who, in a day or two would be taken to his friends in Canada, but nothing must be said about it. He then from time to time carried food to the person. Soon afterwards near midnight he was told to have a boat in readiness for the purpose of taking away the man in the magazine. Several gentlemen arrived in a carriage by whom the man was taken from the magazine and escorted to the boat. Adams was told to remain on the dock until the boat should return and that if in the mean time any alarm should be given, he was to show a signal to warn the boat away. As nothing of this kind occurred the boat returned quietly, and as of the six who left in the boat only five returned he supposed that one had gone to his friends in Canada.

Adams was wanted as a witness in trials then pending in Canandaigua. We reached that place in the afternoon of the day the court convened. Three men were on trial for the abduction; the testimony of Adams was essential to complete the link. On being called to the stand he denied all knowledge bearing upon the question. He resided, he said, at the time specified, in the Fort, but knew no man being confined in the magazine; knew nothing of men coming there at night in a carriage; and knew nothing of a man being taken from there in a boat. His denials covering the whole ground were full and explicit. That, for the time being, ended the matter. When the court adjourned, I walked across the square with Judge Howell, who presided, and who remarked to me, that I had made a long journey for nothing, my witness, Adams, being ignorant of the whole affair. General Vincent Mathews of Rochester, who was walking on the other side of the Judge, replied with much feeling, that "the old rascal had not uttered one word of truth while he was on the stand." General Mathews was the leading counsel for the kidnappers, but refused to be a party in tampering with witnesses. On our return to Rochester the witness Adams was in an extra stage with his Masonic friends. As there was no longer any need of hiding, he was on his way to Niagara. In passing the Mansion House, Rochester, Adams, who was standing in the door-way, asked me to stop, saying he wanted to explain his testimony. The lawyers, he said, informed him that if he told what he knew about the magazine and the boat, it would be a confession which would send him to States prison. They also told him that the law did not compel a witness to criminate himself; and, to avoid punishment, he must deny the whole story.

In 1831, after my removal from Rochester to Albany, a libel suit was commenced against me by General Gould of Rochester. It was tried at Albany. Judge James Van Derpoel presiding. The libel charged General Gould with giving money he received from the Royal Arch Grand Chapter to pay Smith and John Whitney, to enable them to escape from justice. Gerrit L. Dox, treasurer of the Grand Chapter, and John Whitney, one of the recipients of the money, were in court to establish the truth of the libel. Mr. Dox testified that a "charity fund" had been entrusted to General Gould. John Whitney was called to prove that he received a part of the fund, with which, in company with Burage Smith, he left Rochester and was absent nearly a year. General Gould's counsel objected to witness' testimony until it had been shown that General Gould knew that the money furnished was to enable Smith and Whitney to escape justice. The courts sustained this objection, and Whitney's testimony was excluded. As it was impossible to prove what was known only to General Gould himself, the trial ended abruptly. Judge VanDerpoel in charging the jury dwelt at length upon the licentiousness of the press, and called upon the jury to give exemplary damages to the injured and innocent treasurer. The jury thus instructed, but with evident reluctance, found a verdict of $400 against me. My offence consisted in asserting a fact, the exact truth of which would have been established if the testimony had not been ruled out by a monstrous perversion of justice.

Colonel Simeon B. Jewett of Clarkson, Major Samuel Barton of Lewiston, and John Whitney of Rochester, passed that evening at my house. Jewett was prepared to testify that he furnished a carriage for those who were conveying Morgan secretly from Canandaigua to Niagara. John Whitney was one of the party. Major Barton would have testified that he furnished the carriage which conveyed the party from Lewiston to Fort Niagara; John Whitney being one of that party. Whitney would have sworn that Gould supplied money to enable him to "escape from justice." In the course of the evening, the Morgan affair being the principal topic of conversation, Colonel Jewett turned to Whitney with emphasis and said, "John, what if you make a clean breast of it?" Whitney looked inquiringly at Barton, who added, "Go ahead."

Whitney then related in detail the history of Morgan's abduction and fate. The idea of suppressing Morgan's intended exposure of secrets of Masonry was first suggested by a man by the name of Johns. It was discussed in lodges at Batavia, Leroy and Rochester. Johns suggested Morgan should be separated from Miller and placed on a farm in Canada West. For this purpose he was taken to Niagara and placed in the magazine of the Fort, until arrangements for settling him in Canada were completed; but the Canadian Masons disappointed them. After several meetings of the lodge opposite Fort Niagara in Canada, a refusal to have anything to do with Morgan left his "kidnappers" greatly perplexed. Opportunely a Knight Templars encampment was installed at Lewiston. The occasion brought a large number of enthusiastic Masons together. "After labor," in Masonic language, they "retired to refreshment." Under the exhilaration of champagne and other viands the chaplain (the Rev. F. H. Cummings of Rochester) was called on for a toast. He responded with peculiar emphasis and in the language of the ritual: "The enemies of our order—may they find a grave six feet deep, six feet long, and six feet due east and west." Immediately after that toast, which was received with great enthusiasm, Colonel William King, an officer in our war of 1812, and then a member of Assembly from Niagara county, called Whitney of Rochester, Howard of Buffalo, Chubbuck of Lewiston, and Garside of Canada out of the room, and into a carriage furnished by Major Barton. They were driven to Fort Niagara, repaired to the magazine and informed Morgan that the arrangements for sending him to Canada were completed, and that his family would soon follow him. Morgan received the information cheerfully and walked with supposed friends to the boat, which was rowed to the mouth of the river, where a rope was wound round his body to each end of which a sinker was attached. Morgan was then thrown overboard. He grasped the gunwale of the boat convulsively. Garside, in forcing Morgan to relinquish his hold, was severely bitten.

Whitney, in concluding his narrative, said he was relieved from a heavy load; that for four years he had not heard the window rustle, or any other noise without thinking the sheriff was after him.

Colonel Jewett, looking fixedly at Whitney, said, "Weed can hang you now."

"But he won't," was Whitney's prompt reply.

Of course a secret thus confided to me was inviolably kept.

Twenty-nine years afterward, while attending a Republican National Convention at Chicago, John Whitney, who then resided there, called to say that he wanted me to write out what he once told me about Morgan's fate to be signed by him in the presence of witnesses, to be sealed up and published after his death. I promised to do so before leaving Chicago. There was no leisure, however, during the sitting of the convention; and even before its final adjournment, forgetting what I had told Whitney, I hurried to Iowa returning by way of Springfield to visit Mr. Lincoln. In the excitement of the canvas which followed and the secession of Southern States upon Mr. Lincoln's election, I neglected the important duty of securing the confession Whitney was anxious to make. In 1861, I went to Europe, and while in London wrote a letter to Whitney asking him to get Alex. B. Williams then a resident of Chicago, to do what I had so unpardonably neglected. That letter reached Chicago one week after Whitney's death; closing the last and only chance for the revelation of that important event.

Whitney was a mason by trade, honest, sober, industrious, but excitable. In all the early stages of the Morgan affair he believed he was doing his duty. The final crime was committed under the circumstances I have related.

I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-masonic excitement" by a sincere desire first to vindicate violated laws of my country, and next to arrest the great power and dangerous influence of secret societies. We labored under serious disadvantages. The people were unwilling to believe that an institution so ancient, to which so many of our best and distinguished men belong, was capable of not only violating the laws but of sustaining and protecting offending men of the order. A vast majority of American people believed that Morgan was concealed by our committee for political effect. While we were being fiercely denounced by rousing and incendiary spirits, Judge Enos T. Troop, in charging the grand jury at Canandaigua, spoke of Anti-masonry as a "blessed spirit, a spirit which he hoped would not rest until every man implicated in the abduction of Morgan was tried, convicted, and punished."

It is pleasant also to contemplate the character of those with whom I was associated, judicially and politically for six years. Than James Wadsworth, George W. Patterson and Philo C. Fuller, of Livingston; Trumbull Cary and Timothy Fitch, of Genessee; Albert H. Tracy and Thomas C. Love, of Erie; Bates Cooke and Geo. Boughton, of Niagara; Andrew B. Dickinson, of Steuben; John Maynard, of Seneca; Myron Hawley, of Wayne; Francis Granger, John C. Spencer and Samuel Miles Hopkins, of Ontario; Wm. H. Seward, Christopher & Edwin B. Morgan, Cayuga; Dr. Nott, of Schenectady; Victory Birdseye and E. W. Leavenworth, of Onondaga; W. H. Maynard, of Oneida; Samuel Works, Frederick Whittlesey, Dr. F. F. Backus and Harvey Ely, of Monroe; Henry Dana Ward, of New York; Richard Rush, John Sargeant and Amos Elmaker, of Penn.; and Wm. Wirt, of Va., an equal number of truly good and eminent men cannot be found among the original and zealous Anti-masons. My friend Wier C. Little, of Albany, is almost the only survivor. Signed, THURLOW WEED.

THE MONUMENT CONVENTION.

Proceedings of the Fourteenth National Meeting.

TWENTY-SIXTH ANNIVERSARY OF MORGAN'S ABDUCTION FROM BATAVIA.

Wednesday Evening.

The Convention again assembled in Opera House Hall, and President Collins requested Rev. A. D. Gaines, of Rome, N. Y., to lead in prayer. A soul-stirring song by George W. Clark preceded the address of the evening, which was made by President J. Blanchard on the political features of the reform, or "New Testament Politics." The address made a deep impression upon the minds of all, and especially those who are accustomed to exercise the right of suffrage, who probably understood clearly, if never before, the necessity for the American party, and the philosophy of the American movement.

A collection was taken after the address to defray the expenses of the Convention. While Gearge Clark sang "The Good Time Coming," something over $21 were handed in. After a report from the business committee the Convention adjourned.

THURSDAY—Morning.

The prayer meeting this morning was led by one of the Secretaries, Rev. W. H. Ross, of Michigan. There was the same earnest spirit of the day before. One could but believe that if such a meeting could be kept up for a short time in Batavia there would be a reviving among the spiritual dry bones of the city.

President Collins offered the opening prayer as the Convention began business. The minutes were amended by striking out the titles that frequently occurred, though not without a protest or two.

Bro. E. D. Bailey, from the committee on the Christian Cynosure reported the result of their deliberations. As more time was needed than could at this time be given for the consideration of this report it was laid on the table until 11 o'clock.

At the request of the President that one of the Vice-Presidents should be designated who should take the chair in his unforeseen absence, F. W. Capwell, vice-president for New York, was made first vice-president by unanimous vote.

Ten o'clock had come, and the order of the day was the letter of Hon. Thurlow Weed, giving his recollections of the Morgan abduction and the trials which followed. Prof. E. D. Bailey, from the committee on resolutions and correspondence, read the letter amid the profound interest of the Convention, which deepened as he proceeded. Pausing a moment as he was reading of the Monroe inquest it was stated by a delegate that Judge Taggart had positively stated his belief that Mrs. Monroe, put forward by the Masons, was a man in woman's clothes. Secretary Stoddard remarked that at the close of the reading he would introduce a witness who knew the man who personated Mrs. Monroe. There was needed no spur to the attention of the meeting, but these hints quickened every thought, and the elderly members crowded to the front that no word should be lost. As the reading proceeded with the confession of Whitney, and Mr. Weed's anxious letter to him to have his testimony secured by affidavit, which reached Chicago just after his death, the painful disappointment was reflected on every countenance. As the reading ceased and the letter was held up to show the signature of Mr. Weed, Bro. Stoddard quoted from a private letter, from the daughter whose hand penned the history at the dictation of her father, telling of Mr. Weed's anxiety that this testimony should be completed, and of his rising from his seat to sign it with his own hand; enquiring eagerly if the signature was so written as to be known.

President C. J. Kephart presented directly a resolution that was in the minds of all ordering the publication of Mr. Weed's letter, with a preface by Secretary Stoddard, and that copies should be furnished to colleges and public reading rooms for free distribution among the young. A substitute for the first part was finally presented and voted thus: "Resolved, That the National Christian Association be instructed to publish the minutes, speeches and papers submitted to this Convention in pamphet form."

President Kephart renewed the second part of his resolution, urging with ability and force the necessity of bringing the young men into communication with facts like those given in this letter. Mr. Weed and other aged men would soon be gone, their voices hushed, no more to instruct by their experience. It was voted after some discussion that Secretary Stoddard and C. C. Foote be a committee to publish Mr. Weed's letter and other corroborating testimony in separate form for gratuitous and other circulation.

President C. A. Blanchard moved the following:

RESOLVED, That we consider the prolonged life and vivid memory of the Hon. Thurlow Weed as special providential means of conveying to the present and succeeding generations authentic information respecting the abduction and murder of Wm. Morgan, and that for this we devoutly return thanks to Almighty God.

Mr. Stoddard then introduced his witness respectiug the Monroe inquest which was given by Mrs. Mather, the Convention listening with breathless interest.

J. A. Conant moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Weed for his reminiscences and that President J. Blanchard be requested to communicate the expression of the Convention to him. A rising and unanimous vote passed this motion.

Letters were also announced by Prof. Bailey from Dr. Howard Crosby, R. Smith, of Maryville, Mo.; Bishop Milton Wright, Father Isaac Preston, John G. Fee and Elder J. L. Barlow. Several of these names were received with applause and Bro. Clark said he had received his first inspiration in Anti-masonry while living in his family in Lockport, N. Y.

Bro. Ross moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Mather, Miss Stevens, Judge Taggart and others for their reminiscences of the Morgan times. Adopted by a rising vote.

A song—

"There's many a cheer in this Christian work;
It we only stop to take it"—

by our ever-ready friend Clark added another round in the ladder of success which the Convention was mounting.

Prof. Bailey reported an additional word from Elder Barlow: "Speak to the children of Israel that they go forward."

The report of the committee on resolutions was then read and accepted, further action being deferred until afternoon.

Mr. Oliver, agent of the Ryegate Granite Co. which constructed the monument, was introduced to the Convention, and expressed his thanks to the body, to the National Christian Association and the people of Batavia for their interest in the work upon the monument, and for the uniformly pleasant business relations which their representatives had maintained with him.

This gentleman, said Bro. Stoddard, and Mr. Carter, his principal, were both once members of the lodge, but had left it years ago. Mr. Oliver responded that he had been out fourteen years. The statement was received with applause.

There being a heavy docket for the afternoon it was decided to adjourn only until 1.30 o'clock.

Afternoon.

President Collins being in the chair and order called, Rev. A. D. Carter, of Deersville, O., offered prayer.

The report on resolutions was taken up and the first four adopted without opposition. Upon the fourth brethren C. J. Kephart and C. A. Blanchard made able addresses in favor of practical Anti-masonry. The colleges that maintained the principles of this reform, the papers and the pulpits, deserved especially the support of men who believe the lodge to be sappiug the foundations of society, civil rights and pure religion. Anti-masonry is too apt to be like the system whose war against the truth it is endeavoring to suppress. There are speculative Anti-masons and operative Anti-masons. What is needed is that the former should all take their places with the latter.

The report of the committee on the Cynosure being the order of the day at 2 o'clock, it was now taken up and adopted as read from the committee as follows:

WHEREAS, In the wise providence of God, the Pittsburgh Convention, meeting in 1868 felt that our reform needed a paper, promptly started, ably edited, and widely circulated, which shall make opposition to secret societies a specialty;

RESOLVED, 1. That with humble gratitude we recognize the power of God in blessing the efforts of reform workers in steadily maintaining and improving the Cynosure and in making it during the last fourteen years helpful to our reform in so many ways. An encouragement to lecturers, an aid in collecting funds for the Association Publishing House in Chicago and for the Morgan monument, as well as in many others.

2. That its past usefulness justifies the opinion that a largely increased circulation of the Cynosure would multiply (in a corresponding ratio) the number of workers and hasten the triumph of our reform in the family, society civil and political, and in the church.

3. That we approve the action of the Galesburg Convention in creating a Cynosure extension fund.

4. That we recommend that an extension fund of $3 000 enabling us to offer our paper to six thousand new subscribers at half price this fall and during the coming winter be raised.

5. That we now secure in donations and pledges as large a part of this $3,000 as possible, and further recommend and advise churches and Associations to take up collections for this fund wherever and whenever practicable.

WHEREAS, By the action of this Convention we assume a new responsibility and sanction a more intimate relation toward the Christian Cynosure; therefore

RESOLVED, That we appoint C. C. Foote of Detroit, A. G. Laird of Chicago, and W. P. Gray, editor of the Interior, to confer with the publisher as to the disbursement of the fund now proposed to be raised, and to report at the next Annual Meeting such recommendations as may seem best calculated to promote the future success and increased circulation of the paper.

Prof. E. D. Bailey spoke ably on the report, referring to the efforts that had been made by the publisher at great sacrifice to himself; to the indispensible agency of the paper in sustaining the lecture work; in procuring the Publishing House fund, and putting the National Christian Association upon a substantial monetary basis; in raising the monument fund, without which the chief glory of this occasion would be wanting; in opening the way for American voters to unite against the lodge despotism at the polls; in developing the great Southern field which promises, under God, such great triumphs for the truth; and in every way conducing in the most important manner to make the reform successful. He called upon the Convention to make a practical demonstration of their interest in maintaining so faithful and able an agency, by raising the whole of the amount called for if possible.

Subscriptions were called for after the announcement that one brother pledged the last hundred of a thousand dollars, or would make every nine dollars ten.

It had been provided that an hour should be given at their request for a women's meeting, and at three o'clock other business was suspended. Mrs. E. A. Cook, Mrs. McPherson, Mrs. Capwell, Mrs. J. Blanchard, Mrs. L. N. Stratton, Mrs. Baldridge and two other ladies were seated upon the platform, and Mrs. Cook led in the proceedings by remarks upon the necessity of training children not only to believe in reform principles, but to work for their promulgation and success. She referred to a Band of Hope in Chicago which was doing a noble temperance work in its way. Such companies of children open ways of doing good and reforming families. We must train the children to respect good laws, and if we are faithful we shall be well repaid.

Mrs. H. Baldridge, of Varick, N. Y., after reading a brief extract from the Voice of Masonry, said that a soldier should be allowed to speak of his experiences. We all feel like Mary in the Garden when we think of what Masonry tries to do. We want Christ brought back. Masonry claims to perpetuate the ancient usages. Shall women be made again the slaves of lust? Thank God, the days of anarchy, of superstition, of the slavery of women are over! Christ raised woman from all this degradation, how can she bear that he should

CORRESPONDENCE.

Kellertonism or Law?

CLARINDA, IOWA, Sept. 6.

A few days since I was passing through the little village which became so odorifically known a year since in connection with the mobbing of Elder Rathbun for his anti-secrecy sentiment. The train was a freight, and as it had a ten minutes stop to make I stepped into the post-office to see what that "old handmaid" of the bully and intimidator, Freemasonry, would have to say for itself after a year's time to think it over. I had expected that public sentiment would have shamed those who were shameable into some sense of respect for the fundamental doctrines of the Constitution, at least.

I asked the postmaster, who also edits the local paper, how it was about the mobbing of a minister, about which I had heard. He replied by saying that he could give me the whole thing in print, and I supposed a copy of the famous rooster "Kellerton Tract" was forthcoming, but that seed had all been sown, and, a musty file of papers requiring too much time, he proceeded to give the Masonic narrative in its abbreviated form, omitting the "spitting" part of it till questioned, and admitting that Gale made the assault and after getting Elder R. "out in a mud-hole in front of the store" "some of the roughs about town," as he expressed it, egged both Elder R. and his few friends; concluding by saying that, as the ruffian Gale had paid his fine previously, the trial at Mt. Ayr could do nothing with him. In reply to a question he said that public sentiment had been with Gale all the time—Elder Rathbun "was talking about things he'd no business to be talking of." I expressed astonishment at this kind of doctrine, mentioning that I had known Elder Rathbun for years and had about the same opinion of Masonry that he had, especially since it had shown itself wicked enough to brutally assault a peaceable minister simply because he came there to exercise his right of free speech in a Christian manner against the institution.

A bystander then spoke up, saying that "the best business men of the town sided with Gale, and you'd better be careful how much you say, too, or you might get served in the same way. Rathbun made more family trouble than anything else that ever happened, and the men here aren't going to tolerate it. The women-folks are all opposed to secret societies anyway, and he just made any amount of difficulty," etc.

I tried in the minute I had left to enforce the truth that free spech was a fundamental right of every citizen of this government, but it was no use whatever. The lodge had with him, as it claims with everybody, rights before which every right of the individual and of the entire community outside its portals paled into insignificance and faded out of sight. There seemed to be not the least idea of free speech on the subject of Masonry in the speaker's mind, and no possibility of getting it there.

I had stayed a minute too long and the train was gone, but the practical experience of purely Masonic intolerance and terrorism may be worth the consequent delay. When an entire stranger cannot be in a town ten minutes without being told to shut his mouth about Masonry under pain of physical violence, it shows something of what the vile institution of the gag and bludgeon would do in every town, had it the power and the tools to carry out its behests.

These things have suggested other thoughts. Is it true that we are so under the control of the secret lodge that there is no relief? I have never been satisfied with the stoppage of legal proceedings in this case. It seemed that here was an absolutely clear case of Masonic gag-assault, in which the chief assailants were known and could be proven, and in which the rights of reform lecturers ought to be vindicated and lodge intimidation punished if it cost a thousand dollars to do it. Not only would justice be thus attained and further violence rendered less probable, but the movement would be brought before the people in a way and with facts otherwise impossible. I am not ignorant to my cost of the methods of the lodge in the courts, by which guilt is made innocence and innocence guilt. I know that Mason against Anti-mason is equivalent in most courts to judgment for plaintiff before the trial is even begun; but is this not often because the secrecy issue is not made? because the lodge is allowed to put through its game unchallenged; instead of having fearless anti-secrecy attorneys to bring the trial before a free judge, keep forsworn men off the juror's bench, and watch the entire trial with reference to this issue? The ordinary attorney is either ignorant of the devices of the lodge or in league with them. It will take men of correct principle and more than ordinary ability, of course, to carry this case through in the teeth of the lodge power, but I may be pardoned, at least in the absence of a thorough trial, for yet thinking that it could be done. Time and again have laborers in this reform suffered insult and injury at the hands of Masonic ruffians, ranging from simple assault to the loss of life in the waters of Niagara; and never yet has the lodge been punished. As at ill-famed Kellerton, the gag-power has in every case come off triumphant. Is it not time that the issue was squarely made and fought through, from the lowest to the highest court if necessary? If we let these matters go, what claim have we to the protection of the law? Do we not thus even put a premium on intimidation and gag-law?

For one, I believe that unless there are legal obstructions which do not appear on the sur face, proceedings should be again instituted, and this case carried through to conviction, or conviction proven impossible. Anti-masons are citizens and have the rights of citizens, which they ought by every honorable means to protect; or if these rights have been so completely stolen by the thievery of the lodge power that even the most skillful and wary defense can no longer enforce them in our courts, let the fact be proven so clearly and convincingly by the facts of the actual trial that they can no longer be doubted by any sensible man. J. D. NUTTING.

The Mt. Pulaski Murder.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., Sept. 16, 1882.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Your readers have doubtless heard (through the papers) of the horrible triple murder which occurred at Mt. Pulaski, a few miles from this place. Strangely enough, up to this time there is no clue whatever to the perpetrators. Detectives are busy at work on the case; and numerous arrests have been made of vagabonds and citizens, and all to no purpose. A hitherto very sharp detective of this place confesses himself as completely nonplussed, and the public generally feel that the inwardness of this case is certainly uncommon. I would like to recall some of the circumstances which to my mind show the earmarks of the lodge so plainly that we wonder it has not been mentioned before. They are something like this:

The victims were a bachelor and two hired hands living in a rented place. Their house was of two rooms, one of them empty. Their bodies were found outside the house with gags in their mouths, hands tied behind their backs, heads completely bandaged over eyes and ears, legs tied at knees, and throats cut from ear to ear—all just alike! The gags were made of coarse stout cloth which had been provided to make horse blankets. Each gag was made of a roll with ends or strings of the same carefully provided for tying behind the back of the head, showing that time and deliberation was taken, and uniformity was observed. Whoever did the whole job observed a ritual or prescribed form.

Again. There were numbers engaged in it. Three stout men would not submit to be bound, gagged and butchered except by a large party and considerable force. Money could not have been the object as there was but little, and instant shooting would have secured this without the troublesome method which they observed.

Then there were no signs of violence about the house. No one will suppose that three lusty farmers could be bound and gagged without leaving signs of physical struggle easy to be seen. It is very plain that these men submitted tamely to be bound—"trusted themselves to their guides, etc., etc." All of which will be readily understood by those who have passed through the sublime process of initiation in the numberless secret brotherhoods. Whether the result of this initiation will make men more careful in trusting themselves to the midnight fraternities remains to be seen.

The tactics used to cover up the murder of Morgan have been freely used in this case. A letter comes from some place in Missouri trying to implicate the principal victim in murders there. His character is assailed in his own neighborhood. Poor tramps and half-witted vagabonds are arrested by the score; all to no purpose, only to keep the public mind employed till the affair has time to blow over. These, Mr. Editor, are some of the earmarks which every one is at liberty to interpret to suit himself, but to me this is the only plausibly solution.

Respectfully,
LOOKER ON.

NOTE.—This line of investigation should be followed. If it is found that the farmer was a repenting Mason, or had obtained the lodge secrets, or had been crossing the track of the lodge so as to arouse the hostility of Masons, a reason for such a deliberate and shocking murder would immediately appear. That, we understand, is the point on which there is least evidence. If Freemasonry can supply a reason it will not be difficult to trace back the line to the perpetrators.—ED. CYN.

Our Mail.

Rev. J. Excell, Lake Fork, O.:

"I still feel the pressure coming from the secrecy element in our church, but nothing daunted, I am urging the battle; it seems to me there will have to be a division which I lament; but much better so than a whole surrender. I should like to attend the Annual Convention and unveiling of the statue, but cannot. May God bless the effort to the weakening of the enemies of righteousness."

J. DeLong, Warren, Ill.:

"The people of Warren are under lodge government with sealed lips, ministers included. Why are they silent on this abominable institution; are they ministers of Christ or of Satan?"

Chas. Gunn, Swan Creek, Ill.:

"May God bless and speed the day when our land shall be freed from the curse of secrecy. I am with you in spirit in this reform work. I esteem the Cynosure and circulate it all I can."

R. H. Evans, Troy, Iowa:

"I live in the country near Troy. There are two churches there—two synagogues of Satan to perform their idolatrous worship. The spirituality of the churches is fast dying out, while the lodges seem to flourish. May God grant the time may soon come when they will be blotted out, for 'tis Baal worship."

E. C. Spencer, Wysox, Pa.:

"I enclose two dollars to assist in the erection of a monument in memory of the first person who dared to face death in order to lay bare the Masonic trap that honest men might not be caught in its slavish meshes ignorantly. I hope it may be a lasting rebuke to the liberty and life-depriving institution."

Monday, Oct. 2.—For we walk by faith, not by sight—2d Cor. 5:7.

Tuesday, Oct. 3.—We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord. Wherefore we labor, that, whether present or absent, we may be accepted of him.—2d Cor. 5:8–9.

Wednesday, Oct. 4.—For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every-one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad.—2d Cor. 5:10.

Books and Magazines.

A Souvenir of Washington.—A very beautiful little Elzevir volume, which richly deserves a place in every patriotic American home, is: "The Words of Washington," being selections from the most celebrated of his papers, issued by The Useful Knowledge Publishing Company, 18 Vesey St., New York. Next to the Declaration of Independence, these brief, manly, clear and statesmanlike papers of Washington, are worthy to be familiar to the mind, and treasured in the heart of every lover of his country. In the charming and convenient little volume now issued at 25 or 35 cents per copy, according to binding, it will find a welcome place in every home library.

The North American Review for October opens with an article on "The Coming Revolution in England," by H. M. Hyndman, the English radical leader, giving an instructive account of the agitation now going on among the English working classes for a reconstruction of the whole politico-social fabric of that country. Mr. Hyndman represents a socialist society which he hopes will accomplish this end. His article discredits itself frequently by the exhibition of strong partisanship. Of the trade-union lodges as they now exist in England he says: "Moreover, above the rank and file of laborers there stands the aristocracy of labor—the trade-unions, who, thongh they have done admirable work in the past, now block the path of radical reform. As an old trade-unionist said of them the other day, they are a standing protest against the tyranny of capital, without the slightest idea of progress. Their leaders too, are, almost without exception, more or less in the pay of capitalists." A foot note adds: "The trade-unionists are a small faction of the work-people of England, yet they constantly pose as if they represented the whole body. There could be no greater absurdity. They are not even agreed among themselves on any matter of moment; and are, in truth, to-day a convention or rather a reactionary body full of the old 'fads' about limitation of apprentices and the like, though meanwhile machinery is practically abolishing the skillful handicraftsman." Other articles in the Review are: "The Morally Objectionable in Literature," by O. B. Frothingham; "Discoveries at Troy," by Dr. Schliemann; "Political Bosses" by Senator John I. Mitchell of Penn.; "Safety in Railway Travel," by Geo. L. Vose of the Mass. Institute of Technology; and "The Protection of Forests," by Prof. Chas. S. Sargent of Harvard.

The Pro and Con of the Spelling Reform is an address before the Ohio State Teachers' Association at Put-in-Bay in 1877, by Prof. O. E. Vaile, formerly of Woodward High School, Cincinnati, published in pamphlet form by Burnz & Co., New York; 10 cts. each. The Professor argues ably for a reform in English spelling to conform to pronunciation; but his best reasoning cannot stand before the ridiculous appearance of a page written out in accordance with his theories. The fact that our English spelling is conformed to arbitrary rules helps to anchor the pronunciation. The spelling reform has obstacles as well as any other.

—No advanced thought, no mystical philosophy, no glittering abstractions, no swelling phrases about freedom, not even science with its marvelous inventions and discoveries, can help us much in sustaining this Republic; still less can godless theories of creation, or any infidel attempts to rule out the Redeemer from his rightful supremacy in our hearts, afford any hope of security. That way lies despair.—Robert C. Winthrop.

—Our enjoyments are greater than our afflictions, and our afflictions less than our sins.

The Truth Cuts.

The following editorial, in the Independent Statesman, is from the pen of Past Grand Master Joseph Kidder, Grand Secretary of Grand Lodge of New Hampshire:

"FIRST-CLASS KNAVE.

"Any man who proposes to make money by publishing and selling an "expose" of any secret society, merits the rank of a first-class knave and is pretty sure to earn and receive the disgraceful appellation. No honest or consistent man can engage in any such business. Beware of such villains. They are entitled to no respect whatever, even despising themselves for the course they pursue if there is any personal respect left in their make up."

Such is the ontburst of friend Kidder's wrath. He has no rebuke for his lodge comrades who flood the market with pretended expositions of Masonry and Odd-fellowship to throw dust in the eyes of the people, bnt that man is a "first-class knave" who sells for twenty-five cents the very instruction which a "Grand Master" or "Worshipful Master" sells for twenty-five dollars. As to making money, the public may suspect that the "Grand Master" who sells Odd-fellow lore for twenty-five dollars may make as much money as Ezra A. Cook, of Chicago, who sells the same article for fifty cents. "Grand Master" Kidder would oblige the public by showing wherein his goods are more valuable than those of Mr. Cook, and also what law human or divine the publisher of a correct "expose" has violated. If our lodge friends would take the usual lawtul course to prevent competition and have their rituals copyrighted no one would infringe. If they print books and circulate them among half a million people and do not take the usual precaution of a copyright how can they justly complain of competition? Beyond all this, the Worshipful Masters of Masonry and the Grand Masters of Odd-fellowship who have become convinced that these secret societies are a gigantic system of swindling and wickedness have voluntarily exposed their so-called secrets. As the Masonic fable runs: "King Solmon commended the craftsmen who repented of their design to murder Hiram Abiff," and why may we not commend these lodge men who from a sense of duty expose the hidden wickedness of the lodges to which they have belonged. St. Paul regarded it a proof of sound repentance when the lodge men of his day confessed their deeds and publicly burned their lodge books.

Friend Kidder has a larger job on his hands than he is aware of when he issues a public proclamation to "boycott" all men who aid in exposing the pretended secrets of the lodge. The spirit of the lodge protest is an infallible proof of the correctness of the "expose." Mr. Cook's address can be found in the advertising columns of every Christian Witness.

Carry religious principle into common life, and common life will lose its transitoriness. The world passeth away. The things seen are temporal. Soon business with all its cares and anxieties, the whole "unprofitable stir and fever of the world," will be to us a thing of the past. Bnt religion does something better than sigh and moan over the perishableness of earthly things. It finds in them the seeds of immortality.—John Caird.

The man who has in him the elements of a worker for Christ will find a field or make one. Paul, when a prisoner, made converts in Cæsar's household.—Spurgeon.

At a monthly church collection not long since a ten-dollar bill was put in the box with a paper affixed, on which was written: "To be given to a missionary who does not use tobacco."

In Alabama, nineteen out of the sixty-five counties are now under strict prohibitory laws—about one-half of the population of the State.

It is announced that by order of Receiver Corbin no liquor will hereafter be sold at any of the stations of the Long Island Railroad Company.

REFORM NOTE-PAPER AND ENVELOPES.

As a needed means of spreading the truth regarding secrecy, a collection of the utterances of Scripture and various noted statesmen and ministers has been prepared and printed in tasteful form at the top of note-paper and on both sides of envelopes (the matter on the paper being entirely different from that on the envelopes.) A blank line for date is also printed in. The envelopes can be furnished either white or colored; both envelopes and paper being of the ordinary size and of good quality.

PRICES:

No. 5 Envelopes, 3x5½ inches, $4 per 1000; postpaid, 60 cents per 100.
Note Paper, 5½x8½ " $3 " " 40 " "
The matter contained on this Stationery is pithy and forcible, and will do good work. Use it.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1882.

CALVIN D. ROCKWELL, a venerable man, born in Leroy, N. Y., in "Morgan times," wrote the Batavia Convention, too late for reception, asking a direct vote, "whether it is right to hear Masonic ministers;" and urging "thorough organization in every township in the United States; and the Cynosure in every family." He predicts certain ultimate success. The words of these aged men, uttered from the portals of eternity, are like voices from the skies.

FRIEND L. BOYD sends in another article on oaths which he must excuse us from publishing. In it he says: "There is not a Christian government on the planet." Well, brother, elect the candidates on the American ticket, and they will at least give a Christian administration.

State of Parties.

The Republicans and Democrats of the two leading States, New York and Pennsylvania, have lately met by their representatives, adopted what are called "platforms," and nominated candidates.

The two platforms in New York consist of some thirty resolutions, each being of similar length; and if the Republican platform had been read in the Democratic convention, and the Democratic platform in the Republican, omitting party names and flings, they would have, perhaps with a single exception, been hailed with equal applause.

Thus the Republicans say (Res. 3.):

"Monopolies oppressing the people, or unfairly discriminating against local interests, are wrong in principle and should not be tolerated."

The Democrats (Res. 10) say:

"The public welfare demands that various questions, relating to chartered monopolies * * * should be met; and we are in favor of the adoption of measures to restrict the power of such monopolies."

The Republicans say again:

"Stringent legislation should be enacted to secure purity and honesty in the primary elections; and all possible safeguards thrown around these sources of political action of the people."

The Democrats, on the same point, say:

"We favor the speedy passage of general laws providing against fraud and intimidation at such (primary) elections."

And so on throughout the whole of the two platforms. Each platform, however, insisting that the other is dishonest and that its own crows are the whitest. There is one exception. The Republicans betray a dread of the Prohibitionists, and say they have no new doctrine to present on the questions which have heretofore occupied much of the public attention; such as * * * the regulation of traffic in intoxicating liquors," etc. And when they come to the liquor constitutional question, now pressiug in that and other States, they somewhat meekly beg the Democrats to come to their help, saying: "That changes in the fundamental law should not ordinarily be the subject of party action." * * * "We therefore urge the people of the State, without reference to party, to examine with intelligent care the Constitutional amendments submitted to them," etc.; and then add:

"RESOLVED, That while there are varying opinions on the sale of liquors, we subscribe to the principle that the proposition on that subject, like all other propositions for change in the fundamental law, ought to be submitted to the popular vote."

This timid action declares that the Republican party "has no new doctrine," but adheres to the old doctrine of "regulation," not "prohibition;" yet votes that the "people" (Democrats included) "without reference to party," shall shoulder the question of prohibition. This is traveling out of its record. Being a party convention it is in honor responsible to the people to give that party's opinion, for or against prohibition. Whereas it pledges the party to "regulation," which means license; yet agrees to join with Democrats in submitting all constitutional changes "to the popular vote."

The difficulty with this action is, that it is half-hearted. Suppose the vote taken in New York, as in Kansas and Iowa, where Republicans are wheeling off from prohibition, adopted by an overwhelming "popular vote," will New York Republicans stand by that "popular vote" or not? That is the question. Men will not follow timid leaders. This, the old Whig party found, to its cost, when the Republican party swallowed it up, and left such a political giant as Webster to wail out, "I, whither shall I go." The Democrats of New York, are, on the contrary, true blue graduates from "The Confederate Crossroads which is in the State of Kentucky." And, as before, they will flourish and beat their timid antagonists, till a party which "fears God and regards man," now no larger than a man's hand, covers the political heavens, and there is "abundance of rain."

The Greenbackers, Prohibitionists, and other reform parties are between two mill-stones—reform and the lodge, which boasts that it never changes its "land-marks." And the idea of a political party gaining control of this Republic, one half of which conceals its proceedings from the other half, is simply preposterous. Success for such a party means only the success of the secret, and surrender of the open half. That is to say, the rule of the lodge, which now rules the two old parties. The war never would have been ended and the Union been saved, by Freemasons, sworn by a hidden, "higher" law to help each other. But when the Anti-masons Seward, Chase, Stanton and Stevens, were the Government, Lincoln and Liberty had a platform which stood! God will save America by Americans; men, no matter where born, with American hearts in their breasts; American principles in their heads, and American votes in their hands. God save America!

The Blaine Boom.

Ex-Senator and Secretary James G. Blaine passed through Chicago last week Wednesday returning from an address at a soldier's-reunion at Topeka, Kansas. Prominent Republicans called on him at his hotel here.

Senator Blaine is just now become the lion of the Republican press. The Republican victory in Maine is attributed to him, and as the Republicans were doubtful how that State would go, and as that party, like the Democracy, has no principles but John Randolph's seven, viz., "Five loaves and two fishes," it is ready to glorify the leader who promises them success. And among the distinguished men of this country few have a more notable record than Mr. Blaine.

We should like to know whether Gov. St. John was among those who invited Mr. Blaine to Kansas at this time. And as he comes from a strong prohibition State, we shall await with lively interest the effect of his visit to Kansas on the prospects of St. John's re-election as Governor. But whether he ventures to encourage the St. John wing of the Kansas Republicans or not, we know that it would be fatal to his hopes and St. John's too, if they, or either of them, should be known to be hostile to the lodge. As the American party had no candidate in the field for Governor of Kansas, and as St. John is a reformer, and the lodge and liquor party is death on him, we advised the Americans in Kansas to let the nomination go by default this time, and vote solid for St. John, on the ground that the postponement of a duty is not the neglect of it. So we voted for Harrison, who was personally anti-slavery, instead of Birney in 1840, on the ground that the Liberty party was not yet fairly on its legs. But in a fortnight after Harrison's election, we put S. P. Chase at our head and voted straight for abolition until slavery fell.

The lodge stood behind slavery and was the soul of the slave power. When once the American party is fairly launched in any State and we are aboard, we must "sink or swim, survive or perish" with it. If the Anti-masonic party fifty years ago had followed the advice of John Quincy Adams we should to day be free from the lodge curse. It fused with the Whigs, took in Freemasons and died.

—The article on page 1, entitled "The Truth Cuts," should have been credited to the Christian Witness.

—In Elder Callender's letter on "Christian Union" in Sept. 14th Cynosure, the types were unhappily made to say "ill bred views," when the word should have been illiberal.

—After the Worcester convention last week, which is briefly reported elsewhere, Secretary Stoddard visited Boston, New York, and hoped to reach Washington City before the Sabbath.

—Bro. Hinman is, with brethren Browne, Starry and Butler, also stopping in western New York to lecture. He preached twice and lectured three times, during the week after the Convention, in Varick, the home of brethren A. and H. Baldridge. After preaching again on Sabbath last he was expecting to visit Seneca Lake and at Altay to visit the blind veteran Enoch Honeywell.

—Mrs. E. D. Bailey was summoned by telegram from the Massachusetts State Convention, where she was nobly aiding her husband, to the bedside of her aged and dying mother at Wheaton. She reached her destination Thursday night. Mrs. Grant, her mother, yet lingered on Monday morning, yet patiently waiting for the call that should take her spirit home to God.

—With grief we learn of the death of Dr. S. A. Sterrett, of Pittsburg, last week. He was, we believe, an elder in Dr. A. M. Milligan's church and one of those "who seemed to be pillars."

J. P. STODDARD,

be cast out and the old usages brought back? Why do we find that our children, when they grow up, get into these lodges? Many young men are made infidels in college. Infidelity increases, though we now have Sabbath schools all the year round. Why do we thus go backward? The reason she believed to be in the teachings of Freemasonry and other orders. A book was published in 1802 warning this country against the Illuminatti. This book the Masons wished to get away from her husband's father, who owned a copy. He refused to let them have it. A few months later his large new house was burned and two children perished, but they did not destroy the book. It was in another place. This book said that the best way to propagate Illuminism was by means of the first three degrees of Freemasonry, and in colleges.

Mrs. L. N. Stratton read a brief but excellent paper on the relation of our reform to the temperance cause, and at its close presented the following:

WHEREAS, We as Christian women and mothers assembled in the National Christian Association at Batavia, N. Y., believe that secret societies are antagonistic to the temperance work in our land, and that their influence on our work is like the simoon on the desert plain; therefore RESOLVED. That a delegation of five ladies to represent this honorable body be appointed to attend the N. W. C. T. U. to be held in Louisville, Ky., in October, and present a petition asking that the relation of secret societies to the temperance work may be presented to their prayerful consideration and action.

President Collins requested Mrs. McPherson to preside while attention was given to this resolution.

After its adoption Mrs. L. H. Plumb, of Streator, Ill.; Mrs. J. S. Collins, of Washington; Mrs. M. E. Cook, of Chicago; Mrs. M. E. McPherson, of Washington, and Mrs. L. N. Stratton, of Wheaton, were chosen the committee called for, to visit the National meeting of the Womans' Christian Temperance Union.

Mrs. McPherson spoke in favor of female suffrage, and gave some account of her experience among the advocates of that movement, who were at first, she said, all infidels. The women suffrage meetings in Washington were well attended. She studied the people who attended these annual meetings for five years, and was convinced they were right. She gave an account of her personal sufferings through the agency of the lodge, and avowed her devotion to the reform which aims to destroy that system.

As the hour clased, President Collins thanked the ladies for the interesting manner in which they had occupied the time. Before the consideration of the resolutions yet unadopted, time was given for further subscriptions to the Extension Fund. The total amount raised was $325.25, the cash paid being $104.50.

The resolutions were then taken up and discussed with much freedom and ability. Some of those presented were tabled, some were replaced by substitution. The whole as adopted appears herewith:

RESOLUTIONS:

RESOLVED, That we take special pleasure in recognizing the valuable services to the anti-secrecy reform of the American Wesleyan, the American Freeman, the United Presbyterian, Our Banner, the Free Methodist, the Christian Instructor, the United Brethren in Christ, the Richmond Star, and other similar papers; and we commend them to the patronage of friends of this reform.

2. That we tender our sincere thanks to those who have favored the Convention with addresses.

3. That our sincere and hearty thanks are hereby extended to those citizens of Batavia who have entertained members of this convention.

4. That the managers of the Washburn House and the Hooper House are entitled to the thanks of this Convention for the unwearying care and attention bestowed upon the members.

5. That our hearty thanks are also due to Mr. R. T. Carter of Vermont, proprietor of the Ryegate Granite Works, and to his agent, Mr. R. W. Oliver, for the gentlemanly-business-like, and efficient manner in which they have executed the contract for the erection of a monument to Wm. Morgan.

6. That the committee of the National Christian Association, and particularly J. P. Stoddard, its Chairman, deserve the most earnest thanks of this body for their untiring and arduous labors in securing the erection of this granite memorial and in assembling this, the largest and most effective Convention yet held in the progress of our reform.

7. That the Free Methodist church which has entertained in its house of worship sixteen members of this body, deserves the thanks of our Convention and our earnest prayers to God.

RESOLVED, That those who favor our cause should patronize and aid by their money and patronage, such newspapers, churches and colleges as openly declare the truth respecting the secret conspiracies and idolatries of our day.

RESOLVED, That in the death of Samuel D. Greene, the companion and friend of Capt. Wm. Morgan in his struggles against the lodge, we feel the loss of a fearless, persistent advocate of reform principles and we cheerfully place on record this brief tribute to his memory.

RESOLVED, That secret associations are not adapted to promote the temperance or any other good cause, and that we earnestly request all our friends who are in these lodges to abandon them.

It should be stated that the first three resolutions which appeared in the report of the political meeting in the evening were adopted with the above, but were afterward stricken out, without disagreement.

A long session had been held, when the record was read and approved.

Adjournment was made to the early hour of 7 o'clock, and the benediction was pronounced.

Evening.

After the opening prayer by Rev. G. L. Paine, of Millview, Pa., president Collins spoke briefly upon the work and results of the Convention.

Pres. C. J. Kephart moved that the three resolutions referring to political action be omitted from the minutes. President Collins remarked that if he dealt strictly with the motion he should have to declare it not in order, but as it was a direct way of getting at what all were agreed upon and which would be adopted in another form, he would allow it. The motion was passed without dissent, and the Convention then took a recess, to resume business at the call of the chair.

The sitting resumed after the brief political meeting, and Bro. Clark opened with a song. Elder Browne was also called upon and responded with a Masonic Ode, "To the Mother of Masons," which was heartily received.

F. W. Capwell presented this:

RESOLVED, That this Convention present its hearty thanks to the owner of the Hall, to Rev. Mr. Newell, and to Mrs. Perry for favors extended, and to all who have in any way helped to make our visit to this city a pleasant one.

There was some desire to debate the matter. Bro. Foote called attention to the contrast between the ministry of Batavia and the hotels. None of the pastors, so far as he was informed, had noticed the Convention, although some had promised to so. He spoke of the dread of touching the matter lest some Freemason's feelings should be hurt. He referred to the unhospitable greetings some had received from friends residing in Batavia.

Mr. Newell, a boarding-house keeper, was permitted to make a statement which covered his own house. He would have gladly accommodated a large number of the delegates. He felt that he had been slighted, and that the people of Batavia were misunderstood. They were hospitable and friendly.

It was explained that the notices that had appeared in the city papers, requesting entertainment for delegates, had possibly not been seen by some who would have contributed to the success of the meeting by opening their homes, and the resolution was adopted.

The seceded Masons were then called to the platform. Four responded: E. Conkling, of Napoli, N. Y.; S. S. Cone, of Wapella, Ill.; S. E. Starry, of Clarence, Iowa; and R. B. Gardner, of Elyria, O. Several other seceded Masons had been present as is seen on the roll, but had left for home before this closing meting.

The first address of the evening was given by Elder H. H. Hinman, N. C. A. agent in the South. It was an able presentation of the needs of the Southern field and is well worth a wide circulation through the press.

Mr. Clark sang "Mr. Dash." With the witty sentiment of this song the readers of the Cynosure have long been familiar as it first appeared in our columns from the pen of Rev. Joseph Travis. But Bro. Clark's rendition awakened almost boisterous applause.

Elder J. F. Browne, of Kentucky, was then introduced and after a preface describing the particular educational work in which he was engaged, he spoke upon "Masonic Means of Grace," using a chart by way of illustration. His argument made a deep impression upon the Convention.

Each one of the renouncing Masons then told his experience in simple, unaffected language. This part of the Convention was one of the most enjoyable. A full report of these testimonials will be given hereafter.

The hearty expression of the Convention approved a motion of thanks to Dr. Collins for so ably providing over its sessions; and thanks were also tendered the secretaries. Pres. J. Blanchard wished also to thank the respected friends who had broken loose from the bondage of the lodge, and whose experiences had so thrilled every soul during the evening. If a thankful spirit is any evidence of the religious condition of this Convention it must be seen that none before have at all equalled it. It was, at least, with a feeling of devout thanksgiving to God that all arose and almost joined hands as we sang, and then dispersed after the benediction by Pres. Blanchard.

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

AMERICAN POLITICS.

The Iowa American.

The arrangements have all been made to start the Iowa American on its mission. All that is necessary now is a list of subscribers to start with, which we must have to make the paper a success. Send all subscriptions to N. Bourne, Cedar Rapids, as he has accepted the position of publisher and office editor. Cedar Rapids is a railway center.

Bro. Bourne is a reliable and responsible man, and is known to many of the friends of this reform.

We would like to have five hundred bona fide subscribers to start with on the first issue; but would rather have the thousand. So please send on the names and addresses as speedily as possible. It will take promptness in this matter as October will soon be here. It would take but a little effort on the part of subscribers of the Cynosure to secure 1,000 names for the American. Where five can be sent to one address it will cost but twenty cents for a year. Then take hold in earnest and the work will be done. I have secured seven names and have not gone out of my way a foot.

I expect to be "instant in season out of season." Those persons to whom I spoke at Winterset about making up whatever monthly deficiency there may be will please send me their names to that effect, so we can be assured in going on with the paper in case we don't get the requisite number of subscribers. The October and November numbers are provided for. We ought to have ten more names. Who will be the next?

JOHN DORCAS,
Chairman Publishing Com.

Vote For Him.

Says the Albany Freeman on the issue in the Third Missouri District:

"After hearing, as well as conversing with men from nearly every part of the Third Congressional District, we are nearly unanimously agreed that it is best to announce M. N. Butler of Albany, Mo., as the American Reform candidate for Congress in said district. We now make the announcement, and if on his return from Batavia, New York, he accepts the nomination, he will enter the canvass, and try to secure a joint discussion on the issues of the day with Grand Master Dockery."

HOME CIRCLE.

The Last Words of Our Lord.

'To the uttermost parts of the earth,"
The risen Saviour said,
Speed forth, O friends, as my witnesses,
Proclaim that I left the dead
And ascended up on high,
Remission of all sins to give,
And repentance, too, and faith,
That perishing men may live.

"To the uttermost parts of the earth,"
Speed forth, O friends, and tell
Of the need of a new, a second birth,
To save mankind from hell.
Go; tell all men I was lifted up
On Calvary's cursed tree;
Go; tell what ye have seen and heard,
And draw all men to me.

"To the uttermost parts of the earth,"
Oh, mark ye well the bound!
The distant isles of the Gentiles—all
Must hear the joyful sound!
To my murderers preach it first,
At Jerusalem begin;
But linger not at that startling point,
For the world lies dead in sin.

For "the uttermost parts of the earth"
Eternal life I've won;
On the gloom of universal death
Shines now the risen sun.
Go forth! let every creature hear,
Let all the world be told,
That the woman's suffering seed has crushed
The head of the serpent old.

"To the uttermost parts of the earth,"
Friends, 'tis my last command,
My parting charge, that ye bear the words
Of salvation to every land.
Let every erring child of man
Be assured that God is love,
And freely offered to each and all
Is a home with me above.

"To the uttermost parts of the earth,"
O Lord, the words untold!
Thy heart how large, thy love how warm!
Our hearts how cramped and cold!
Full eighteen hundred years have passed
Since thy final accents fell,
But the uttermost parts of the earth are left
In death and darkness still.

Experience of Wm. Hazenberg, South African Missionary.

I was born in Netherlands, in the year 1840, and went to America in 1867. I am not aware of the time of my conversion, but served the Lord from my earliest recollection. My grandmother, being a very pious woman, told me already in my childhood that she expected the Lord would use me as a laborer in his vineyard, in which she has not been disappointed, though she did not enjoy the privilege of witnessing it.

Not later, perhaps, than the age of nine I commenced to ask the Lord to make me a preacher of the gospel, which I then already enjoyed as food for my soul. But I was early troubled with stammering to such an extent that it seemed almost impossible to me that my prayer in regard to the ministry should be answered.

I also had in my early days a presentment that I had to go to America, although very few left for it in my vicinity. After I had passed the age of twenty I became fully convinced that Christ was my Saviour, which made me exceedingly joyful. Shortly after the Lord plainly called me to make preparation for the ministry, for which I had been praying already many years. I commenced the appropriate study, though the said impediment in my speech had not yet been cured. I studied with pleasure, which had always been my delight, but recited with pain, because I could often not express what was in my mind on acount of my old trouble. After I had pursued my studies for some time, I heard of a man in Germany, who cured men from stammering. This man I considered as the probable instrument in God's hand to enable me to execute the ministerial office; accordingly I went, and after having been under his treatment about four days I was perfectly cured, and which has proven sufficient, under condition of being a little careful in regard to the method. Then I felt at liberty to go to America, which I vainly tried to do before. In America I continued my studies and finally became minister of the Dutch Reformed Church, and was minister of that denomination for five years, in two congregations, the first at Fulton, Ill., the second at Passaic, New Jersey.

While I was in America, but before entering the ministry, the Lord made it plainly known to me, that he would use me in South Africa for the promotion of his kingdom. Since that time I always believed this fact, yet it must happen at the Lord's own appointed time. Nothing could deprive me of the conviction that I had to go to Africa.

While being minister at Passaic, N. J., I became very sick with the typhoid fever, but I believed surely to survive because I had to go to Africa. And so it happened, however dangerous it appeared otherwise. During all this time, however, I did not understand the simple way of sanctification by faith. The old way of sanctification by means of resolutions, exertions, and unbelieving prayers, was yet my way, and which, of course led me to teach others also the same way of sanctification, by following which they must suffer disappointment as I did myself.

Some time after my sickness, which had created in me an increased desire for devotion, providentially some holiness literature fell into my hands, by which I was informed of my deficiency in holiness not only, but also how I might obtain it, and that immediately. By Scripture and experience they convinced me of the truth of their assertions. This was the first step in the way, and even an important one, but to possess it myself was another step which was yet to be followed. I now commenced reading and re-reading holiness tracts, prayers, and books, but I struggled on for some days before I obtained the blessing which I so much longed for. Finally I learned the way by means of a tract by Mrs. P. Smith: "A word to the wavering ones." In that tract, as well as in many others I had read, it was told that we have merely to trust in Christ for sanctification, but she said a person might ask, How shall I trust? This she answered by saying: "Trust Christ, that He will keep you trusting," and these very words were especially blessed to my soul, though such an experience may be often thought of as very insignificant. They appeared to my soul as a ray of light from the Sun of Righteousness. I immediately experienced that virtue went out of Christ into my inmost soul. I was obliged to stop reading, nor was there at present any more need of it, but I went up and down my room glorifying God, and rejoicing in Christ, and praising him for his abundant mercy, not only delivering me from the punishment of sin, but also from the power of sin, which I had so often and earnestly sought for in vain elsewhere. The fulness of the Holy Spirit and the sweetness of the communion with God I then enjoyed surpasses all description.

It happened in October, 1880, I think, that I attended a holiness meeting at Dr. Palmer's, at New York, while Rev. Wm. Taylor was there, who spoke about his missionary labors, and how the Lord supplied all his temporal wants, and enabled him to do so much in spreading the gospel without the aid of any missionary boards. This gave me more courage to go out to South Africa in the same way. A couple of days after this event, the desire came into my heart in a special manner, while reading the word of God, to be more generally useful in the vineyard of the Lord. This desire, as given by the Spirit, was immediately responded to by the Spirit, saying, to satisfy my desire I had to go to Africa. From this time we made preparation to go. We had to sell our furniture, which we expected might furnish the means necessary, in part at least, as also happened. My wife and I talked about a book-case of ours as being perhaps difficult to sell, but the same day a lady came and expressed the desire of buying said book-case, without knowing anything about our intention. This occurred to us as a very remarkable providence.

After we had decided to leave for Africa, trusting in the Lord for the supply of means, I came to the conclusion to write to Dr. C. Cullis, at Boston, about becoming connected with his Faith Work, knowing that missionaries were laboring in various parts of the world in connection with his Work of Faith, trusting only in the Lord for their temporal support. He, Dr. Cullis, accepted me as such, saying that he had been praying for some time already for a missionary to South Africa. The English language is here very useful, since the English speaking population is already quite numerous, yet to be of much and general use in this country the Holland language is essential, since the Dutch Boers are not only the most numerous portion of the population in South Africa, but also the colored people in Cape Town and elsewhere use almost exclusively the Dutch language, the Mohammedans included. The Mohammedans in Cape Town alone number about 6,000. We took passage with a sailing vessel from New York to the Cape. We did not dread the voyage, believing the Lord would bring us safely to the place of our destination. It took us sixty-five days from New York to the Cape.

We had a very prosperous passage in general, although many disasters occurred on the ocean while we were crossing. Only twice we had a little while strong wind. All the crew testified they never before had enjoyed such a passage, during which they had so little water on deck. We had also splendid accommodation on the vessel. We had the cabin of the captain for our use. When we got the first view of Table mountain, about 4,000 feet high, we rejoiced, and felt very thankful to the Lord for bringing us safely in this place. At our arrival we had little money left, but we trusted the Lord would supply all our wants, and so he did. The Lord brought us into contact with Christian people. They asked us sometimes how we got our support, expecting we were connected with some society, which was responsible for our maintenance, as generally is the case with those who go to foreign lands to preach the gospel. Then we told them how we trusted only in the Lord for that. Many could hardly understand how such a thing could be, as if the Lord had to make windows in heaven to accomplish this.

From the first I commenced visiting some of the most neglected people in spiritual things, especially the Mohammedans. Nobody cares for their souls. Their religion is a mixture of Judaism, heathendom and Christianity. They seek their salvation in prayers, five times a day, in fasting, a whole month in a year from sunrise until sun set, and in giving alms. Their manner of public worship attended only by males, is ridiculous. They are engaged in things, which are of a most superstitious character. These people I have visited a good deal during my stay in this place. Many before me have labored among the Mohammedans, but all with very little or no success. They are so hard to reach, principally because they have a false religion. They believe in Christ as a good man, but deny his divinity and atonement. Perhaps the Mohammedans would furnish a promising missionary field to the Unitarians, but such a church would not do them any good. They generally listen patiently when I talk to them about the way of salvation by faith in Christ, but sometimes they refused hearing about it, saying they have their own ministers. It also happens that they make objections to the Christian religion, in some respects, accepting the Koran Mohamud as their revelation from God, from which book they derive their objections. I hope, however, the Lord has blessed my labors among them, though I cannot tell to what extent.

My labor though has not been limited to the Mohammedans. I have preached in several congregations of the Dutch Reformed Church in this country. Some time ago I received an invitation to preach successively in several of their congregations, in each a week. This preaching was especially to be on the doctrine of holiness or sanctification by faith. This invitation I got it seems through the instrumentality of one of their ministers, who is also an excellent holiness man, and has much influence in the whole church, on account of his talents and piety. Three of these seven churches I have visited, and the blessing of the Lord attended my labors.—Highway of Holiness.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

One Way to Learn.

Rufus was but fifteen, yet he had been a year and more at work in Mr. Johnson's store. He came home very tired every evening—running upstairs and down so much, and handling over groceries of all sorts.

"I wish I had studied harder when I was in school, Uncle Edward," he said, one night; "but I don't feel much like taking up a book after my day's work is done. I don't know how those wonderful boys managed we read about who learned so much in their spare minutes."

"You may learn a good deal, Rufus, every day, and that too, without any painful application. It will not wear you out in the least; but, on the contrary, it will be rather inspiring and cheering. The way it is done is this: Get into the habit of reflecting well over everything that goes on about you. Events and people pass before the view of the majority, leaving as little impression as the rolling clouds. The only thing that seems to awaken this listless attention is the prospect of 'having some fun.' That is well enough in its place; but it cannot be made the business of life, nor of the spare moments of life, if we would ever amount to much here. A thoughtful boy is by all odds the one to make the most of himself and stand in the highest esteem. It will take a little while to form the habit; but every fresh effort will make your powers of mind more wide awake, and stronger for the next opportunity. You can learn even from things that are not pleasing in themselves. If a man comes into the store with a rough, coarse way of speaking and acting, you can take a mental note of that man, and determine that you will cultivate quite a different style. When a tipsy youth steps in, and talks in his maudlin, silly manner, there is a temperance lecture for you. If some one else manages a piece of work much more skillfully than yourself, take a sharp look at his method, and learn his 'sleight of hand.' It will be a great deal more profitable all your life than to learn a dozen funny tricks. If you hear people conversing upon subjects upon which it is well to be informed, give attention to their remarks, and store away the points in your memory. It is surprising how much one may gain from conversation if he will but learn to sift out the wheat from the chaff. You can learn much from thoughtful reading of good papers also, and it will rest instead of tiring you. So, don't give up the ship, Rufus, and conclude your education must stop because you work hard all day. You are acquiring an excellent practical education in your store work, and it will be easy to double its value, if you will but adopt the attentive, thoughtful habit."—Selected.

Both Hands Alike.

A person who has the equal use of both hands is called ambidextrous, as though possessed of two dexters, or right hands. A man in New York is a remarkable example of this, and he claims that it is not a born gift, but an acquirement within the power of any person. Recently he lectured upon the subject, and began his illustration by showing on the blackboard what he called the best test of ambidextry, the writing signatures. He wrote his own name with both hands at once, backward and forward, right side up and up side down, and in half a dozen different ways.

"This," said Mr. Woodward, "is a valuable accomplishment for a bank president or railroad official; for he who can write his name twice while another is writing it once deserves three holidays a week or double pay."

Then the lecturer wrote a love-letter in French with one hand, and a business letter in English with the other, simultaneously. Afterward, at the same time, he wrote such words as Fontainebleau and Constantinople. As an athletic exercise, club swinging and dumb-bell shaking sink into stupidity beside this. The most difficult thing to do is to draw a square with one hand and a circle with the other. Then he attempted the task. The ends of the circle did not meet, and it was not round; beside, the square looked like a parallelogram, but the audience applauded.

Finally, Mr. Woodward drew, with both hands, symmetrical geometrical figures, which he called decorative designs, employing the right hand on the right side of the figure, and the left hand on the left side. He sketched seven of these figures in a minute and a half, and said, "I will challenge the best draughtsman in New York City to perform this task in an hour and a quarter with one hand, and he may select his own design."—Ex.

LESSON 8, October 1.—THE PASSOVER.—Mark 14: 12-21.

(1) And the first day of unleavened bread, when they killed the passover, his disciples said unto him, Where wilt thou that we go and prepare that thou mayest eat the passover? (2) And he sendeth forth two of his disciples and saith unto them, Go ye into the city, and there shall meet you a man bearing a pitcher of water: follow him. (3) And wheresoever he shall go in, say ye to the good man of the house, The Master saith, Where is the guest chamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples? (4) And he will show you a large upper room furnished and prepared: there make ready for us. (5) And his disciples went forth, and came into the city, and found as he had said unto them: and they made ready the passover. (6) And in the evening he cometh with the twelve. (7) And as they sat and did eat, Jesus said, Verily I say unto you, One of you which eateth with me shall betray me. (8) And they began to be sorrowful, and to say unto him one by one, Is it I? and another said, Is it I? (9) And he answered and said unto them, It is one of the twelve that dippeth with me in the dish. (10) The Son of man indeed goeth, as it is written of him; but woe to that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! good were it for that man if he had never been born.

GOLDEN TEXT.—It is the sacrifice of the Lord's passover.—Exodus 12:27.

NOTES.

(12) "And the first day of unleavened bread." That, is, the first day, namely, Thursday, the 14th day of Nisan. The feast of the unleavened bread, or the passover, properly began on the 15th (just after sunset of the 14th) of Abib or Nisan, and lasted seven days. But the preceding day, the 14th, was the one appointed for the slaying of the lamb; and on the evening of that day the paschal supper was eaten (Exod. 12:6. Lev. 23:5). It was, therefore, termed the first day of the feast.—Abbott. "Unleavened bread." The whole seven days of the feast was so called because leaven was rigidly excluded during the whole time.—This specially symbolized three things: (1) The haste with which they fled from Egypt, not having time to wait for bread to rise (Exod. 12:34-39). (2) Their sufferings in Egypt, hence called the bread of affliction (Deut. 16:3), and hence all the afflictions of the bondage of sin. But (3) chiefly their purity as a consecrated nation, since fermentation is incipient putrefaction, and leaven was thus a symbol of impurity.—F. H. Newhall. "The passover as a type of Christ and his Supper." (1) It was a lamb, as Christ was the Lamb of God. (2) A male of the first year. In its prime. (3) Without blemish, as Christ was perfectly pure, without spot. (4) Set apart four days before, the 10th of Nisan. Christ's triumphal entry was four days before the crucifixtion, the 10th. (5) It was slain, and roasted with fire, denoting the death and exquisite sufferings of Christ. (6) It was killed between the two evenings, three to six o'clock. Christ suffered at the end of the world. He died at this same hour, and at the passover feast. (7) Each person must have a slain lamb. So Christ died for all. (8) Not a bone broken. (9) It was eaten with bitter herbs of repentance. (10) Its blood must be applied to be effectual. (11) It looked forward to future deliverance, and became, after the death, a feast of hope and joy. (12) It was a feast of separation from the world; and (13) of protection as God's children.—Chiefly from M. Henry.

(13) "A man bearing a pitcher of water." A very unusual sight in the East, where the water is drawn by women. He must probably have been the slave of one who was an open or secret disciple; unless we have here a reference to the Jewish custom of the master of a house himself drawing the water with which the unleavened bread was kneaded on Nisan 13. If so, the "man bearing a pitcher of water" may have even been the Evangelist St. Mark, in the house of whose mother, and probably in the very upper room where the last supper was held, the disciples used at first to meet (Acts 12:12). The mysteriousness of the sign was perhaps intended to baffle, as long as was needful, the machinations of Judas.—Cambridge Bible.

(14) The circumstantial detail is not without a special point. Judas was watching for an opportunity: had he known in what place our Lord was to be found out of the temple, arrest would have been easy. But two disciples only were sent; and even they would not know where our Lord would be that evening, for the unknown guide was to meet them on their arrival. —Cook. Thus, when Christ by his Spirit comes into the heart, he demands admission as One whose own the heart is; and gains admission as One who has all power in the heart, and cannot be resisted.—Henry.

(15) "In the evening." It was probably while the sun was beginning to decline in the horizon that Jesus and the disciples descended once more over the Mount of Olives into the Holy City. Before them lay Jerusalem in her festive attire. White tents dotted the sward, gay with the bright flowers of early spring, or peered out from the gardens and the darker foliage of the olive-plantations. From the gorgeous temple buildings, dazzling in their snow-white marble and gold, on which the slanting rays of the sun were reflected, rose the smoke of the altar of burnt-offering. The streets must have been thronged with strangers, and the flat roofs covered with eager gazers, who either feasted their eyes with a first sight of the sacred city, for which they had so often longed, or else once more rejoiced in view of the well remembered localities. It was the last day-view which the Lord had of the Holy City,—till his resurrection.—Edersheim's "The Temple and its Services," pp. 194, 195.

(18) Melanchthon declares that the three greatest marks of pity and compassion are (1) to tolerate the wicked for a season; (2) to abstain from exposing their sins as long as possible; (3) to warn them plainly and gently before leaving them forever. These are strikingly exemplified in Christ's dealings with Judas. —Stock.

(19) "Is it I?" Their language expresses in the original a much stronger negation than in our version,—Surely not I, Lord? Compare their strong assertion that they will not deny him (Matt. 26:35). To their questioning, Christ makes no response. Not one of them ventures to question the truth of the Lord's prophecy and each asks the personal question, "Is it I?" No one accuses, even by implication, his neighbor. Is not this a pattern for us in that self examination which should always precede our seasons of sacred communion with our Lord (1 Cor. 11:28)?—an examination which should look forward rather than backward; prepare for the future rather than attempt to measure the past; and always be a self-examination.—Abbott.

(21) After this, Judas, who probably had not heard the words about the sop, himself asks, "Is it I?" as if it would be suspicious if he only did not ask the question with the rest. Christ replies (Matt. 26:25) that he is the one; and bids him do quickly what he proposes to do. Then Satan entered into him (John 13:27). Satan whispered, "Be man enough to resent such exposure: your reputation here is gone, and you may as well go, and have your revenge—and your money."—Cowles.

A gentleman said recently: "The Republican party have no important issues in Massachusetts and are likely to suffer defeat." Now is a good time to take up some reform as an issue worth fighting for, as prohibition and anti-secrecy.

Reminiscences of Morgan.

As told at the Unveiling of the Monument.

Judge Moses Taggart, a hale old gentleman of 83 years, yet looking a dozen years younger, a resident of Batavia, and the legal officer before whom the Anti-masons gave their testimony in the third inquest over the body of Morgan, was first introduced. He said:

Ladies and gentlemen, I am asked to make some remarks of a historical character on this occasion, respecting the transactions of fifty-six years ago in this place, in which I personally participated. I knew Morgan well at the time of the abduction, and remember the incidents of those days with which you most of you are doubtless in some degree familiar. But I did not know of the lawless misdeeds of the Freemasons until after they had occurred. The uprising that followed was not only extraordinary but terrific. The whole country was aroused and Masonry sunk before the public indignation. I remember also the abduction of Miller. People suddenly came into town from Leroy and other places for miles around. They were armed with hoop-poles or something resembling bludgeons. Miller was carried off; but rescued by a company of his friends that followed. I was never connected with the lodge. Sixty-two years ago in talking with a brother in reference to Masonry, I told him that I would join when I became 21 years old. He referred me to Abbe Barruel's History of Jacobinism which was in my father's library. I there read that the Jacobins were protected by Freemasonry in their terrible work during the French Revolution. The writer also related some of the scenes of Masonic initiation. From that day I had no more desire to unite with the lodge. Some months after the abduction of Morgan there was organized an Anti-masonic political party which overrun New England, New York, Pennsylvania and other States, and from that party sprang the Abolition party, which gave life to the Republican party and destroyed American slavery, the brother system to the Masonic lodge.

The expositions of Masonry were sought after by the fraternity for the purpose of destroying them. David Bernard's book they would steal and burn or otherwise destroy. I obtained one of the early editions and have kept it for fifty-three years. It is hardly necessary for me to refer to the published documents of that day issued by Anti-masonic committees and conventions, which are all true. They give the sworn testimony before coroners' juries, court trials, etc. But then some Masons even in that day who were bold enough to deny them, in the face of facts as open as the day. The same arguments are in the mouths of Masons to this day. It is the only way they can see to avoid the public indignation, though the most of them know what is the truth. When a Mason says seriously that all these things are fabrications, he has not sense enough to keep his mouth shut. There is no doubt at all but that Morgan truly revealed Masonry. The forms of the lodge may have changed some since that day, but there is no doubt that there is no change in principles. It is not a universal fact that evil-minded men were in the order in that day. There were some men who went into it with an honest purpose. Some men in this village were inveigled into the lodge, but when the popular uprising came that suppressed Masonry such men renounced it.

Rev. C. C. Foote, of Detroit, said he wished to confirm one item of Judge Taggart's testimony. In nearly all our records of the Anti-masonic times of fifty years ago there is some account of the activity of Masons of LeRoy in the abduction of Morgan. Afterward 103 persons came out in a great convention held in that place and testified over their own names that Morgan's and Bernard's revelations were true. I had many intimate friends among that number, and might give you their names if desired. Seth M. Gates was one, the man who opened the first prayer meeting in Congress. In Leroy the lodge had built a temple of very beautiful and costly design. It was circular in form, a very costly building. The lodge in LeRoy gave up its charter, and its fine building was deserted and was finally sold for the purpose of Christian worship, and I afterward preached in it.

Rev. B. T. Roberts, editor of the Earnest Christian, Rochester, N. Y., Spoke briefly as follows: Among ordinary people who give any thought to the subject of Freemasonry but few give attention to the fact that it is an enemy of the Christian religion. Those who have investigated this matter are able to prove clearly, so that their evidence can carry any jury, that Masonry is a religion. It has religious ordinances, a baptismal service, a burial service, etc. Salem Town, a distinguished Mason who lectured before the Grand Lodge of New York when De Witt Clinton was Grand Master, claims that Masonry is a religion and that it will save the souls of those that trust in it in the world to come. It is high time that all Christians should awake to the importance of this subject. What right has any one to administer an oath except as empowered to do so by the Almighty God to whom that oath is addressed. But in the lodge we see men of every character administering oaths of the most binding form as far as language is concerned. General Sheridan when he went to Louisiana to suppress the disturbances raised there by the secret lodges, said of the White League, that a nation that will allow irresponsible bodies of men to drill and train themselves for the operations of war, is not worthy the name of a nation. But Masonry has its drill corps, trained to the highest degree; and yet no question is made to these men who meet by night and in secret to prepare for the exigencies of war when all the land is at peace! Study this subject and you will become convinced that the lodge system covers a dark and fearful combination against our government, our courts of justice and our holy religion.

Moses Pettengill, of Peoria, Ill., was next introduced. He said: I was a school teacher at Lewiston, N. Y., at the time of Morgan's abduction, and was present at the trial when Eli Bruce, the sheriff of the county, was examined for participating in that affair. I was also acquainted with Col. Jewett, who was, with me, a New Hampshire man. I went over to Fort Niagara, a few miles away to visit the place, and was shown all over the place but the magazine. The keeper said thet no one was allowed to visit that part without a special order. Morgan was confined in the magazine at that very time, and there was no other reason why I might not have inspected that part of the Fort with the rest. Besides attending the examination of Bruce at a later day, I rode on horseback over the very route taken by Morgan's abductors only about three days after they had passed. Hence in all the proceedings of this occasion I feel the deepest interest. Masonry says to us as the slaveholders did, "Let us alone." But we must no more listen now than we did before. The agitation of this subject must go on, and God will bring the evil to an end in his time. We all have a personal work to do in this matter. Mothers and sisters, you have a special mission, to keep your husbands, sons, brothers and friends from going into the lodge. We must keep the young men informed on this matter and if they keep out the old members will die off soon and the lodge die with them.

Secretary Stoddard said: It is fifty-six years ago this evening at about nine o'clock since Morgan was taken from Canandaigua jail by a band of Freemasons. After getting out of the jail he found that he was about to be forcibly seized by men whom he had every reason to fear were determined to take his life and he cried "Murder! Murder! Murder!" The woman who heard that thrilling cry is on this platform. Her name is Mrs. Evelina P. Mather, of Ellington, N. Y.; and she is 88 years old.

Calls from every side were made for her testimony as Mrs. Mather was aided by friendly hands to stand upon a seat that all might see and hear. She told in a clear voice how she saw the crowd running about the jail, and in the moonlight she saw they were disguised and had a living man dragging along in their midst. She heard him cry "Murder! murder! murder! Help, for God's sake!" and would never forget the piercing tones. There were few or none of the citizens to be seen, and the band of men hastened off in a carriage.

At this point Prof. C. A. Blanchard read the following extract, furnished by Mrs. M. E. R. Jones, of Boston:

"Extract from an address delivered before Constellation Lodge and the associate lodges at Dedham, Mass., June 24, 1829, by Nahum Capen:

"But hark! What discordant strains are those borne upon the southern breeze and echoed from the north, east and west? What means that dismal cry, disturbing this general harmony of the nation, state and village? In tones, from howling rage to whining pity, from the screaming yells of superstition to the base growl of bigotry, we hear the woe-begone name of Morgan—Morgan—Morgan! uttered and reuttered, echoed and re-echoed through the land. And who is Morgan? Alas! what words can the ingenuity of man seek out, meaning what this name conveys? Meaning, not exactly what we would call a man, but a being, that once was —or perhaps is—a needy, hollow-eyed, sharp-looking wretch, a living dead man—

"And with no face, as it were, out-facing us."

A being, the texture of whose character breaks at every touch and stands in eminent need of the mercy of God and the charity of man. But he was murdered—murdered by the Masons. This is a serious charge; a charge made against an institution dedicated to the care of the all-seeing eye of heaven; and moved by the spirit of man, by the love of a brother, and the precepts of Christianity.'"

Miss Sarah Stevens, of Batavia, was next asked for a statement of her recollections. She said she well remembered the rumors that were in many mouths about Morgan and Miller publishing the secrets of Masonry and what would happen. She was 16 years old in 1826 and was intimate with D. C. Miller's family and also knew Mrs. Morgan well. Went to her house after she came back to Canandaigua where she had been to find her husband, and heard her tell of meeting Ganson at Stafford. She remembered the attack of the "Hoop-pole brigade" on Miller's office. The office was armed, but Miller was seized. There were about 300 men in the crowd as near as she could remember. She saw the rescuing party going after Miller. She knew also that Miller, Morgan and Harris met together one evening not long before these events. Morgan spoke strongly of the evils of Freemasonry. He said, "I am determined to expose it. I shall die for it; but I want you to stand by me. I can see nothing before me but death which the lodge has sworn to inflict upon me. Give me your hands. Look after my little girl." Harris told me of this himself some years later. Harris married Mrs. Morgan some time after her husband was killed.

This lady, said Bro. Stoddard, when she was done, has cared for the graves of Morgan and Miller's family for forty years. When we asked her to point out the place she took us to the very spot.

"Shall Morgan's Murder be Forgot?" sang Bro. Clark with an emphasis that everyone appreciated.

—Mr. Cook met with quite a severe accident on his voyage from Japan to Sydney, New South Wales, being thrown from an upper to a lower deck by the lurching of the ship during a storm and was severely bruised; but after surgical treatment and a week's rest, when he reached Sydney, he was ready for work. Says Zion's Herald: "He was received by the leading dignitaries of Church and State, and delivered four lectures to immense crowds amidst the greatest enthusiasm. Every possible attention and courtesy were shown him, enabling him to form correct ideas of the condition of the social, civil, educational and religious interests of the country. He certainly has gathered a wonderful store of material for very interesting lectures when he reaches his home again."

REFORM NEWS.

The Massachusetts State Convention.

By the aid of copies of the Worcester Spy kindly sent by president Cheever and secretary Bailey, we are able to briefly report the State Convention at Worcester last Tuesday and Wednesday:

The Massachusetts Christian Association in opposition to secret societies, says the Spy, began its annual session in this city last evening at Horticultural Hall, the president, Rev. Henry T. Cheever, in the chair. In opening the meeting, Mr. Cheever said they were convened as Christian patriots and reformers to bring their combined moral and religious influence to bear against the un-christian, oath-bound orders of secrecy with which the community was pervaded and demoralized. He said they were united and strong in the conviction expressed by a distinguished patriot and orator of the day, that every good citizen should make war on all secret societies till they were forbidden by law and rooted out of existence. This association is auxiliary to the National Christian Association, whose headquarters and publishing house are at Chicago, Ill. The language of the call for this convention was read. Gathered under such a call for united counsel and consideration, Mr. Cheever said it was meet and in order first of all to implore the divine blessing.

An address was made by Rev. J. P. Stoddard, agent of the National Christian Association, in exposition of the immorality and iniquity of oath-bound secret societies, especially the so-called "Masonic," debauching the conscience, and defying God's law. He closed by calling on all Christians and patriots to unite in their full strength and with the sword of the Spirit cast out and expel from the land so vile an institution.

On Wednesday the forenoon session was opened with prayer by Rev. E. D. Bailey. Letters were read from Rev. Dr. Howard Crosby, of New York, and Wendell Phillips, endorsing the movement. Statements from the paper of Thurlow Weed read at the unveiling of the Morgan monument at Batavia, N. Y., last week, were also read. The following officers for the ensuing year were elected: President, C. B. Knight, of Worcester; Vice-presidents, Rev. E. D. Bailey, of Worcester, Increase Leadbetter, of Auburndale, L. E. Lincoln and Mrs. M. E. R. Jones, of Boston; Secretary, Mrs. E. D. Bailey, and Treasurer, David Manning, Sr., both of Worcester; Executive Committee, A. F. Spaulding, Rev. H. T. Cheever and S. A. Pratt, of Worcester, Moses Morse, of Southbridge, Miss E. E. Flagg, of Wellesley. At the afternoon session Prof. S. C. Kimball, of Newmarket, N. H., made a statement of the progress of the work in his State, and brief speeches were made by Rev. J. P. Stoddard, of Chicago, and Rev. W. T. Sleeper, Rev. E. D. Bailey and Rev. Mr. Nordig, of Worcester, John Tanner, of Boston, Rev. J. L. Barlow, of Willimantic, Conn., and A. M. Paul, of Providence, R. I.

In the evening the speakers were Rev. Mr. Barlow and Prof. Kimball, who were very pronounced in their denunciation of the Masonic order, the former claiming that it was in league with Satan, and thought it the duty of every Christian to oppose its principles. He also gave a history of the Morgan murder in western New York in 1826, and referred to the proceedings of the recent dedication of a monument erected to his memory at Batavia.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

—The family of the late Deacon Whittin, of Whittinsville, Mass., who left an unsigned will, are carrying out its provisions as if it had legal force. The Massachusetts Home Missionary Society has received $20,000, the permanent fund of the American Board $25,000, the Church Erection Society $8,000, and the University of New Mexico $5,000.

—The Moravian Church lately celebrated the 150th anniversary of the beginning of its great foreign missionary work which dates from August 21st, 1732, when Leonard Dober and David Nitschmann, the first two Moravian missionaries, set out with $6 in pocket from Herrnhut, Germany, on their way to the West India Island of St. Thomas. The Moravians of Bethlehem celebrated the event with appropriate services, Monday, August 31st, when Rev. C. A. Thompson, D. D., of Boston, delivered the Jubilee Oration.

—The recent death of President Allen, of Girard College, Philadelphia, has called public attention to the provisions made in the will of Stephen Girard against Christianity being taught in the institution which he munificently founded. During Mr. Allen's illness neither his pastor nor any other Christian minister could visit him, and none could go within the college walls to take part in tho funeral services. But the exclusion of ministers does not seem to have accomplished what Girard intended. The Sunday School Times says: "President Allen had himself done the work of a clergyman in that college while living, and at his funeral Christian services were there held by Christian laymen. After this his remains were taken into a neighboring church, where Christian liberality gave freer air; and there a score or more of prominent Christian clergymen united with a large assembly in paying another tribute of respect to the life and work of this distinguished Christian layman." The Girard heirs and the trustees of the fund are said to be a unit as to the propriety of teaching Christianity in the college, while technically obeying the will by excluding clergymen.

The Christian Union Meeting.

Pursuant to a call in several papers a number of brethren attending the convention of the N. C. A. at Batavia met in the Opera House, Sep. 15th, to consider what could be done for the promotion of Christian union.

R. W. Lyman, of Arcade, N. Y., was chosen chairman, and C. C. Cone, of Wapella, Ill., secretary. After prayer communications were read from J. G. Fee, of Berea, Ky., and Rufus Smith, of Maryville, Mo.

Several meetings for consultation had been held during the intervals of the convention, and on the 15th the brethren met at the house of Bro. A. C. Newell, No. 24 Jackson street, where the following paper presented by H. H. Hinman was read and adopted:

Believing that the only authorized division among men is between the children of God and the children of the wicked one, and that this division ought to be far more complete and manifest than it now is, and believing that organized division in the body of Christ is sin against him and wrong to all mankind, and recognizing the fact that multitudes of Christians and many local congregations greatly deplore the evils of schism (called heresy in the Bible) and are groaning after deliverance from its power, and that Christian reformers are especially led to see that it is the greatest obstacle to the promotion of Christian morality either in the world or the church; therefore RESOLVED, 1. That we favor the holding of a National Convention of the friends of Christian union to devise means for the more complete separation of God's people from all worldly and Christless associations and their unity and harmony in him.

2. That we recommend the formation of a Christian Missionary Society, not for the creation or promotion of any schism in the body of Christ, but to aid such faithful men and churches as are laboring to promote the purity and the unity of the people of God.

3. RESOLVED, That Bro. J. G. Fee, of Berea, Ky., R. W. Lyman of Arcade, N. Y., and Rufus Smith of Maryville, Mo., be a committee to call such a convention and to take the steps necessary to organize such a Missionary Society.

The Reformed Synod and Freemasonry.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., Sep. 6th, 1882.

I have just read the report of the General Synod of the Reformed Church at its meeting in Schenectady, New York, in June last, in reference to certain memorials on the subject of Freemasonry. In substance, this report declines any action on account of constitutional limitations, and refers the whole matter to the several consistories "upon whom alone the responsibility rests, and to whom alone the power belongs."

Without attempting to discuss the merits of the question as to constitutional authority, I wish to notice some things of a general character:

1st. The report carefully avoids all expression of opinion as to the character of Masonry, and its relation to the church. There is not one word which a Mason could construe as hostile to that institution, and not one word to those who, from no sense of duty, have done violence to the moral sense of their brethren by becoming Freemasons.

2d. It discourages all discussion of the merits of the question, and talks largely of Christian charity, of sacrificing prejudices, and studying those things that work for peace. Whether the author of the report was a Mason I cannot say; but it is just such a report as the Masonic party would desire, and reminds one of similar utterances in the days of slavery. Sin only asks to be let alone. It will be content to be very quiet in the church, if not opposed.

3d. The Synod did not feel restrained from discussing similar questions and expressing most positive convictions. They had no difficulty in saying what they thought about Chinese immigration. They discussed elaborately the question of the right of a local church to control its property, and found a large number of legal precedents to show that no property once belonging to, could ever be alienated from the denomination; but in reference to the Christless worships and profane oaths of the lodge it is evident that they had never formed an opinion, and felt bound to hold all Anti-masons under bonds to keep the peace with their brethren of the lodge and "let the dead past bury its dead."

In short, the report is simply an assumption that there is nothing morally wrong in Masonry and that it is simply a question of expediency about which men are expected to differ.

MR. PENTECOST IN SCOTLAND.—Mr. Pentecost's letters from Scotland this summer, during what he terms his "half-holiday and half-work," have been exceedingly interesting and encouraging. In a recent letter he says: "I wish I could give you some idea of the very great work God has been doing in Scotland the past season, and how large and blessed a share he has been allowing me to have in it the last five weeks. For many nights past we have not been able to accommodate the ever-increasing crowds of people that have come to hear the Word. The after meetings have been so large that it has been impossible to deal with inquiries separately. One night there were more than forty men rose in their seats and avowed their conversion to God that night, besides many women and children." At another meeting there were twenty-seven avowals of conversions, etc., etc. Everywhere crowded meetings; everywhere immediate results. He speaks in glowing terms of the Christian life and service of families by whom he has been entertained. At one of the meetings he says a man found the Saviour, and immediately searched through the great audience for his sister, and brought her into the inquiry-room that she might find the same Saviour. The next night he brought five or six of his friends, and had the delight of knowing of the conversion of all. He has learned of more than three hundred conversions at the meetings he has been permitted to hold. As a natural consequence, it has been hard for him to get away from the earnest requests from all quarters for him to remain. In Glasgow he was seriously approached as to accepting the pastorate of a leading church there. But he says his home work—the Tompkins Avenue church, the Ellery Street Mission, the Academy of Music services, etc.,—to which he longs to return, did not permit even a thought of change. He went to Switzerland with his family, to spend the last days of his vacation, and then turned his face homeward.

J. J. O'Shea, of Albia, Iowa, writes: "In reference to the American Party I expect a very good vote here on the State ticket. We have had no county convention, and as it is too late for such a convention we can vote on the State ticket. Some of the county papers are getting badly scared at the projects of Anti-masons."

HOME AND FARM.

Wealth in Walnut Trees.

JACKSONVILLE, ILL.—Mr. C. B. Wilson drove me out to his farm to-day to see some black walnut trees. "These trees," he said, "were planted from the seed twenty years ago. I saw them planted." I measured these trees and they were sixteen inches through. They would saw into timber a foot square. They would cut 300 feet of clear black walnut boards and then have the tops, limbs, and stump left. The stump itself would sell to-day for $5 to be sawed into veneers. The boards would be worth $30.

"What could you sell those trees for to timber men as they stand," I asked.

"I could sell them for $25 per tree, and ten years from now they will be worth $50."

From these facts I came to this conclusion: A black walnut tree will pay $1.25 per year for the first twenty years. A thousand of them will pay $1,200 per year.

Now, every Illinois farmer has it in his power to make more money off of a row of black walnut trees around his farm, than he can make on his farm if sowed in wheat. How can he do it?

This way: A farm of 160 acres would be 10,560 feet in circumference. Now plant walnut trees four feet apart all around it and you will have 2,760 trees; which will be worth $25 apiece in twenty years.

Again, a farmer can set all of his sloughs, low places, and all hog pastures into black walnuts. Two thousand handsome walnut trees growing on a farm would be worth $50,000 in twenty years, and would not interfere with the farm at all. Orange raising in Florida will not pay half so well as black walnut raising in Illinois.

"How should black walnuts be planted!" I asked Mr. Bates, a nurseryman at Whitehall, Ill.

"The easiest way." he said, "is to strike the gronnd with a common hammer in the fall, make a round hole two inches deep and drop the walnut in. It will cover itself with leaves and dust. The debris over the kernel will be so light that the sprout will have no trouble in finding its way out."

"What would you do after they come up in the spring?"

"I'd go around and put a shovelfull of sawdust, tan-bark, grain-chaff, or straw around each sprout. This will keep the roots damp and kill the grass or weeds around the roots. A boy could plant a thousand trees in a day in this manner. I'd plant them twice as thick as I needed them and then thin them out."—Chicago Tribune.

A Hint for Window Gardening.

A recent English writer gives the following, which suggests a way in which hardy wood-climbers might be made available for window decoration in winter or early spring:

"Some years ago, as I was passing through a room used only occasionally, I perceived an odor of fresh flowers that surprised me, as none were ever kept there. On raising the curtain of the east window, I saw that a branch of Dutch honeysuckle had found its way between the two sashes at one corner, while growing in the summer, and had extended itself quite across the window; and on the branch inside there were three or four clusters of well-developed flowers, with the usual accompaniment of leaves, while on the main bush outside there was not yet a leaf to be seen. The flowers inside were just as beautiful and fragrant as it they had waited until the natural time of blooming. Since then I have tried the experiment purposely, and always with the same result."

A heavy covering of the ground over the roots of the plants with leaves, and sufficient protection of the stem outside, would allow this method to be practiced in quite severe climates.

Christian Workers

Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Cabin Creek, Ky.

ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.

WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.

A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, via Syra, Greece.

G. H. FILIAN, Armenia.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded either through the editors of the Cynosure or the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

BIBLES.

We have recently exchanged a lot of Anti-masonic publications for Bibles which we offer at low rates POST PAID.

We have well bound pocket Bibles at $1.00, $1.35, $1.50, $2.00, $2.25, $2.50 and $3.00. Also some fine Oxford and Tract Society Teachers Bibles at $3.00, $3.25, $3.50 and $4.25.

The Churches against Lodgery.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day).

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists).

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part).

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference).

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch).

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich, and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 60 cents; per dozen, $5.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.00. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞ The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the anthor for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degrees of Jephthah's Danghter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. This confession of Henry L. Valance, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan in the Niagara River, was taken from the lips of the dying man by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine County, Wisconsin, in 1848. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen $1 25

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2 00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen

MISCELLANEOUS.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each: per dozen $2 00

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. Each of these able writers in clear, forcible language treats the subject in one or more of its varied phases. Rev. David McDill in six chapters treats of 1. "Their Antiquity; 2 Their Secrecy; 3. "Oaths and Promises;" 4 "Profaneness" 5. "Their Exclusiveness;" 6. "False Claims." Prest. Blanchard handles the topic: "Shall Christians join Secret Societies?" in a masterly way, showing clearly that they are all opposed to the genius of Christianity; and Dr. Beecher closes with his Report on Secret Societies, which was adopted by the Congregational Association of Illinois at Ottawa in 1866. In cloth, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.25. Paper cover, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association, condition of the Carpenter donation, with engraving of building donated by Mr. Carpenter; tables showing the number of pastors and communicants in churches that exclude members of secret societies, tabular view of local, county, state and national conventions, and list of organizations auxiliary to the National Christian Association; brief opinions of eminent men on secret societies, and testimonies of religious bodies against them. 25 cents each; per dozen, $1.50.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Greene, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J R. Baird and others. Unpublished Reminisceuces of the Morgan Times, by Elder David Bernard; Recollections of the Morgan Trials, as related by Victory Birdseye, Esq., and presented by his daughter, Mrs. C. B. Miller; Secretary's Report; Roll of Delegates; Songs of Mr. G. W. Clark; Paper by Enoch Honeywell; Constitution N. C. A.; Reports of Committees and a Report of the Political Meeting. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing Official Reports; Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, I. D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D. D., Prest. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D. D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquilette; also Report of the Political Mass Convention, with Platform and Candidates for the Presidential Campaign of 1876. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 31 Cynosure tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies; and the dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized secrecy are shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public. Those who wish to circulate anti-Masonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. W. P. M'Nary, pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind. This is a very clear, thorough, candid and remarkably concise Scriptural argument on the character of Freemasonry. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Locchburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

FOR SALE BY

EZRA A. COOK,

No. 7 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

In the Coils; or the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historial sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of every-day life, and showing how individual, domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. Parents who wish, not only to keep their children out of these night-schools of Satan, but to give them arguments against them in the most attractive dress, will do well to purchase this book. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses. In this scathing review the lying pretensions of the order are clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Letters on Masonry. Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian religion. Paper cover, 30 cents each; per dozen, $2.50.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2 00

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship (old work), by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen, $7.50.

Freemasonry and the M. E. Church. Let every lover of truth and justice read this report of the trial of Rev. J. T. Michael, showing how he was driven out of the M. E. church for opposing Masonry and loving Methodism. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocate, and afterward in pamphlet form. The Evangelical Repository, reviewing it, says: "This pamphlet consists of a series of artfeles originally published in the Church Advocate, Lancaster, Pa. Elder M. S. Newcomer opposes secret societies, and especially Freemasonry and Elder G. W. Wilson defends the system. We are free to say that Mr. Newcomer has thoroughly routed his opponent at every point. Mr. Wilson speaks by the book, as he is a Royal Arch Mason." 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

NEWS ITEMS.

—The Star route trials in Washington, which resulted in the conviction of two minor offenders, the acquittal of two others, and the disagreement of the jury respecting the chief conspirators Brady and the Dorseys, will be resumed soon. Brady is trying to secure Ben Butler as attorney.

—The accounts by telegram *M*onday morning of the flood devastation in the Eastern States show the destruction of property to have been enormous. *M*any cities in New Jersey sustained heavy losses by the tremendous rain-fall and the rapid rise of rivers, while from Waterbury, Conn., Philadelphia, and Fredericksburg, Va., reports are received of great destruction and damage. At New Brunswick the rainfall in 58 hours was over 13 inches. Washington was for a time cut off from the North. A gentleman was washed from the road with horse and carriage and swept over Pacific Falls.

—An ocean collision in a dense fog occurred Sept. 21 in the Atlantic between the steamers Lepanto and Edam, the latter being sunk, while the Lepanto, though badly injured. made her way to New York. Of the passengers and crew of the Edam all were safely transferred on board the Lepanto, but two officers, who were lost.

PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT.

The resolutions adopted by the late National Convention at Batavia, N. Y., will be on the 5th page of the Cynosure, this copy. Prof. Bailey writes, "I am perfectly satisfied that the cause demands an increase of circulation. * * I feel more than ever that we must press that matter next."

If enough persons will allow this conviction to secure a firm hold of them, the paper will be lifted out of the rut of 4,000 subscribers or less, and made to pay expenses.

Friends, will you not all take hold new in season and "push the circulation of the Cynosure." Geo. Johnson, about three years since, secured one subscriber for the Cynosure. This one has since secured ten in his neighborhood. "Bread cast upon the waters."

C. C. Cousins, "I will try to raise a club in Arizona." When he was there last winter his copies of the Cynosure were considered a luxury by those to whom he gave them.

W. H. Chandler, Van Orin, Ill., expected, so he wrote, to offer a rousing resolution in favor of the Cynosure at the coming session of his conference. Thanks. Rousing resolutions followed by a rousing canvass resulting in rousing clubs of new subscribers should be the order of the day.

W. H. Ross sends in four Extension Fund subscribers, and will try to get more. He orders more subscription blanks.

A. Rice thinks "we can get subscribers for the Illinoian very easily. They will help keep the fire burning."

C. C. Brooks sends in six subscriptions, the Extension Fund helped secure two of them.

W. B. Stoddard brought in six from the Batavia Convention.

Mrs. M. E. R. Jones sends three. W. J. Phillips four.

MASONIC BOOKS

FOR SALE BY

EZRA A. COOK,

7 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

Books sent post-paid on receipt of retail price, but books by mail are at risk of person ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express are sold at 10 per cent. discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority because they tell too much.

General Ahiman Rezon and Freemasons' Guide. By Daniel Sickels, 33d degree. The most perfect Masonic monitor published in the United States. Embellished with many engravings and containing monitorial instructions in the degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow-Craft and Master Masons, with explanatory lectures, the ceremonies of consecration and dedication of new lodges, installation of officers, laying foundation stones, dedication of Masonic halls, burial services, Masonic calendar, ritual for a Lodge of Sorrow, Masonic trials, etc. Bound in fine cloth, extra large 12mo, $2.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the entire ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Scores of Masons have privately admitted that this is a standard text-book in the lodge and is strictly correct; but publicly it is not acknowledged as authority, though many officers of the lodge make use of it. Price, in cloth, $2.50.

Female Masonry. Manual of the Order of the Eastern Star. Containing the ritual, symbols, lectures, etc., of the five degrees of "Adoptive Masonry," Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound. Price. $1.50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. A practical guide to the ceremonies in the degrees conferred in Masonic Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated edition. In cloth, $1.25; in paper, 75 cents.

Although this Monitor is extensively used by the lodge, especially in conferring the higher degrees, it is publicly called an exposition, and not allowed as authority.

Sickels' Freemasons' Monitor. Containing the degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic illustrations, together with tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also forms of Masonic documents, notes, songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels; 32mo. In tuck, $1.50; cloth, $1.00.

Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry. Containing a Definition of Terms, Notes on its History, Traditions and Antiquities, and an Account of all the Rites and Mysteries of the Ancient World. 12 mo., 526 pages, $3.00.

Mackey's Manual of the Lodge, or Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow-Craft and Master Mason, with Ceremonies relating to installations, dedications, consecrations, laying of corner-stones, etc. Price, $2.00.

Mackey's Masonic Ritualist, or Monitorial Instruction Book. By Albert G. Mackey, Past General High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of the United States, Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prince of Mercy, etc. Price, cloth, $1.25; tuck, $1.75.

Mackey's Text-Book of Masonic Jurisprudence. Illustrating the laws of Freemasonry, both written and unwritten. This is the great law book of Freemasonry. 570 pages. Price, $2.50.

Allyn's Ritual of Masonry. Illustrated by a large number of engravings, and containing a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, Orange and Odd-fellows' Societies Price, $5.00.

NOTICES.

Indiana.

The annual State Convention for Indiana will be held at Carthage, Rush county, October 24th 25th, and 26th. Friends of the reform in the State are urged to make immediate preparations to attend. The place selected is a grand one for the convention. Friends from the West will leave the train (P., C. and St. Louis railroad) at Charlottesville, others at Knightstown.

Signed by Ex. Committee: S. L. Cook, J. W. Lowman, Benj. Ulsh, Wm. Small, E. Hansen.

Frinds of our cause and public advocates who positively intend to come from a distance to attend this convention, please send your names to Box 184, Carthage, Ind., as early as convenient. We wish to make arrangements as well as we may be able for your welcome and entertainment. J. M. CLARK.

New Hampshire.

The Sixth Annual Convention of the New Hampshire Christian Association will be held at Center Strafford Wednesday and Thursday, October 11th and 12th, A. D. 1882. Rev. H. T. Cheever and Prof. E. D. Bailey of Worcester, Mass., and other brethren will address the Convention. Friends coming on the Worcester and Nashua railroad please notify Deacon E. Smith, Center Strafford, N. H.; those coming on the Boston and Maine, Elder J. N. Bartlette, Center Barnstead, N. H.; and those on the Dover and Alton railroad, Frank Pugsley, Rochester, N. H. Teams will be waiting Tuesday the 10th at Barrington on the first named road, Dover on the second and Rochester on the third. Entertainment will be free. Friends in neighboring States are cordially invited to be present. Brethren in New Hampshire, come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. Come praying that the Holy Spirit may rest upon our convention with power and blessing. By order of the Executive Committee.

The Illinois State Convention.

TONICA, ILL., Oct. 1, 1882.

Rev. D. P. Baker, Prest. State Christian Association,

DEAR BRO.:—We, the undersigned, members of the Tonica Independent Church, understanding that there is soon to be a State meeting of the Christian Association, cordially invite you to appoint said meeting at this place.

Although our own church is a unit against the lodge in all its forms, there are many outsiders, who, sympathizing with us, dare not openly avow themselves for the reform. The lodge also has many supporters here. We would like, therefore, the moral influence of a strong meeting to second our own efforts, to enlist silent believers into active service, to settle the doubts of those who halt between two opinions and to demonstrate to the lodge that its end is near. Pledging entertainment to visiting brethren and promising you our warmest prayers at the Throne of Grace,

We are for Truth and Righteousness, Dea. T. W. Baird, G. G. Gurnea, J. Morrison, J. Park, Dea. J. Haywood.
C. W. HIATT, Scribe.

Accepting the above invitation, with thanks to the brethren tendering it, and with gratitude to God that their hearts and homes have been opened to receive the truth as it is in Christ, the State Convention of the Illinois Christian Association is hereby appointed to meet in Tonica, November 1st and 2d next. Let there be a spontaneous turning toward Tonica. "Let the North give up and the South keep not back." Tonica is located on the Illinois Central railway near Mendota, a convenient highway for bringing the ends of our State together. Come then in the power of the Spirit to encourage the local brethren and carry back to every quarter renewed enthusiasm for the work before us. D. P. BAKER, Pres.

A POLITICAL MEETING will be held in connection with the Illinois State Convention, the time to be announced next week,—but probably on Thursday forenoon during a recess of the Convention. Tonica is in the center of a section of country full of old line Abolitionists. Benjamin Lundy's paper, the first Abolition sheet in the West, if not in the country, was published near by. This should be a grand rallying point for reform politics. American voters, come to the meeting.

The Frontier Children.

WHAT SHALL THEY READ?

The readers of the New York Tribune raised $20,000 for a delightful charity carried on for the city children. This money took a large number of them into the country and boarded them on pleasant farms for a week or two, returning them in health and happiness. Let us help a no less worthy and no less needy class of children, those of our frontier. Their parents are burdened with debts and cares which old settlers know nothing about. A gentleman—not a subscriber to the Cynosure—wrote to us from a village in Kansas, stating that if he could take subscriptions at one dollar each he would send us a club. The Extension Fund made it possible for us to say yes. And a club of twelve for a year each (all new subscribers but one) was promptly returned, with encouraging words: "I could have largely increased the club if I had had time to canvass more. May send in more anyway after a while. Several more want the paper whom I have not had time to see."

This suggests a fine opportunity for October work. There are hundreds, perhaps thousands, of young men and women and boys and girls too, all along our frontier, who would be happy to get and read the Cynosure. The Extension Fund would put it within the reach of their limited resources; and it would help their souls in a healthy development as the fresh air did the city children's bodies.

Will our readers see that the Extension Fund increases until we will be compelled to say as the New York Tribune did, Do not send any more; all is contributed that we can profitably use.

—There has been lately incorporated at Boston an association with the title of the "State Grand Council of the Massachusetts Order of Mystic Brothers and Orphans' Endowment League for Aiding the Families of Deceased Members." The only penalty for the folly of starting such incipient lodges is to compel the members to use the name of the order or the titles of their offices whenever they speak of them. The result would be dislocation or insanity or death to their weak natures and the order would be bankrupted in paying death rates.

His Kingdom.

BY ALEXANDER THOMSON.

O, sweet harp of David, wake out of thy trance,
All thy soul-stirring harmonies waken at once;
Like the gleam of a sunbeam athwart a broad river,
Break out of thy silence at once and forever.

O, hope of the wilderness barren and dry,
O, trust of the full heart and tear-brimming eye,
O light of the sad soul by wild trials tossed,
O sweet star of Bethlehem, thou art not lost.

The clouds may enshroud us, the day-light may wane,
The red lightnings gleam through the thick driving rain.
And tempests, like winter, stoop over our path,
But our Christ still controls all the chariots of wrath.

In vain to its depths black perdition is stirred,
'Gainst the light of the church and the sons of the word;
In vain roll its dark waves, malicious to drown
The seed of the woman and heir of the crown.

No longer now narrowed, contracted, confined,
Thine empire, O Christ, is the empire of mind;
And o'er it ascending triumphant, we see
The great Son of Jesse sit ruler in thee.

O now in the wilderness cold streams are found;
The bearded wheat springs from the hard fallow ground;
The lamb and the lion drink at the same river,
And the child and the serpent play kindly together.

See now where the leopard lurked low for his prey,
The bands of sweet children in innocence play;
From the dark isles of ocean hosannas arise,
And the children of death are the sons of the skies.

The pagan is vanquished and bends to the Cross;
The Crescent grows pale where the blood banners toss;
And dark superstitions, deep-rooted and hoary,
Take fire at the blaze of thine incoming glory.

Though suffering and sorrow should be in my lot;
Though Pain's cruel whip drive the chariot of Thought,
Yet shall I rejoice with mine own eyes to see
The kingdom! the kingdom! established in Thee.

The Temperance Movement in Britain.

BY REV. JOHN BOYES.

This movement, now fifty years old, has received an impetus of late years which has been very helpful. Good Templary was but a meteor flash. Whether the Blue-ribbon movement will be anything more time must decide. It is not, however, a secret order so far as we can learn. It is computed there are now over five millions of abstainers in Great Britain. The Ireland Revenue Commissioners report that temperance principles seem to be influencing certain classes of the population largely, the past year having been, apparently, one of unusual activity; in fact, they remark, there is a wave of enthusiasm in favor of teetotal principles passing over the country, which is especially attracting the masses of the people, who are being impressed with the notion that drink is sinful, and that, in order to become the preternaturally pious persons it is now the fashion to seem, the first and most important, if not the only step they have to take, is to abstain from all kinds of stimulating liquor. There is a good deal of banter which evidently originates in vexation. The banter results from seriousness. The amount received by the beer duty, was less by three hundred thousand pounds than the estimate, and this in despite of the growth of population and the general increased prosperity of the country. Mr. Gladstone tells us, that the only reason for this state of things that he can discover, is, that people are using more tea and increasing their deposits at the savings bank. The revenue in 1876 from the consumption of intoxicants was twenty shillings per head, but in 1881 it was 16.s 7d.

The visit of Cetewayo, the Zulu king, to this country, was improved by a deputation from the National Temperance League, who waited upon him on the subject of temperance in his native land. He was assured that though there are many drinkers in this country, there are many who not only live without intoxicants, but also believe them to be pernicious. He was told that there is a temperance association on board every one of Her Majesty's ships, and in every regiment of the army. The King explained that he was an abstainer from spirits; but not from beer. It appears that the Zulu beer is thick, like gruel or broth, much like the ale of the Saxons of the 6th century, and of the English of the 15th century. Zulu beer is said to be but slightly intoxicating. However this may be, the missionaries find it to be a great hindrance to their work. The King expressed himself willing to co-operate with the Natal Government in making it as difficult as possible for the people to get hold of spirits. The native races of Africa, as elsewhere, have suffered greatly from the introduction of spirits, and it is desirable to counteract as far as possible their admission among such races.

The subject of temperance has been discussed this year by the British Association. It was discovered a few years ago by Pasteur that the particles of fine powder or bloom on the skin of the grape were essential to fermentation. When this bloom is carefully brushed off, no fermentation takes place in the expressed juice. These particles are a fungus. This fungi may be regarded as a parasite which floats round and clings to the grape. This fungi or yeast plant, separated from the albumen cells of the interior of the grape, while it remains there, produces no kind of fermentation. No such a thing is possible. When, however, the grapes are crushed with the fungi clinging to them, fermentation in a little while sets in. It is a general custom from all fruits, vegetables, and animals, before using to remove all parasitic growths; and why not from this? There is no such a thing as spontaneous fermentation; and the idea of something changing without a changer is pure absurdity. We do not think that the wine-drinkers gain much in favor of drinking from the discovery of the fermenting fungi on the skin of the grape, nor from any other aspect of the question.

Louth, England, Sept. 5, 1882.

Will the Masonic Lodge Bury itself under the Morgan Monument?

BY REV. X. A. WELTON.

The "Masonic Veteran Association" held its twelfth reunion at New Haven, "June 29, A. L. 5882." This was also called the fiftieth anniversary of the "Declaration of Freemasons of the State of Conn., adopted May 9, 1882." Omitting the Preamble the Declaration is as follows:

"WHEREAS, It has been frequently asserted that in the several degrees of Freemasonry as they are conferred in the United States, the candidate, on his initiation and subsequent advancement, binds himself by oath to sustain his Masonic brethren in acts which are at variance with the fundamental principles of morality, and incompatible with his duty as a good and faithful citizen.

In justice, therefore to ourselves and with a view to establish truth and oppose imposition—the undersigned, members of the Masonic fraternity, and many of us the recipients of every degree of Freemasonry known and acknowledged in this country, do most solemnly deny the existence of any such obligation in the Masonic institution, as far as our knowledge respectively extends. And we do solemnly aver that no person is admitted to the institution without being first made acquainted with the nature of the obligations to which he will be required to incur and assume.

Freemasonry secures its members in the freedom of thought and speech, and permits each and every one to act according to the dictates of his own conscience in matters of religion, and of his personal influence in matters of politics. It neither knows nor presumes to inflict upon its members, however wide may be their aberrations from duty, any penalties or punishment other than admonition, suspension and expulsion.

The obligations of the institution require of its members a strict obedience to the laws of God and man. So far as being bound by any engagements inconsistent with the happiness and prosperity of the nation, every citizen who becomes a Mason is doubly bound to be true to his God, his country and his fellowmen. In the language of the ancient constitutions of the Order which are printed and open for public inspection and which are used as text books in all lodges, he is required to keep and obey the moral law, to be a quiet and peaceable citizen, true to his government and just to his country.

Masonry disdains the making of proselytes. She opens the portals of her asylum to those only who seek admission, with the recommendation of a character unspotted by immorality and vice. She simply requires of the candidate his assent to one great fundamental religious truth—the existence and providence of God, and a practical acknowledgment of those infallible doctrines for the government of life, which are written by the finger of God on the heart of man.

Entertaining such sentiments as Masons, as citizens, and as moral men, and deeply impressed with the conviction that the Masonic institution has been, and may continue to be, productive of great good to their fellowmen; and having received the laws of the society and its accumulated funds in sacred trust for charitable purposes, the undersigned can neither renounce nor abandon it.

We most cordially unite with our brethren of Massachusetts in the declaration and hope, that should the people of this country become so infatuated as to deprive Masons of their civil rights, in violation of the written constitutions, and the wholesome spirit of just laws and free government, a vast majority of the fraternity will still remain firm, confiding in God and the rectitude of their intentions for consolation under the trials to which they may be exposed."

Signed (if the record is be believed), by 1235 Masons.

Past Master N. D. Sperry said at this reunion: "Your meeting to-day has a double meaning, the addition to the social occasion which we so much enjoy, we celebrate also the fiftieth anniversary of that Declaration made by our brothers concerning the principles of Masonry, who, amidst the storm of vengeance and persecution which at that time surrounded them, gave to the world over their own signatures, emphatic endorsement of the aims and objects of our time-honored institution. The language they employed gave no doubtful meaning—their utterances were loud and clear. They not only endorsed the institution, but the principles of Masonry, and most solemnly avered, that in them were embraced the principles of morality, faithfulness, loyalty to country, justice to our fellowmen, and belief in God. * * * Morgan's Exposition, so-called, was the cause of the wrath and excitement of the times, to which the declaration refers; but it did Masonry no harm. The institution to-day is stronger by far than when Morgan and others attacked it for political reasons. If Morgan's "expose" were true, then he was one of the most unqualified[ly] perjured villains that ever disgraced the pages of history; worse even than Benedict Arnold in one sense; for the vows taken by him did not compare in solemnity with those Morgan said he had taken in Masonry; and yet to-day even, we find good men, let us suppose, in the great State of New York, who propose to build a granite monument of great proportions in honor of William Morgan; and already, if the newspapers are correct, it has been begun.

"Build a monument to William Morgan! For what? If he is to be believed, it is built to honor crime and perjury; nothing more, nothing less. Do these men who propose to build this monument know what they are doing? Do they propose to make crime, falsehood and perjury, a virtue? Certainly they do, if they believe William Morgan told the truth. Poor, misguided men, we pity them! Build the monument if they will, but remember that every block they lay from the foundation to the top-most stone (if they believe the story of Morgan) is an endorsement of baseness, perjury and crime. I leave the matter here. Our order has increased beyond all calculation, both in numbers and influence, while our defamers grow less year by year. Our institution has outlived its own history; Morgan spasms cannot injure it; monumental piles will not destroy it, when they are built to honor crime. Firm are the foundations upon which we stand, and build, and they will remain forever!"

"The Secretary [Rev. A. N. Lewis, afterwards] remarked that though he abhorred the destruction of Andre's monument, he shouldn't sit up nights to mourn if the Morgan shaft should be overturned by an earthquake or any other agency!"

Of this "declaration," above quoted, I remark, that if it is to be believed, Masonic obligations are, at least, harmless and unexceptionable. If the signers of this declaration are to be believed, Masonry (i. e., the Masonic power,) secures to its subjects what the State had not already secured, namely, freedom of thought and speech. If this freedom was secured to Freemasons when they entered the lodge, then it was not secured to them while they were only American citizens. Freedom of speech is not, therefore, secured to non-Masons. Morgan was a Mason, and if "once a Mason always a Mason," then freedom of speech was secured to him, and if the "declaration" is to be believed, every lodge initiate secures his freedom of speech by voluntarily renouncing a part of it under Masonic oaths and penalties. Their "freedom of speech" is secured to them when they swear not to tell the truth about Masonry! Past Master Sperry was quite as logical and consistent, (if the printed record is to be believed). "Bro. Twiss" had said to the veterans of 1832: "By your example we have been taught that Masonry should seek to increase its influence by practicing a larger and more general social intercourse." [Italics mine.] An English Anti-masonic writer in 1847 insinuated that the Lodge was a "convivial club," whose object was to dine and wine, and make after-dinner speeches. And if those who say it are to be believed, the Masons of the former part of the 19th century went often "from labor to refreshment," and then refreshments were more noted for their exhilarating qualities than the lodge generally furnishes now. Yet if the New Haven "Veterans" followed the example of their brethren of "5832" may I not suspect that "Bro. Sperry's" "freedom" in "speech" was to some extent the effect of his libations. The Secretary says that "all had been duly refreshed," and the speaker's ideas seem to have been a little mixed. He says (if the record is to be believed) "if Morgan's expose were true he was a "perjured villain;" i. e., if he told the truth he was a liar and a perjurer; that is to say, "one who swears falsely." "One who wilfully takes a false oath lawfully administered."[Webster.] If he told the truth, the truth he told was a lie and the telling of it was perjury! The Past Master does not tell us what Morgan was if he did not tell the truth! I do not think the speaker was intoxicated. He only said what Masonic after-refreshment orators often say. They are continually declaring that if Masons reveal what they have sworn to conceal they are liars and perjurers.

It should be remembered that there is an essential difference between Masonic language and common English. If Masonic orators are to be believed, their definitions of lying and perjury, are substantially as follows:

Lying: Telling the truth about Freemasonry.

Perjury: Telling about Freemasonry anything one had sworn not to tell.

Treason: Violation of any Masonic oath.

Mr. Sperry did not use the word 'treason,' but he impliedly charged Morgan with being a worse traitor than Benedict Arnold—if he told the truth.

"The Cretan who by branding all Cretans as liars left his own veracity doubtful to all eternity, fell into a pit of his own digging." Masonic orators are continually telling the public what Masonry is and what it is not. If they tell the truth are they not liars? and if they lie are they not obeying Masonic law which requires them to "keep the world in darkness respecting Masonry?" History says it was the alleged abduction and murder of Morgan; Sperry says it was his Exposition "so-called," that "was the cause of the wrath and excitement of the times to which the declaration refers." This must not be set down as a "Masonic lie" for he is not telling the truth about Masonry! Yet in this case, the truth would, seemingly, have answered just as well as a falsehood. Every "Masonic veteran" knows that Morgan was abducted and executed by the lodge for alleged "perjury and treason," and treason can only be committed against a sovereign power or real government.

"The Morgan Shaft" is history embodied in granite. Will it unmake history or injure Masonry to let it stand? Would it do the lodge any good to destroy it? If it is overturned the act will be charged to the account of Masonry, and thus the monument in ruins will become the more eloquent as a witness to certain facts. I have believed from the first that the Masons would overturn the shaft and crush themselves beneath its ruins.

Chapter XXIII—An Evening in the Lodge.

Though Captain Morgan's fate was by no means definitely settled in the popular mind, the suspicion grew stronger day by day that he had been foully dealt with; and the low muttered groundswell of that coming whirlwind of indignation which was to lay low every lodge and Chapter in the land, had already begun to make itself heard in the ears of the startled fraternity. As a result, a special meeting of Brownsville lodge was soon called,—about a week after Mark's unexpected home-coming. To this meeting the latter announced decidedly his determination to go.

"For pity' sake, Mark! What for?" I asked in surprise. "I should think you might have had enough of this confounded foolery by this time. I don't care if they summon me fifty times over, I am not going."

"Nor would I, Leander, were it not that I feel called of the Lord to bear my testimony against the abominable wickedness of Captain Morgan's abduction and murder. It is like a fire shut up in my bones night and day. And what better place than right here in Brownsville lodge among friends and acquaintances, to stand up and testify?"

Now this "testifying" spirit in Mark had already begun to make me uneasy, with the fear of what might follow if allowed to have its way unchecked by a little prudent advice; which I accordingly proceeded to administer.

"O, come, Mark; it won't do the least bit of good. You'll only stir up a hornet's nest about your ears. And as to there being old friends and neighbors in Brownsville lodge, you know precious little of human nature if you think it will make any difference with their reception of what you have to say. They will only be ten times more bitter and abusive on that very account."

All of which was hard matter-of-fact truth, but it failed to move Mark an iota. The Lord had given him a message to speak in the ears of the lodge that would probably make them tingle, that would alienate some and anger others; but of all such merely human considerations he felt that sublime carelessness which belongs to intense conviction. For wonderfully had Mark advanced in spiritual life since his soul burst the lodge fetters; and soared at one glad exultant bound into the full liberty of a child of God.

"Let them abuse me if they will!" he answered, his eyes kindling. "I shall go and bear my testimony. I know there are some in the lodge who will hear me."

"Now, Mark," said I, "I'll tell you just the way this matter stands. Brownsville lodge has its disaffected members who believe that Morgan has been foully murdered, and detest the crime; who feel just as I have felt many a night when I have been to the meetings of the lodge, glad from the very bottom of my heart to have seen the whole abominable thing blown sky-high the next day. But the mischief is, there won't be a soul of them there to-night. They are ashamed of their connection with Masonry, but are afraid to come into open collision with it. And the consequence is all such ones will stay at home just as I was intending to do, and only the part that are bound to stand by the institution through thick and thin that will be there to hear you."

But none of these things moved Mark. He rose with quiet determination and proceeded to put on his coat and hat, saying as he did so,—

"Anyhow I'm going. It is the only way I can free my mind and conscience. Silent withdrawal from the lodge is not enough. There must be a testifying; and whether they will hear or whether they will forbear is none of my concern."

"Well, old boy," said I, as his finger was on the last button, "it's no use talking I see, so I may as well make up my mind to go along with you. I'm no hand to make speeches myself, but I should be sorry to lose your's. And if I am not mistaken you'll find a friend to back you up and see that you have fair play before you get through. But I must tell Rachel that I am going. Accordingly I stepped to the door of the buttery where she was busied in some household avocation, and said,

"Rachel, you told me once that you could imagine circumstances that might make it my duty to go to the lodge. Now nothing will satisfy Mark's conscience unless he goes and 'testifies' as he calls it. Shall I go with him or stay at home? What do you say?"

Rachel covered up the batter she had been setting to rise over night, and was silent for an instant. Then with a look which I told her afterward was quite Deborah-like, she answered,

"Leander, I never wanted you to go to the lodge before, but I say now to you and Mark both, fear God rather than man. Go; and do your duty."

And thus strengthened for the fight as only the strong, brave words of a true woman can strengthen a man, Mark and I went forth, to find the brethren assembled ready for business as soon as the usual preliminaries should be gone through with. Which preliminaries, for the enlightenment of the unmasonic reader, I will state consisted in calling up the lodge by three distinct knocks of the Master's gavel, and a series of catechetical questions and answers between the latter and the two principal officers of the lodge in which might have been learned several instructive facts,—for instance that "his obligation makes a Mason;" "that the Junior Warden stands in the south like the sun at high meridian, the beauty and glory of the day;" "that the Senior Warden stands in the west like that same luminary at its close;" "and as the sun rises in the east to open and adorn the day, so presides the Worshipful Master in the east to open and adorn his lodge;—allusions which Mark had said were clear proofs that Masonry was identical with ancient sun worship practiced among the natives of antiquity under the name of the mysteries of Baal among the Jews and Canaanites, of Osiris among the Egyptians, and Eleusis among the Greeks. Then came a prayer to the unknown god of the lodge, the Great Architect of the Universe, at which some bowed their heads decorously, while others assumed all those curious varieties of attitudes congenial to the undevotional mind,—Mark himself sitting like a statue, his arms grimly folded, his eyes looking straight before him, and on his face such an expression of silent scorn and contempt as Elijah's might have had when listening to the prayers of Baal's prophets. And the lodge was declared open for the regular dispatch of business.

First in order came the reading of the minutes of the last meeting by the Secretary, which as it of course included Elder Cushing's report, naturally brought up the business of the present hour:—What should be said and done in relation to the widespread excitement about Captain Morgan's fate?

Deacon Brown was the first one who took the floor, and his views as stated to the lodge amounted in substance to this: "Let it alone and it would die down of itself. Our ancient institution had always been subject to the malice and hate of ill-wishers who did all they could to impose on the ignorant and bring the craft into disrepute. In his opinion the wisest policy for all Freemasons at this critical juncture was to preserve a discreet silence, remembering that a silent tongue was always and everywhere the chief jewel of faithful Masons.

Another old and respected member of the lodge then rose: "He was sorry to differ even slightly with the Deacon, but would like to express his view of the case. Morgan had forfeited his life by attempting to expose the secrets of Masonry, but whether or not the penalty of his violated oath had actually been visited upon him, there was one unanswerable answer for those who would charge his death upon the lodge. Where was the proof?"

Mark was on his feet in an instant, and a flattering hush of attention succeeded. For the lodge was inclined to take some pride in Mark Stedman as a rising young man of talent and worth, and a high Mason besides; and as his change of opinion had not yet become known, young and old prepared to give respectful heed to whatever he might say.

"I have proof, positive proof," he began, speaking with calm deliberate utterance, "that Captain Morgan of Batavia was murdered somewhere about the 19th or 20th of September, by being drowned in Niagara river. This proof I am prepared to furnish to any brother in the lodge who may not feel satisfied in his own mind that so great a crime has actually been committed. But for the majority of the members now present I believe that no such proof is necessary. Lodges and Chapters through this entire section of country, in conjunction with the Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter of the State have planned and plotted—not as distinct bodies, but in groups lyingly termed committees, in reality conspirators—the murder of Morgan and Miller. Miller has escaped, but the blood of Morgan is on the heads of the entire Masonic fraternity; and he who seeks to cover up this unholy work instead of exposing and denouncing it, but lays up vengeance for himself against the great day of final doom."

Reminiscenses of William Morgan,

As Told at the Batavia Convention.

At the unveiling of the Monument on Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 14th, there were other historical narratives given than those reported last week.

Mr. Gibbs, of Batavia, a son of Horace Gibbs, a prominent Anti-mason of the Morgan days was introduced, and said that this was the first time he had ever volunteered to say a word in this cause. When but a few years old he remembered the great excitement in Batavia. Our family expected my father would be carried away by the Masons, as they had done by Morgan and Miller, because of his activity in opposing the movements of the lodge.

When Morgan came to Batavia he worked at his trade as a mason. He was engaged by my father to build a brick chimney. One day he took my father aside and said, "I'm a stranger here and don't know who to trust. Can you keep a secret?" My father said yes. Morgan gave him the grip and sign of a Masonic degree. He was furnished with foolscap paper and writing materials which he asked for to write out the Masonic exposition. He wrote in a building on State street. I have yet a piece of wood from the room he occupied. I remember well how Miller was taken away. My father went with others in the pursuit. He also went for Morgan's body to Lake Ontario. After the body was buried when the second inquest had been held and the decision seemed to be unanimous that it was Morgan's corpse, several men came at night with the evident purpose to dig up the body. Father and others discovered them and drove them away. My father went to LeRoy with those who rescued Miller. Miller was a kind man. He used frequently to give me pennies to get candy. I remember the firing of his printing office, and also remember that my father grve Morgan a package of paper. My father was worth at one time, I suppose, $100,000; and I believe he was ruined by this devilish institution of Freemasonry. When Morgan came to him he needed help, for he was poor. Father furnished him means and took an interest in his plans. I have also a brick from the chimney that Morgan made.

I could relate circumstances respecting those times until sundown they are so vividly impresed on my mind."

Leroy F. Hammond, of Rochester, N. Y., said he was made a Master Mason in Salt Springs Lodge, No. 509, of that city. He had heard Bro. Mathews and Bro. Blanchard in their addresses give an exposition of Freemasonry which he could certify was correct. He had also read the different publications exposing the secret ritual of the lodge and knew them to be accurate. The lodge he got into was a Jew lodge. There were probably Jews in many of the lodges through the country but this was one almost entirely composed of Jews. The Masons of Louisville, Kentucky, killed his brother some years ago. He went to that city, hoping to get redress for the crime, but could do nothing because the affair was all managed by the lodge. He went to the court in Louisville with two officers. None of them knew that he was a Mason. He found the Judge a Mason and all the men connected with the trial who were prominent. All he could do was to get away with his brother's body, and this he had to do at night. He told how a high Mason had told him as a Mason that Morgan was murdered by members of the order.

MRS. MATHER'S ACCOUNT OF THE THIRD INQUEST.

On the forenoon of Thursday, the second day of the Batavia Convention, after the reading of Thurlow Weed's paper there was a universal desire to hear the further statement respecting the alleged Mrs. Monroe, of whose character there had been grave doubts expressed. Mrs. Eveline P. Mather, of Ellington, New York, who was 88 years old last May, was the witness introduced by Secretary Stoddard. The aged lady showed great vigor of body and strength of memory, both on this occasion and on the previous afternoon at the Monument unveiling, when she testified to hearing Morgan's cry when his abductors seized and bore him from the Canandaigua jail. She was supported by a lady friend while the members crowded to the front seats, eager to seize upon every word.

She said that when Morgan was kidnapped she was living in Canandaigua, and was personally acquainted with a Dr. Lewis living in Wayne county. He was considered a rough kind of a man, and called himself an infidel. He was also a Freemason of seven degress, and was a profane man in his speech. The Anti-masons published all about his complicity in the Morgan abduction at the time and I can only tell such things as I did not see as they were reported in that day. It was understood that Dr. Lewis went to attend a great Masonic meeting in Lewiston soon after the abduction, and was engaged in the plot to dispose of Morgan. He was smart enough to deal in such matters. He knew well enough how to manage, and it would be very characteristic of him if he had changed Morgan's clothes while he was lying confined in the magazine of the Fort. When the body came ashore at Oak Orchard Creek the Masons were watching, and it was hastily buried. But the inquest was reported and the Anti-masons got word of the matter and held a second inquest and buried the body in Batavia. Then came the Monroe business. Dr. Lewis lived neighbor to an uncle of mine, Mr. Weed, in Clyde, and I learned that just as quick as word came of the burial the Masons were in a great flurry. Dr. Lewis gave out that he had a call from another town to come and perform a surgical operation. He had a coach boy, an ignorant fellow who would do anything to please the Dr. Well, he hurried off with this coach-boy; but instead of going to perform the operation, he turned up at the third inquest over Morgan's body in the person of Mrs. Monroe, and his hostler, Mike, as Mrs. Monroe's son. The latter when asked if the body was that of his father said "Y-a-a-s, it's dad!" It afterward proved not to be "dad," but Morgan. All these particulars I did not have personal knowledge of; but they were published at the time and I remember them well in connection with such things as I saw and knew by my own observation.

In connection with Mrs. Mather's statement, Secretary Stoddard said that it was known that the so-called Mrs. Monroe suddenly disappeared and was not heard of afterwards.

Mrs. Morgan, Greene and other witnesses testify that Morgan had on a blue frock coat when he was taken away. Mrs. Morgan did not recognize the clothing upon the body. Both she and Dr. Strong, of Batavia, gave Mr. Weed a minute description of Morgan's body before it was examined and the marks were found corresponding exactly.

Elder J. F. Browne said the question had been raised, How could Morgan's body be preserved so long and so perfectly as to be recognized, as it was over a year before the discovery at Oak Orchard Creek? During his last visit with Samuel D. Greene, the latter told him that he knew of a woman who was drowned in the Niagara river. whose body was recovered a year later in a good state of preservation. The water at the bottom was so cold that its qualities in this respect were peculiar.

Testimony of Seceded Masons.

Given at the Last Session of the Batavia Convention.

R. B. GARDNER.

I can but think it a shame that ever I went into a Masonic lodge. It was in Masaachusetts that I was led into this iniqnity. I was coming into Western Pennsylvania, and it was represented that to belong to the lodge would be of great benefit in that new country. I had learned about this time of the Morgan exposition and the excitement that followed his abduction. At Tioga, where I first stopped, I visited the lodge and was called on to pray, the regular chaplain being absent. I did not then know that it was contrary to the principles of Freemasonry to use the name of Christ, and so I prayed, as usual, in his name. As I closed I was called to account by some member, and then learned for the first time how jealous Freemasonry is toward the Saviour, and how his name cannot be endured in the lodge worship. This was the first thing that began to alienate me from the system. In Perry, N. Y., the Methodist Episcopal annual conference took up the matter of lodge fellowship in those days, and passed a resolution that ministers should have nothing to do with Masonry. I was much influenced by this action and observed it, seeking light from God. I now hate the system as an invention of the devil by means of evil men. Persons who have the misfortune to have the small-pox never have it again; so I feel about Freemasonry and the whole secret order system—I want no more to do with it. Masons were personally kind to me, but I learned how wickedly they treated others. Some who left them they even threatened with death.

S. S. CONE.

My Christian friends—such you are now, but I would not think of calling you such if I were yet a member of a Masonic lodge. But I am now free from the order and separate from it as far as the east is from the west. With regard to the system of Masonry I wish to forget it. I only took three degrees, and knowing from the word of God that sins once forgiven are no more remembered against us, I have resolved to remember Freemasonry no more.

When I had received the degree of Master Mason, the master of the lodge came to me and said, "Now, brother Cone, we want you to be a bright Mason. You go to the county-seat and at a certain place (which he named) you can buy a copy of a Masonic exposition, which you can study and get well acquainted with the ritual, and so become a bright Mason."

I did so; got the book and found it correct as far as I had gone in the order; and was led from this fact to believe that the explanation of the higher degrees which were given were also true, but found much in these which was contrary to my convictions. When I asked the master about this he said that as for the three degrees they are written out correctly, "but I am told," said he, "that as for the chapter degrees they are not correct." I had received all I desired of Masonry and resolved to have no more to do with the order.

It is natural to inquire of a man who has been in the order, What do you think of it? It is a child of Lucifer. In every particular it is "earthly, sensual, devilish," subversive of every element of life toward God in the human soul. Masonry tramples the idea of life in Christ under foot. The motto upon the wall yonder, "Masonry is a virtual conspiracy against the Church and State," omits an important fact. Masonry is also a conspiracy against the life of the human soul. It does strike a death blow to the spiritual life of the soul. No man with the life of God in his soul can stay thirty-six hours in the institution. I say of a man who is filled with the spirit of the order, moved by the love of it, bowing down to its gods, that there is not an iota of Christian life left in him. The Bible is explicit in its condemnation of secretism and in its command to be separate from such systems as the lodge. But I was once told by a Methodist Episcopal minister, who was a Mason, to whom I was presenting this view, that the Holy Spirit teaches men differently in respect to the word of God! What awful language to use in speaking of that Holy One! One of the most mortifying facts of my life experience is that I ever bowed at Masonic altars. But God knows that there is not an element of my being that is not now opposed to the system.

E. CONKLING.

This brother came forward with some hesitation, as the experience of addressing a large audience was evidently embarrassing to him. He said his business was that of a farmer, and his home was in Napoli, Cattaraugus county, N. Y. He was not used to public speaking, and the friends would be lenient with him. In 1865 he joined, as charter member, a lodge named Clinton F. Page. He had taken his place upon the platform by invitation, and because he felt it a duty to bear a testimony. He should everywhere denounce the institution of Freemasonry. When he entered the lodge he had promised to ever conceal and never reveal the secrets of Masonry; and while a member the Masons had used him well. But he found things which were objectionable. He resolved to search as far as possble into the boasted hidden mysteries of Masonry, and went on to the seventh degree, wherein the temple of Masonic life is completed. He found indeed the mysterious word there. At this point the brother seemed under the impress of deep feeling, and asked the prayers of friends in the audience. But he did not find anything in the degree or any of the degrees to make him better. He found no help for his inclinations toward a better life. He did not see the whisky barrel in the lodge, but he did see many things which were not for the glory of God. Three years ago he had experienced the renewing grace of God and received the blood of Christ to cleanse from all unrighteousness. Yet he could not get free from his load until he had given up Masonry and renounced the whole thing. He began to confess his sins before God, in distress of mind; and as soon as he touched this point he felt a blessing from God. Many encouraging responses from the eager listeners were given as the brother proceeded in this narration, with great simplicity, yet with deep emotion. He could but think, as he was here now before praying men who trusted in Jesus Christ, of the hypocrisy and Baal worship practiced before the Masonic altars. He could not speak well in public, but in his feeble way he denounced—he felt that he must denounce—the lodge system wherever he went. He urgently asked the brethren to pray for him, and he would rely on the God who cares for his children. He had refused to allow his name to be sent to the Cynosure for publication among the seceders, as a club to thresh the Masons with, but to-night he would freely give it.

This testimony was most interesting and affecting, since it was the most public confession the brother had yet made of his folly in joining the lodge, and was accompanied with the sincerity and humility of a young convert's first renunciation of his sins for a new life in Christ.

S. E. STARRY.

Bro. Starry's Masonic history is somewhat familiar to many friends of the reform, but his experience with the lodges at Lincoln, Neb., is unusual and interesting. He was born in Iowa and took the degrees in Springville Lodge, Springville, in the same State. The difficulty of adjusting his shirt to comply with Masonic usage, and also of removing a gold ring from one of his fingers, were incidents of the preparation room. When the hoodwink was removed he saw in two rows a number of friends and neighbors, his minister, the class-leaders, a saloon-keeper, several church members, while an infidel and profane man was the master. At the conclusion the preacher came to him and, taking him by the hand, said, "This is the best step you ever took or can take." From that moment Bro. S. lost all confidence in that man. He seemed a hypocrite, and the church members little better, and the step was a long one toward infidelity. Masonry, said the speaker, tends to make more infidels than any other institution on the globe. He told the master in reply to a question as to his feelings, that the ceremony seemed in great part to be tomfoolery. He thought the second degree worse, and the third capped anything he had ever heard of. He was told to post himself, and he would be all right, and Dr. Newell, his family physician did post him on the Sabbath in a drug store. He got all there was in Blue lodge Masonry and was considered a bright Mason. But he could not understand where was all the good morals boasted of. He was urged to get in young men and boys and fill up the lodge.

In Cedar county, during a protracted meeting held by Elder Rathbun, I attended, and was soon under conviction for my sins. I went forward eight or nine evenings for prayers, but could get no light. Masonry hung over me like a dark cloud. At last I became almost desperate and determined to get rid of sin and accept Christ at any cost. I had grace given me to give up all—Masonry and all, and God forgave me and gave me peace. I have been trying ever since to show men the evil of Masonry. Only the grace of God can take the lodge spirit out of a man.

A year ago last June I visited Lincoln, Nebraska. I had about thirteen months before been in the town and worked the degrees publicly. During this last visit I got acquainted with a Mason. He tested me on Masonry, and finding I was posted invited me to the lodge. I went with him, but took a neighbor along to watch outside. I was introduced to a number of the members and applied for admission as a visitor, as I wished to prove to many who scout at my knowing Masonry that I have been through the thing and can testify truly of its character. A committee was sent out to examine me. I satisfied them, and then claimed the privilege of examining them. I found them poorly posted, and demanded to see their charter to know that they were a genuine lodge. They objected, with an oath, but it was my right, and they had to yield. I was reported as a bright Mason. I went in and saw a candidate initiated in the first degree. Gillette, Grand Lecturer for the State was present and acting as an officer. He called on me for some remarks. I told them their work was like that in Iowa with one or two variations in language. They said "enter the lodge in due and ancient form;" in Iowa we say "in the name of the Lord." Gillette explained that the Lincoln lodges struck out the clause "in the name of the Lord" because there were so many Jews who took exception to the language. He asked about the expositions he had heard of in Iowa. I told him that it was done just as in the lodge exactly and how Masons tried to ward off the opprobrium. He said the best way to oppose the Anti-mason exposer was to denounce him as a liar and a fraud. Church members whom I knew present cheered this speech! I attended lodge meetings five nights in Lincoln; was invited to assist in initiation but would not do so, as I will never again assist in making a man an idolater. I visited Lancaster Lodge three nights and Lincoln Lodge two nights, and my name appears on their visitor's register five different times.

Bro. Starry's wonderful account was heard with great interest, and gratitude both for his escape from this snare of the devil and for the ability God had given him to expose the snare and warn men of the danger.

NEW ENGLAND.

THE NEW ENGLAND BOARD of the National Christian Association has it headquarters at No. 8 Portland St., Worcester, Mass. A full supply of books and tracts constantly on hand. Orders promptly filled. Correspondence solicited. E. D. Bailey, N. E. Sec.

—There are thirty-eight churches, or religious organizations in Worcester, and 116 societies, most of the latter secret, and the number is increasing.

—A Philadelphia dancing master is trying to reform the waltz. Better give it up altogether.

—Christians have been fighting generalities and preaching over the heads of sinners long enough. Now it is time to specify evils. When preaching means something and hits somebody, more good results will speedily follow. Tell the people the evils of secret societies; load them with temperance arguments; reprove them for anger, wrath and malice; rebuke covetousness and Sabbath breaking—in short, specify prevailing evils so there will be no doubt what is meant and preaching will be fruitful.

—"When God lets loose an idea upon this planet we vainly set limits to its progress; and I believe that Gospel temperance shall yet transform that inmost circle, the human heart, and in in its widening sweep the circle of home, and then society, and then pushing its argument to the extreme conclusion—it shall permeate the widest circle of them all, that is Government."—Francis E. Willard.

—The cigar stumps thrown away in the stree are collected by boys and sold to manufacturers, who mix them with cabbage-leaves, lamp-black, and other vile ingredients, put the compound in small paper tubes, and they are then fashionable cigarettes. They are more pernicious than cigars. The paper is poisonous and many distressing diseases have already been produced by smoking them.

—One pastor of a Congregational church in Worcester is said to be a member of seven secret societies. He has sworn to support a deistical creed under no less penalty than to have his body severed in twain, his bowels taken out and burned to ashes, and the ashes scattered to the four winds of heaven, with much more of the same sort. The daily papers parade his name continually as attending secret-society banquets and celebrations, making speeches and otherwise countenancing the silly maneuvers and blasphemous ceremonies of these orders.

—What shall be said of a pastor who declares Freemasonry to be anti-Christian, anti-republican and anti-domestic, and yet never warns his people against the institution, while dozens of members of his church are affiliated Masons? Can he truthfully say, "I have not shunned to declare the whole counsel of God?" Such a minister lives in Worcester.

—Can an institution which intimidates the people do good? For some reason the community fears Freemasonry. Men do not dare to express their opinions freely concerning it and are astonished and frightened when they hear others speaking their opinions openly. No institution, unless it be slavery, has ever repressed public discussion and threatened the peace of church and state like Freemasonry. Let us destroy it before it destroys us.

—What is your home life saying to your children? Are they learning from their parents to seem one thing and be another? To judge the rest of the world hypocritical because they themselves are? To put business matters before religion, policy before truth, wrong that glitters before right that hurts? The daily education of home manners and conversation is the most powerful and the one used most carelessly. It makes or mars for all eternity.

—Give the children good temperance instruction now and the next generation will settle the question of prohibition. Teach them now that alcohol is poison, unfit for human organs. Show them that licensed liquor-selling is licensed robbery and murder; that the man who sells beer and whisky by the glass has bought for a trifle the privilege of filling the poor houses, jails and asylums, of making widows and orphans, of blighting lives and filling drunkards' graves. Show them that liquor selling takes from the treasury hundreds of dollars when it puts in only cents, that liquor drinking makes worse than human slaves, that God and the Bible are against it, and Satan and bad men for it and a life spent in destroying this enemy of souls is a life of honor and future reward.

—A correspondent in the Christian at Work offers a sensible criticism on the prayer-meeting: "Our meetings are made too unnatural and different from any other gathering. Where else except in an orthodox prayer-meeting do the women sit in stoical, irresponsive silence? How long could a church sociable or party exist if such were the case there? Are we not inconsistent in asserting, as some one has, 'the key to the hearts of the women of the heathen nations is in the hands of the women of Christian lands,' and then debar them from helpfulness in their own land? We mourn over the decline of interest in our churches and wonder at the few conversions. What else can we expect of a church where half of its working force is smothered into silence."

—The Sovereign Grand Lodge I. O. O. F. met recently in Baltimore in annual session. The treasurer's report shows receipts, $4,874,877.17; total relief, $1,813,171.38. Again it appears that this "benevolent order" has absorbed nearly three times as much as it has paid out for relief. For every one hundred dollars collected it has returned only thirty-eight dollars to its members. It requires no special financial ability to see that every Odd-fellow could do better by keeping out of the order. It is a shame to call such transactions benevolence. It is not even a fair insurance rate.

—"I am a Mason," said a government officer recently to an Anti-mason.

"Yes; I thought so," was the reply.

"Can you tell a Mason at sight?" said the officer.

"Generally."

"What are the peculiar marks?"

"There are several peculiarities, but in your case there is one conclusive evidence."

"What is it?"

"The fact that you hold your present position."

"Oh, I was a Mason twenty years before I held this office."

"Yes, I supposed so, or you couldn't hold it."

—The rapid growth of so-called "beneficiary insurance companies" called forth the statement from the Insurance Commissioner of Massachusetts last fall that it was only a question of a short time when the greater part of them would succumb. In keeping with this prediction is the statement recently published that the Foresters were in debt for the second time and that twenty-five out of thirty lodges in the vicinity of St. Louis, had withdrawn. It is strange that men will be drawn into such flimsy organizations which avoid the oversight of the Commissioners and have no financial guarantee back of them.

—In thirty years the Good Templars have grown from a halt a dozen lodges and a hundred members, to 6,500 lodges with a membership of 286,000. The amount of good they do for temperance is questionable, while their secrecy and silly ceremonies prepare their members for more dangerous secret orders. A gentleman said recently that he once attended a meeting of the Grand Lodge at Lewiston, Maine, and that they spent almost the entire time in drilling the members in the ritual, scarcely mentioning temperance during the entire day.

—An inquiry in Worcester as to how many of the city officers were Masons elicited the suggestive reply, "The city hall is full of them." Men of small caliber and great ambition join the lodge to learn how to become successful wire-pullers. Our city government is said to be run by cheap ward-politicians, who have come into power by secret manipulations. It is time sensi-

REFORM NEWS.

The Lake Region of New York.

Dear Bro. K.—Leaving Batavia on the 15th I reached at 9 P. M. the pleasant and hospitable home of Bro. H. Baldridge in the town of Varick, between lakes Seneca and Cayuga. This is a region of singular beauty and fertility, producing this year large crops of wheat, oats and grass, and moderate crops of corn. It is settled by a prosperous farming community and abounds in tasteful dwellings, churches and school-houses. Among the neat houses of worship is the Wesleyan church, built under the administration of Prof. L. N. Stratton, now of Wheaton, who organized the church here, and is held in grateful remembrance by the people. They have nearly completed a fine parsonage and their excellent pastor, Bro. Cook, is doing good service.

It was my privilege to preach to the people twice on the 17th and twice on the 24th, and to lecture on the 18th. They are holding up the standard of a pure Christianity amidst abounding obstacles. The lodge element here is strong and the piety of the people is low. This faithful people will prevail, for God is manifestly with them.

While here I lectured in the Baptist church at Romulus. The lecture room which we occupied is used as a grange hall, and the paraphernalia of the grange was lying all around. The amiable pastor had no convictions on the subject that I could discover, though he came in after the prayer, and left before he could be spoken to. There was a fair attendance and good attention. Bro. Baldridge added excellent remarks.

There is considerable anti-secret sentiment in this Romulus church, but it is not of a radical kind. One Freemason will do more to control a church than a dozen Anti-masons who are willing to be in fellowship with him.

I lectured also in a school-house near the Cayuga Lake and in spite of the storm had a good meeting. I was convinced that this State is an excellent field for labor and that the right man would not lack for support.

This morning I took passage on a fine steamboat on Seneca Lake for this place (Watkins) 30 miles distant. It is a beautiful sheet of water forty miles long, four wide and 1500 feet deep, with an average depth of 600 feet, so that but once in this century has it frozen entirely over. The country along either bank is very fine and there is much delightful scenery about this place which I have not time to visit. It is a great summer resort.

Altay, N. Y., Sept. 26.—I came here on the stage from Watkins, and found father Honeywell, ninety-four years old, failing but still remarkably vigorous for a man of his years. He is nearly blind and unable to read the Cynosure, but he does not abate one jot of interest in the good cause. It was a great pleasure to tell him of what we are doing, and listen to his recollections and counsels. The little village of Altay has but one church (Baptist.) They are probably all opposed to the lodge except the minister, who is an adhering Mason. The type of piety is about what might be expected in a church under such influences. "Woe be to the pastors that destroy and scatter the sheep of my pasture, saith the Lord." "Woe unto the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves! Should not the shepherds feed the flock?" I leave tonight for New York city.

Yours in Christ, H. H. Hinman.

What Progress in Kansas?

Pearletie, Kans., Sept. 19, 1882.

Editor Cynosure:—I have read the "proposition" of brother H. Curtis in a late Cynosure with great interest. I have delayed answering, however, until others wishing to answer might have time to do so, before reading this article.

The following list of pledges corrected up to date appears to meet and more than meet the conditions of the "Proposition:"

Meade	County	Pledges	$5 00
Riley	"	"	5 00
Nemaha	"	"	5 00
Rice	"	"	5 00
Jefferson	"	"	5 00
Bourbon	"	"	5 00
Sedgwick	"	"	5 00

Riley and Nemaha counties pledge $10 if needed.

It is to be noted with pleasure that the liberality of the friends could not be bounded by a $5 pledge. May this liberality abound yet more and more.

Verily it is no work of an hour to redeem Kansas from the grip of the lodge. Verily no offerings "of that which costs us nothing" will serve the purpose. We must rally to the work with men and money and faith and prayer and enthusiasm lifting up our banner in the name of the Lord and in the name of the Lord we will conquer.

Yours Truly,
P. S. Feemster.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Bro. Tobey and the Chambersburg Church.

Dear Cynosure:—I am greatly interested in your report of the Batavia convention. The addresses, so far as already reported, are able and stirring. The monument exercises will mark an epoch in American history. We are reminded again of the truth that history repeats itself. After the lapse of fifty-six years we have again a well defined and active Anti-masonic movement—one not to terminate till the secret empire has fallen. May the God of righteous battles hasten the good day when the churches will be free from the dominion of organized secret orders! How it pains my heart to see the lodge tendencies and affiliations, the apologies and coquetting of the good and once pure United Brethren in Christ church! But God will move onward in the bright pillar of truth leading the brave and truth-loving hosts to victory and glory, no matter who may desert and betray him.

I regreted my inability to attend the Batavia Convention. I was prevented by a personal affliction. I was engaged by the editor of the Cincinnati Gazette to report for its columns the proceedings of the meeting. I was therefore doubly sorry to be deprived of the privilege of being among the good and honorable people who attended from all parts of our land.

I am now preparing to move with my family to Chambersburg, Pa., to live and work with the true and good people of King Street church. By the unanimous request of the official meeting of the church, I go to preach to the congregation, which is a large and active body of Christians. My friends will oblige me if they henceforth address me at that place instead of Dayton, Ohio. I regret to leave the kind friends of this city, but there is a call of God elsewhere, and duty and enjoyment tell me to obey.

The paper United Brethren in Christ will be issued as heretofore from that eastern headquarters of loyalty. You, Mr. Editor, have recollections of the time in your early career of reform when you delivered an anti-slavery address in Chambersburg and came near being mobbed. Well the town suffered for its conduct when the Confederates burned it. The lesson was not lost, and the beautiful new residences and business blocks are occupied by people who honor men of principle. Our King street brethren are held in high public esteem for their loyalty to their principles.

The recent campmeeting held by the loyal brethren in the Cumberland Valley was a great success for truth and right. I was permitted to attend and participate. The people of the region came in great numbers, especially on Sabbath, even though Sunday trains were not run, by request of the brethren. I preached on Sabbath morning to as many as could hear of not less than five thousand people.

But I must close this letter. May the good cause speed on till truth and right prevail everywhere. Yours truly, W. O. Tobey.

Philadelphia, Sept. 24, 1882.

Dear Cynosure:—I bless God for the National Christian Association. Bless him for that gathering at Batavia from various States of this Union. Bless him that not all of his people are altogether bound in chains.

I am crying in the wilderness,—in the night watches; in the secret chambers of my soul,—crying, being bound—for deliverance from these binding chains! And yet there is much cause for joy, that there is a bright spot beaming on the hill tops, and a cry of victory comes floating on the breeze.

The statue of Morgan is beautiful. In its silence, a speaking monument. This is God's work, and to him be all the glory! I am hoping to do more for this cause as I get stronger; meanwhile am praying most earnestly, and truly prayer is the great lever that "moves the arm that moves the world."

That tragic scene of fifty-six years ago is plain in my memory. God grant that this unveiling may be such a blow to this terrible "image" as it never has had before. I wish to say to every friend of this reform, so far as I can reach them, My heart is with you in this good work, and may the good Lord hold you safely in his hand and give you power with him to do his will, and may he keep us all sufficiently humble to be trustful and victorious.

Yours in Christ,
Mrs. A. B. Hubbard.

Rob. Morris Swindling Brother Masons.

Hiawatha, Kan.

Rob. Morris, I see, is alarmed for the welfare of the old "handmaid." The miserable old fossil was here a year or so ago exhibiting to the lodge here his "Masonic relics" which he found in Palestine! He gave an open lecture on the Holy Land. He told us of the very large oranges he saw there; many of them, he said, were as large as the globes on the lamps in the room where the lecture was held. (They were all of eight inches in diamater, as large as a pretty good sized watermelon.) A Mason told me that Morris took away $300 from this place. He said that ten members of the lodge paid him thirty dollars each for a new degree, a degree that Morris had found when off on his Holy Land trip. I suppose this was one of the "relics" he found in Palestine. J. W. Margrave.

Our Mail.

John Levitt, Apple River, Ill.:

"May God bless our cause and the Baal worship soon be ended."

Chas. Granger, Clarence, Ill., writes on Sept. 8th:

"I do not forget that this is fast-day." This kind goeth not forth but by prayer and fasting.

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.:

"Our cause is growing stronger here and it is only a question of time when the truth shall prevail. I am, by the grace of God, doing a great work here. Raising Hiram, telling the truth and battling for the right. The Cynosure comes every week with good news. Long may it live to divide falsehood from the truth."

I have opposition in abundance, but what of that? None of these things move me; for I am on a rock—the rock of ages. I am a soldier of Christ and expect to endure hardness as such. I still pray 'God bless the cause in which we are engaged. By the blood of the Lamb we shall overcome."

Alma Johnson, Byron, Ill., sends one dollar for the Morgan Monument, and writes that in all possibility he has voted for his last president, which was the American Party Candidate, and should his life be spared, will rejoice to see that party victorious, as the Abolition party has been."

E. D. Taylor, Greenville, Ala., who receives the paper on the Southern minister's aid fund, writes that the Cynosure is doing much good in that place."

Geo. Clark, Oberlin, O.:

"The Cynosure is treated with more civility than formerly. No better family paper. The Lord bless you in your good work to save your country and souls. The prohibition discussion here is red-hot. Party politicians scared. Riding the prohibition and whiskey horses at the same time. Conscience, a hard time, tending to the Masonic collapse."

J. W. Baldridge, Cherry Fork, Adams Co., O.:

"I would be glad if some good lecturer would give us a call, and spend a week in this county. I believe there is a good field here if it could only be cultivated. There are several congregations of United Presbyterians and United Brethren in this county. The United Presbyterian-second synod of the west meets here at North Liberty about the middle of October. I believe it would be a good time for a lecturer to visit this county. He might be able to wake up some of our ministers on the reform work. We expect quite a number of ministers here at that time. Please do what you can for us."

Can the right person respond to this call?

Temperance.

THE KANSAS STATE CAPITAL.

The friends of Prohibition in Topeka have spent some $4,000 in suits against liquor dealers, and $5,000 more are subscribed for the purpose. The saloons have been run under what is known as the Soda-Water ordinance. The revenue from licenses has amounted to some $22,000 during the last fifteen months. The mayor of Topeka has lately issued a proclamation ordering the closing up of all places where intoxicating liquor is sold or manufactured. To prove the effect of the order, a reporter visited some of the liquor men, with the following result:

A reporter met Mr. Blackman, a well-known Democrat, and the agent in Topeka for Milwaukee beer. The press representative inquired: "What do you think of the Mayor's proclamation, Mr. Blackman?" "It is all right. We all want rest for a short time, and now have the opportunity. For myself, I want to do some building. Have resided here for five years, and have been busy all that time with this business." "Do the liquor men intend to obey the order of the Mayor?" "I think they will all quit selling liquor for awhile." "Will it not be permanent?" "I think not. You can't stop the selling of drink as long as so many persons desire it. The sale of drink will cause business to be dull, as it was when we quit thirty days a year ago or so, and may cause the defeat of the Republican party. The saloons will be closed until after the election." "How much beer was sold during the fair?" inquired the scribe. "Probably $20,000 worth." "Had the mayor issued his proclamation before the fair would the saloons have closed?" "No, sir. The saloon men had decided to keep open that week, and would have done so, no matter how often they were arrested."

At Boutell's place, it was said that they intended opening in Sedalia, Mo., Oct. 1.

Mr. Zimmerman was met at the door of his place of business and asked how he liked the mayor's proclamation. "First class. I have an American flag that I'll haul down and give to the mayor. I intend to close this business, of course. There is no money in it now, and I don't believe in spending $2 to make $1."

The reporter next called on Messrs. Straub & Co., the only wholesale liquor dealers in the city, and asked what they intended to do in view of the proclamation by the mayor. "I suppose we will have to abide by it," responded a member of the firm; "though I don't think it legal. We never paid the city any license, as we are wholesaling. I don't know whether the proclamation includes us or not, but presume it does." "How will the closing of the saloons here affect you?" "It will affect us greatly. All the saloons disposed of their stocks during the fair, and now instead of laying in new supplies they will cease selling."

Frank Durein, of the firm of Durein & Kriepe, was discovered seated in front of his establishment, the Topeka House. "What do you think of the mayor's proclamation?" "Oh, it's all right. I will close." "Do you intend building a new hotel, as you talked of some time ago?" "No, sir. Not under such a proclamation. I close out my saloon, let my other business here go on as usual, and will go somewhere; probably to Germany for two or three years."

Obituary.

Died, June 23d, of paralysis, at his home in this city, McClary Liscomb, aged 72 years, 2 months and 4 days. Born in Erie Co., N. Y., he well remembered the time of Morgan's abduction and the excitement which followed, and has ever been a life-long anti-secret man. His work is done on earth, though in the memory of many his efforts to reform his fellow man will be remembered. He was one of the early settlers of Michigan, coming here in 1837, with a wife and four small children, with small means to encounter the many wants of a growing family in a new country; but he struggled on through hardship and toil and accumulated means sufficient for the comforts of old age. He left his farm in 1877 and moved to this city, and was still active in business until sickness brought him low with fever for three weeks, and then paralysis set in, and for four weeks he suffered and died without a murmur or a groan. Of eight children born to him, five survive him. Two sons and three daughters, with their aged mother, mourn his loss. L.

Books and Magazines.

THE ESSAYS OF LORD BACON form a beautiful volume just issued by the Useful Knowledge Publishing Co. of New York. Bound with it are a series of mythological fables entitled, "The Wisdom of the Ancients." The Essays cover a multitude of subjects on moral and philosophical themes which are the every day contemplation of observing men. To read a brief remark upon such topics from a mind which towered over those of other men with the powerful light of its intellect is both profitable and delightful. "Among the great spirits," says a biographer, "whose claim to undisputed empire over men's thoughts has been ratified by the concurrent testimony of ages and nations, Lord Bacon stands deservedly pre-eminent." A sentence or two from the essay on "Unity in Religion," will give the imagination an idea of what may be expected to follow on this and other topics: "Religion being the chief band of human society, it is a happy thing when itself is well contained within the true band of unity. The quarrels and divisions about religion were evils unknown to the heathen. The reason was, because the religion of the heathen consisted rather in rites and ceremonies, than in any constant belief: for you may imagine what kind of a faith theirs was, when the chief doctors and fathers of their church were the poets. But God hath this attribute, that he is a jealous God; and therefore his worship and religion will endure no mixture nor partner." The publishers have issued this volume in handsome style, half Morocco bound and excellent paper and print, yet sell at a price (60 c.) much out of proportion for cheapness.

Among the most noteworthy features of The Century for October are the two portraits of Abraham Lincoln, which have never before been published. The larger of these, the frontispiece of the magazine, engraved by Cole, is a fine copy of an ambrotype which was made two days after Lincoln was nominated in 1860. The smaller one is a copy of the last photograph for which Lincoln sat, and was taken on the balcony of the White House six weeks before the President's death. These remarkable portraits enable us to see the great change which was wrought in the features of Lincoln between 1860 and 1865. With the portraits are published letters giving the history of the originals, and a paper entitled "How Lincoln was Nominated," by Frank B. Carpenter, who throws new light on the inside history of that memorable contest. Other articles of practical or timely value are E. V. Smalley's third paper on the New Northwest, which describes the life and natural features of the country between the Rockies and the Cascade Ranges, including the new wheatfields of Idaho and Washington; an admirable statement of "The Growth of the United States," by Francis A. Walker, the Superintendent of the last census; and an account by Judge Farman, late Consul-General at Cairo, of his "Negotiations for the Obelisk," with much that bears on the troubles in Egypt of which the present rebellion is the grand sequel. The last mentioned paper is illustrated, as also "Life in a Mexican Street;" "The Corcoran Gallery of Art;" "The Gibraltar of America;" "A Georgia Corn-Shucking," and "Handwork in Public Schools."

REFORM NOTE-PAPER AND ENVELOPES.

As a needed means of spreading the truth regarding secrecy, a collection of the utterances of Scripture and various noted statesmen and ministers has been prepared and printed in tasteful form at the top of note-paper and on both sides of envelopes (the matter on the paper being entirely different from that on the envelopes.) A blank line for date is also printed in. The envelopes can be furnished either white or colored; both envelopes and paper being of the ordinary size and of good quality.

PRICES:

No. 5 Envelopes, 3x5½ inches, $4 per 1000; postpaid, 60 cents per 100.
Note Paper, 5½x8½ " $3 " " 40 " "

The matter contained on this Stationery is pithy and forcible, and will do good work. Use it.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1882.

ELDER NATHAN CALLENDER.—I was disappointed in not getting to see and greet this excellent man at Batavia. The only thing left me is to tell the readers of the Cynosure how good a man he is; so that whoever of them shall travel among the hills of northeastern Pennsylvania may be thankful to know that they are on ground consecrated by his labors. From the dawn of our reform to the present, his light has ever been seen at the mast head and always supplied with oil. Every word he has spoken or written, (and he has spoken and written constantly) has been marked by candor, good sense, and clear discrimination. Opposition does not irritate, nor does abuse discourage him or throw him off his balance. Happy is the people who have such a man for their pastor. The churches among those green hills and valleys will yet know that a prophet has been among them.

MOTES IN EYES.—Rev. D. F. Bonner, in the United Presbyterian of Sept. 28th, says of the Batavia Convention:

"It had its good and bad features. Of the former was the clear presentation by different speakers, of the salient objections to the lodge. Of the latter was the unmeasured denunciation of the membership of the secret orders by others. Men are not to be drawn away from the lodge by declaring that every adhering Mason must go to hell. The movement has some of this spirit about it, which must be cast out if it would gain the confidence of reasonable men. On the whole, however, the Convention was a good one."

This criticism on the Monument Convention is warranted by facts; though a Republican or Democratic convention would furnish more unmeasured and bitter denunciation of opponents in an hour, than the Batavia Convention during its sitting of two days, evenings included. We do not complain of such righteous smiting. It is "an excellent oil." But does this candid brother know that Freemasons are now in some United Presbyterian churches? That in those churches no word is ever heard from the pulpit against the lodge? That some United Presbyterian churches are wont to get high Masons to lecture for them to raise money for their church purposes; thus raising funds by Masonic popularity; in short, pitching their tents toward Sodom?" All this is true. And it shows that some measures more effectual than those employed by these churches must be resorted to or pirates will sink their Zion ship. Drs. Wallace, Collins, McMichael, Johnson, Carson, and McClurkin and their peers, having been under fire themselves, know that men engaged in a hot battle are not apt to be offended by a slight smell of sulphur in their powder.

The Democrats of Illinois.

These met in State Convention in Springfield September 7th ult., and in their platform they say:

"We declare that the prohibition by the Constitution or by general laws, of the manufacture or sale of vinous, spirituous or malt liquors, would be in violation of individual and personal rights, and contrary to the principles of free government."

This puts the Democratic party in Illinois square against prohibition. They will have the advantage of a definite, out and out policy. They will have all the Irish and all but the temperance Germans, besides that class of American-born voters who followed the party through its slavery record. They will, on the contrary, lose every convert to the doctrine of prohibition; and, when women get the ballot, as the saloons are not patronized by women to any great extent, the term "Democracy" will become a reproach, as it was at the time of Lincoln's second election.

The Republican party is following in the footsteps of the old Whigs, and will meet a similar fate that is, be swallowed up by the party of reform. That will not be called Prohibition, Greenback or any other name of a specialty. There were the Liberty party, the Abolition party, the Free Soil party. They all ended in a party, named from the Republic, Republican, and triumphed. So now the American party is the natural landing place of all parties of reform. The lodge "seeketh her own," and is the natural marplot of every good cause in which it hides itself.

The issue which underlies all other issues is, Christ vs. Satan: which shall be worshipped. This issue was made in Batavia, New York, fifty-six years ago, was staved off by the slave question and the war. The lodge serpent now hides his head under the temperance wave on which secret lodges are embarked, along with those who, like Christ, do not work in secret. When the temperance cause has shaken off its incubus of secret lodges, as the anti-slavery cause shook off the Know Nothings, it will triumph; and then we shall get down to the question, whether a republic can stand on secret oaths administered by and to able-bodied men, binding them by cut-throat penalties to a secret empire? And also whether a Masonic lodge can, in fact, regenerate a man's soul, and send him to heaven, or whether Christ alone can do it: that is to say, whether Christ or Satan is the legitimate God of this world? We know what the end will be. For "he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet." "Therefore he is able to save to the uttermost all those who come unto God by him." And there is positively no way for human beings to get to God but by him.

—The subscription to the Cynosure Extension Fund at the National Convention was erroneously reported last week as $325.25. The figures should have been $353.25. Another misprint made the convention occur on the twenty-sixth anniversary of Morgan's abduction instead of the FIFTY-SIXTH.

—Elder Barlow's "Facts for Earnest Christians," has reached the fifth paper of the series in the Bible Banner of Philadelphia. He takes up in this the charity of Masonry, leaving the lodge stripped of this comfortable robe. How unkind of you, Elder!

—After the monument ceremonies at the Batavia Convention, one lady who had been an interested spectator whether she had been able to comprehend much that had been said or no, remarked that she knew now why we were called "Anti-masons." "It is because," said she, "they can't even put up a monument without hiring some one to do it for them."

—At Mr. Weed's request his letter upon the Morgan abduction, read in the Convention, has been returned to him. He wishes to make some additions and make his affidavit to its truth, and thus forever stop the howling of the lodge about the terrible facts which it reveals. He wishes to add other names to those already mentioned in so honorable a connection. As Mr. Weed as just written to Judge Taggart: "I am too proud of my own record to be willing to let others be deprived of their share of the credit. I regretted that my health deprived me of the pleasure of being with you on the 14th."

—In connection with the statement of Mrs. Mather respecting the so-called Mrs. Monroe who appeared at a claimant for Morgan's body, Judge Taggart told one of the editors of the Cynosure that he believed the Mrs. Monroe was a man dressed in female clothing. His opportunity for observing the case was excellent, as the testimony of the Anti-masons was taken by him. This testimony was never published, but was in his possession until a few years ago when it disappeared, and was, he fears, accidentally destroyed. It is just to say that Judge Taggart is not convinced that Morgan's body lies in the Batavia cemetary. To an acute judicial mind like his, accustomed to giving full credit to any doubt which may appear in the case, there may be flaws in the evidence, but we believe that ordinary men who heard all the testimony at the Convention, were thoroughly satisfied. Whether the waters ever gave up the body or not, however, is a secondary consideration altogether. The fact that Morgan was taken and put to death by Freemasons is established by Thurlow Weed's statement beyond reasonable doubt.

The Freedmen and Secret Societies.

ADDRESS BY REV. H. H. HINMAN AT THE BATAVIA CONVENTION.

The Declaration of American Independence, the Emancipation Proclamation, and the adoption of the 13th, 14th and 15th amendments of the Constitution made it inevitable that the people, who were thereby changed from "chattels personal in the hands of their masters" into fellow citizens and joint rulers of this nation, should receive Christian education, or that our government shall be a failure and anarchy and misrule shall follow. In the mysterious providence of God the Anglo-American and the Africo-American have, for good or ill, been inseparably united. Coming here without their consent, a mere handful of the commencement of our nation, the latter are now more than six and one-half millions; more than twice our entire population at that time. They are a majority of the people in three States and are increasing faster than in the days of slavery, and faster than the white race. From 1870 to 1880 the entire population, including an immense white immigration, increased 30 per cent. The negro race, without immigration, increased nearly thirty-five per cent. Each year there are added to them by birth 227,500; nearly as many as the entire Indian population, and far more than the resident Chinese. In 1880 this people raised six millions of bales of cotton, worth $300,000,000, and the cotton production steadily increases. Every prediction of the enemies of emancipation has been proved false. They are steadily securing education, accumulating property, and becoming assimilated to our body politic.

But while there is much that is hopeful in the progress and condition of the negro there is also, much that is evil, and full of danger. The heathen always copy the vices of civilization rather than its virtues. The greatest obstacle to Christians has always been the evil example of those coming from Christian lands. So with the freedmen: emerging from thralldom, ignorant, and morally weak, he mistook the pompous titles, the showy parades, and the specious promises of the secret orders for a short road to wealth, honor and influence. What the stronger race thought good for themselves he inferred would be good for him; and the saloon and the lodge became his favorite resorts. In every State in the South there has been organized colored Grand Lodges of Masons, Odd-fellows, Knights of Pythias, Independent Order of Immaculates and many other modifications of modern heathenism, so that the power of the lodge has largely taken the place of the power of the lash.

The N. C. A., whose work is to expose and withstand these secret orders, can have no more important field than among this people, for the following reasons:

1. These orders tend to promote and perpetuate the spirit of caste. Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship profess to be bonds of brotherhood, joining in one all who have taken their covenants. Like most of their professions, this is false. Every American Odd-fellow must be a free white male. The following extracts from Chase's Digest of Masonic law will show the status of the negro: "The colored race do not possess the necessary qualifications to be made Masons." No Grand Lodge has authorized its subordinates to initiate negroes." "All lodges of negroes are clandestine." (See Chase's Digest, P. 212). All Masons are sworn not to recognize clandestine Masons, and hence must regard them as impudent pretenders. The I. O. of Immaculates excludes all of the white race, and in none of the secret lodges of American origin do the two races unite.

The effect of thus organizing races in opposing camps on the color line must be to prolong the oppression, the misrule and the political frauds so prevalent, and to intensify the bitterness with which they regard each other, and which so greatly retard the prosperity of the freedmen and the well-being of the nation. The 13th, 14th and 15th amendments of the Constitution were adopted on purpose to abolish race distinction. They are the law of the land; but the lodges are organized in opposition to their letter and spirit.

2. The secret orders are a privileged class. It is for this purpose that they were organized. For this reason people unite with them. Undoubtedly it is convenient to have priveleges and immunities not shared by others. To belong to an inner-ring in a conference that can send a minister to a fat or lean appointment; to have the inside track in a political caucus; or to be able to make the grand hailing sign of distress to a juryman, is an advantage which it is not in human nature to despise. But surely such are most destructive to Christian purity and Republican equality. Especially will it injure a people struggling with poverty and prejudice to be divided into classes and seeking pre-eminence over each other. It was because these societies are anti-republican that Daniel Webster said, "It is my opinion that the future administration of all such oaths and the formation of all such obligations, should be prohibited by law."

3. They interfere with the due administration of justice. Many Masons understand their obligations as binding them to conceal all the crimes of a brother Master Mason except murder and treason and to aid him in any difficulty, whether innocent or guilty. They not unfrequently say so, and give it as a reason why they have united with the lodge. Among bad men this is an argument in its favor. That Masonry is largely used for the perversion of justice none can deny. That it must work most disastrously to the well-being of any people must be manifest to all.

4. They prevent the development of self-respect and manly endeavor that is essential to the success of the freedmen. It was one of the worst evils of slavery that it made a slave a mere parasite. He lived for his master and depended on him for support. He had no inducement for earnest industry. The secret societies promote the same dependent spirit. They promise him aid in time of need, and burial when dead. Delusive as promises often are, yet he trusts in them, and leans on others when he ought to depend upon himself. The success of the freedmen in securing the peaceful enjoyment of their social and political rights depends largely on their success in the accumulation of property. Secret societies not only prevent this by removing the spirit of self-reliance and earnest endeavor, but by collecting a heavy tax with a very meager return.

What these societies cost the colored man may be inferred from some official reports made by the white lodges. It is not probable that the colored lodges are better managed than those of their white brethren.

From 1840 to 1849 the Odd-fellow lodges received $4,933,493, and disbursed $1,864,115.

From 1850 to 1859 these sums were respectively $12,857,453 and $6,064,397.

From 1860 to 1869 receipts $13,111,133, and relief $4,846,518.

From 1869 to 1873 receipts $17,387,424, and relief $5,812,611.

The following official reports of Masonic Grand lodges show that in 1876 the Grand Treasurer of Missouri recived $19,864.45, and disbursed for relief nothing. The Grand Lodge of Illinois in 1872 received $25,015.59 and gave $100 in relief. In 1873 this Grand Lodge received $28,822.19 and gave nothing for relief.

These reports are exceptional. According to the most careful estimate about 15 per cent. of Masonic receipts are paid for relief. Odd-fellowship pays out from 30 to 33 per cent. Compare these with Christian benevolence. The Am. Bible Society expends in carrying on its work about 5 per cent.; the A. B. F. M. about the same; the Presbyterian Board of Missions 4½ per cent.; Masonry 85 and Odd-fellowship 66 per cent. The net cost of Masonry and Odd-fellowship in the U. S. for ordinary outlay is not less than $7,000,000 per annum, while the extraordinary expense is seen in the triennial conclaves of K. T., the one in Chicago in 1880 costing $4,000,000, from which sum no one received anything in relief.

A wealthy people may possibly endure such expenditure, but for the freedmen it is most culpable folly.

5. They destroy true Christian benevolence. They not only take away the means of benevolence, but they substitute for Christian charity the mercenary motive of giving to others that we may receive as much again. They exclude from their benefits the poor, the maimed and the blind, all objects of benevolence, and invite only the prosperous and strong.

Men who swear to help each other under penalty of death in its most terrible forms never love each other the more for taking such oaths, and when those who profess to be followers of Christ swear to do good to the members of a clan, rather than to their brethren in Him, they repudiate all true Christian love, and are simply mercenary in their relations to others. A colored pastor in Tuscaloosa, Ala., who for twenty years had tried the experiment of joint membership in the lodge and the church, told me that before the rise of the secret orders in that city he had only to make an appeal for aid to his congregation and they always responded. Now they had neither the means nor disposition to give to charitable objects. The Divine law to do good unto all men, especially to the household of faith, is set aside, and the harlot lodge is put in the place of the Bride of Christ.

6. These societies tend to destroy all sound morality and true religion. To bind men to always conceal what they know has been published and is accessable to all, is to teach them to lie. To sell pretended secrets of pretended value is to defraud. To swear to conceal all secrets except murder and treason is to swear to a guilty complicity in crime. An oath not to cheat a Mason or to violate the chastity of his wife is likely to be construed as a promise that he may do so to others with impunity. It is the almost universal testimony of colored pastors in the South that the cost of initiations, lodge dues, regalia, excursions and entertainments absorb so much of the means of the people as to very seriously interfere with the work of the churches. When we add to this the time and attention drawn from the service of Christ and given to, at best, mere human institutions, we cannot fail to see how evil the influence.

So strongly have these considerations pressed on the minds of the more devoted pastors in the South that through their influence many local churches have excluded from their membership all members of the lodge. But it is not the loss of money or time that is the real loss—Church discipline is undermined. When men swear to conceal from the church what they do in the lodge, they make all manner of iniquities possible and redress impossible. The Mason who is taught that the "common gavel" will fit him as a lively stone "for the house not made with hands eternal in the heavens," is likely to conclude that he has no need of Christ; and when he is taught that he may worship God acceptably while he does not recognize him by whom alone we may come to the Father, he is taught to deny both the Father and the Son. When he unites with the ungodly men in spurious religious ceremonies, borrowed from the heathen mysteries, he is fast becoming a heathen. Not only are the Masonic ceremonies a practical continuation of ancient Paganism, but they are strikingly similar to the Paganism of West Africa, from which a merciful Providence has rescued our colored brethren.

Patriotic and Christian men ought then to diligently prosecute this reform through the N. C A. Because there is an open door, the colored people of the South are of all people most ready to receive instruction when kindly presented. There is a growing reaction against the lodge system, which only needs our sympathy and aid to make itself felt throughout the land. The people in the rural districts have rarely gone into the lodge. They remember the horrors of the Ku Klux Klans, and believe in their practical identity with Masonry. The noble men and women who are devoting their lives to the education of the freedmen are mainly in sympathy with us, and their schools and colleges are generally open for our instruction. The A. M. A. gives us a practical endorsement, and seconds our efforts. The future teachers and legislators of this people are now within our reach, and we may save them and thus save our nation from the most appalling of its dangers.

The Indiana State Meeting.

Our annual meeting is near at hand, and are we ready for it? We are expecting the largest attendance we have had for some time. We hope to see all the friends of the American party at the meeting. Let all come prepared to work for the advance of the reform in our State. We must arrange to keep a lecturer in the field continually, and he must be supported, and funds must be had; therefore, friends, come and bring money with you and lend a helping hand once more. We must also arrange for the campaign work. Let there be a grand rallying of our hosts. I. W. Lowman, Prest.

Convention Notice.

The annual meeting of the Northeast Pennsylvania Christian Association, opposed to the lodge, will be held in the church at East Herrick, Bradford county, Pa., commencing on the evening of Tuesday, Oct. 24th, 1882, at 7:30 o'clock. The meeting will continue through Wednesday, the 25th. Brethren from all parts of Pennsylvania are specially requested to meet us there in conference to form tickets for the State election and plan future campaigns. Bro. S. E. Starry, degree worker, of Clarence, Iowa, can be had soon to conduct a campaign in Northeast Pennsylvania, and other points in the State. He has a good report and can be relied upon to work the degrees with accuracy and facility.

Brother Payne, of Millview, Pa., an efficient worker in the cause, will attend this meeting D. V. Other men, good and true, will be there, among whom are Barnettson and Richmond, of Jackson Valley, Bradford county. Let all in Pennsylvania interested in the purity of the church and of the State come to the meeting.

Nathan Callender, Cor. Sec.

—Brethren Butler and Starry called at the Cynosure office on their return from New York last week. They report the Warsaw meetings almost drowned out by a rain flood, but the meetings were, with this consideration, very good. One of the local editors in this place is a chivalrous and honorable Knight Templar. He therefore filled his columns with billingsgate falsehood and abuse of President Blanchard who spoke on the Sabbath evening preceding. The Wyoming meetings were all attended and very good; so also those at Attica where at first there was promise of disturbance. The Masons tried to break up the meeting, but finding it of good material to endure strain they failed in all but making themselves scandalous and the evening stormy within doors. Bro. Butler shall tell us of this next week.

—The wide publication of the proceedings of the National Convention especially in connection with the Monument, has roused the memory of another important witness, Marmont B. Edson of New York, whose letter to Judge Taggart that gentleman has most kindly forwarded to this office. Mr. Edson says: "Had I not been one of the proof readers of the publication [Morgan's book], and had never known David Cade Miller or William Morgan, I might be led to believe that the New York Times was correct in pronouncing the whole affair a 'myth,' etc. I only regret that the church to which I belong does not take the stand which the Romish church takes in the matter, against fellowship with those who are connected with secret associations." God grant that all the churches of Christ may take this stand, but from other motives than those of Rome. We hope Bro. Stoddard who was in New York last week may be able to see this brother and thus add another link to the chain of evidence that shall forever and in the eyes of all the world bind the hideous crime of Morgan's murder upon Freemasonry.

HOME CIRCLE.

Adoration.

All thy works shall praise thee, O Lord.—Ps. 114:10.

God hath his solitudes, unpeopled yet,
Save by the peaceful life of bird and flower,
Where since the world's foundation he hath set
The hiding of his power.

Year after year his rains make fresh and green
Lone wastes of prairie, where, as daylight goes,
Legions of bright-hued blossoms all unseen
Their cavern petals close.

Year after year unnumbered forest leaves
Expand and darken to their perfect prime;
Each smallest growth its destiny achieves
In his appointed time.

Amid the strong recesses of the hills,
Fixed by his word, immutable and calm,
The murmuring river all the silence fills
With its unheeded psalm.

From deep to deep the floods lift up their voice,
Because his hand hath measured them of old;
The far out-goings of the morn rejoice
His wonders to unfold.

The smallest cloudlet wrecked in distant storms,
That wanders homeless through the summer skies,
Is reckoned in his purposes and forms
One of his argosies.

Where the perpetual mountains patient wait,
Girded with purity, before his throne,
Keeping from age to age inviolate
Their everlasting crown;

Where the long-gathered waves of ocean break
With ceaseless music o'er untrodden strands,
From isles that day by day in silence wake,
From earth's remotest lands—

The anthem of his praise shall uttered be;
All works created on his name shall call,
And land and bless his holy name, for he Hath pleasure in them all.

The Broken Belt.

Little occurences are often sufficient to arouse a child of God from spiritual slumber, and call back to duty slighted or neglected. By the side of a stream, running along Vermont hills, lived Bro.——, the industrious owner of a saw-mill, and one who feared God with all his house. The heavily timbered lands around him made great demands upon his mill and several helpers were employed, who were of like precious faith in Jesus. The family altar was kept daily smoking with the sacrifices of praise and thanksgiving and every helper tarried at the service. On January 1st, an advance step was taken, and every member of the family, helpers and all, prayed around that altar every morning, assured by their employer that they should have plenty of time to worship God, as prayer never hindered work. That was a blessed household, and is still. But when spring came, and the logs piled up wondrously, and they must be sawed during the spring rains, as the summer stream was too low, Bro.——got anxious, and would send the boys to breakfast, while he stayed and filed the saw. The head of the family being absent, the helpers would eat and hasten back to the mill, and then Bro.—— would come, take his breakfast, and have family prayers, while the boys would run the mill. He did not feel that it was exactly pleasing to God, and a kind of inward unrest was his. One day, as he stood near the saw, without any warning the perfectly sound rubber belt, twelve inches wide, that drove the machinery, broke instantly, with the report of a musket, and had it not been for a strong iron rod, which it struck and bent to the floor, it would have killed Bro.—— on the spot. He stood a moment in amazement, and then said, "I understand. I have been saving time by robbing God of worship. This danger and this loss means 'pay your vows' and I will do it." Henceforth, the old mill has stood still, as if in silent reverence, while morning by morning the whole household kneel and worship, each calling upon God from a grateful heart. The logs seemed to saw faster than ever.

No wonder that that is a blessed home, and that the two aged parents, ninety years old, are younger than some at seventy. Brethren, if you neglect or hurry morning devotions to save time, look out for some "broken belt."—Selected.

Silenced.

A dancing professor felt it his duty to try to win many associates to Christ.

"O, ——," said he; "I long to see you a Christian; do come to Jesus, won't you?"

"What for?" was the blunt rejoinder.

"Why, for salvation. Don't you want to be saved?"

"Yes, I do; but what particular sins do you want me to be saved from?"

"Why, we are all sinners, you know."

"Yes, I know; but I do not cheat, steal, lie, swear nor use tobacco. What lack I yet?"

"Do you pray?"

"No; do you?"

"Yes," said the "Name to live," "I pray for you."

"For me! when, I'd like to know? Monday night you were at the dance; Tuesday night I met you at the ball, and we didn't get home you know, until four o'clock in the morning; Wednesday night I saw you at the sociable, and like the rest of us you 'carried on like sixty;' Thursday night I don't know where you were, but if cards could testify they would tell what you and I were up to, until nearly two o'clock on Friday night, and now it is Saturday, and for the life of me I can't tell what time you've had for prayer this week, or when you could have felt like it. O, I forgot. Your church holds a prayer-meeting every Thursday evening does it not?"

"Yes."

"And was that where you were last Thursday night?"

"Yes, certainly."

"Did you pray for me there?"

"I tried to," was the faint response.

"Well, I don't want to hurt your feelings, but for conscience' sake don't do that again. If you pray for anybody pray for yourself. You claimed, when you were converted, to have had more happiness in one hour than you had in your whole life before, and if that had been true I should have been a Christian long before now; but as far as I can see, you seek happiness just where I do—in the world; and if it is right for you it can't be wrong for me."

So saying, he departed, leaving his friend to ponder upon his ways, and wonder how effectual and fervent the prayers of one could be who was trying faithfully to serve God and mammon, or how much such prayers would avail in the salvation of lost souls.—Ex.

What Constitutes Respectability.

What constitutes respectability—money, social position, or genuine virtue? To be respectable is to be worthy of respect; and he deserves respect who has most virtue. The humblest man who bravely does his duty is more worthy of respect, is more truly respectable, than the covetous millionaire among his money-bags, or the arrogant monarch on his throne. The fine lady who backbites her neighbor is less worthy of respect than an honest washerwoman. The profligate man, though he may roll in money, is often not really as respectable as the shoeblack who cleans boots. That which exalts "the world" exalts the one and despises the other, but it does not make them respectable according to the real meaning of that word. Their respectability is but a hollow sham, as they themselves frequently feel, and those who worship them bow down to a fetish, a thing of feathers and tinsel. The selfish, idle drone, who wastes time in his own gratification, and dissipates the fortune of his progeny, is not and cannot be respectable; but the hard-working, self-denying father, who wears out his life to bring up his children, is, even though he be but a day laborer. The creed which exalts a man in proportion to his money bags is a false one. It creates an imperium in imperio, for, while the law declares all citizens equal, it erects a social standard which endeavors to ignore that great truth. The coarse, brutish, knavish, profligate, criminal—in short, all who fall short of their duty to themselves and their fellow men—are those who are not respectable; and this is whether they are rich or poor. While those who live honestly, and strive to do what they can, constitute in reality the respectable class, irrespective of the fact whether they eat with silver forks or steel ones.—Selected.

Words of Life for every Day.

SANCTIFY THEM THROUGH THY TRUTH; THY WORD IS TRUTH.

Thursday, October 5.—For the love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead. And that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them and rose again.—2 Cor. 5:14–15.

Friday, October 6.—For in Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision; but faith which worketh by love. —Gal. 5:6.

Saturday, October 7.—Now the works of the flesh are manifest which are these: Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, and they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts.—Gal. 5 : 19–24.

Sabbath, October 8.—That ye shall say, It is the sacrifice of the Lord's passover, who passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt, when he smote the Egyptians, and delivered our houses. And the people bowed the head and worshiped.—Ex. 12:27.

Monday, October 9.—But the fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meakness, temperance: against such there is no law.—Gal. 5:22-23.

Tuesday, October 10.—If we live in the spirit let us also walk in the spirit.—Gal. 5:25.

Wednesday, October 11.—The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all. Amen.—2 Cor. 13:14.

UNWOUND CLOCKS.—In the hotel were a number of clocks, one at last for each room, but as they each told a different story, they were never depended on, and if you did believe them, you were sure to be deceived. The fact was that all these time-pieces were out of order, or had not been wound up. Nothing could be learned from them: they were ornamental apologies for clocks, and nothing more. Even so the example of professing Christians is of small service to the world if the real life and power of godliness is absent. Religion, when it ceases to be useful, and is only set up for decorative purposes, is an utterly vain thing. If we are not wound up by the divine hand we cannot go, and if we are not going we are useless, we contradict each other, and we teach the world nothing worth its knowing. It is a great pity when, for lack of the inward, the outward becomes a total failure. When force has departed from the mainspring, the face and hands of mere profession are a wretched mockery.—Sel.

DEPEND upon it, in the midst of all the science about the world and its ways, and all the ignorance of God and his greatness, the man or woman who can say, "Thy will be done," with the true heart of giving up, is nearer the secret of things than the geologist or theologian.—Geo. McDonald.

THE navigator looks at the sun and at his chronometer, and puts his finger on the chart and says, "There we are, and to yonder point we are sailing." The fog comes down upon him, and he cannot even see the prow of his vessel, and his log and the record of his compass assure him that he is right; and right onward he dashes, full of confidence and hope. With our past experiences of the Son of Righteousness—the assurances which we have had in our souls from him in the past, and with the compass and chart of his words in our hands, what if the darkness, and fog, and chilling rain do come down upon us, and his face is hiden from us, we know from former evidences and assurances that we are right. Let us push ahead in our Christian course with hope and confidence.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

The Little Bird.

A little bird, with feathers brown,
Sat singing on a tree—
The song was very soft and low,
But sweet as it could be.

And all the people passing by Looking up to see the bird
That made the sweetest melody
That ever they had heard.

But all the bright eyes looked in vain,
For birdie was so small,
And with a modest, dark-brown coat,
He made no show at all.

"Why, papa," little Gracie said,
"Where can this birdie be?
If I could sing a song like that,
I'd sit where folks could see."

"I hope my little girl will learn
A lesson from that bird,
And try to do what good she can,
Not to be seen or heard.

"This birdie is content to sit
Unnoticed by the way,
And sweetly sing his Maker's praise
From dawn to close of day.

"So live, my child, all through your life,
That be it short or long,
Though others may forget your looks,
They'll not forget your song."

Be Trusty.

Two little boys were sent one day by a gentleman to bring a basket from a railway station. It was given to them, and they started off to carry it back. As they walked along Jimmy said to Harry, "I wonder what is inside. How I should like to see! I think it is something alive, for I feel it moving about."

"Well," said Harry, "give me the basket and let me look." So he took the basket from his brother, and they both knelt down in the road to see what it contained.

Harry was in the act of lifting the lid, when Jimmy cried out, "Oh, Harry, we had not better look; the thing is not ours, and I think we shall get into trouble if we touch it."

Harry's conscience had been telling him this all the time, and as he was trying to lift the lid, his hands trembled much, for he knew he was doing wrong. So he popped the cover down, took up the basket, and off the brothers ran as fast as they could. They soon got to the gentleman's house, who took the basket from the boys, and gave them some pence for their trouble.

Whilst they were waiting for their money, he cut the string which fastened the basket, and opening the lid carefully, took out two beautiful pigeons. Oh, how glad then were the boys that they had not opened it! Had they done so, the birds would have flown out, and they would have been severely punished for their want of trust.

Little children, let this be a caution to you. When you are sent on a message, deliver it quickly and correctly. When you are entrusted with a parcel, remember it is not yours, and you must not touch or examine it. If you do, you may damage the thing which is given into your care; you will get yourself into great trouble, and you will never be trusted again. The Bible says that a "faithful messenger refresheth the soul of his master." Try always to act behind your master's back as you would do before his face, and then I think you will prove to be faithful little messengers.—Selected.

A Humane Horse.

A correspondent of the Christian Union tells the following, which shows that the horse was humane as well as intelligent. Some men might well go to a horse of the kind described, and from him learn how to be generous. A friend of mine told me a story a little while ago which interested me so much that I want to tell it to all my little friends. This gentleman owned a fine horse, which was very fond of him and would come from the pasture at the sound of his voice, and follow him about like a dog. Well, at one time the horse became lame, and was obliged to stay in his stable and not be used for many weeks, and it was during this time that my friend became interested to see how much the horse knew and how kind his sympathies were. An old cat had made her nest upon the scaffold just above the horse's manger, and had laid there her little family of five kittens, to bring them up under good tuition, I suppose. She and the horse got on nicely for some days. She jumped down into his manger and went off for food, and then came back and leaped up to her kittens again. But one morning she rolled off into the manger with her foot bleeding, and badly hurt, so that she could scarcely crawl; but she managed to limp away on her three feet and get her breakfast; but when she came back she was entirely unable to get up to her kittens, and what do you think she did? (My friend happened to be there at the time and saw this done.) She lay down at the horse's feet, and mewed and looked up, and mewed and looked several times, till at last, Pony, seeming to understand her wants, reached down, took the cat in his teeth, and tossed her up on the scaffold to her kittens, who, I doubt not, were glad enough to see her. This Mr. C. told me he saw repeated morning after morning. Kit would roll off into the manger, go and get her breakfast, come back, and be tossed up to her family by the kind horse, who must have understood cat language, and been willing to listen to it.—Exchange.

SABBATH SCHOOL.

LESSON 3, October 15.—THE LORD'S SUPPER.—Mark 14:22-31.

GOLDEN TEXT.—For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup ye do show the Lord's death till he come.—1 Cor. 11:26.

22. And as they did eat, Jesus took bread, and blessed and brake it, and gave to them, and said, Take, eat, this is my body.
23. And he took the cup, and when he had given thanks, he gave it to them, and they all drank of it.
24. And he said unto them, This is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many.
25. Verily I say unto you, I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine, until that day I drink it new in the kingdom of God.
26. And when they had sung a hymn, they went out into the Mount of Olives.
27. And Jesus saith unto them, All ye shall be offended because of me this night; for it is written, I will smite the Shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered.
28. But after that I am risen, I will go before you into Galilee.
29. But Peter said unto him, Although all shall be offended, yet will not I.
30. And Jesus saith unto him, Verily I say unto thee, That this day, even in this night, before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice.
31. But he spake the more vehemently, If I should die with thee, I will not deny thee in any wise. Likewise also said they all.

NOTES.

Jesus was celebrating the Paschal Supper with his disciples. When was it first instituted? Ex. 12:1–14. Of what was it a memorial? Ex. 12:25–27; 13:8, 14. Of what was it a type? 1 Cor. 5:7, 8; 1 Pet. 1:19. This type of deliverance through the death of Christ is now to be superseded by a memorial of his death and of life and food coming to us through that death. Where was the Lord's Supper first celebrated? When? Under what circumstances? Who were present? What dispute arose? Luke 22:24. What important act did Christ perform? John 13:4–12. What deed was foretold? John 13:18, 30.

The Lord's Supper is in remembrance of Christ. Luke 22:19. It is the seal of the covenant of forgiveness in blood. Matt. 26:28. It is the symbol of partnership or communion. 1 Cor. 10:16. It is one method of preaching (see Rev. Ver.) the death of Christ. 1 Cor. 11:26. This must be continued until the second coming of the Lord. 1 Cor. 11:26. The real body and blood are not in the bread and wine, but represented to our sight and faith, for Jesus calls the contents of the cup the "fruit of the vine." Matt. 26:29; Mark 14:25; Luke 22:18. So also he speaks of bread. The whole process of making bread fitly represents the sufferings by which Christ became bread to our souls. John 6:33–35. The bread and wine are symbols of his body given, not broken, (Rev. Ver. 1 Cor. 11:24), and his blood poured out. 1 Cor. 11:24, 25. Who should partake of this Supper? None but true Christians. Because they alone can enter into the meaning of the ordinance,—they know forgiveness through blood, have communion with God concerning the value of the body and blood of Christ. Just as the body is strengthened and refreshed by eating bread and drinking wine, so the soul is nourished by feeding in the heart upon the body and blood of Jesus. John 6:49–56. Moreover, it is the Lord's table and Supper, and none besides his children have a right to its privileges.

Should there be any self-examination previous to going to this ordinance? 1 Cor. 11:28; 2 Cor. 13:5. What is it to partake of this Supper "unworthily?" 1 Cor. 11:27–32. It is plain that no reference is here made to unworthiness in those that come. In that case none might come, for none are worthy. But the reference is to the manner in which some may come. As in the case of these Corinthians, taking too much wine. 1 Cor. 11:21. For this cause some of them were weak and sickly, some had fallen asleep, or died. v. 30. They had not judged themselves and their sins, and therefore God judged them. vs. 31 32. We should therefore contemplate the death of Christ in our hearts, should trust in his blood for forgiveness, should judge ourselves and put away evil from our lives when we take the Lord's Supper. 1 Cor. 5:7, 8. While we look back to the cross as the foundation on which we rest, we should look forward to his coming as the crown of our hope.—Notes for Bible Study.

PRACTICAL.

1. As the passover celebrates the birthday of the Jewish nation, so does the Lord's Supper the birthday of each Christian soul.
2. Vers. 22, 23. The simplest and most common things of daily life remind us of Christ.
3. The two greatest needs of the soul—forgiveness of sins, and daily supplies for the soul's new life—are furnished by Jesus Christ.
4. The Lord's Supper, coming down to us through the ages, is irrefragable proof of the life and death of Christ.
5. Christ could give thanks, even in view of his own death.
6. Ver. 25. There is promise and hope, even in the symbols that remind of Christ's death.
7. Ver. 28. To Christ the future life was a living reality.
8. Ver. 29. Self-confidence is a sign of self-ignorance.
9. Those who boast themselves over others are often the first to fall.—Peloubet.

Acknowledgment.

FORT SCOTT, KAN., Sept. 16th, 1882.

MY BELOVED BRO.:—I wish to say through the Cynosure that I received $5 from Bro. S. Dean, of Waupun, Wis., through the kindness of Rev. W. W. Warner, for which he will please accept my sincere thanks. The Lord has blessed me in the past year, and some good I trust has been done for the truth, and against lodgery. Ever Yours, J. A. RICHARDS.

Masonic Charity.

A few years ago a man was very sick on Hanchett street in this city. He was a Freemason. After a length of time his mind began to wander, and he began to talk incoherently. His wild state did not seem pleasing to the craft, for his talk was all concerning a poor brother whom the lodge had cheated out of his rights. He continued to talk and matters grew worse; the poor sick man revealed some unrevealed secrets concerning Masonic treatment of some needy brethren, and Masonic benevolence bid fair to pass at a discount. This kind of thing would not do. So what do the craft do but send in a physician in great haste with opiates to quiet the revealer of secrets. The poor man became silent and died, and some of the valuable secrets which Masons say we do not know and cannot find out, were buried with him.—W. G. in Michigan American.

If believers are condemned by the world let them remember that they shall not be condemned with the word.

ble men put a stop to this sort of thing. One gentleman, in a position to know, said so far as he could learn there were only two prominent city officers who were not secret society men. We cannot verify the statement, but everybody knows that lodge men have crowded themselves to the front to the disgust of all honest people.

—"No man can serve two masters." The Saviour declares that the man who tries the experiment will certainly give the preference to one or the other. A good Christian cannot be a good Mason, nor can a zealous Mason be an active Christian. Some men think they are combining the two services successfully but if we call onto the witness stand the church and the lodge of which these men are members, one or the other will complain of neglect. Many pastors notice that the hearts of some Masonic church members do not seem to be in the service. A young man once told his pastor that he did not like to hear a certain deacon pray, for said he, "I meet him twice a week, once at prayer-meeting and once in the lodge; at prayer-meeting his words sound hollow and meaningless, while in the lodge he is all zeal and enthusiasm." This corresponds well with the remark of a Connecticut pastor: "My most active members are Masons, but they are not worth a stick for piety."

A prominent New England pastor who has not yet entered the list of open opponents of the lodge, sends us a private note containing some friendly words, which we are permitted to use anonymously: "I have before me a copy of your paper which has been kindly sent to me. Allow me to thank you for it and ask you to put me among your subscribers. I am grateful at the prospect offered of a general discussion of the subject of secret societies throughout New England. Evidently there is great need of it. I only trust that the discussion will be carried on in such a way as to attract the considerate attention and approval of our more cautious and conservative people and not repel and drive into immediate antagonism the great number of conscientious (if mistaken) men connected with the lodges. There are scores of such men in all our large towns and any movement in promotion of righteousness ought to have their support and co-operation—or at least not their avowed hostility—if this be possible. * * * I do not make the above suggestions in criticism of your paper, but only as a consideration that comes to me in view of the general subject. I heartily approve of your paper and its sentiments, except perhaps the proposal to go into politics."

We occasionally receive such letters as the foregoing from prominent men, but more frequently words like those are given us orally, lest undue use might be made of them. The feelings and sentiments expressed here prevail quite extensively throughout New England. Pastors feel that this subject must be met and fairly discussed, yet they dread the discussion as the pioneers used to dread prairie fires. The very caution which they show is an indication of the baneful influence of the lodges, as well as of their great strength. Conservative men owe some consideration to radicals at such times, for it is evident the public is so sensitive that even a mild discussion will provoke opposition, hence the mere fact that a man is strongly opposed should not be regarded necessarily as a condemnation.

We have no fears of the results if only the pastors of New England will investigate the real indictment against the lodges. It is not enough to oppose them because they take the time and money of church members. To put the opposition on such ground only weakens its force, for men will argue that if there is no vital wrong but some recognized good in the orders, then they have a right to the time and money of men as well as the churches have. The fact is there are vital principles involved and we must speak in defense of them.

A young man in Worcester was recently discharged from a factory to make place for a Mason. His employer told him if he would join the Masons he could have employment. Since then two manufacturers have said the same thing to him. It appears the Masons propose to secure the public offices for their men, to control the business of the city in their own interest, to frighten the churches into silence, and subsidize the press to advertise them. Could there be anything more selfish, more despotic, more clannish, than the principle of favoritism and intimidation thus practiced? The vigilance of the people must be aroused, ring-rule must be destroyed and fair and impartial government secured.

The New England Board.

This board was organized last year to promote reform work in New England. Since that time it has employed two men constantly and two others for part of the time to lecture and put into circulation reform literature. The work of these agents has been constantly reported and friends are informed of its value in the cause. The Board was called together Sept. 19th to hear a report from its Secretary and Treasurer and lay plans for the coming year. A majority was not present, but there were a number of other friends present and it was decided to proceed with the business subject to the ratification of a majority hereafter. The reports of the Secretary and Treasurer were approved.

After consultation it was decided that we must endeavor to continue the same kind of work. The Board authorized the Secretary to employ agents as the funds would warrant and to make every effort to raise funds for the vigorous prosecution of the work. It is hoped friends will respond promptly and cheerfully to the appeal for support. Hereafter monthly statements will be made of amounts received with the initials of the givers so that friends can know how the work progresses.

The South Worcester Meeting.

For many years a Sunday School has met in one of the public school buildings in South Worcester. The mission has been very prosperous, and has gathered to itself a good number of earnest friends, who have acquired a hearty sympathy and fellowship in their work.

Recently they have engaged a pastor and are now having preaching every Sabbath. They have purchased and paid for a lot on which to erect a chapel, and have pledges for a part of the amount needed to build it with. The building committee are pushing forward as rapidly as circumstances will allow, and it is confidently hoped the building may be finished this fall.

Methodists, Baptists, Christians, Congregationalists, Germans, Americans and Swedes are all deeply interested and warmly united in the project. A prayer-meeting of great usefulness is regularly sustained, and there is every prospect of a united, prosperous and useful organization in the near future. They are already practically united in genuine Christian fellowship. May the Lord bless the enterprise.

The Abduction Number

Of the Cynosure, Sept. 7th, can be supplied in large quantities or small at 3c. each. Remember this is the illustrated paper, and the same matter in an an ordinary pamphlet would be worth five times the amount. Send for this paper, and scatter it among your neighbors. Friends who are canvassing for subscribers send your names and get some copies free, so many as you can wisely use to bring back returns.

The first number of the Iowa American will be issued in October. Terms same as the Illinois American; 25 cts. per year for single subscriptions, five copies for a $1.00, etc.

Please send in your subscriptions at once to N. Bourne, CedarRapids Iowa, chairman of the publishing committee.

—It is proposed to abolish the spirit ration in the British navy, and to give a substitute "in the form of improved dietary or increased pay."

THE AMERICAN PARTY.

Nominations for 1884.

For President,
JONATHAN BLANCHARD,
of Illinois.

For Vice-President.
JOHN A. CONANT.
of Connecticut.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

Attention Voters!

POLITICAL ACTION IN MICHIGAN.

While attending the National Convention at Batavia, N. Y., it was deemed advisable, by a majority of Mich. State committee present to put in nomination a State ticket for the coming election, which important work was done with the following result:

AMERICAN STATE TICKET.

For Governor,
CHARLES C. FOOTE,
of Detroit.

For Lieutenant Governor,
LEWIS 1. WICKER, of Oakland.

For Secretary of State,
JACOB O. DOESBURG, of Ottawa.

For State Treasurer,
GEORGE SWANSON, of Calhoun.

For Auditor General,
WILLIAM WING,
of Kent.

For Commissioner of State Land Office
GEORE W. CLARK, of Detroit.

For Attorney General,
HENRY C. PRATT, of Lenawee.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction,
WILLIAM H. ROSS, of Allegan.

For Member State Board of Education,
HARDY A. DAY, of Branch.

Iowa American Ticket for 1882.

For Secretary of State: A. W. Hall.

For State Auditor: Wm. Elliott.

For State Treasurer: M. Springsteed.

For Attorney General: Jacob W. Rogers.

For Judge of Supreme Court: Joseph P. Ferguson.

For Clerk of Supreme Court: W. P. Norris.

Michigan Fifth District.

For Representative in Congress: Henry D. Inman.

—Prohibitionists of the Fifth Michigan District cannot do better than to cast their vote for Henry D. Inman for member of Congress. He is as good a prohibitionist as there is in the district, and besides he is under no obligations secured by mortgage on throat, breast, brain or bowels to keep rum-sellers' secrets or extricate saloon keepers from their difficulties.

Inaction Means Death.

The editor of the Coldwater Sun sees something in the condition of things which he not improperly terms "Political Narcotism." He evidently sees that not a small proportion of the voting population do not vote at all, have not for years, and will not under the existing state of things. In all reformatory movements there has been trouble from this "narcotism," and it is not to be wondered at that it makes its appearance now. Neither of the old parties are fit for an honest man and a Christian to be connected with. Year after year we have voted in hope of seeing advances made in civil and religious progress, and year after year we were made to blush at the thought of having (as far as our vote went) given aid to some dastardly outrage which was in evry respect a disgrace to the nation and to the party in power. But while this may be true, indifference and inactivity is not at all the proper thing. Our fathers saw that it was a man's right both to be independent and to give expression to that independence. According to the plan wisely adopted by this government, expression is given to this independence by the ballot. The remedy for all our ills, politically speaking, is in the ballot. If a majority of the people are not pleased with the existing condition of things, they can at once bring about a needed reform. We say they can, for this is a people's government, and in a people's government the expressed will and desire of the majority is the coutrolling power. Now we submit it to be a fact, that the majority of the people are disgusted with the operations of the various divisions of governmental affairs, from the common justice court up through all to the great Congress of the United States. Why not bring about a remedy, since reform is the will of the majority?

We answer, indifference and inactivity. Men fear that by voting for a new measure they will lose their vote. We now submit the following query: Who loses his vote, the man who votes for an honest candidate and a pure principle, and is defeated, or the man who votes with a corrupt party, elects a dishonest candidate, and himself and fellow-citizens plundered as a result? The cry of thus losing votes is worn threadbare. In the anti-slavery struggle there existed a society called "Know-Nothings." There also existed another class which might be termed "do-nothings," and owing to the existence of these stumbling blocks victory for the right was long delayed. In the present struggle, if every voting citizen would study for himself, searching for the right, and having found the true policy, act upon it, reform would as naturally and easily follow as that harvest follows seedtime. But if we will not act, we must keep silent and suffer. —Michigan American.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

—The last United Presbyterian General Assembly at Monmouth appointed the third Sabbath of October (15th), to be observed as a day of prayer for all the Sabbath schools in the congregations of that church.

—A convention is being held this week, Oct. 3 and 4, in the First Presbyterian church, Pittsburgh, by the National Reform Association. In preparation for this convention meetings have lately been held in several places in Western Pennsylvania by Revs. J. C. McFeeters and J. H. Timmons.

—Rev. Martin L. Williston, son of the reverend J. P. Williston, of Northampton, Mass., and formerly pastor of the First church, Galesburg, Ill., is now preaching in Davenport, Iowa.

—Last Friday the corner stone of a new Episcopal Church of the Ascension was laid with great ceremony in Chicago in connection with the "feast of St. Michael the Archangel." Four "low" masses were celebrated in the morning and "high mass" toward noon. The procession about the church and on the street, the bowings, the repetitions, the fantastic dresses of black and red, the "invocation to St. Michael," and all the list of popish stuff gone through are described in the daily papers. The clergyman who led in this performance is one of the "high church" order. The Episcopal Bishop McLaren, who should have conducted the stone laying ceremony, refused to have anything to do with it. Whether he will wink at the innovation or no is not said.

—Rev. D. S. Kinney, publishing agent of the Wesleyan Connection is expecting to visit Dakota to dedicate a new church at Northville, Oct. 11, and organize a new annual conference for the Territory.

—Bro. E. Jones, pastor of the Wesleyan church at Syracuse, N. Y., was lately assailed in a brutal manner while going home in the evening from a church meeting. He was struck in the back by a large stone and was severely injured. There is no trace of the villain who attacked him.

—The Theological Seminary at Wheaton opens this week on Wednesday. Prof. Stratton has been improving his vacation in visits to a number of conferences, cheering the brethren by his presence, and being himself greatly encouraged by the purpose manifested to sustain his work. He is expecting a good class this fall and will be assisted in the labor of instruction by Dr. J. B. Walker of Wheaton, and Rev. S. F. Stratton of Downers Grove, Ill.

—The Rev. J. H. Hill, who has been appointed missionary to the Central American State of Guatemala by the Presbyterian Missionary Society of the Northwest, left Chicago on Monday to enter upon his work. At 4 o'clock Sabbath afternoon farewell services in his behalf were held in the Jefferson Park Church, at which there was a large attendance of those interested in his mission.

—One of the Catholic churches of this city opened a raffle for a house and lot on Sabbath afternoon.

—Bro. C. W. Hiatt, who for about a year has been preaching for the Tonica church, has found a change necessary for his health. He expects to go to Oberlin where he will resume his studies. Pres. Blanchard preached at Tonica last Sabbath.

—The Anglaize, O., United Brethren conference adopted the following upon the secrecy question at its late meeting:

"WHEREAS, We still see the demoralizing and corrupting influence of oath-bound secrecy upon society, biasing the minds of politicians and corrupting our courts of justice; and, Whereas, We should have in them examples of moral reform; therefore,

Resolved, That in teaching the great example of Christ to the people we should be careful to say to them, "Come out from among them and be ye separate saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing." And while ministers may entertain different opinions as to the best methods of opposing the evil of secrecy, they should never become nullifiers of law, or tolerate in any way this principle among church members."

—In Syracuse University there is a wealthy young Brazilian student, who intends to become a Methodist preacher and preach in his own land, and when he comes into his property to endow an American chair in the university.

—Twenty-three churches of the Illinois District of the Lutheran Synod of Missouri established an Orphans' Home at Addison, Ill., ten years ago. This institution is in a flourishing condition. During the time of its existence 154 orphans have been received. Receipts of last year: donations, $4,808; from other sources, $2,223.22; sum total, $7,031.22.

—Dr. Barnardo is one of the most active and successful city missionaries in London. His mission is to the most degraded, and he depends on voluntary contributions for the means with which to carry it on. Recently he was in a tight place for lack of funds. A lady who was an entire stranger to him called to make some inquiries about the mission. She expressed herself so well satisfied with what she learned about it that she asked Dr. Barnardo to accept of a 1,000*l* Bank of England note. This he gratefully consented to do. Before he had recovered from the astonishment consequent on the unexpected gift she asked him if he would accept of another just like it. He consented, just as gratefully as in the first instance. As she was going away she quietly slipped another into his hand, making altogether 3,000*l*, or about $15,000 in our money. The lady declined to give her name, but seemed to take pleasure in doing good for the love of it, and not for the sake of having her beneficence advertised in the papers.

—Of all Lutheran countries Iceland is the best provided with pastoral oversight. For every two hundred of its inhabitants there is a pastor, and there are some parishes where the number of souls is still smaller. Most of the pastors come from the peasantry, and the direction of the religious life of the people has hitherto been exclusively in the hands of ordained men. But now the lay element is beginning to move separately. In the northern district of the island, for example, lay preaching has been started and is meeting with considerable favor.

—The labors of the Protestant missionaries in benighted Spain have been productive of good fruit. Within the last twelve years about 13,000 Spaniards have joined the ranks of the Evangelical Church, and over 40 Sunday-schools have been established in which 7,000 children are instructed. The German Protestants have contributed about $2,500 to this noble work.

DEAR BRO. BLANCHARD:—Having failed to attend the convention at Batavia, I think it proper that I should give to friends the reason. That is, in short, this: It so happened that the time of the meeting was the same as that of the annual meeting of our Bridgewater Baptist Association, held in this place. There seemed to be more important reasons that I should attend the latter, waiving all the gratification the former might afford, and I acted accordingly. A resolution, which embodies my articles of faith, had for several years, on my motion, been adopted by the Association. I thought it a matter of more importance than personal gratification, and I had no assurance that anybody but myself would see that it was brought up for action. Added to this, there were some considerations connected with my becoming a minister of the body at the Associational meeting forty-one years previous.

In relation to that as a matter of personal history, of more interest to me perhaps than any one else, I will here say that, after having some seven years been a member of the bar of our county, I had in the anti-slavery and temperance battles come to possess that indefinable restlessness which seemed to say, You have a different mission from that at the bar. There is a work for you in the oncoming time that you can better do in connection with the ministry. To this, after something of a struggle I yielded, and in accordance with Baptist usage, I was ordained to the ministry. Here commenced the part I have taken since in our denominational and national conflicts. Of course there is no room here for detail.

A few words in relation to the Association and the present anniversary. I must say for it that it was largely attended and full of interest. After the reporting and adopting of reports on the matters pertaining to the ordinary business, the second day I called up the resolution which on my motion had for several anniversaries previous been passed, remarking that it was a summary of my articles of faith, the body of divinity I had in the past endeavored to make practical, and hoped to during the time that remains to me beyond my three score and ten years. The resolution passed without debate or opposition, and with permission, I will here give it to the public through the Cynosure:

RESOLVED, That we continue to stand by our old Baptist landmarks, among which are Individual Soul Liberty; church Independence; church as distinguished from Christian Fellowship; New Testament, as distinguished from the prelatical title D. D., in the ministry; the equal right of all men to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; to all of our former testimonies in favor of total abstinence from all intoxicating drinks; and finally against all oath-bound secret orders or so-called brotherhoods.

HOME AND FARM.

Physical Development.

It is asserted that the average English girl of twenty is a finer creature physically than her American contemporary——larger boned, more muscular, fuller blooded, and in general more robust. The children's food at English schools is more digestible and nourishing. To eat regularly three hearty meals every day is a duty and a pleasure in an English family or school. Girls are required to bring luncheon from home, or buy it at school. English girls are more in the open air than American girls, and in-doors they live in rooms warmed by open fires. Girls are not allowed to study after eight o'clock in the evening, in order that they may have time to rest before bed time. If the pupil cannot complete her lesson within the time mentioned, she leaves it undone. An English girl of good family grows up until she is eighteen years old in an atmosphere of profound quiet; she sees very little of young men, besides those of her own family; does not go to parties or public entertainments of any sort, and knows little and cares less for the outside world. As fortunate marriages are what English girls desire, it is important that a young woman, in all classes of society, should be healthy and vigorous. In the language of Dr. Clark, "the English educate the body more than we do, and in this respect build better brains. There is no reason why we should not equal or surpass them in this respect as well as others. A republic should build the bodies and form the brains of its children with as much care and excellence as a monarchy performs the same task for itself." Let our girls heed this advice, and take plenty of exercise—out of doors as well as in the house.—Christian at Work.

SUNFLOWERS will be found profitable by all who keep chickens. The tall plants will grow in any waste corner and especially like a chip yard. One stalk (self-sown) by our wood pile matured 23 flowers. On another in a corner of the garden we found 36 flowers. The Batavia, N. Y., News tells of a prodigy: "Alvin Chamberlain, of Alexander, has a sunflower that is superior in all respects to the Bethany specimen of æstheticism. Mr. Chamberlain's is 9 feet above the ground and bore 43 flowers, the largest of which is 36 inches in circumference. Three flowers were cut from it two weeks ago that measured 6 inches in diameter."

SAVE THE STRAW.—The preservation of straw for feeding purpoees is very important. It is best secured at or immediately after threshing time. The chaff, especially of wheat straw, is most valuable, and should, so far as possible, be distributed through the stack. That which is left in rear of the straw carrier should be put under shelter, as it rots easy.

FEEDING HORSES.—The horse has the smallest stomach, in proportion to his size, of any animal. Fifteen or sixteen quarts is its utmost capacity. Horses are generally overfed and not fed often enough. A horse's digestion is very rapid, and therefore he gets hungry sooner than a man. When he is hungry he is inefficient, and wears out very rapidly.

AN Iowa farmer says that stalks from an acre of sweet corn are worth the cost of raising the crop if used as feed for milch cows. He gets $50 per acre for the green ears.

IN behalf of the fruit interest it is well to recall each year the pictorial remark of Horace Greely: "An apple tree is like a cow tied to a stake; you must carry food to it or it will die."

WHATEVER he has done or neglected to do in the past, the farmer who has land which can be properly devoted to that purpose should make it a point this year to set a few fruit trees.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich, and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 60 cents; per dozen, $5.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.00. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degrees of Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Valance's Confession of the Murder of CAPT. WM. MORGAN. This confession of Henry L. Valance, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan in the Niagara River, was taken from the lips of the dying man by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine County, Wisconsin, in 1848. 10 cents each; per dozen. $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers. 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 De-GREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen. $1 25.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2 00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Re-PUBLIC, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen

MISCELLANEOUS.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each: per dozen $2 00

General Washington Opposed to Se-CRET SOCIETIES. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Chris-TIAN RELIGION. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the In-ITIATE. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Secrst Socisties. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. Each of these able writers in clear, forcible language treats the subject in one or more of its varied phases. Rev. David McDill in six chapters treats of 1. "Their Antiquity; 2 Their Secrecy; 3. "Oaths and Promises;" 4. "Profaneness" 5. "Their Exclusiveness;" 6. "False Claims." Prest. Blanchard handles the topic: "Shall Christians join Secret Societies?" in a masterly way, showing clearly that they are all opposed to the genius of Christianity; and Dr. Beecher closes with his Report on Secret Societies, which was adopted by the Congregational Association of Illinois at Ottawa in 1866. In cloth, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.25. Paper cover, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association, condition of the Carpenter donation, with engraving of building donated by Mr. Carpenter; tables showing the number of pastors and communicants in churches that exclude members of secret societies, tabular view of local, county, state and national conventions, and list of organizations auxiliary to the National Christian Association; brief opinions of eminent men on secret societies, and testimonies of religious bodies against them. 25 cents each; per dozen, $1.50.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Greene, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. Unpublished Reminiscences of the Morgan Times, by Elder David Bernard; Recollections of the Morgan Trials, as related by Victory Birdseye, Esq., and presented by his daughter, Mrs. C. B. Miller; Secretary's Report; Roll of Delegates; Songs of Mr. G. W. Clark; Paper by Enoch Honeywell; Constitution N. C. A.; Reports of Committees and a Report of the Political Meeting. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing Official Reports; Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D. D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D. D., Prest. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D. D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blauchard and Rev. W. E. Coquilette; also Report of the Political Mass Convention, with Platform and Candidates for the Presidential Campaign of 1876. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 31 Cynosure tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies; and the dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized secrecy are shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public. Those who wish to circulate anti-Masonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from. 20 cents each, per dozen, $1.75.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. W. P. M'Nary, pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind. This is a very clear, thorough, candid and remarkably concise Scriptural argument on the character of Freemasonry. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and CHURCH. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret SOCIETIES. A most convincing argument against fellowshipping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

EZRA A. COOK,

No. 7 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO.

In the Coils; or the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of every-day life, and showing how individual, domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. Parents who wish, not only to keep their children out of these night-schools of Satan, but to give them arguments against them in the most attractive dress, will do well to purchase this book. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Ad-DRESSES. In this scathing review the lying pretensions of the order are clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Letters on Masonry. Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian religion. Paper cover, 30 cents each; per dozen, $2.50.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Baiu. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers; price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2 00.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship (old work), by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen, $7.50.

Fresmasonry and the M. E. Church. Let every lover of truth and justice read this report of the trial of Rev. J. T. Michael, showing how he was driven out of the M. E. church for opposing Masonry and loving Methodism. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Ma-SONRY. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocate, and afterward in pamphlet form. The Evangelical Repository, reviewing it, says: "This pamphlet consists of a series of articles originally published in the Church Advocate, Lancaster, Pa. Elder M. S. Newcomer opposes secret societies, and especially Freemasonry and Elder G. W. Wilson defends the system. We are free to say that Mr. Newcomer has thoroughly routed his opponent at every point. Mr. Wilson speaks by the book, as he is a Royal Arch Mason." 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

NEWS ITEMS.

—A Baptist Association was holding its annual meeting at Hampton Cross Roads, Va., attended by a very large crowd, when two wild and reckless young fellows became involved in a quarrel, and began firing at each other. The worshipers were seized with a panic and rushed for a place of safety, several women and children being thrown down and trampled on in the confusion, while the duelists kept on firing until both had received mortal wounds.

—Ex-Commissioner Le Due, formerly Chief of the Agricultural Bureau at Washington, is out in a letter discussing the subject of foreign immigration, thinks the great desire in Europe to emigrate to the United States is universal, and that the exodus threatens disturbance there and disaster in this country.

—By the explosion of gas in a mine at Plymouth, Pa., two men were instantly killed and a third so badly burned that he will probably die. The explosion occurred previous to the hour for going to work, otherwise the loss of life must have been very great..

—A series of earthquake shocks, slight in force but distinctly perceptible, was experienced at St. Louis and a number of localities in Illinois. Beyond the usual sensations incident to the oscillation of the earth's surface no harm was done.

—While a responsive salute to the French frigate Minerve and the ram Chassen was being fired from Castle William, on Governor's Island, guns discharged prematurely, inflicting terrible injuries upon four men and slightly wounding two others. Two of the most badly hurt died during the day, and a third is not expected to live.

—Egypt is now again entirely under the authority of the Khedive, who made a formal entry into the Capital and took up his quarters at the Ghezireh Palace.

—Decrees have been decided upon by the Egyptian Ministry providing for the trial and punishment of persons engaged in rebellion against the authority of the Khedive. Amnesty will be granted to captains and lower officers who served with Araba Pasha, excepting those guilty of participation in the riots or who joined the army subsequent to the beginning of the campaign.

—Araba Pasha says the best thing the English could do for Egypt would be to send all the Notables and other leading men connected with the rebellion out of the country. If they do not do so vengeance will surely be wreaked upon them after their departure.

—The explosion at Cairo of a train of cars loaded with ammunition destroyed fifteen days' supplies for 25,000 men, besides a large amount of war material. The explosions at the railway station continued at brief intervals for over three hours. The passenger station was saved, but all the freight sheds, containing ten days' provisions for the army and about 200 trucks of ammunition, were destroyed. Five men were killed and twenty wounded. The fire was of incendiary origin.

—There is a rumor to the effect that an autograph letter will presently be sent in vermilion pencil from the Chinese Court to Queen Victoria, requesting her personal efforts in the suppression of the opium traffic.

PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT.

The testimony of some canvassers for the Cynosure is that it is delightful. The consciousness of doing good is a reward for the toil, loss of time, wear and tear of the work which often is great.

Wm. Babcock, Montreal, Can., expresses the sentiment held by many readers of the paper: "The Cynosure seems a Godsend every week that it comes."

Isaac Simmons:—"I intend getting some subscribers soon. I claim to be a zealous worker in the reform."

Dr. Norris:—"I want to keep the ball rolling if possible."

Burdett Fuller:—"I shall keep trying to get subscribers."

E. Bascom:—"I shall try to get more subscribers for the Cynosure." His past success warrants our opinion that he will succeed.

F. A. Miller:—"I will endeavor to enlarge your subscription list."

Harold Hakonsen sends three subscriptions on the Extension Fund plan and writes:—"I will try to send you many subscribers."

S. Hart sends twelve subscriptions for a year each and "may end more."

J. D. La Homme sends two for a year and three for six months each.

October is a delightful month for canvassing. One hundred and thirty-seven subscriptions expire this month. Will all please renew promptly?

MASONIC BOOKS

FOR SALE BY

EZRA A. COOK,

7 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

Books sent post-paid on receipt of retail price, but books by mail are at risk of person ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express are sold at 10 per cent. discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority because they tell too much.

General Ahiman Rezon and Freemasons' Guide. By Daniel Sickels, 33d degree. The most perfect Masonic monitor published in the United States. Embellished with many engravings and containing monitorial instructions in the degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow-Craft and Master Masons, with explanatory lectures, the ceremonies of consecration and dedication of new lodges, installation of officers, laying foundation stones, dedication of Masonic halls, burial services, Masonic calendar, ritual for a Lodge of Sorrow, Masonic trials, etc. Bound in fine cloth, extra large 12mo, $2.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the entire ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Scores of Masons have privately admitted that this is a standard text-book in the lodge and is strictly correct; but publicly it is not acknowledged as authority, though many officers of the lodge make use of it. Price, in cloth, $2.50.

Female Masonry. Manual of the Order of the Eastern Star. Containing the ritual, symbols, lectures, etc., of the five degrees of "Adoptive Masonry," Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound. Price, $1.50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. A practical guide to the ceremonies in the degrees conferred in Masonic Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated edition. In cloth, $1.25; in paper, 75 cents.

Although this Monitor is extensively used by the lodge, especially in conferring the higher degrees, it is publicly called an exposition, and not allowed as authority.

Sickels' Freemasons' Monitor. Containing the degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic illustrations, together with tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also forms of Masonic documents, notes, songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels; 32mo. In tuck, $1.50; cloth, $1.00.

Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry. Containing a Definition of Terms, Notes on its History, Traditions and Antiquities, and an Account of all the Rites and Mysteries of the Ancient World. 12 mo., 526 pages, $3.00.

Mackey's Manual of the Lodge, or Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow-Craft and Master Mason, with Ceremonies relating to installations, dedications, consecrations, laying of corner-stones, etc. Price, $2.00.

Mackey's Masonic Ritualist, or Monitorial Instruction Book. By Albert G. Mackey, Past General High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of the United States, Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prince of Mercy, etc. Price, cloth, $1.25; tuck, $1.75.

Mackey's Text-Book of Masonic Jurisprudence. Illustrating the laws of Freemasonry, both written and unwritten. This is the great law book of Freemasonry. 570 pages. Price, $2.50.

Allyn's Ritual of Masonry. Illustrated by a large number of engravings, and containing a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, Orange and Odd-fellows' Societies Price, $5.00.

A PROPOSITION TO ONE HUNDRED READERS OF THE CYNOSURE.

If one hundred persons will each send in the money for a club of ten subscribers for the Christian Cynosure, ($15.00) fifteen dollars cash, (send the names of subscribers at pleasure) within thirty days from date (Oct. 12th, 1882) the publisher will order a folding, trimming and pasting machine for the Cynosure, so that the paper can be well pasted and mailed a day earlier than it is at present. For some time we have been wishing to make the above mentioned improvement, but as receipts have not justified the expense it has been hitherto postponed. Will you not accept this proposition and forward the money promptly?

Each week we will report the clubs received and promised and also the money sent on in advance for clubs.

Do you accept the proposition? By so doing you will thus confer a favor on all readers of the paper by affording them a well pasted paper mailed one day earlier than it is at present. Whatever increases the value of the weekly organ of the National Christian Association augments the power and hastens the triumph of our great reform.

ONE HUNDRED CLUBS OF TEN

subscriptions paid for within the next thirty days would be an appropriate introduction to our annual campaign for Cynosure subscribers which we hope will this season be enthusiastic, thorough, prolonged and successful.

There are hundreds of thousands of persons who are really anti-secretists in the United States whose names are not on the Cynosure list. But suppose that of even its less than 4,000 subscribers every one should come to a just appreciation of the press as a means of reform and to a righteous determination before God to give and labor to the limit of his ability for the extension of its influence, what would be the result? Suppose that the friends of reform in every neighborhood should parcel off the territory and see that every household in the region was personally solicited to subscribe? Suppose that they should agree to take pay for the paper from poor persons in produce or labor, if necessary, or themselves should send it free for a year to some who would promise to read but would not subscribe for it? Suppose they should devote a portion of their income annually to sending the paper to friends who were entangled in the lodge? Suppose that they made a religious duty of such work for one year; what would be the result? If the circulation of reform books and tracts was not quadrupled and the Cynosure did not have twenty thousand subscribers and one hundred thousand minds were not directly reached and moulded by its truth, it would be a thing unheard of in the relation of cause to effect.

TOPICS OF THE TIME.

The Illinois Liquor-dealers Association, lately met in Rock Island, changed its name to the "State Protective Association," and promises by resolutions to be more useful in circulating temperance literature than the excellent Signal and Woman's Christian Temperance Union combined! The objects of their protection are the "dear people" who are being misled and befooled by prohibition fanaticism. Prohibitory laws being easily proven to be the cause of increased drunkenness and crime, as they say, it remains that these protectors of morals and good neighborhood should disseminate "by means of lectures, speeches, newspapers, pamphlets, statistics and other literature" the true temperance principles that will prevent murder, theft, rows, fights, wife-beating and the ten thousand miseries that flow in an unbroken tide from every distillery, brewery and saloon in the land. Certainly these gentlemen have made money enough in their iniquitous business to afford generous contributions in this direction. At their next annual meeting we hope they can report that one-half the saloons of the State are closed through this new temperance agency.

The secretary of the above meeting had a table showing the number of towns in the State which are scheduled as "license" and "no license" and the political coloring of their respective counties. This table he would not show to the convention, but that made no difference to the press reporter. It appears from this table that there are 260 of the latter to 267 of the former, omitting Chicago, Peoria, Quincy and three or four other large cities. There are twelve counties in the State in which no "license" towns are reported. If this table is correct the temperance people of Illinois have already the control of this question through the State laws now in force. How widespread and strong this "local option" spirit has become may also be seen in New York State, where it is reported that, out of about two-thirds of the towns from which reports have been obtained, 281 vote no license.

No reader of this number of the Cynosure will fail to read the letter of the general agent and secretary of the N. C. A. reporting his most interesting visit with Hon. Thurlow Weed in New York. They will also read with unfeigned regret that Mr. Weed was suddenly and severely attacked with illness last week, and for a time the gravest fears were entertained by the faithful daughters who make his comfort their constant care. Mrs. Alden, one of them, said on Friday evening that her father's physicians had forbidden him to see any one; "but when Gen. Simon Cameron called here yesterday father desired to see him. They have known each other and been intimate friends for fifty years. When told that the doctor had forbidden visitors to enter the sick room, Mr. Weed said: 'I must see Gen. Cameron.' I think the greeting between the two was the most affecting and touching that I ever saw. Gen. Cameron stepped to the bedside and kissed father tenderly on the forehead. He is the only person that father has seen since he was taken ill. The doctor told me an hour ago that he was greatly encouraged, and he said that father's vitality has shown itself to be very great. We are very hopeful." The latest report says that the attending physician is hopeful that Mr. Weed will soon be about again. In the last event, however, it is a solace to know that he will pass into the next world sustained and comforted by that Divine grace, upon which, as the gift of God through Christ, he rests unshaken faith.

On Monday afternoon the Knight Templar Freemasons had another display by way of prize drill in this city. It was attempted to make the United States army dance attendance to the doughty "Sir Knights," and Adjutant General Drum of Washington was to furnish the judges. But General Drum seems to have exercised a fine sense of the fitness of things and refused to have anything to do with the gentlemen of the ostrich feathers and long titles. Would that other departments of the Government had some of General Drum's sense of honor. But now, so far as possible every man who will not be made a miserable slave of the lodge is trampled under its feet.

Slavery--American and Masonic.

BY ELDER NATHAN CALLENDER.

Let us compare these kinds of bondage. Which is the worse? American slavery was sectional and involuntary. No one chose it who could see an inch beyond himself. The fetters were on the body mainly and on that against the will and wish of the subject. A person might be a slave and a Christian as well as a prisoner and a Christian. Paul, Peter and the beloved John who pillowed on Christ's bosom his head and soul, were as good when in prison as on the mount of transfiguration, or, "caught up to the third heaven." Bondage did not morally and spiritually effect the soul of the subject further than to circumscribe him by limiting him in knowledge and growth. Heaven will display her record of, perhaps, millions of those of "the church of the first born whose names are written in heaven," who lived, groaned and toiled under the cruel lash of the slave-driver.

How is the case when we turn to the other kind of bondage?

Masonic slavery is world-wide, while its fetters are all-embracing, not exempting, as we can see, one single faculty or power of soul or body. Like strong drink it debauches and enervates the whole being, and beyond that it takes him an oath-bound captive for time and eternity. "Once a Mason always a Mason." Surely he does not care to be a Mason in "the Grand Lodge above," not according to Masonic teaching. What part of a man's entire being is not put on the Masonic altar, when he devoted himself to the lodge? What is left to be free in "politics and religion" after swearing scores of times the "ego" of his existence and being to the lodge always? Always a Mason. Who promises? Who swears? I, I. Paul says "I was caught up, etc." Whether in or out of the body it was Paul who was there in the third heaven, in vision. But men while in the body swear their being to Masonry. Their bodies are of course tettered in Masonic oaths and covenants. The "cable tow" relates, perhaps, more to the body than to the soul, while it surely embraces it. No Mason could say that his covenant embraces the body only. It could not be true. Then man's entire being must be embraced by that covenant as all the symbolism of Masonry teaches. The symbols of Masonry alone demonstrate that it claims to be a religion. Then its standard authors claim that it is. No heathen system of religion that we know anything about ever claims less than the entire being of its devotees. Masonry to all intents and purposes does this. Look at the language of the first Masonic oath. The following clause will suffice: "To all which I do most solemnly and sincerely promise and swear without the least equivocation, mental reservation, or self-evasion of mind in me whatever; binding, etc." No document can be framed by any scholar or divine that binds the "soul, body and spirit" more firmly and completely. God himself can claim no more of his subjects than Satan here demands of the lodge-bound soul.

What then is Masonic slavery? It is the voluntary enslavement of the entire being forever. It can be nothing less by all the standards of the craft.

I would like, in that connection, to advertise for a document more pungent, more profound, more all-embracing than every part of the Masonic covenants, to enslave the whole man. Take it word by word and then ponder and see. What is there of man left for polities and religion after he becomes engulfed in an abyss of Masonic oaths and obligations? Absolutely nothing. The first obligation consumed him soul and body to all intents and purposes from all other claims of church and state, in case he keeps it inviolable. Imagine a cannibal with the power to consume you, utterly and fully, soul and body, who tells you before swallowing you that he does not propose to interfere with your politics or your religion. He is hungry for the souls and bodies of men but he will assure you on his sacred honor that you shall be left entirely free, to follow your own choice and convictions, on all questions of church and state if you will allow him to make a meal of you. Liberal and genial Christian gentleman he is, and all he asks of you is yourself.

Let us analyze a little.

First, then Masonry subjugates the will. "I of my own free will and accord, etc." What a stupendous falsehood is here! Free(?) will, going into the most abject slavery this side of tophet. Mainspring of the soul tying the hangman's knot around its own mysterious power and becoming the chief agent in its own enslavement under the guise of freedom!

Second. Nothing above the abyss of the damned, is more thoroughly fitted to bind, debauch and stultify the human conscience than the oaths and rites of speculative Masonry. They palsy the moral principle and render it dead to all its high and God-appointed functions, and leave it in bondage to sin and Satan.

Third. It enslaves reason. The man who will submit to the covenants and rites of the lodge is, morally, a maniac. His reasoning powers are subject to the emissaries of the wicked one.

Fourth. It lays on memory an unwieldly and endless tax. The first inspiration of the aspirant for Masonic honors is, to become a "bright Mason." To accomplish this, he must almost ignore all other relations, all other duties and all other truths that he may reach the "center of Masonic truth." Every shelf of this storehouse of his soul must be occupied by Masonic science(?). Thus enslaved, memory is like a cage of unclean birds. In fine, there is not a faculty or a power of man's being left free. Masonry enslaves him in detail. If there were adequate reasons for opposing American slavery there are reasons three-fold for combatting Masonic slavery.

High Places and Heathen Rites.

Every attentive reader of the Old Testament notices the frequent allusion to the idolatrous rites practiced on the hills and high places. Those who have noticed where modern Masonry meets, have noticed also their lodge rooms generally in the highest stories of the buildings, and the question arises, can this after all, be a proof of their great antiquity as worshippers of the Baal and Ashtaroth, the male and female gods of the Phœnicians and Tyrians?

Let us refer to a few verses on this subject. In Numbers 22d and 23d chapters, we have idolatry tampering with the prophet Balaam in a manner quite suggestive of the allurements in our day to preachers; as Balak then, so the lodge now, takes such into their "high places," "to curse Jacob and defy Israel." Again and again they try, but if Christians continue to cast their testimony for the Christ of the New Testament, Masonic anger will as certainly arise as Balak's did at the partial failure of his scheme.

Freemasonry has attained considerable popularity of late years, and having no Christ in its own lodge, it indulgently grants permission for an imitation Christ to be worshipped in its "secret inner chamber." So also it permits its Mohammedan or any other "sect," to have the same privilege. This counterfeit Christ (see Matt. 24:26) is a repetition of the old aberrations from the true worship.

This service of Baal is again and again condemned as a grievous sin, very similar to the idolatrous practices shared by modern Christians in the "high places" of the Masonic lodge. Jer. 19:5; 32:35. Numbers 22:41. It was a sin in Solomon "to burn incense in high places" for his heart was not perfect with the Lord (1 Kings 11:4–7), and so he built "high places" for Chemosh and Molech, the fallen gods of Moab and Ammon. Solomon, the greatest man of his day, yielded his duty to God for the praise of men, but he thereby entailed the penalty, and his kingdom was rent asunder. Thus with some popular preachers; they truckle to Freemasonry, but their churches must as a natural result be rent asunder by and by. Yes, Jereboams will rend such churches and carry away into Masonry probably ten to every two members who remain true worshippers! Christian, what fruit will your example yield?

Let the reader pursue this subject of idolatry in the Old Testament and learn its lesson in our own dispensation. The Jews were the chosen people, but they were only a type of the Christian community of believers who are a people as ready to go astray as were the Jews. Corruptions abound among the Catholics and Protestants, and we are at a loss to pronounce any greater seducer from the simplicity that is in Christ than is this modern Jezebel, Freemasonry, among the churches of Christ, and which pervades some of its otherwise most promising enterprises at home and abroad. H.

One of the great hindrances to right governmental dealing in Ireland grows out of the existence of secret societies. They are habitually plotting anarchy. It is so always in every place. Secret, hidden caballing among men for any purpose is one of the worst kinds of villainy, and it is to this that secretism inevitably leads. "Openly to the world," is the way of the Master. —United Presbyterian.

We trust that many workingmen have during the past summer had their eyes opened to the evils of the secret orders to which they have bound themselves. To undertake to break down one monopoly by establishing another more objectionable is folly. They have learned, in at least some cases, how much secret organizations destroy individuality and all manly independence, and make them the slaves of scheming leaders.—Bible Teacher.

REFORM STORY.

Holden with Cords.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "LITTLE PEOPLE," "A SUNNY LIFE," ETC.

Chapter XXIII.—An Evening in the Lodge.

Up to this point Mark had been listened to in perfect silence, but it was a stupefied silence. He had taken the lodge completely by surprise—the more so as his calm, slow utterance had at first acted as a partial disguise to the scathing denunciation contained in his words. But as his meaning fairly broke on the startled assembly, looks of contempt and anger took the place of satisfied complacency, and murmurs which broke at last into audible hissing, filled the hall. Mark had roused the lodge dragon. My prediction made before starting had been fulfilled with disagreeable exactness. What a comfort the mere sight of Luke Thatcher's honest face would have been in that sea of scornful, contemptuous looks!

Elder Cushing and one or two other members tried to quiet the disturbance, and so far succeeded that when Mark again rose to speak in response to a call half in earnest, half derision for his proofs of Morgan's murder, there was quite a profound silence.

"If I should bring forward my whole array of evidence, beginning with the first intimations that I received of the conspiracy against the life of Morgan last August, and the numerous conversations held with Masons on the subject who both acknowledged and justified his murder, I should trespass on the time of the lodge. My proof is nearer home. Sheriff Fox"—and Mark leaned forward with a look that was sword-like in its keenness—"you, a minister of the law whose business it is to punish the guilty and shield the innocent, you have helped forward this work of blood. Deacon Brown, you have done the same. And must it be said that against you, Elder Cushing, I have the same damning charge to bring? God knows that as my pastor I have loved and revered you, that I have been sincerely grateful for all your many kindnesses to me, but though every word I speak is like an arrow in my heart, God's truth must be uttered without respect of persons. On the night of the 14th of September there was held in Lewiston an installation of the Royal Arch Chapter. That meeting decided Morgan's fate. You were present and consenting to his death."

There was something in Mark's face and voice that seemed for an instant to awe the lodge. Even Darius Fox was content with silently looking his rage and defiance, while Deacon Brown, a kindly, well-meaning old man till his fanatical devotion to Masonry made him a murderer, fairly cowered in his seat. Elder Cushing flushed almost purple, but he rose to reply.

"Some allowance must be made for the rashness and presumption of youth. Brother Stedman in thus venturing to accuse his elders and superiors in the lodge shows his ignorance of the very first principle of Masonic law; unquestioning obedience, and the swift execution of its penalties when violated. Masonry has its system of laws and the right to punish their infringement as much as the State or the Church. And what crime more detestable than treason? To what government under heaven can you point, however humane or enlightened, which does not punish it with death? Morgan was a traitor to his Masonic vows, and if he has died the death of a traitor, if his throat has been cut from ear to ear, his tongue torn out by the roots and his body buried beneath the rough sands of the sea where the tide ebbs and flows twice in twenty-four hours, he could not complain of not having justice done him."

"Amen. Amen. So mote it be," was the response all through the room to the Elder's speech. Mark took in the scene with eyes in which a deeper fire was slowly kindling, and when he once more rose to speak, his voice was low and solemn as with a prophetic burden of approaching doom.

"Because ye have said, we have made a covenant with death and with hell are we at agreement; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through it shall not come nigh unto us, for we have made lies our refuge and under falsehood have we hid ourselves. Therefore thus saith the Lord, your covenant with death shall be disannulled, and your agreement with hell shall not stand; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through then ye shall be trodden down by it." From this unholy institution whose authority is based on deception and terror, whose morality is a lie, whose laws are murderous, whose oaths are high-handed blasphemy, I withdraw forever. God shall yet judge her, and if there be among you as I would fain believe, some who do abhor and detest this great crime which has been committed, I call upon all such to stand up and unite their testimony with mine against it, that they be not partakers in her doom."

I had sat in silence fairly appalled at Mark's daring till now, but true courage is always contageous; and amid the storm of hissings, hootings, cries of 'traitor,' and threats to send him after Morgan, which interrupted his speech, with one thought of Rachel I rose and stood beside him. But no one else stirred in the lodge. It was an awful moment. Neighbors, friends, with whom we had held pleasant social intercourse all our lives, glaring upon us with looks of scorn and hate, abusive epithets hurled at us from lips that heretofore had never anything but kindly greetings!—at this moment I can shut my eyes and see it all, then open them shuddering as if from a dream of hell. But Mark stood unmoved, brave as a lion; and when a slight lull in the clamor allowed his words to be heard he again spoke.

"Threaten us if you will; carry out those threats if you dare, but remember that there may be consequences you will not care to face. I have spoken freely against the principles of this institution. I believe it to be anti-Christian, and a dangerous foe to our republican government. For holding and expressing these opinions you murdered Morgan; but I shall not be deterred by his fate from holding and expressing them too. Freedom of opinion, the liberty of the press, and the right of free speech I will never surrender to the bidding of any earthly power. They are rights given to me of God, purchased by the blood of my fathers; I inhaled them with my first breath—I will only lose them with my last. Remove my objections to Masonry if you can, when these very threats you utter against me to-night prove their truth as no mere assertion of mine can possibly do. But till then, as I said before, I withdraw from all connection with the institution, and disavow every obligation taken in blindness and terror. I bow no longer at an altar defiled with human blood; I own no High Priest save him who has passed into the heavens; and no Worshipful Master but Jesus Christ my Lord."

Mark had said his say: the lodge had not. For two or three hours the stream of invective and abuse continued to flow, and then the meeting broke up after certainly one of the stormiest and most exciting sessions Brownsville lodge had ever known.

CHAPTER XXIV.

HE GIVETH HIS BELOVED SLEEP.

In spite of the lateness of the hour, Rachel was sitting up waiting for us; and as soon as she heard our footsteps, flew to open the door and light us in, the candle which she carried revealing mingled anxiety and relief in her countenance. Mark noticed it.

"We have been in a den of lions, Rachel," he said, "but we have come back safe. God has shut their mouths; we have received no harm."

"Shut their mouths for the present," said I, rather sceptically; "but I tell you Mark, if you keep on the rig you are running now there is no saying what the consequences may be. The fact is public opinion in this matter of Morgan is beginning to press so hard on the lodge that it is just like a wounded wild bull—ready to plunge its horns into everybody rash enough to stand in its way. What they have done to one man they will do to another, if they dare. That's all the question there is about it."

"I don't think my life is in any present peril," answered Mark; "nor do I intend to rashly endanger it. Half the battle is in taking a bold stand at the outset. They can expell me, 'derange my worldly interests,' 'point me out as an unworthy vagabond, and transfer my character after me wherever I go.' This I expect. But I have counted the cost. You see it is an easy thing for me to do who have only myself to count it with. But it is different with you, Leander. You, who stood up with me like a rock to-night against all the fury and abuse of the lodge, must have to count it over with another dearer than yourself. What do you say, Rachel?"

"That the cost shall never be made more through any selfish shrinking on my part," answered Rachel, with glowing cheek and sparkling eye. "Do you think that I will not help Leander bear all the persecution and reproach that may come upon him, loss of property,—anything if I can only have my husband back again?—none of these terrible lodge secrets between us. O Mark!" and Rachel's voice choked and her eyes overflowed.

I wonder how many Mason's wives have thought the same in the solitude of their lonely vigils, bitter of soul against the institution that robs them of the true wife's most precious treasure—the entire confidence of her husband!

The Batavia Convention.

ADDRESS OF PROF. E. D. BAILEY.

The story I am about to tell is not one of Æsop's fables. I never read it in the classics. Indeed, it I ever heard it before I have forgotten when. However, the story suits the occasion, and this will justify its use.

'Once upon a time' a half dozen men formed a co-partnership for manufacturing purposes. Their manner of organizing was mysterious. When the co-partnership was formed they bought a lot in a conspicuous place, and laid the foundation for a great factory. Passers-by asked what they were going to manufacture, but sealed lips, strange signs and mysterious glances were all the reply ever bestowed. The walls went up, the door was hung and closed, the windows were closely covered with shutters, and the mystery only deepened, till outsiders began to have a strange, weird feeling about the new factory, and to talk of its probable purpose in subdued tones and doubtful voices.

When all was in readiness for operation, the six partners formed in procession and entered the shop after sunset at night. Night after night, night after night, they repeated their mysterious entry into the mysterious shop. Those passing by at night could sometimes hear the heavy blows of the hammer, the buzzing of the saw, the squeaking of the lathe, and occasionally the sound of muffled human voices, but there was nothing to unlock the mystery.

In due time, however, the door was thrown open and a machine rolled out onto the street—a strange machine. Nobody had ever seen anything like it. It was all covered over with wooden boxes which were not wooden boxes at all; it had six cranks which were not cranks; it had a wagon tongue which was not a wagon tongue. In fact nothing was just what it seemed, and the mystery only deepened.

The six strange partners brought a man to examine the thing and become their agent for its sale. They offered him ten per cent. of the gross receipts for his services. "Well," said the agent, "What do you call the thing?" "O," answered the six in concert, "its name is secret." "Well, what is its use?" inquired the agent. "Ah, its use is also secret." "How do you suppose I can sell a nameless thing like that, without any known use?" "Why, don't you see," answered the mysterious co-partners, "don't you see men will buy it as a curiosity, a sort of perpetual mystery—a thing to make people stare, you know!"

The agent confessed there were a few fools left in the world who might be gulled with such a swindle but unfortunately such fools were generally without money or reputation and he couldn't make wages at the business. They offered him 25 per cent., 50 per cent., 90 per cent., —but nothing could induce him to undertake the agency. Finally, driven to necessity by stern facts co-partner No. 1 spoke up: "Well, if you must know, it is a lawn-mower. Turn that ar' crank on the left and it will do the most beautiful execution of any machine in the world—never was any lawn-mower equal to it." The agent tried but found there was no sickle and it was a complete failure. Partner No. 2, much disturbed at the failure, declared it never was made for a lawn-mower, of course it wouldn't work, they were fools for thinking it would. When pressed to tell its use he declared it was a town pump, destined to supercede pumps of all kinds and to do away with the present expensive system of water works—it could pump water out of dry land as well as out of a reservoir. But some way it didn't work as a town pump. One partner said it was meant for a wheelbarrow, one said a steam engine, another something else, but, being tried it failed till No. 6 almost in despair said it was a balloon, a magnificent balloon, capable of ascending to lofty heights, destined to supercede the ox team, the carriage, railroad cars and steamboats. While turning the crank, however, the thing began to swell, and swell, and swell, and swell—till it burst into a thousand atoms and every atom had a crank and every crank had a use—but its use must be left a mystery for the present.

In 1817, at Apple Tree Tavern, London, Freemasonry—a strange machine like this—was brought forth. It pretended to great mystery, alternately appeared like one thing and then another, never really being what it seemed to be, always pretending to be what it was not. It relied largely on its appeal to curiosity for patronage but has put forth a thousand claims and shifted from one claim to another as often as its boasts were proved vain. Let me remind you of some of these claims and of their conspicuous failure.

In a western town, after spending an hour with a gentleman, I inquired if he were a Christian, to which inquiry he replied, "No, but I am a Mason, and if I live up to my Masonry it is religion enough." Beginning with that little incident I have been at some trouble to inquire and find that this claim is being extensively made for the institution. A parishioner once called me into his shop to tell me that he was a Mason and had made up his mind to withdraw from the church because his Masonic religion was all he needed.

By way of furnishing an illustration of the failure of this machine in this respect let me digress a little to see whether the Masonic religion is, after all, a good one. A paper came to me recently with a letter from Rob Morris L. L. D., bearing recent date and containing some things helpful to the determination of the question in hand. Dr. Morris is evidently of some consequence in the order for he boasts to have been forty years a Mason, to have instructed his brethren of the lodge "in every State in the union except two," to have traveled around the globe, to have published seventy volumes on Masonry, and to have lectured several thousand times. This same man in his Freemason's Monitor p. 284 says: "The meeting of a Masonic lodge is strictly a religious ceremony." Here then is the assertion of one of the co-partners of this mysterious machine now before the public that it is a religious institution. After the manner of our agent of the fable let us give the thing a fair trial religiously. Let us see whether it works well. If it is better than the church, then no doubt it will sell well. Let co-partner Morris himself turn the religious crank and see how it works.

Alas! Rob Morris, L. L. D., himself sighs at the evident failure of the thing. In this new letter, this latest utterance from the oracle of the mysteries, there appears a sad confession. How the heart of Rob Morris L. L. D., 40 years a Mason, the world-wide Masonic traveler, the author of seventy Masonic volumes—how his heart must have sunk within him when he made the following confession concerning his "several thousand" lectures. Hear his words: "My lectures to lodges were not Christian, because I found in the lodge Mohammedans and Jews. * * I do not mention the name of Christ as a historical character, because Freemasonry is more ancient than the Christian era." Now this Rob Morris, L. L. D., is said to be a Presbyterian elder. In his letter he professes great reverence for the Scriptures. He doubtless believes "There is no other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." Yet he has delivered several thousand lectures before this religious body and has been unable to speak his mind concerning his beloved Savior. What is religion without Christ? Simply a deception, a fraud, a lie! Yet this man confesses Freemasonry excludes Christ. Better is a lawn mower without a sickle than a religion without a Saviour! Poor man. He claimed his mysterious machine was a religion, he tried it, he finds it wanting in the most essential point. How long will he continue to pawn off this fraud on the credulity of the people? How long will the people continue to tolerate the humbug? The fact is it does not satisfactorily work as a religion. It is defective. A thousand times has it made its boasts, a thousand times has the test proved it false.

How will this mysterious machine—the Masonic lodge—get along with the difficulty? Easy enough. No sooner have we demonstrated its failure as a religion than co-partner No. 2 steps forward. He declares that we have been wholly mistaken about the object of the machine. "Freemasonry has nothing whatever to do with religion." The same redoubtable Rob Morris in the same letter says: "I took no obligation until I had first been assured by a Christian(?) gentleman that it should not interfere with my duties to my God." His God cannot be the Lord Jesus Christ, for the same man distinctly said it did interfere with his duty to the Saviour. Never mind that, however. Rob Morris now tells us this does not interfere with religion. Others say it is not religious—has nothing to do with religion. "It is not fair," say they, "to test us as a religious institution—we are not religious." Very well, let us understand each other. This machine you say is not a religious machine, what then is the thing for?

"It is only a social club," says co-partner No. 2. Let us test it then as a social club. What advantages has it? "You always have good society there," says this new expounder of the mysterious machine. But you always have pirates, forgers, adulterers, highway robbers, libertines and drunkards also. There isn't anything particularly choice in that kind of society. A club composed of good, bad and indifferent sort of people is not exactly the kind a clean man would choose. Then we might add that a social club that strips a man of his outer garments, hood-winks and cable-tows him, swears him under cut throat penalties and kills him in a Hiram Abiff tragedy—a club that thus degrades manhood is beneath the society of the honorable. Social clubs are bad enough at best, but the swearing, smoking and drinking habits of this one; its blasphemy, expensiveness, arrogance and hypocrisy all mark it as a conspicuous failure.

Just here co-partner No. 3 interferes to inform us that we are not on the right track. Freemasonry is a benevolent institution. Yes, yes. Doubtless we have now reached the true solution of this mystery. To demonstrate the benevolence of this marvelous machine it was taken to New York two years ago. The co-partners declared that it was the most wonderful machine on the face of the earth to take care of widows and orphans. They were willing to submit it to a fair test. They dragged it the whole length of the State of New York. It was fully expected that it would scatter five dollar gold pieces like hail-stones to the poor and needy—especially the widows and orphans. A new era was about to dawn. The great need of the age was a machine to care for the widows and orphans.

It was a momentous occasion. People looked on with great expectation. Ministers went into their pulpits Sundays and scolded their congregations for their neglect of the poor, and declared that this mysterious machine was actually out-doing Christian benevolence. Well, as I said, they dragged the thing from one end of the State to the other and then met in the Grand Lodge to count the results and complete the demonstration. To their astonishment it was found the thing had actually squeezed out of the clerks, farmers and laborers $83,500, and had only dropped to the widows and orphans the paltry sum of $405!

They declared this was not a fair test. New York was not a good State for helping widows and orphans, so they took it to Massachusetts. They dragged it over the hills and through the valleys, from end to end, till they reached Boston, confident that the experiment would be a brilliant success. They were disappointed. The thing had actually drawn into its own treasury $107,000 in a single year, and paid out for charity and funeral expenses only $1600! There did seem some apology for this. Massachusetts is a rocky State. No machine would work well there. They begged for one more trial and proposed the broad prairies of Illinois. In 1872 the thing gathered in $25,000, and distributed to the poor $100, while (improving with use) the following year it drew to itself $28,000, and paid out not a cent!

The case was getting serious. If the machine wouldn't sell for benevolent purposes this hope of gain would be gone. Their agent was discouraged. The co-partners held a whispered conference. They proposed one more trial, and the State of Maine should be the place. They took a new course this time hoping for better results. They refused to pay taxes on the machine so as to test the question of benevolence in the courts. What they had failed to prove by actual tests they hoped to prove by taking advantage of the tricks of law. When they thought they had everything in the court room fixed up to turn out the proper results they submitted the question to the supreme court. But what was their astonishment to hear the decision announced by the highest court in the State that Freemasonry is not a benevolent institution! Confronted by the decision they had to give it up. The Grand Orator of Connecticut two years ago advised the co-partners no longer to claim their machine to be for charitable purposes. It is a fact that many Masons have become cautious about claiming their institution to be benevolent.

At this point co-partner No. 4 comes up. He appears to be much enraged at unfair treatment. He says Freemasonry is not religious, it doesn't claim to be a social club, nor does it lay claim to benevolence. It is a great moral teacher. It teaches that men should not get drunk lest they divulge the secrets of Freemasonry, they should never cheat nor defraud brother Master Masons, they should not violate the chastity of the relatives of brother Master Masons, they should shield the crimes of brother Master Masons right or wrong, and a multitude of similar precepts, all of which are wanting in true morality, and therefore become only licenses to crime. No, the machine will not operate as a moral teacher. Its religion is pagan, its society corrupt, its benevolence selfish and its morality immoral.

We are now informed that all these claims are misleading. Freemasonry never was designed for any of these things. It is the great perserver of secrets! It is in possession of valuable mysteries that the uninitiated cannot comprehend, and it has become the great preserver of the mysteries of all past ages. Now at last it is to be hoped we have found one point in which this mysterious machine will succeed. The first test of this point was in this very town (Batavia, N. Y.,) in 1826. Its merits as the great secret-preserver of the world were to be tested. To be sure no one could tell just what value there would be in such a machine, but that was not the important point. The question had arisen whether this strange machine had any use under the sun. Well, it was brought here for trial. It commenced its operations. Its maneuvers were strange. It was seized with a violent hatred of Captain Morgan. It dogged his steps, besmeared his character, threatened his life, abducted him, drowned him. As if enraged by its own fury it set Miller's printing office on fire, it destroyed Greene's hotel, and behaved so badly it seemed for a time as if the world would be destroyed. When the struggle was over the co-partners were astonished to find that the violence of its action had actually scattered its secrets from the St. Lawrence to the Gulf, and from ocean to ocean! They took it to Boston to test it and it turned men crazy, defied the police, threw rotten eggs at an old man ninety-four years of age, hurled brick-bats and defied all the laws of civilized society. It was thought this trial was a success, but instead of succeeding it was leaking its secrets all the time. At New Market, N. H., St. Johnsbury, Vt., Kellerton, Iowa, and other places, the thing was tested, and the more they tested it the more it leaked. It was a conspicuous failure. Co-partner No. 6 said it needed more "puffing," so they began the process of puffing. It swelled and swelled till the world was astonished at its marvelous size, and then, like the machine in the fable, it suddenly burst, when, for the first time, its true use was discovered. It proved to be a first-class lying machine! Never was anything like it. It lied about its history, it lied about its religion, its politics, its benevolence, its silly ceremonies, its blasphemy; it lied about its enemies, its secrets, its purposes—in short it turned out lies perpetually.

Well, my friends, it sometimes does us good to look at the ridiculous side of this complex subject, but were we to stop here we should be untrue to the great cause for which we labor. There is an awfully serious side to this discussion. There is a phase of it calculated to alarm the devout, to agitate the serious-minded.

Mingle with the business men of our city and you will hear them commenting frequently on the rapid strides which infidelity is making in this country. Some men will speak of it with satisfaction, some with deep and solemn regret, but whether with pleasure or sorrow, they will agree in the fact. Enter the studys of the pastors of the churches and you will hear a solemn, mournful confession of the same fact. What is the nature of this infidelity? What is the cause? As to the first question it may be said that men are becoming very skeptical about some of the most vital doctrines of Christianity. There is a disposition, in the first place, to ignore the Lord Jesus Christ and treat him as if he were not the Divine Saviour, but some imposter, unworthy the homage paid him. Then, in the second place, the Bible is being ridiculed as a relic of the dark ages, to be ranked with the Koran and other superstitious writings. Again, regeneration is mocked as a fruit of a morbid imagination, an unreal doctrine, a result of superstition and ignorance. Men are skeptical about the resurrection and all supernatural displays of the Divine power. Against this species of infidelity the ministers and churches are struggling. They wonder what has caused this state of things. They see no force in the country of sufficient greatness and influence to account for the wave of infidelity sweeping over them. They discuss at their conferences such questions as, How to reach the young men? How to overcome skepticism? What are the special domands of the age? But still the work of undermining the faith of the people goes on unchecked.

The Robert Ingersoll kind of warfare cannot account for this state of things. His following is small and uninfluential. At his recent convention a few spiritualists, free-lovers and libertines performed to the disgust of all sensible people. This is not the source of the infidelity of our time.

The fact is the Masonic lodge is the great school of infidelity. This is a grave charge. It is not made, however, without a knowledge of facts to prove it. There is more dangerous infidelity in the current literature of the Masonic lodge than in the writings of Tom Paine or Robt. Ingersoll. Analyze the infidelity of the time and compare it with the teachings of Freemasonry and you cannot fail to be impressed with a striking resemblance. For example, let us inquire what Freemasonry teaches about our Lord Jesus Christ? It rejects him. It teaches that he is too sectarian for the universal religion of Freemasonry. It excludes him from its prayers, its symbols, its Scripture quotations; from its process of regeneration and from its Masonic resurrection; from its songs of worship and its entire ritual. What is this but organized infidelity? Before the young man enters the lodge he solemnly pledges to abide by all the ancient usages and customs of the fraternity. Now one of those "ancient usages" is to exclude Christ; hence he is pledged to reject him. In addition to the force of this pledge is the silent influence of the minister and deacon, who are engaged in the same covenant. They endorse the custom and thus lend their influence to entrap the unwary. But this is only the beginning. The doctrine of regeneration by Christ is set aside and regeneration by the foolish ceremonies of the lodge is substituted. The Bible is placed on a level with the Koran; it is called a mere symbol, an article of furniture; contempt, thrice cursed, is shown for it by actually misquoting from its sacred pages. All these facts may be proven from Masonic writings. The whole supernatural teachings of the Sacred Book are set aside, and page after page is written in defence of this course and in explanation of it. Where can more unvarnished infidelity be found than in the following quotation from Rebold's General History of Freemasonry, p. 418:

"Now what is the result of this examination? That the disciples of Christ have surrounded his birth, life and death, with miracles which never took place, but which are, rather, symbolized under solar appearances. * * * In a word, that the Christian religion came out from the mysteries of initiation; and that the creation, the gods, the angels, the occurrences, dogmas and ceremonies, such as we find them in the sacred books, are nothing but resemblances, more or less faithful, of the ancient gods, angels, dogmas and ceremonies of the Brahmins, the Magi, and the Egyptian priests."

It will be seen that this Masonic writer plainly and unequivocally denies the miracles of Christ and that he blasphemously attributes his sublime teachings to the heathen gods. We shall search the English language in vain for more rank infidelity than is here put forth, and yet this is only the logical conclusion of all Masonic ceremonies and instructions.

Now the influence of such teaching must be great in proportion to the power of the institution putting it forth. He makes a great mistake who ignores the strength of this institution. While the church of our Pilgrim fathers, with 250 years of uninterrupted growth now numbers less than 400,000 members, Freemasonry claims 600,000, the growth for the most part of only fifty years past. If the growth in numbers marks the growth also of its infidelity, we can readily account for what is otherwise mysterious.

Here is a powerful institution, wealthy and influential, steadily and stealthily imbuing its members with infidel sentiments, while those members, in their families and the communities, repeat the principles taught them in the lodge. Hence, our struggle is not merely against a foolish society, but against a powerful organization which is steadily undermining the faith of the people and destroying the religion of Christ.

If, like the prophets and apostles of old, we would fearlessly grapple with the foe of godliness, we must meet and destroy the enemy of Christ and his church ere it drinks the life-blood of our sacred worship. Ministers must be aroused to the greatness of the struggle and the importance of the issue.

It sometimes seems to me as if the church was never in a more exposed condition than now. There is a chapter in Jewish history, the details of which are only vaguely retained, but which furnish a fearful illustration of an impending danger. When religious worship among the Jews had run low and piety had perished, Jerusalem was disturbed by factional struggles within, which weakened her for defence. In this exposed condition the enemy found little difficulty in destroying her gates and desecrating her temple. The churches are in a period of exceptional outward prosperity. Never did money come so easily, never was the superficial popularity of the church greater, and seldom was piety at a lower ebb. The absence of outward fear has set the churches to striving for denominational supremacy. The zeal for sect (or faction) was never greater. Unhappily this struggle is not based on principle, nor is it an open struggle, visible to the naked eye. But each denomination is the rival of every other in courting popular favor by urbanity of manner and sacrifice of principle. The Methodists cannot meddle with unpopular evils lest the Presbyterians profit by their unpopularity, the Presbyterians must keep clear of reform lest the Congregationalists steal their popularity. The churches seem to exist less to battle for truth, than to secure their own greatness by diplomatic processes.

There are many of the smaller denominations which are nobly struggling against the current infidelity and ungodliness, but the lines of separation are too plainly marked to suffer them to become unreservedly fellow-soldiers. I remember to have read recently in an ecclesiastical history of the English churches that in the early days of the reformation, Presbyterians, Independents and Baptists made common cause against a common foe. To me the present struggle appears to be of that magnitude and importance which should fuse all hearts and unite all hands. Christ and his kingdom have been basely assailed; advantage is being taken of the separation of his followers to press the battle; let one rallying cry echo along the line and victory will soon perch upon our banners. One thing is certain, either the reform principles of reform churches must prevail or the churches themselves must sink into oblivion. The Wesleyan churches have already been nearly driven out of New England, and no one can account for the fact in any way except that the lodges have pressed them too severely. Other reform churches are now struggling to maintain themselves. If their reform principles triumph, they will succeed; if the principles fail, they'll fail also.

What a day of sorrow that will be, if it ever comes, when our enemies press heavily upon us and our cause fails; when the click of the type and the music of the reform press is no longer heard; when the hand of the venerable man, whose presence has become so familiar to us, no longer pens burning words of rebuke to sin; when the outposts of the reform churches are one by one driven in and their batteries silenced; when the secret lodge, unrebuked, unchecked, sways the sceptre of power and gloats in its unholy victory; when "freedom of speech" and "freedom of press" are only empty phrases that return from the memory of the past to mock the hideous present. Better we had never lived than that we should now be recreant to our trust. We cannot, we must not, we will not falter now. Every principle within us presses us forward, every voice from above impels us onward. God grant speedy triumph of his truth.

—A clerk in the War Department, from Philadelphia, has received three circulars from as many different campaign managers. One was from Hubbell, for $24, the rest from Chairman Cooper, of the Pennsylvania Republican Committee, for $24, and the third from a local organization in Philadelphia, taxing him $20—$68 in all. This man has a wife and five children, and in his reply to Hubbell and the ward committee said that he was compelled to look out for his family, and would therefore be unable to act as one of the saviors of the Republican party to the extent of the assessments mentioned in their circulars.

—The Cynosure editors are reviled for the good deeds of some brother in Washington City who sent a couple of Anti-masonic tracts to a lady with an anonymous note asking her to seek the Saviour. These are enclosed in a letter to us accompanied with unmentionable epithets. Amused and sorry for the writer, yet if all Masonic revilings will take the same course we shall be thankful. It will relieve many friends of an irksome load.

REFORM NEWS.

Thurlow Weed on Masonry in Political Management.

NOTES OF THE GENERAL SECRETARY'S EASTERN JOURNEY.

My trip East since the Batavia Convention has furnished some of the most encouraging incidents in my experience. The meeting at Worcester has already been briefly reported. My conference with the New England Board of the N. C. A. was to me highly satisfactory, and, as I have reason to believe, mutually profitable. I am convinced of the wisdom of the arrangement, and under the very able generalship of Bro. Bailey it is already a success.

From Worcester I went to Boston where I met a few friends and then turned back to New York city. Our journey was in the midst of the terrible storm that swept the N. E. coast, but we passed safely on without detention until reaching the tunnel in New York, where we were detained for an hour or so by that "railroad horror" of which the papers have already given an account.

Bro. Harrison not having returned from Synod I took a room at Merchant's Hotel on Courtland street, hoping to see light with the dawning of the morning. September 23rd, however, proved to be one of the darkest, most drenching days I ever witnessed. I called on a few friends and among them Thurlow Weed, whom I found in better health than I had anticipated. I was met at the door by his grand-daughter, who, on learning my name led the way to a room where Mr. Weed was quietly resting on an old-fashioned lounge. Mr. Weed received me cordially, and as Judge Moses Taggart had thoughtfully apprised him of my coming and of the object of my mission, no time was consumed in reaching the theme of greatest interest.

Mr. Weed inquired about the Convention at Batavia, and expressed regret at being too ill to accept the invitation of the N. C. A., and of friends to be present. He spoke of the monument and of the work of the N. C. A. with much satisfaction, and remarked, "This event has awakened a great interest in the public mind; but it will be more talked of, and its importance better understood fifty years hence than it is now."

Mr. Weed then related many incidents of the Morgan times, showing conclusively that it is in the very nature of things impossible to exclude this question from politics. Mr. Seward, Mr. Weed and their associates made a strenuous effort to avoid political Anti-masonry; but the Masons so incensed and alarmed the people by their foul and criminal proceedings in courts and on committees that they would endure no pacific measures but absolutely demanded that the whole system of Masonry should be abolished by law. Leaders were compelled to act in direct hostility to the "secret empire," or give place to others who would accept and enforce the wishes of their constituency. He was very explicit on this point, as he said the movement had been greatly misrepresented and the motives of its prominent actors misunderstood. In illustration he gave the history of the saying, "Good enough Morgan till after election;" but as this will appear in his revised and enlarged paper to the Convention, I omit all beyond a simple allusion to it here.

One incident will show with what tenacity Mr. Weed retains events of fifty years ago. I asked, "Do you remember Mrs. Morgan's testimony at the second inquest?" Without a moment's hesitation he gave me every material point. I then read a copy of the affidavit, and he gave me a detailed account of the whole affair. I then asked, "Do you think Masonry had anything to do with Mr. Seward's defeat and Mr. Lincoln's nomination at Chicago in 1860?"

He replied, "I thought Mr. Seward's nomination sure, and was deeply chagrined at his defeat. It is said Horace Greeley went to Vermont and packed the delegation from that State to defeat Seward. It is certain they were all Masons and went solid against Seward, but I

CORRESPONDENCE.

Notes from the Chicago Exposition.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—At the request of Bro. Phillips I give some of my experiences while at the N. C. A. stand in the Exposition building. What I can say here is but a fragment, so to speak, of my experience; for I got it in quick and lively order. Odd-fellows, Masons, Knight Templars, way np (way down) in the order, here regard it their privilege to vent their wrath in unmeasured terms. Here, as usual, the question "Was you ever a Mason?" becomes a song. How long will it be, I constantly thought, ere secretists will abandon this "dodge?"

Among the things gained here was additional confidence in the accuracy of the lodge expositions—and this largely from actions of Odd-fellows, Masons and Knight Templars while examining the books. Ejaculations of unending variety, and whispered conversations, some of which were not of the tamest order; looks of scorn and unutterable contempt were almost constantly cast at the "vile mercenary" behind the stand. Some even had the audacity to express their pity for a young man who should venture to bring on himself the execration of the wide world. To them, the opinion of the world was the great standard of right and wrong, and this, to an extent I had scarcely before realized.

Another point I may notice was the call I had on two different occasions for books of finer binding. On one occasion two Knight Templars, after looking for some time at a book in cloth asked if I had any of different binding. I replied yes, and gave them one in paper, whereupon they straightened up as if amazed at my stupidity. "No—morocco; have you nothing in morocco?" whereupon and henceforth I observed that the bulk of my sales were to experts, or persons desiring to become such, in the ritual and work of the lodge.

On one of the occasions when my books were called a "stack of unmitigated falsehoods" my reference to this use of our works, as highly valuable to Masons, brought this question, "What do you think Masons do with them?" to which my reply, that it a man wants to buy a book to stick in the stove, he would hardly inquire for morocco, was quite effectual.

The chief obstacle, however, to my "mercenary" propensities, or rather to their gratification, was the openness and publicity of our stand. Secretists are not accustomed to this. If we could have a place where they could come, as Nicodemus "by night," when their purchase would not be noticed, even by some of their friends, our case would be different.

One colored Mason, who called American Masons "clandestine," rather than himself, became, nnconsciously, very cammunicative, and when departing remarked that previous to his marriage he could have some such books about, but that now he must forego the benefits of these aids.

An Odd-fellow, from Michigan, whom I found to be well advanced, on accepting a chair and spending some time in looking over the "Revised," in reply to several Odd-fellows who had tried in every way to abuse me and my books, candidly told me the book was all right, and that such wholesale denunciation was regarded by many of them as legitimate and proper; yet they did not meet with his approval, as they were a strong means of causing us (Anti-masons) to regard such as the fruit of the lodge system. He himself had hopes of reforming various abuses; although his own lodge had become so corrupt and distasteful that he had visited it but little for a year, still sending his dues, and hoping that some, even of their puerile, foolish rituals might be abandoned. I have since learned from a friend who is well acquainted in Michigan, and who talked with both him and me at the stand that evening, that this man is one of the reliable citizens in the Badger State. I desire to notice yet another point, the relation of secretism to the institution of marriage. That Masons and Odd-fellows are loyal to the spirit of their institution, which is borrowed from times and nations where women was and is a slave, was also painfully demonstrated more than once during the occurrences of which I speak. That Masons consider it proper to deceive their views, to the last, was also made very clear. Amid the throngs passing, and promenading around the great circle of the building, many of the couples, perhaps from being among strangers, seemed unusnally friendly and confidential toward each other. But on approaching our stand and examining our books a change invariably became manifest. The wife often, from her pitiable delusion, was seen to watch the face of the husband, as if to hear from him additional laudations of this (to her) matchless institution; but, was as invariably disappointed, in seeing him abruptly throw down the books, and, in (perchance) being taken by the arm, hearing from him, for not a short distance, the vilest epithets and denunciations as to the character of our literature and of the baseness of our cause.

On witnessing some such proceedings on the part of even young men who had already been ensnared into the lodge the writer was frequently struck with horror at the possibility and outlook of young people of whom the one was already characterized and possessed of such deceit and perfidy, to the utter ignorance of the other, whom he is constantly persuading that she is the idol of his heart, and that between him and her nothing shall ever come to break each other's confidence.

But such, alas! is Masonry. If these, in connection with other things that might be mentioned, are not an entering wedge; aye! a very fruitful cause of divorce, we would like to know what is? "Whoso is partner with a thief hateth his own soul; he heareth cursing, and bewrayeth it not." Prov. 29:24. What, but associations of the most heinous and wicked order, could ever make men so treacherous to their nearest earthly friends?

The Gospel Masons Like.

St. P[illegible]decINN.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The annual meeting of the Royal Arch Masons is to be held in this city on the 10th of October. I observe these dark-lantern gentlemen are quite numerous in the city now, and withal quite bold, many of them wearing the devil's charm in plain sight as if they were honest men, and their institntion honest. But, that "charm" tells us, who know, that they and their institution are anything but honest. We know that they have sworn to be murderers, and have their bodies mutilated and torn, as a pack of raving wolves would tear them, if they fail to conceal the murder and treason committed by the brotherhood. The two horrible crimes of murder and treason being especially noted amongst all other things done by outlaws, Masonically. And this "charm" also informs us that know, that these dark-lantern gentlemen in their lodge worship do join the Jew in scorning the name and blood of Jesus Christ, by continuing the Aaronic priesthood in their unholy worship.

Yesterday in a M. E. church a minister took for his text, "Beware of false prophets, who come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly are ravening wolves. By their fruits ye shall know them." Matt. 7:15. The preacher did the best he could to show the people that Masonic preachers by their fruits answered the description of the Saviour. Some saw it; some appeared wilfully blind; and some are so snared and blinded by the artifices of the lodge devices that they cannot see. At the close of the meeting another preacher in the audience was invited to preach. He arose and said, that although he was aged and infirm he would preach, and, that he would preach neither Masonry nor Anti-masonry, bnt the gospel. This of course excited my suspicions in regard to his character, and after the congregation was dismissed those suspicions were confirmed by his own declaration that he was a Mason, and proud of his obligation. Subsequently he told a young man that he did not remember Masonry to be anything like what had just been described. Now what was his design in telling the people that he would not mention Masonry, but preach the gospel? Perhaps, and very likely, he meant that the people should think that he was a forgiving, peaceable, quiet, loving preacher of the gospel. And in regard to his Masonry he would observe that indispensible requisite to make a good Mason, namely: "Silence and Secrecy," by keeping his "Masonic jewel," and at the same time observing that Masonic injunction, "you shall so conduct yourself that the most penetrating stranger shall not be able to discover your secrets, and you shall divert a discourse and manage it prudently for the good of the worshipfull fraternity." This, together with all the facts before us, confirms the aptness of the application made by the Anti-masonic preacher of the Saviour's words. May the Holy Ghost bring it home to the Masonic preacher. "Thou art the man!" Truth is marching on and sooner or later Masonic liars, in common with all other liars, will be cast into "the lake that burns with fire and brimstone which is the second death." Rev. 21: 8. Yours truly, W. FENTON.

Questions Answered.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Please publish the following questions with answers:

1. Did Christ when he descended come as mediator only, or as a pattern for all of his disciples to imitate as well? [We are to imitate "all his imitable perfections."]

2. Is it necessary for those who would avail themselves of the pardon which he offers, to conform to his precepts and examples? [Yes.]

3. When the proclamation of "peace on earth and good will to men" was made, was Christ the author of those principles? [He was.]

4. Is the war system as practiced at the present time by Christian nations, in harmony with the proclamation? ["Wars and fightings come of our lusts."]

5. Why did John the Baptist who was the fore-runner of Christ, clothe himself in such plain apparel, and partake of such simple diet? [Because he was a desert prophet, and not a prince like Daniel.]

6. Is it obligatory on all Christians, so far as is in their power, to preserve the powers of body and mind which God has given them for their good and his glory? [Yes; and quit tobacco.]

E. B. THOMPSON.

Our Mail.

S. S. Martin, Delavan, Ill.:

"Truth is spreading around here."

He sends (aided by the Extension Fund) the Cynosure to a Mason who is sick of the order, who "will be useful in our cause when he gets the harness fairly on."

Mrs. M. A. Gamble, Denmark, Mich., congratulates the National Christian Association on their great achievements. She adds:

"Surely they are under the leadership of him who will bring the nations of the earth into subjection to his rule. Surely the prayers of God's people are being answered."

F. R. Hill, Wilbur, Oregon:

"I am now almost fifty-eight years old and have yet to find a man of good deeds ashamed to have others know it. Let thy light so shine that others seeing thy good works may be constrained to glorify God and accept his son Jesus. How is it with the Freemason's lodge? My opinion is that it is impossible to be an active Mason without denying the truth and tolerating evil of the very worst kind including murder and theft. The work already begun by the Christian Cynosure must triumph eventually. Let us not despise the day of small things but be faithful unto death. I live in a village that once was noted for Christian religion, now it is noted for backsliders and sceptics. Why all this change? Now we have a Masonic religion; then, the Christian religion"

Herbert Moor orders a copy of Knights of Pythias and writes:

"I may want some more of them before long as quite a few of the boys in the lodge (Mystic No. 1) have been talking of them but do not know where to send for them."

Secret society members want light and need it. Let us help them obtain it if we can.

Josiah Shaw, Eau Claire, Wis.:

"When I asked a man if he had heard of the abduction and murder of Morgan, he said, yes, but most people thought it a hoax. When I told him my oldest brother wss one of the eight who cast lots to see which of the three should be his executioner he seemed considerably surprised."

Geo. Johnston, Mt. Vernon, Dakota, sends a subscription and writes that he met the subscriber in Dakota on a visit to his son. "Gave him the Cynosure, showed him our platform which pleased him well. He said it was time for a new party to organize on principle. The old parties were so corrupt he would support them no longer. I gave him some tracts: found he had no correct information on the Masonic question. The good man argument was where he stuck. That is the bane of every reform at first. We must get them to understand the difference between this class of men and the institution of Masonry. Many of these good members in heart hate Masonry, but through a false idea of the binding force of their obligation together with the fear of the awful penalties they have invoked upon themselves, are held in chains of slavery as dreadful as any that ever existed in the world."

H. F. Hexson, Ashland, O.:

"We are strongly in sympathy with your views."

——— ———, Charlestown, Mass.:

"Here is a question which has been asked me, 'Where does the Master hang his hat?' Not finding the answer in the book I answered 'On his head in the East,' was it right? By the knowledge contained in the book I have been recognized as a Mason and I have circulated it. So it is becoming uncertain who is a Mason and who is not. I work for a large corporation where Masonry has always held full sway, but the back bone is breaking steadily."

Jas. Kilbourn, Racine, Wis., has written to the Secretaries of the American Missionary Association suggesting to them to get Dr. Roy's address reprinted in the Congregationalist and Advance if practicable. Can they not also put it into their own monthly magazine?

H. H. Miller, Warsaw, Ind., writes that many expositions can be sold there.

Geo. McElhaney, Darlington, Beaver Co., Pa.:

"The reading of the Cynosure of the last and present week must tell with thrilling power on all true friends engaged in the conflict with secret oath-bound organizations. The monument is at once a remembrance of a dark deed transcended by few in the annals of crime, and a sign betokening that God requires that which is past and that the throne of iniquity which frameth mischief by law shall not have fellowship with him who is righteous altogether."

W. M. Bowker, Herrickville, Pa.:

"I attended the Convention at Batavia; had a good time. I obtained one photograph of the Morgan monument; on arriving home I find there are others who want them. * * * Bless the Lord for the good indications. Truth is destined to triumph. One shall chase a thousand and two put ten thousand to flight."

Light from the East.

As the delegates were returning from the State meeting at Winterset, on board the C. B. & Q. train, the following private conversation took place between two gentlemen who had exchanged looks and signs, the one wearing a large Masonic and Odd-fellow's pin:

K.—Who is scattering these Anti-masonic tracts?

H.—I presume it is some delegates returning from the State Anti meeting just closed at Winterset. Where do you hail from?

K.—Lincoln, Nebraska.

H.—Are you in affiliation with the fraternity there?

K.—Yes, sir; I am Senior deacon, lodge No—.

H.—Well now, see here! I was in Winterset and improved the occasion by attending the Anti convention, and have thus far been in company with other persons in attendance. Now, I heard one of their men, Starry by name, a seceder who works the degrees publicly, say that he visited Lincoln lodges recently, and that, too, in connection with Grand lecturer Gillette two or three nights in succession. Is that the case?

K.—Yes, sir; that's the case.

H.—Well, what do you mean by giving the fraternity away in that style?

K.—Well, it was a mistake. Nobody was really to blame for it. He was examined by a good committee, and as we did not know him, he was admitted, and we knew nothing about it until we were notified by the lodge close to where he lives, saying that he was telling how he "took us in."

H.—And he told the congregation at Winterset last night that any one visiting the lodge would find his name on the visiting record. Are you going to allow that?

K.—That matter has been attended to long ago. We know nothing about him, sir! You understand?

H.—Yes, I understand. But Masons must be very careful or they will testify against themselves.

K.—That is true. But Grand Lecturer Gillette says he did not invite him; and as he passed the examination we could not tell but that he was all right.

H.—Well, be more careful in the future, and don't mistake an Anti for a brother. I change here.

K.—All right; if you should drop into Lincoln call on me. My name is K——. Good bye.

They shook hands and parted, the Mason little thinking he had been conversing with the Secretary of the State Anti-secret Association.

TEMPERANCE.

The Connecticut Legislature has recently provided that school-boards on the petition of twelve adult residents, may order instruction in the public schools concerning the effect of intoxicating beverages.

At the Mansion House in London, an innovation was introduced at the banquet given to provincial mayors, non-alcoholic drinks being provided for those who prefered them. According to the Times, nineteen of the twenty-nine temperance mayors in England and Wales were present at the banquet.

At a meeting of the Harveian Medical Society of London, Dr. Morton stated that from the records of the practices of a number of medical friends, and by an analysis of the Registrar-General's reports, he estimated the direct deaths from drink in England and Wales at 39,000, or 42,000 for the kingdom.

Illinois, the banner whiskey State, pays to the general government as tax on liquors about $6.50 per each man, woman, and child; Ohio, $4.50; Kentucky, $4.50; Indiana, $2.90; Nebraska, $1.80; New York, $1.45; Missouri, $1.25; Pennsylvania, .85; Iowa, under partial prohibition, .30; Kansas, under prohibition, .12; Vermont, under prohibition, .05; and Maine, where they say "prohibition has been a failure" for thirty years only, .03.

A dispatch from South Elgin, Ill., says: "Prohibition seems to have gained the victory here for the present at least. For several months past South Elgin saloon-keepers have been fighting law suits and paying fines for selling liquor against the law. They seem to be tired of this method of proceedure, and now announce it as their intention to 'shut up shop' and give the temperance advocates full sway."

Drunkenness in Switzerland.—A Geneva correspondent writes: Crimes caused by drink continue to be alarmingly frequent in various parts of Switzerland, but especially in Berne and Fribourg. Murders and suicides are numerous, and last week two men died from excessive drinking of schnapps. The amount of schnapps consumed is almost incredible. In Berne alone, there are 9,000 distillers, producing annually 550,000,000 litres of schnapps, the whole of which in addition to 150,000,000 litres of foreign spirits, is consumed in the canton. This makes the consumption of strong drink in the district, exclusive of beer or wine, which are also largely drunk, equal to fourteen litres per head of the entire population, or if men above twenty alone be reckoned, sixty litres per head per year. To make head against the terrible and growing evil of intemperance in Switzerland, a total abstinence society was started in 1877, but according to the report just issued, its success has not been very marked. It counts in all 350 members of whom six are at Geneva. Some good, however, appears to have been done in the Bernese Jura, and the society who are less discouraged than might be expected, are determined to persevere with the work they have begun. But it is safe to say that, so long as the present system of unrestricted production and sale is allowed to prevail, so long will excessive spirit-drinking continue. While schnaps and so-called cognac can be had at a franc a bottle, and public house licenses are issued promiscously, there will be little soberiety among the working classes of this country.—Manchester (Eng.) Courier.

REFORM NOTE-PAPER AND ENVELOPES.

As a needed means of spreading the truth regarding secrecy, a collection of the utterances of Scripture and various noted statesmen and ministers has been prepared and printed in tasteful form at the top of note-paper and on both sides of envelopes (the matter on the paper being entirely different from that on the envelopes.) A blank line for date is also printed in. The envelopes can be furnished either white or colored; both envelopes and paper being of the ordinary size and of good quality.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1882.

Dr. Howard Crosby.

This gentleman is one of the most extraordinary persons this or any other country ever produced. When the doctrine of total abstinence from intoxicating drinks had become well-nigh universally popular, so nearly so that no respectable religious paper dared oppose it, Dr. Crosby went to the Tremont Temple, Boston, and gave a lecture which made him popular with every brewer, distiller, and saloon keeper in the United States. They printed and sold his lecture by thousands on thousands. He held that total abstinence was fanaticism, and temperance men fanatics; and still, admitting the evil of intemperance, he set about showing a more excellent way, which was to tax and license liquor-selling under stringent laws. Years before, he set himself to enforce such laws by forming a society and raising a prosecuting fund. He found the attempt like attempting to regulate yellow fever or small pox by statute.

When applied to for his opinion of the lodge, he assailed the whole army of secret orders as "calmly" as he did the army of temperance societies; and with equal disregard of the numbers and odds against him. The sneers of the press, Masonic mobs, the bitter taunts and revilings of Freemasons, all went with him for the buzz of so many flies; and he wrote to the Batavia Convention as freely as he had written his condemnation of the lodge years before! Of course his Boston anti-total-abstinence lecture brought down on his head the denunciations of the religious press; but he seems to think, "So much the worse for the press."

The temperance cause marched on. Kansas and Iowa by heavy majorities put the liquor traffic under legal and constitutional ban, and behold Dr. Crosby is out in another "Calm View." He tells the temperance multitudes that they have carried prohibition "in advance of public sentiment," and by "a contest against nature." This language is simply astonishing. How is Dr. Crosby certain that prohibition is "in advance of public sentiment," when it has carried by large majorities thus far in every State where the people have had a chance to vote on it? And Dr. Crosby himself writes by way of concession, "Much more would be the majority if the women should also vote." Who owns "public sentiment" then? Whose "sentiment" is it? Is it not the sentiment of the voting masses, and the women? Or is "public sentiment" that of a handful of liquor-sellers, liquor-makers, and liquor-drinking politicians!

And as if to astonish astonishment itself Dr. Crosby declares prohibition to be "against nature," because "men find a law of nature which their conscience fully approves, teaching them so to drink." They know that wine is a rich blessing from God to be enjoyed thankfully as much as corn."

This caps Vesuvius! Suppose Dr. Crosby can get some wine from the vineyards along the Hudson which is pure—though that will get men drunk enough—does not he know that his word "wine" to-day covers the wines of commerce, which are vile mixtures based on whisky and drugged with litharge, logwood and red lead; that there is more stuff sold as Maderia wine in any one of a thousand cities, than the Maderia Islands produce! And yet this vile compound, this wine of the people, is endorsed by "nature" and by "public sentiment." And yet Dr. Crosby is a scholar and a gentleman too learned to be ignorant of the meaning of his words, and above "the baseness of a lie."

Now turn his tapestry again. After showing to his own satisfaction that prohibition is against reason and "nature" he declares that if it gets to him he will vote for it!!! Yes, vote for it, as a choice of evils and the shortest road to a cure of the monster evils of the liquor business. His words are: "The other alternative of free rum is so horrible, that were we in a State where the question was put in this shape, we should unhesitatingly vote for the prohibitory clause." We put no exclamation points to close for a page would not hold enough to do Dr. Crosby justice. Let us rejoice that Dr. Crosby is committed to vote the prohibition ticket.

The Grand Lodge of Illinois.

This body, which meets annually in Chicago, last week occupied McCormick Hall, on the North Side. For two years the meeting place has been the fine new "Central Music Hall" on State street, but the vulgar Masonic manners and bountiful expectoration of tobacco juice have caused complaint from other occupants of the building. For this or some other reason the Masons have gone back to McCormick Hall, which is but little used for respectable entertainments.

The reports of this meeting give a comprehensive review of the state of the Masonic order in Illinois. Mr. Scott, a Methodist preacher, has figured as "Grand Master" during the year. He reports having licensed, or "granted a dispensation" to two new lodges and refused other applications, among which were propositions to start French and negro lodges. His annual report abounds in Anti-masonic argument, which must be considered at another time.

The center of interest in the meeting was the report of the Grand Secretary, L. L. Munn, of Freeport, on his examination of the books of his predecessor, who was a defaulter to the Grand Lodge.

When the Cynosure came into existence Harmon G. Reynolds of Springfield, Ill., was Grand Secretary; he also was publishing the Masonic Trowel, and was one of the bitterest enemies of this paper. In his office was a clerk, John F. Burrill, who succeeded Reynolds as secretary when the latter had to give up his office under charges of fraud and embezzlement, for he had collected funds after the fire which he failed to turn over. The matter was brought before the Grand Lodge but hushed up in its mysterious council chambers.

During last winter, we believe, Burrill suddenly resigned and left the State. His successor found that he had carried away or destroyed all the cash accounts since 1879, but from printed proceedings and receipts held by lodges, etc., he found defalcations beginning with 1879 and amounting to nearly $8,000. Burrill was arrested by a detective in St. Paul a few days ago and taken to Springfield where he was held for trial. His family affairs are hardly in better condition. Two years ago his wife appeared in this city and created some excitement by charges that he had clandestinely secured a divorce, and was guilty of very immoral conduct, if not un-Masonic. She was quickly suppressed by the Masons of Chicago, but it appears that Burrill did obtain a divorce in Kansas, where he swore that he had been a resident of that State a year and that his wife, who had borne him several sons, was guilty of adultery with Dr. Dixon of Springfield. Mrs. Burrill dropped out of the story at this point, but Dixon took the matter into court and cleared himself, at the same time proving the perjury of Burrill. The latter soon after married his housekeeper and left the State. His character is confessed by Guerney, who was "Grand Master" while he was Secretary, to be bad—ruined by whisky and bad women.

But though proved in court and by the Grand Lodge to be such a character, Burrill yet keeps his standing in the Grand Lodge. He was "Brother Burrill" in Munn's report; next day he came into the Grand Lodge and made a blubbering allegation of his innocence; and the Lodge finally ordered a stay of criminal proceedings to let him look over the books he had left.

An organization which continues for years to make such a record among its highest officers must keep its principles of morality under lock and key, for of them the "Grand Master" says: "If all men lived in exact accordance with its teachings this world would be changed into a fruitful field, and Eden would again appear in all its beauty and delight." If they be of so excellent character it were well that the members of the lodge begin their practice, and then let unfortunate outsiders have also some slight benefit from them. Eden is further off than the fixed stars if the Grand Lodge of Illinois cannot make a better record.

—Friends in Chicago were made glad last Friday morning to see again the face of Secretary Stoddard after an absence of about three months.

—Many readers of the New York Witness noted lately with surprise and shame a whole column of solid fine print given up to a report of a Good Templar Grand Lodge, most of which was laudatory of the order.

—The St. Paul daily Dispatch of October 5th published Thurlow Weed's letter to the Batavia Convention. The Chicago Times of Sept. 30, also reprinted a considerable portion of that remarkable document.

—While in Boston Bro. Stoddard applied to Wendell Phillips for an article for publication on the lodges. Mr. Phillips replied by note:

"DEAR SIR:—I have the warmest interest in the Anti-masonic movement, and wish to do anything I can to aid it. But just now my cares are too pressing to allow me to write anything on any subject.

Respectfully, WENDELL PHILLIPS."

This brief note will be read with interest as showing an unchanged aversion to the lodge on the part of this great man.

—Bro. Hinman's letter from Washington City we were obliged reluctantly to lay by for a week. He finds much enthusiasm among the friends in that city, and is himself moved by their spirit to hope much for future work in that center of power, lawful and unlawful.

—Rev. Warren Taylor's reply to Rob. Morris has been in our hands for several days and will soon appear.

—Other communications, long and short, are also waiting their turn while the Convention report is appearing. Some good friends seem to forget that our space is limited and many wish an opportunity of speaking, otherwise they would cut down articles that take up a column in describing local matters of little interest outside the circle of a dozen readers. Lay the Golden Rule alongside some of your letters, kind friends, and you will save editorial trimming and insure for them double the number of readers.

—It is reported that a lady teacher in one of our best literary institutions appeared during its last commencement with the pin of a college secret society displayed with ostentation in defiance of the principles of the college. She found that her bravado was appreciated, for a prompt dismissal followed to the honor of the faculty.

—Bro. Edward Mathews, on his way to the Free Methodist General Conference at Burlington, Iowa, writes that he expects to be at the Indiana State Convention at Carthage. His health has been impaired by severe outdoor speaking in New York, but he hopes that a naturally strong constitution will overcome the difficulty.

—M. N. Butler of the Albany Freeman, declines the nomination for Congress, tendered him by the American voters of the Third Missouri District, believing that he can accomplish more for the reform by continuing his work as State agent and lecturer. A number of the candidates already named for other officers, are known to have been always opposed to the lodge. Bro. Butler, in the same paper challenges A. M. Dockery, "Grand Master of Freemasons" in Missouri, and Congressional candidate for the Republican party in the same district, to clear the Masonic fraternity of the charges he makes against it; and proposes to push the contest in every direction to prevent this sworn tool of the lodge from securing a place in Congress by means of stultification and Masonic fraud.

NEW ENGLAND.

THE NEW ENGLAND BOARD of the National Christian Association has it headquarters at No. 8 Portland St., Worcester, Mass. A full supply of books and tracts constantly on hand. Orders promptly filled. Correspondence solicited. E. D. BAILEY, N. E. Sec.

—One of the M. E. churches in Worcester engaged an evangelist to aid in revival meetings. Last Sunday morning, after two weeks of labor with continual progress, he spoke against Freemasonry. In the afternoon he was informed that his services were no longer needed. The pastor of the church is a Mason. How long this course of suppressing the truth will be endured no one can predict, but it must certainly come to an end soon, or we will be beyond the reach of truth.

—An M. E. class-leader expresses himself as very much disturbed at the late State convention here and the persistent opposition to secret societies. He thinks the N. C. A. is doing great damage in the world. He says Freemasonry, in many respects, is doing better than the church! This very remark betrays the infidelity of the man to Christ, yet, it is said, if one were to attend this man's class he would suppose him a saint. Eternity alone will reveal how many such men are hypocrites and how many areblinded to the truth. To one who is jealous of Christ's honor, such a betrayer of his interests seems either unaccountably blind or immeasurably deceptive.

—Several New England papers have given notice of the Morgan monument, and some of them contain very fair historical sketches of the former Anti-masonic movement, with brief notices of the present reform. Occasionally paragraphs are seen which indicate the boiling rage of some belated craftsman, who has just awakened to the danger of the craft. It seems to be generally conceded, that the erection of the monument has commanded wide-spread attention, and general respect from those classes of persons not already forsworn.

—Mr. Spaulding's work last week was more successful than any previous week since he commenced. During the week he ordered fresh supplies of books twice, to fill orders. If only friends who have the means to spare, understood the importance of this branch of our work, we would enlarge it speedily, and reach all the nooks and corners of New England. During the past month, no less than four young, active, capable men have offered their services for the same work, at very moderate pay. Every one of these men is now employed at better pay, but they all are eager to enter the field for a cause which they value, and in which they have the fullest faith. A canvasser can be supported at less expense than a lecturer, and can reach more towns, and perhaps more people, while he leaves in print the arguments against the lodge, in a form that all can understand.

—One difficulty we labor under is what business men would call a lack of advertisement. Other causes receive occasional notices in the local papers. What transpires in one city, is spoken of in a dozen others. In our cause this is not so. An intimidated press fails to notice our movements. This lack we must supply in other ways. Men should visit towns where we have no representative friends, and leave tracts and circulars. The presence of these agents often causes a ripple of excitement, which sets new minds to reflecting. The rage of hot-headed Masons, indicates the value of that kind of work. The New England Board would send out half a dozen such men, if the means for their support could be furnished.

—In one town in Massachusetts the lodge at one of its meetings discussed our Mass. State convention, and authorized its two Masonic delegates to the Republican convention (in session here at the same time as our convention,) to observe our movements and report on their return. The two delegates attended our afternoon meeting, and went home to report. These statements come to us in a way to give us confidence in the truth.

WORCESTER, Oct. 3d. 1882.

Our Massachusetts State convention, which survived more disappointments than any meeting previously held in New England, has already vindicated its right to exist, and demonstrated the truth, that no honest effort to do good goes unrewarded. We are hearing from various sources of good results from it, and no bad ones, and hence the conclusion is that it is one of the agencies, which the Spirit of the Lord uses to promote his cause. It was indeed cheering to meet with friends from other parts of this, and other States, and know that a true and abiding interest inspires them. Brother Zeph. Graves, from the extreme Southern portion of the State was present, while some brethern nearer home, whom we hoped to see were absent. But altogether we had a most enjoyable and profitable occasion, and are eager for the time when we can "try it over again."

Next week we are to have another chance to speak to the people at the New Hampshire convention. Rev. H. T. Cheever, Mr. A. F. Spaulding and perhaps two or three others from this State are expecting to go.

We have been forced to appeal to the friends of reform in New England, for offerings to this cause. If we were a missionary association, belonging to the same denomination, we could go to our churches, and make known the demands, with the reasonable expectation of help. There is not a church in all New England, to which we can thus appeal. We can only ask those individuals to whom God has given eyes to see the truth that they make this cause their own and divide the responsibility of it among themselves.

Every man who abandons his ordinary work, to engage in the reform becomes an additional expense of about $50 per month. He cannot get along for less than that amount. But as he will earn one half of it himself, his expenses to us are a little more than $25 a month to the Board—say $30 a month. Now this sum must be provided, and can be if all who are interested will make sufficient personal sacrifice.

I have felt it my duty to make known the facts and exert myself, to provide the support for as many men as possible. It is best that we should have a regular income, rather than an unreliable one. I have therefore proposed, in a circular sent forth this week, that as many as are willing shall make monthly or quarterly pledges. This will give us a steady income, and and we shall govern our expenses accordingly. If it be true that we can only raise a support for one man in all New England, we will settle down to that basis. It is not, however, as I believe, necessary to curtail our work. It seems to me we can enlarge it very much.

The cards sent to friends this week call for pledges for work in various States, enabling each one to pledge help from his own State. If friends respond promptly and liberally to this appeal, it will enable us to execute our plan more effectually, and with better results than if they delay and manifest indifference. The time has come to act promptly and vigorously. When fifty men have pledged a dollar a month, they have become surety for the support of one man for a year. But men who ought to give $5 a month must not stop with giving $1. Make your subscriptions according to the means God has placed at your disposal. Remember we want to raise $2,000 within the next thirty days.

After the New Hampshire convention, Mr. Spaulding is going to Portland to find a chapel if possible, in which to hold a State Convention. If a place can be found at small expense, we will call a meeting there in November, and organize for State work, trusting that Maine friends will take an interest in the effort, and both furnish means to pay expenses, and come themselves to start the ball rolling.

If any person in Vermont, conveniently located, will furnish a place to hold a State convention, we will also have a meeting in that State in November. If brother Zeba Smith can secure the refusal of a hall or a chapel in Montpelier, at small expense, we will issue a call and gather there, but other friends also should see what they can do about a place, and write me about it. Many friends are anxious for a meeting, but no place has yet been provided.

The Cynosure has already announced the sudden summons which Mrs. Bailey received to the death bed of her good mother. That saintly mother has closed her long and toilsome career. Another name is added to the long death-roll, another child of God has gone home. Her blessed influence will remain so long as the memory of friends endures. Her lot in life was not an easy one, and her last years have witnessed much bodily weakness and suffering, but she had an abiding faith in the promise of great reward hereafter. In the midst of many adversities, she has borne up triumphantly, leaving an example of heroism and faith as a legacy to her children.

The absence of my help-meet at this time, has imposed much additional labor upon me, and inclines me more than ever to report to the Cynosure readers the unsparing labors of one who has worked silently, but effectually, during the past year, without even the compensation of an occasional public acknowledgement. The office work, the book and tract business, much of our correspondence, and a good part of the N. E. department of the Cynosure, have been maintained and managed by the silent partner of our firm, and her absence now furnishes occasion for making note of the fact. E. D. BAILEY.

NOTICES.

Indiana.

The annual State Convention for Indiana will be held at Carthage, Rush county, October 24th 25th, and 26th. Friends of the reform in the State are urged to make immediate preparations to attend. The place selected is a grand one for the convention. Friends from the West will leave the train (P., C. and St. Louis railroad) at Charlottesville, others at Knightstown.

Signed by Ex. Committee: S. L. Cook, J. W. Lowman, Benj. Ulsh, Wm. Small, E. Hansen.

Frinds of our cause and public advocates who positively intend to come from a distance to attend this convention, please send your names to Box 184, Carthage, Ind., as early as convenient. We wish to make arrangements as well as we may be able for your welcome and entertainment. J. M. CLARK.

The Illinois State Convention.

TONICA, ILL., Oct. 1, 1882.

Rev. D. P. Baker, Prest. State Christian Association,

DEAR BRO.:—We, the undersigned, members of the Tonica Independent Church, understanding that there is soon to be a State meeting of the Christian Association, cordially invite you to appoint said meeting at this place.

Although our own church is a unit against the lodge in all its forms, there are many outsiders, who, sympathizing with us, dare not openly avow themselves for the reform. The lodge also has many supporters here. We would like, therefore, the moral influence of a strong meeting to second our own efforts, to enlist silent believers into active service, to settle the doubts of those who halt between two opinions and to demonstrate to the lodge that its end is near. Pledging entertainment to visiting brethren and promising you our warmest prayers at the Throne of Grace,

We are for Truth and Righteousness, Dea. T. W. Baird, G. G. Gurnea, J. Morrison, J. Park, Dea. J. Haywood.
C. W. HIATT, Scribe.

Accepting the above invitation, with thanks to the brethren tendering it, and with gratitude to God that their hearts and homes have been opened to receive the truth as it is in Christ, the State Convention of the Illinois Christian Association is hereby appointed to meet in Tonica, November 1st and 2d next. Let there be a spontaneous turning toward Tonica. "Let the North give up and the South keep not back." Tonica is located on the Illinois Central railway near Mendota, a convenient highway for bringing the ends of our State together. Come then in the power of the Spirit to encourage the local brethren and carry back to every quarter renewed enthusiasm for the work before us. D. P. BAKER, Pres.

—The Prohibitionists of the 11th Congressional District of Illinois met on the 28th ult. at Monmouth and nominated Rev. Richard Haney of Moumouth for Congress. Mr. Haney is a member of the Central Illinois Methodist Conference.

—Bro. J. F. Galloway of Okahumka, Florida, acknowledges with sincere gratitude the receipt of $13 from the "friends of the N. C. A."

—Peter D. Miller of New York, contributed $5 toward the Monument Fund which was acknowledged Sept. 28, as but $2.

HOME CIRCLE.

At Home.

"We are of good courage, and are willing rather to be absent from the body and to be at home with the Lord."—NEW VERSION.

For awhile it is ours to sojourn
Where the greenest pastures be,
Where we look at the silver sunbeams
Away on the fair blue sea:
We stay where the purple heather
Shines on the sunny slopes.
Where the mountains woo us higher
Like heaven and its hopes:
For we join in the glad thanksgiving,
And daily we pay our vows
In one of the "many mansions"
Of our Father's house.

But into the inner Home-place
We have not gathered yet,
Though our feet are going thither
And our eyes are toward it set;
We are only in the precincts
And we cannot see within,
Though we sometimes catch the echoes
Of the songs the hosts begin;
And soon when we hear the summons
Our feet will haste away
To the sanctuary of gladness
Where the best beloved stay.

It is but a narrow passage
That divides us for awhile
From the purer light and the joyance
Of the spirits without guile:
And each day brings us nearer
To the love and to the rest
In the presence of the Father
And communion with the blest:
Our hearts are full of longing
To see the Master's face,
To be at last with Jesus
In the glad Home-place.

And though the way be difficult,
And though the hour be late,
We are all of good courage,
With hope and joy elate:
We must cast off the dress we wear
And pass through deeper night
To reach the presence of the King
And live with Him in light;
For wherever the Master dwelleth
The glory is never dim,
And all ills shall cease in perfect peace
At Home with Him.

—Marianne Farningham.

The Bible Confirmed.

On the temple walls of ancient Egypt, among the figures of men and gods and many historical records, there frequently occur certain oblong parallelograms, with rounded corners, inclosing various hieroglyphics. These cartouches, as they are called, often stand over the image of some king, and being deciphered are found to contain his name, titles, etc., and seem to be somewhat like the coat of arms or the royal signet of modern princes. Each king has a cartouche of his own, and in some cases these kings are identified with kings known to us through history. Among these are Shishak, 2 Chr. xii. 1–9; Tirhakah, 2 Kings xix. 9; Pharaoh necho, 2 Kings xxiii. 29–35; and Sabaco II., or So, 2 Kings xvii. 4; mentioned in Bible history. This last king, So, was of the Ethiopian or twenty-fifth dynasty, and his cartouche is well known to the student of Egyptian antiquities.

Egypt lay at a distance from Assyria, and an army from one country could not reach the other without going through the Jewish territory, or traversing vast and almost impassable deserts. Yet the Bible informs us that at one period these two nations were frequently in conflict with each other. Thus we find the Assyrian armies in Egypt, Isa. xx., and an Egyptian army on the borders of Assyria, Jeremiah xlvi. 2; and the Jews were involved in the strifes of these powerful neighbors. King Josiah was defeated and slain by an Egyptian army on its march against Assyria, Hosea, king of Israel, made a treaty with So, king of Egypt, to help him throw off the yoke of Shalmanesar, king of Assyria; but the result was an Assyrian invasion and the first great captivity of the kingdom of Israel. This So, or Sabaco, II., was succeeded by Tirhakah in Egypt, and Shalmanesar in Assyria by Sennacherib, and hostilities existed during both reigns, 2 Kings xix. 9; wars alternating with peace—the campaign followed by the treaty. But who could have hoped to find any new verifications of these statements of scripture after the lapse of two thousand five hundred years?

Yet this has been done. In the mound of Kouyunjik, recently explored, on the site of Nineveh, the ancient capital of Assyria, are found the remains of a palace built, as its own record informs us, by Sennacherib. One of its chambers would seem to have been a hall of records, for it contained a large number of pieces of fine clay bearing the impression of seals. Such clay was used in those ages as sealing wax is used now, in sealing important documents, and manuscripts have been found in Egypt with these clay seals still attached to them. One of these pieces of clay in Sennacherib's palace presents us with two seals, one a royal signet of Assyria, and the other the well known cartouche of Sabaco, or So, king of Egypt, just as it stands on Egyptian monuments, thus showing the probability that a treaty between the two monarchs had been deposited here, and furnishing an unexpected confirmation of the Bible history. The document itself, and the cord by which it was attached to the seal, have long since turned to dust, but the seal with its double impress, though buried for ages, has come to light, and is now in the British Museum. The two kings affixed their seals to a document which had perished like themselves; but in their act the hand of the Most High affixed an additional seal to his holy word, which is true and abideth forever.—American Messenger..

Boiling Water by Direct Sunlight.

Professor S. P. Langley has submitted to the Chief Signal Officer an abstract of the results of the Mount Whitney Expedition to determine the amount of heat the sun sends to the earth, in technical terms, the solar constant. Mount Whitney, in southern California, was selected for the observation because it combined the advantages of great elevation, extreme dryness of atmosphere, and abrupt rise from the plain. The party of observation consisted of Captain O. E. Michaelis, United States Army; two non-commissioned officers of the Signal Service, six soldiers acting as an escort, four civilian assistants, and Professor Langley. Systematic work did not commence until the last days of August, 1881. Professor Langley summarizes the results ascertained as follows:

"The approximate estimate of the solar constant is from 2:6 to 3:0 caloric, by which is meant that the direct solar radiation before absorption by the earth's atmosphere would in falling for one minute, normally, upon an area of one square centimeter, raise the temperature of one gramme of water 2:6 or 3:0 centigrade. This implies its ability to melt annually a crust of ice covering the whole earth over 150 feet thick. This amount is one-half greater than the received value of Pouillet, and greater than the latest determinations of Messrs. Crova and Violle."

On the summit of Mount Whitney an ordinary black bulb thermometer in vacuo rose to 130 degrees Fahrenheit, while the temperature in a blackened copper vessel, covered by two sheets of common window glass, rose above the boiling point. With such a vessel water could be boiled among the snowfields of Mount Whitney by the direct solar rays.

While the influence of the atmosphere is to shut off from the earth's surface a considerable portion of the sun's heat by absorbing it, the capacity of the air to store heat and prevent its radiation into space serves to make the earth habitable. Otherwise, in Professor Langley's opinion, the surface temperature, even under the tropics, would be lower than the lowest recorded degrees of Arctic cold. Another effect of the selective absorption of the atmosphere is to change the apparent color of the sun. In a transparent atmosphere the now "golden sun" would appear blue.—Scientific American.

Christmas Bible Reading.

"The World" as well as the Church now celebrates with great joy the Lord Jesus Christ, on Christmas day. This celebration will appear a strange spectacle in the light of the following Bible reading:

1. How the world received the Lord Jesus Christ when he came the first time. Luke ii, 17; Matt. viii, 20; John xv, 18, 19; John xv, 25; John iii, 19; John xviii, 40; Luke xiii, 21.

2. How the world will meet the Lord Jesus Christ when he comes again. Matt. xv, 31–46; 1 Thess. v, 1–3; 2 Thess. i, 7–9; Jude 14; Rev. i, 7; Rev. iv, 14–17; Rev. xx, 11–15.—E. P. Marvin.

Marriage Engagements.

It is my opinion that marriage should not be too eagerly sought by either sex, but rather waited for until the certainty has come that one loves worthily and well. I mean that for a man to say to himself, in cold blood, that it is time he should marry, and for that reason to look about for a wife, instead of being aware that he loves and therefore desires to marry the one beloved woman, is to my thinking as unwise and in almost as poor taste as for a girl to discover that it is time she were settled in life, and in consequence to set about trying to attract a husband. In neither case is happiness in marriage likely to be the result of such a quest.

But let us suppose that the man's heart has really been touched, and he honestly believes that he has seen the one woman who could insure his happiness, and make his life complete—then, I think, he may still be in danger of imperiling his success by too great rashness. It is true that a girl does not like a timid or cowardly wooer; but if she be the "perfect woman, nobly planned," whom the poets have taught us to desire, she is not to be taken by storm, and a man must give her time to know her own mind. She must have found in her own girlish heart the "yes" he craves before he question her too rudely; or he may receive, instead, a "no" which might have ripened into "yes" under fostering and delaying suns.

It is a debatable question how far a father has a right to refuse his consent to a prayer to which his daughter has said amen. If she is too young to know her own mind, he may, surely, insist on a delay. If there is anything really wrong and ignoble in a suitor's character he will point it out and use his influence and even his authority to prevent the marriage. But, if it is a mere question of personal prejudice, or of worldly policy, and a girl is old enough to be quite sure of herself, it seems to me that a parent has hardly a right to interfere, and that a daughter is not compelled to accept a decision based upon a prejudice or ambition.

On the other hand, a girl cannot too carefully consider the objections made by her father. It is not probable that a parent who has filled his daughter's life with proofs of love and devotion will seek to cross her in the dearest wish of her heart without what seems to him good reasons; and to an unprejudiced mind it seems quite possible that a man of fifty should be as good a judge of character and of mutual suitability and the chances of happiness as a girl of twenty. Everybody would justify a father who should refuse his daughter to a gambler or a drunkard, or a man of known evil life in any direction. She herself would doubtless live to be grateful, or if she died it were better to die unstained by such an association.

Let us consider the happier cases, in which the course of true love meets with no such formidable obstacles, whose parents have consented and friends approved, and all goes merry as a marriage-bell. Then let the betrothed pair beware lest love should become what a French cynic has called it—"selfishness for two." Surely the influence of a great and holy joy should be to enlarge the heart and ennoble the life. Surely to be very happy should make one the more tender to the sorrowful. There is a great temptation to lovers to withdraw themselves from other interests, to make the parents and brothers and sisters who have loved a girl all her life feel that they are no longer necessary to her; that her heart is gone from them while her form is in their midst. But it would be a nobler love, and one that, to my thinking, would promise more for the future happiness, that would only hold the old ties more nearly and dearly because of this new one, dearer than them all; which would be sedulous to spare the home circle any slight, any sense of loss beyond the inevitable one of parted presence. Love is the best gift of God, but it should be crowned with honor—a sovereign who exalts his subjects, not a tyrant who debases them. If I were a man I would prefer to marry a girl who would be careful in no least thing to hurt or slight the home hearts she was leaving, who could afford to wait a little even for her happiness rather than grasp it with unseemly eagerness.

I am old-fasshioned, you think? No, even now I know of such a love in two young lovers for whom the wind blows good fortune, yet who pause on the threshold of the new, bright life to leave tender memories of their sweet thoughtfulness in the life behind them.—Mrs. Moulton in Our Continent.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

A Life Sketch.

Ten years ago two lads, footsore and weary entered a small village on the western bank of the Mississippi. The sun was nearly down. Each felt that he could go no farther, and, with a sense of depression and homesickness such as they had not before experienced, they dropped into a secluded place on the wharf and shed bitter, burning tears over the old home and the loved ones from whom they were so cruelly parted. At length James, the youngest, stammered forth:

"This won't do, Dick; night is coming on. We must eat and sleep and be ready for something in the morning. I promised mother that I'd do the best I could."

"Of course; but how can a fellow away from home, and no money to do with, help it?" was the tearful reply.

To see his comrade cast down roused James to his usual bright, happy manner.

"As to money, we've enough for to-night, and to-morrow we must try to find something to do," was the cheerful answer.

To-morrow came. The lads were from New England homes. Their manners and appearance spoke of thrift, economy and neatness. With a fair education and particularly quick in figures, they were ready for anything that might offer. Before noon both were engaged as clerks at what seemed to them really high wages.

Tipton was a small village, but the surrounding country was already taken up by farmers, and the river was at that time the only outlet for their produce; hence business was active and saloons abundant.

As the days wore on it became evident that the two clerks, quick and apt in their new surroundings, were actuated by altogether different principles. James Darcy attended church regularly, and every day found time to read the Bible his mother gave him at parting. He made few friends; but those were studious and soon there was a reading-room in the attic of the store, and a lyceum with an average display of forensic talent.

Dick Fraser worked faithfully through the day, but at night he wanted fun. To be shut up in the attic was too mean and poor for his views. The saloons were well lighted; there were pictures and singing and good companionship. James persuaded and even went so far as to appeal to his love for his mother.

"What are you afraid of, boy? What possible harm can come to me? I like a good time, and I don't like books and Sunday going, as you do."

"You ask what I am afraid of, Dick," said James, with a tremor in his voice. "To visit the saloon every night is to be induced to drink and gamble. Those who go there go for that purpose. Is it not so?"

"Some go for that, likely, and others go to look on. I have never taken more than one or two glasses; and as for play, why, I just begin to know the cards.

"Promise me you will not venture to learn more of them. I cannot bear to think of the sorrow you will bring to your old home, the ruin you will surely draw upon yourself," pleaded James.

"Fudge!" exclaimed Dick, turning on his heel. "What a fuss about nothing! Here, Throop!" to one of his associates who was passing, "just stop and hear the parson. In his eyes it's an awful thing to show yourself in a saloon. He's afraid!" was continued with a laugh.

"Afraid of what?" asked Throop derisively.

"Delirium tremens," roared Dick. "And I confess I shall be afraid too, if I sit and listen to him any longer."

"Then why do it? Edmunds and Ferrol are out, and Jack won't be far behind. Come on!"

James saw his old friend go out with a heavy heart. Then he leaned his head on his hand and thought of the dear old home. Many times he had been homesick, and many times he had felt that he must give it all up; but the promise that he had made his mother as he stood with his hand clasped in hers, nerved him, and the Bible she had given him was his comforter. Weary as he might be, it rested him to read.

"Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him and he shall bring it to pass."

Tipton is no longer a small village, but a large commercial town. James Darcy is a prosperous merchant, with a home to which he has just brought the mother to whom he promised in every way to do the best he could and in no case ever to touch strong drink. Last week Dick Fraser was buried at the expense of his old friend, a victim of the very delirium tremens the bare idea of which made him laugh in his youth.

Every soul has right and wrong set before him. He must choose. Which shall it be?—From Good Words.

LESSON 4, October 22.—THE AGONY IN THE GARDEN.—Mark 14, 32-42.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Sure he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows."—Isa 53, 4.

32. And they came to a place which was named Gethsemane: and he saith to his disciples, Sit ye here, while I shall pray.
33. And he taketh with him Peter and James and John, and began to be sore amazed, and to be very heavy.
34. And saith unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death: tarry ye here and watch.
35. And he went forward a little, and fell on the ground, and prayed that, if it were possible, the hour might pass from him.
36. And he said, Abba, Father, all things are possible unto thee: take away this cup from me: nevertheless not what I will, but what thou wilt.
37. And he cometh, and findeth them sleeping, and saith unto Peter, Simon, sleepest thou? couldst thou not watch one hour?
38. Watch ye and pray, lest ye enter into temptation. The spirit truly is ready, but the flesh is weak.
39. And again he went away and prayed and spake the same words.
40. And when he returned, he found them asleep again, (for their eyes were heavy), neither wist they what to answer him.
41. And he cometh the third time, and saith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your rest: it is enough, the hour is come; behold, the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.
42. Rise up, let us go; lo, he that betrayeth me is at hand.

NOTES.

(32). Gethesemane–familiar place. John 18: 1, 2—"oil-press." Isa. 53:5. His bruising for our sins began in this hour of agony. He flees to the solitude of secret prayer for relief. The eight remain, an outer watch for the approaching foe. (33) The three who had seen his glory on the mount. Why selected? Because most intimate. God loves to use those who know him best. They have his secret. "Amazed"—the mind entering into the survey of the stupendous barrier sin, is, to God's favor. He approaches the burden about to be rolled upon him. Nature's protest. The heart is "very heavy." (34) This and John 12:27 only places in which Jesus refers to his human soul. For whom did he thus become sorrowful unto death? Isa. 53:3; Heb. 5:7. Who afflicted him? Ps. 22: 14; 116:3. How great sorrow? Luke 22:44. (35) Shrinking nature seeks relief in prayer. He suffered and prayed and was delivered, that we might find help, in time of trial and need. "Was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." Heb. 4:15. (36) Will of Father his desire—Deliverance desired with importunity—subjection full and free. (37) Turns to his watchers—finds them overcome. What a revelation of his heart? "Couldest thou not watch one hour?" Are we watching with him? And for him? (38) We are commanded to watch and pray. Why? What is our present relation to Christ? Is the disciple above the Master? Mark his pity for them. How much greater for us. Are we afraid of the Tempter? Their flesh overcame them. His spirit conquered his flesh. So ought ours. (39) Repetition shows importunity—intensity of desire. Short prayers are sharpest. When full of necessity we cannot utter long prayers. Variation of expression by three evangelists, shows from the Holy Spirit three differing forms of expressing the same agony by our Lord, actually used. Probably there were many more in the importunate and pressing repetitions of the same agonizing desire. We may thus depend absolutely on the verbal inspiration of the original records. Luke 22:43, 44. Prayers answered (40) Again he finds them sleeping from grief. As on the mount overcome by the dazzling light—so now oppressed with the horror of darkness—"neither wist they what to answer him." (41, 42) The time for watching against the betrayer is ended. No longer has the Master need. The hour so portentious in its approach is upon him—and he rises in the afforded strength to meet it with majesty and with calmness. Thoughtful of them to the last. He now thinks of us. The hour of Satan's temptation is upon his Church.

LESSONS FOR APPLICATION.

1. Jesus had a place for secret prayer, where he always gained strength for conflict. So must we if victorious in him. Frequent resort to it—with importunate desire and essential. 2. Jesus' sufferings were vicarious. He bore in Gethsemane the sin of the world. John 3:16. 3. All sinners are called to believe this record God gives of his son. 1 John 5:12. 4. Whoever does not believe that God has put away all sin, by the sacrifice, "hath made God a liar." 1 John 5:10. 5. Sinners are now condemned, for rejecting this work of Christ for them. John 3: 18. 6. Condemnation implies sentence pronounced. Only one way of escape. Rom. 8:1. 7. Rejecting Christ is the greatest sin, that can be committed. It includes all others. It demands severe penalty. It will certainly receive all that he bore—and how much sorer punishment for trampling on such precious blood. It will abide on you sinner—rejecting him—forever! John 3:36.—Notes for Bible Study.

Words of Life for every Day.

SANCTIFY THEM THROUGH THY TRUTH; THY WORD IS TRUTH.

Thursday, October, 12.—If a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted.—Gal. 6 : 1.

Friday, October 13.—For he that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting.—Gal. 6:8.

Saturday, October 14.—For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God.—Eph. 2:8.

Sabbath, October 15.—For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come.—1 Cor. 11:26.

Monday, October 16.—That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height, and to know the love of Christ, which passeth all knowledge, that ye might be filled with the fulness of God.—Eph. 3: 17, 18, 19.

Tuesday, October 17.—For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ.—Eph. 4 : 12–13.

Wednesday, October 18.—Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers.—Eph. 4 : 29.

never could believe that Greeley, who was a staunch Anti-mason, would resort to Masonry for political purposes. Cameron pledged the Pennsylvania delegation to Seward, and when I proposed to visit Pennsylvania in Mr. Seward's interest, he objected, saying I would divide the delegates; but if left to him he would bring them in solid. The delegation headed by young Cameron, with two exceptions, went solid against Mr. Seward in the convention."

Mr. Weed thinks, however, that a pledge to Cameron by Leonard Swett and David Davis without Mr. Lincoln's knowledge, may have had its influence in procuring this act of personal and political infidelity on the part of Mr. Cameron, as it subsequently came out that Swett and Davis had promised Cameron his choice of cabinet offices if he would carry Pennsylvania for Lincoln. The delegates from Virginia were instructed for Mr. Seward, but went against him at the convention. Mr. Weed subsequently met two of the Virginia delegates who explained their course by saying, "We were not aware until we reached Chicago, that this was the same Seward who had so much to do with the Anti-masonic excitement in New York."

The "bargain and sale" of Pennsylvania doubtless had its influence in determining the fate of Mr. Seward at Chicago, but the lodge power may have been behind and responsible for this betrayal. It is not seriously denied that rebel and Union officers who met in hostility upon the battle field during the late war, sometimes met in friendly council as brothers in the lodge, and there decided the issue of the following day's conflict the night before the engagement, and this Cameron, Swett and Davis scheme has very much the same hue. Why was not Mr. Lincoln informed? Why was the thing kept a profound secret until, in the second day's consultation at Springfield, after Mr. Lincoln's election, it came out in arranging the Cabinet? Why was Cameron made Secretary of War after his unfitness for the position had been so strenuously urged by those best prepared to judge of his qualifications? Possibly a "Brother's bond" had been given "on the square," such a "bond" as is known to often outrank civil obligations, and the sacred ties of friendship or even kindred. It looks like it. It has on it the "mark" of the "secret empire," which knows no law but selfishness, and no higher code of honor than "You help me, and I'll help you, and we'll combine to help each other, at the expense of those who have never learned our Masonic 'Shibboleth.'" One thing is certain, the lodge never forgives, and seldom omits an opportunity to inflict a wound upon so formidable an adversary as Mr. Seward had shown himself, and it may have been these same gentlemen, who, busy in the interests of the craft, "posted" the Virginia delegation "after they reached Chicago."

An instance, given me on the cars within a few days, by a gentleman who was a delegate in that Chicago convention and in the late New York convention at Saratoga also, and who is not unknown among the successful journalists of the day, is so appropos that I will give it here withholding names at his request. Mr. ——, cashier in a savings bank at ——, was a defaulter to a large amount. He was a Mason. He had loaned a "brother" three thousand dollars "on the square," without security as required by rules of the bank, and when the assets were examined Mr. ——'s note was found for $3,000. He was insolvent and his paper worthless. But the honor of the "craft" was at stake and the impecunious brother's reputation must be protected. Six "brothers" of standing came forward and gave notes for the $3,000. The cashier was quietly removed and the whole thing "hushed." This was perhaps all well enough, but it is in the sequel that the gist of the matter appears.

Soon after the matter quieted down, a scheme was concocted by the "brothers" to put the defaulter in office. It was manipulated by those in the secret and brought to a successful issue by the joint efforts of Masonic and Odd-fellow lodges. The defaulter was elected county treasurer, and thus placed in position to win money enough to protect his Masonic securities and "preserve the honor of the craft!" This the defaulter did of course, and the tax-payers were blissfully ignorant of how the swindle was gotten up and managed. A detailed account of the whole affair was furnished to my informant, who was himself afterward nominated for an office in the same county. He learned by a friend that the secretists were planning for his defeat. Going to some of the knowing ones he said, "Gentlemen, I am willing to meet you in an open, honorable fight, but this packing in your lodges has got to be stopped or I'll publish that whole savings bank affair with names and particulars." The result was the withdrawal of the lodge pressure and my informant was elected by an unwonted majority.

This instance shows that the same power which defeated justice in the courts and manipulated politics in 1830, of which Mr. Weed himself gives an account in his letter, is still at work in western New York and in fact everywhere.

Calling again on Monday, Mr. Weed expressed great satisfaction at having an opportunity to review and add to the communication which he had hastily prepared for the Convention, and I agreed to call again in a day or two.

At the American Missionary Association rooms I met Dr. Roy and others who bade a God-speed to our reform work. Returning to Mr. Weed's I received the revised and legally attested paper which has in part already appeared in print. At Bro. Harrison's I met Bro. Hinman who was to leave by the midnight train for his Southern field.

On Friday morning I breakfasted at Syracuse and reached Batavia in time for dinner. I called on Judge Taggart, and am under great obligation to Elder Atwater who took me in his carriage to the monument and showed me much kindness. The evening and night I spent at Dale with Elder Hyatt, and on Saturday passed the day with Bro. Capwell and other friends. Sabbath morning Bro. Capwell took me to Pavilion where I met the venerable Elder Ewell and preached in the Baptist church in the evening. On Monday I visited Albion in Orleans county, and made a fruitless search for the original papers of the Morgan inquest. Called on my way to the Bridge at Lockport, and reached here (Detroit) at 7:20 this A. M., and have been consulting with Bro. Foote about publishing Mr. Weed's paper, etc., and am to leave for Kalamazoo at 4:35, hoping to reach Ligonier tomorrow morning and Chicago during the night following. J. P. Stoddard.

Old Times Renewed in Western New York.

FROM THE MISSOURI STATE LECTURER.

Albany, Mo., Sept. 30, 1882.

Editor Cynosure:—Since last writing we visited the Annual Fair at Maryville and distributed some three thousand pages of tracts and circulars. Next we were off for the National Meeting at Batavia, of which we need not speak to your readers, as they have read full accounts of the same already.

From Batavia Bro. S. E. Starry and myself began lecturing, degree-working and scattering literature in western New York. Saturday evening, September 16th, we had a good audience at Union Hall in the village of Wyoming. Sabbath evening thereafter, we listened to a very able and instructive discourse forcibly delivered to a large, select, and attentive audience by Pres. Jonathan Blanchard in the M. E. church in the village of Warsaw.

The following night we gave the first degree in Masonry, while Elder J. F. Browne of Kentucky, ably explained it, in Irving Hall at above named village. Tuesday we visited most of the dwellings, and leaving tracts invited the people to come out and although it began raining early in the evening and poured down in torrents until about ten o'clock still some sixty or more persons gathered and we killed "Hiram" in due and ancient form. One of our lodge officers was a Mason whom we had met and conversed with at the salt well in the fore part of the day. While swearing the candidate he threw aside his apron and fled from the clandestine lodge and left the hall. When we rushed in to seize and bind the three ruffians, behold one had also "vamoosed the ranche," and made good his escape.

Wednesday night the third degree was given to a crowded house back at Wyoming. Friday evening we held forth at American Hall in Attica. The Masons were out in full force and behaved nicely during our preliminary lecture but when the degree work came then "trouble began." They raged, foamed and pawed, shaking their fists at us and raising a row generally. But Bro. Starry is a little too much for forty Masons and a score of jacks. The demonstrations rebounded on the sore-heads with awful force, serving to clinch the work and bring out a large crowd the next evening to see the mock resurrection.

Sabbath, September 24th, we listened to Elder I. Hyatt's public renunciation before his congregation in Dale. His whole discourse was straightforward, manly and convincing.

We are now ready for renewed work for Blanchard and Conant and the American party.

Yours for truth and liberty,

M. N. Butler.

The Indiana State Convention.

Friends in Indiana, are you coming to the Annual Meeting at Carthage? If not, why not? The prospect now is that we will have a very good meeting. Come and hear Prof. Kinsey's sacred songs. Come and hear Bishop Wright and others. Come to hear, as we hope, Pres. J. Blanchard, Uncle John Richardson and Dr. W. L. Leister. Come to unite your presence and influence with a good cause. Come and enjoy the temperance rally on Thursday, the 26th. Come in the Spirit of our Divine Teacher. Make some sacrifice for God's sake. Come consecrated to the cause of truth and righteousness. Come, friends, to this annual gathering and I know you will go home rejoicing. Come to Carthage. S. L. Cook.

THE AMERICAN PARTY.

Nominations for 1884.

For President,

JONATHAN BLANCHARD,

of Illinois.

For Vice-President.

JOHN A. CONANT.

of Connecticut.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

A POLITICAL MEETING will be held in connection with the Illinois State Convention, on Thursday forenoon Nov. 2 during a recess of the Convention. Tonica is in the center of a section of country full of old line Abolitionists. Benjamin Lundy's paper, the first Abolition sheet in the West, if not in the country, was published near by. This should be a grand rallying point for reform politics. American voters, come to the meeting.

—The Svenska Harolden (Swedish Herald) of Kansas City, Mo., printed lately the fine cut of Morgan's statute with an accompanying description. It also printed on the same page the editorial on "Masonic Expositions" from the New England American. Get your Swedish friends to read this sound political paper.

The Republican Convention at Saratoga, N. Y.

Concerning the defeat of Governor Cornell at Saratoga, and the nomination of Judge Folger, as his successor, by means of Jay Gould's ducats and administration influence, George Alford Townsend makes some comments that are worth considering, for their analysis of the influences at work in New York politics:—

"Cornell's offense is two-fold—antagonizing Arthur and falling short of Conkling's expectations.

"Every body says that he has made a better governor than was expected, and almost all say that he has made a very good governor. He, therefore, is wiped out because he has not kept step with his masters, whom he served so long, He has made enemies in the interests of the public, and must go down because he considered that he ought to stand a peg higher as governor of the state than as a mere detective and enrolling agent for Mr. Conkling.

"No wonder that so many of our younger politicians start out servile and keep servile when they see the tumble a man can make by cultivating his self-respect and the public good, like the present governor of New York.

"General Arthur was walked out of his office, and, with an indignant letter to the President at that time, he quietly kept hold of his "machine," and, though he was beaten at Albany, and some thought humiliated, by Cornell one year ago, yet he believed that the machine would do good work at a later day, and it is now going to give Arthur that sort of triumph which these personal politicians love—a victory and revenge together, complete power in the machinery of the State, and that State more than ever the controlling State in American politics.

"Never having had an interest in our politics as an office-holder or expectant, I can afford to look on grimly at the vicissitudes of politicians, yet I do not think this victory will be attended with any blessing in the long-run. It ought to show the Democratic party the advantage of a complete understanding of itself, so that the neutral public can also understand it. The Democracy has not the same platform in all parts of the country, and where it has one strong leader, he is apt to have several rivals.

"The power of the New York machine lies in its complete self understanding. It can never be accused of hypocrisy in the Masonic councils of itself. Don Cameron knows that under no circumstances will Arthur sell him out; Mahone knows that the men he is trading with in politics will stick to the trade.

"Unfortunately the reformers, so called, in our politics do not observe faith in men, but allow themselves to drop a man the moment any charge is made against him, with the reflection of 'I am more holier than thou.'"

—Twenty-three new members were added to the Fourth U. P. church, Allegheny, at the last communion occasion, Sept. 24.

—Rev. D. S. Kinney, agent of the Weslevan Publishing House writes to the American Wesleyan of the late Illinois Conference of that church: "The immediate and healthful effects of the Theological School at Wheaton, upon this Conference, are felt and prized by the churches. Three young men of education, piety, and much promise to our Connection, from this school of the prophets, were ordained Elders by the Conference, while the seal of Heaven's approbation to this cause was given, by sending gusts and floods of glory upon us during the services in which the church recognized the voice of the Holy Ghost, who said 'separate me' these 'for the work whereunto I have called them.'" The same Conference raised $412 for Wasioja Seminary.

—The Rock River M. E. Conference met in Aurora last week. Among the clergymen from other churches introduced were Revs. J. G. Terrell and M. V. Clute of the Free Methodist church. The lines separating the two denominations seem to be relaxing.

—At the last meeting of the Congregational ministers of Chicago, the name of "Rev." Jacob R. Shipherd, of Peruvian and other notoriety, was dropped from the roll by unanimous vote and without debate.

—Bishop Wiley of the Methodist Episcopal church lately engaged with the Masons of Cattanooga, in laying the corner stone of a new church building. A local paper, edited by a colored man, complains that Jews were of the number who took part in the ceremony but colored men were scrupulously ruled out.

—In the October number of the Reformed Presbyterian, Pittsburgh, Rev. N. R. Johnston, missionary among the Chinese in San Francisco, Cal., writes with sad misgivings of the effect of Anti-Chinese bill. He says:

"You would think that the Californians would now be satisfied. By no means. The malice of the Chinese haters will now be whetted to its keenest edge. Every possible plan and effort will now be resorted to and made to drive out these inoffensive people. Ostracism, abuse, cruelty with insult, all that leaguers and secret clubs, and labor associations, and secret orders can invent, will be attempted. The scholars of our Mission School, both night and Sabbath, have been more annoyed, insulted, and cruelly treated recently than for a long time before. Upon one of our good boys, coming to Sabbath school recently, a man hissed his large dog. The animal chased the boy, seized him by the chin and lacerated him terribly. To escape arrest, the demon fled across the bay to his own hoodlum city. Much of my time now is occupied in looking after such cases, and yet our schools are more crowded even to excess than for more than a year. The demand is greater than the supply, and we are hard worked. Very many of our scholars now are absolute heathen, and only recently from China. How we can reach them with the needed gospel is our constant problem."

—The United Presbyterian missionaries who have been sojourning in England during the troubles in their Egyptian field have returned to their chosen work. Their property at Alexandria escaped unharmed the ravages of pillage and fire. The buildings were closed during the bombardment, and when re-opened everything was found intact, except in the book shop. From this a few books had been taken. In the mission "home" the house-plants were fresh, and even the pet doves were alive and well. But the mission-work, in all its departments, had been seriously interfered with, and checked to a greater degree than at Cairo or other places in the upper country.

—One item of Senator Hill's will is as follows: "I now give and bequeath to my wife and children that which some of them now possess and which I assure them, in full view of death, is far richer than gold and more to be desired than all human honors. God is a living God, and Christ came into the world to save sinners. I beg them to have faith in Jesus, for by this faith alone can they be saved."

—At a meeting of the American Bible Revision Society, or that branch of the society known as the Old Testament Company, Sept. 29th the work of revision, it was reported, had progressed to Psalms, which had already been revised four times—twice in this country and twice in England. The songs of Solomon will come next, followed by Ecclesiasties, which will all but complete the work, and will take about a year to accomplish.

—For twenty-two years a Nestorian has been laboring independently among the Molokans of Russia, up and down the Volga and in Crimea, until more than 3,000 persons have been gathered into churches. He is a man of little learning, but good sense and genuine piety.

—The special religious interest manifested at the Sandwich Islands a year ago has recently received a new impulse, and the Holy Spirit seems to be moving upon the hearts of the native Hawaiians. Mr. Forbes, missionary of the American Board, writes briefly of an evangelistic tour, saying that a glorious work of grace is evidently in progress among the churches.

LYNNVILLE, IOWA, Oct. 2, 1882.

Our Yearly Meeting is again past, and more than ever before both ministers and others spoke out in public against the "image of the beast." One of the assistant clerks, James P. Pinkham, was objected to on account of his connection with Masonry, but denied the charge of being connected with it at the present time. When the subject of oaths came before the meeting a few made remarks thereon and spoke of the Masonic oath now binding a few of our members.

Daniel McPherson, a minister, spoke very pointedly as to the impossibility of being a good Christian and a Mason at the same time. At the close "amen" was echoed from perhaps a hundred voices all over the house. So I bless God the leaven is working, and our "Quaker Boy" of Indiana, as well as others of us can say, They are not all dumb dogs on this subject.

The Poultry Nation says that whole wheat is an excellent food for fowls.

Hogs should be allowed to have a heap of coal ashes. They will be all the healthier for it.

It is said by one of our interior farmers that two or three bushels of salt per acre will keep off or destroy the army worm. The salt is, besides, worth all it costs as a fertilizer.

It is stated that the best remedy for the cabbage worm is to sprinkle over the plants early in the morning, when the dew is upon them, cayenne pepper.

A few drops of ammonia added to a gallon of water and applied once a week to all pots of flowers will do much good and keep the pots and earth from souring.

Dr. Denker, of St. Petersburg treats diphtheria by first giving the patient a laxative, and when its operation has ceased he gives cold drinks acidulated with hydrochloric acid and then a gargle of lime-water and hot milk in equal parts every two hours. His method has been very successful.

The agricultural products of Kansas this year are estimated to be worth at present prices $138,385,315, and the other products of the farm, garden, and pasture, including live stock, will bring the total up to $176,000,000, or an average of $176 for every man, woman, and child in the State.

A woman was lately indicted in England for causing the death of her child by denying it adequate nourishment. Investigation showed, however, that the mother had fed the child regularly on cornstarch mixed with a little milk, ignorant of the fact that starch is unable to supply the necessary nutriment to young children. Under these circumstances the woman was acquitted.

A correspondent of the Ohio Farmer advises farmers, instead of burying their cabbages in the ground, thus running the risk of freezing, damage by mice and moles, or of finding it half rotten when wanted for use, to pull up the heads, shake off the earth well, pull off a few of the outside leaves and hang them up in the cellar by twine tied to the stems and nails driven into the joist. The cellar, of course, must be well ventilated.

Apples may be kept fresh a whole year by following this method of storing them away: A layer of dry sawdust sprinkled at the bottom of the box, and then a layer of apples placed in so that they do not touch each other. Upon this place a layer of sawdust, and so on till the box is filled. The boxes, after being packed in this way, are placed on the wall in the cellar, up from the ground, where they keep perfectly, retaining their freshness and flavor until brought out.

Apple Marmalade.—Peel and slice the apples; weigh and put into a kettle, and stew until tender; mash fine and add sugar in proportion of pound to pound; let them cook slowly, stir very frequently; be careful not to allow it to scorch; when the mass has a jellied appearance, it is done. About half an hour will generally be found sufficient for making the marmalades, after adding the sugar.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich , and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 60 cents; per dozen, $5.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.00. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞ The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degrees of Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. This confession of Henry L. Valance, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan in the Niagara River, was taken from the lips of the dying man by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine County, Wisconsin, in 1848. 10 cents each; per dozen. $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lehbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen. $1 25.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen

MISCELLANEOUS.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each: per dozen $2 00

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. Each of these able writers in clear, forcible language treats the subject in one or more of its varied phases. Rev. David McDill in six chapters treats of 1. "Their Antiquity; 2 Their Secrecy; 3. "Oaths and Promises;" 4. "Profaneness" 5. "Their Exclusiveness;" 6. "False Claims." Prest Blanchard handles the topic: "Shall Christians join Secret Societies?" in a masterly way, showing clearly that they are all opposed to the genius of Christianity; and Dr. Beecher closes with his Report on Secret Societies, which was adopted by the Congregational Association of Illinois at Ottawa in 1866. In cloth, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.25. Paper cover, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association, condition of the Carpenter donation, with engraving of building donated by Mr. Carpenter; tables showing the number of pastors and communicants in churches that exclude members of secret societies, tabular view of local, county, state and national conventions, and list of organizations auxiliary to the National Christian Association; brief opinions of eminent men on secret societies, and testimonies of religious bodies against them, 25 cents each; per dozen, $1.50.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Greene, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. Unpublished Reminiscences of the Morgan Times, by Elder David Bernard; Recollections of the Morgan Trials, as related by Victory Birdseye, Esq., and presented by his daughter, Mrs. C. B. Miller; Secretary's Report; Roll of Delegates; Songs of Mr. G. W. Clark; Paper by Enoch Honeywell; Constitution N. C. A.; Reports of Committees and a Report of the Political Meeting. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing Official Reports; Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D. D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D. D., Prest. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D. D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquilette; also Report of the Political Mass Convention, with Platform and Candidates for the Presidential Campaign of 1876. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 31 Cynosure tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies; and the dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized secrecy are shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public. Those who wish to circulate anti-Masonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from. 20 cents each, per dozen, $1,75.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. W. P. M'Nary, pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind. This is a very clear, thorough, candid and remarkably concise Scriptural argument on the character of Freemasonry. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

FOR SALE BY

EZRA A. COOK,

No. 7 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

In the Coils; or the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historial sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of every-day life, and showing how individual, domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. Parents who wish, not only to keep their children out of these night-schools of Satan, but to give them arguments against them in the most attractive dress, will do well to purchase this book. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen. $4.00.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Ad-dresses. In this scathing review the lying pretensions of the order are clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Letters on Masonry. Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian religion. Paper cover, 30 cents each; per dozen, $2.50.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship (old work), by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each: per dozen. $7.50.

Freemasonry and the M. E. Church. Let every lover of truth and justice read this report of the trial of Rev. J. T. Michael, showing how he was driven out of the M. E. church for opposing Masonry and loving Methodism. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Ma-sonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocate, and afterward in pamphlet form. The Evangelical Repository, reviewing it, says: "This pamphlet consists of a series of articles originally published in the Church Advocate, Lancaster, Pa. Elder M. S. Newcomer opposes secret societies, and especially Freemasonry and Elder G. W. Wilson defends the system. We are free to say that Mr. Newcomer has thoroughly routed his opponent at every point. Mr. Wilson speaks by the book, as he is a Royal Arch Mason." 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses, By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

NEWS ITEMS.

—The U. S. signal office estimates that at least $13,000,000 of property and many persons remained safely in harbor on account of the warnings given just before a late cyclone, and that the saving in this one storm pays the expenses of the service for at least ten years.

—Two daughters of Mr. Rosecranz, residing at Lowell, Kan., were burned to ashes by the destruction of the house by fire. The oldest could have escaped, but in attempting to rescue her little sister met her fiery fate.

—Yellow fever is now ravaging Pensacola, Fla. The total cases to Friday were 1,111; deaths, 103. Among the deaths was the Rev. Z. A. Owen, a Baptist minister. Being away from the city when the pestilence began its ravages, he returned to his charge, which he has since steadfastly served with unselfish devotion. Until stricken down, he was ever to be found right in the heart of the suffering.

—The Boston Commercial Bulletin says that more deaths have occurred from accidents to passenger elevators in that city and its vicinity during the past twelve months than have been caused by the criminal negligence of the railroads in Massachusetts during the same period.

—The Grove shaft of the Midlothian coal mine, in Chesterfield county, Va., in which thirty-five miners lost their lives last February by an explosion, has just been reopened and partially explored, resulting in the finding of ten bodies. Others were in sight, but the debris prevented their recovery. Mining operations will be resumed after the shaft has been cleared.

—Alexander H. Stevens was on Wednesday elected governor of Georgia almost without opposition. His majority is estimated at 50,000.

—In all twelve negroes have died from wounds received at the political massacre lately at Lancaster, S. C. Rumors are already in circulation of an intended attempt by the colored people to burn the town. The negroes show a great deal of feeling over the slaughter of their brethren, and it is surmised that another attack on them is preparing.

—The Irish World, having come to the conclusion that there is now no land league in Ireland closes its fund for that organization and remits its balance, $17,424, to treasurer Egan. The World's total remittances amounted to $342,548.

—Illinois will show for 1882 an aggregate product of 9,115,653 tons of coal, an increase of 50 per cent. during the past two years, and is now the second State in the Union in the matter of coal production.

—An extraordinary atrocity is briefly chronicled in a dispatch from Shreveport, La. A festival was in progress at Carencro, and Adolph Marceaux, who had taken offense at something or somebody, went outside, formed into line a party of his friends, marched back into the hall, gave the command: "Halt! Aim! Fire!" and a young lady and her brother fell at the first volley, the former killed outright and the latter mortally wounded. The platoon of murderers then escaped, and at last accounts the sheriff and a posse were in pursuit.

—At Salem, Kans.. the switch, which was misplaced, caused a collision. When the engines met there was a terrible crash, and both engineers, the fireman, and a baggageman were buried in the wreck, which soon ignited from the engine fires and was fed by the fresh coal in the tenders. Six lives were lost.

—Chili refuses to abate any of her demands upon Peru for territorial and pecuniary indemnification, and as Peru declines to yield to these demands the peace negotiations are broken off.

—The police believe the murderers of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Undersecretary Burke numbered ten, and are still in Ireland; but that, unless the aid of an informer can be secured, the crime cannot be brought home to the guilty persons. The weapons used in the commission of the murders were found some weeks ago. Weapons found were four knives nine inches long, with blades three-quarters of an inch wide. They were quite new, and very sharp, and are evidently surgical dissecting knives. There were discolorations on them which, by chemical analysis, proved to have been made by human blood. It is hoped the murderers will yet be captured. Meanwhile the authorities observe the strictest secrecy.

—The feeling of Europe on the occupation of Cairo is much divided. The Germans and Austrians apparently intend to support British proposals, if they involve no annexation. The Russians, French, Italians and Spaniards are all bitter, loudly demand that England shall submit to Europe. These, however, are the opinions of journalists; the statesmen, M. Gambetta excepted, have not yet spoken.

PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT.

The proposition on the first page of this paper, addressed to one hundred readers who are able and willing to give the fall campaign for the Cynosure is very important. Will you not all give it a second and third reading and then carefully consider the question whether the dear Heavenly Father would be pleased to have you take your place with these workers?

D. Basford:—"I do all I can to spread the truth that your paper advocates."

W. Vine:—"I will try and get ten if I can."

C. Reynolds:—"I shall do all I can to advance the interest of the reform cause and especially to extend the circulation of the Cynosure."

E. D. Pillson:—"I am trying to get the Cynosure introduced to parties who have never seen it." He sends two subscriptions for six months and one for a year.

W. Fenton:—"I shall try to get some subscribers at the Baptist State convention to be held in Minneapolis."

J. Kirkpatrick and D. N. Workman will work to secure clubs.

Dan'l Hyde sends one subscription and writes: "Expect to continue my labor in that direction."

P Lepeltak sends fifty-eight subscriptions for one month each. J. P. Stoddard three for a year each. Others send two each.

The Extension Fund is a great help to workers in localities where the Cynosure is not known. It is designed only for new subscribers.

MASONIC BOOKS

FOR SALE BY

EZRA A. COOK,

7 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

Books sent post-paid on receipt of retail price, but books by mail are at risk of person ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express are sold at 10 per cent. discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority because they tell too much.

General Ahiman Rezon and Freemasons' Guide. By Daniel Sickels, 33d degree. The most perfect Masonic monitor published in the United States. Embellished with many engravings and containing monitorial instructions in the degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow-Craft and Master Masons, with explanatory lectures, the ceremonies of consecration and dedication of new lodges, installation of officers, laying foundation stones, dedication of Masonic halls, burial services, Masonic calendar, ritual for a Lodge of Sorrow, Masonic trials, etc. Bound in fine cloth, extra large 12mo, $2.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the entire ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Scores of Masons have privately admitted that this is a standard text-book in the lodge and is strictly correct; but publicly it is not acknowledged as authority, though many officers of the lodge make use of it. Price, in cloth, $2.50.

Female Masonry. Manual of the Order of the Eastern Star. Containing the ritual, symbols, lectures, etc., of the five degrees of "Adoptive Masonry," Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound. Price, $1.50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. A practical guide to the ceremonies in the degrees conferred in Masonic Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated edition. In cloth, $1.25; in paper, 75 cents.

Although this Monitor is extensively used by the lodge, especially in conferring the higher degrees, it is publicly called an exposition, and not allowed as authority.

Sickels' Freemasons' Monitor. Containing the degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic illustrations, together with tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also forms of Masonic documents, notes, songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels; 32mo. In tuck, $1.50; cloth, $1.00.

Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry. Containing a Definition of Terms, Notes on its History, Traditions and Antiquities, and an Account of all the Rites and Mysteries of the Ancient World. 12 mo., 526 pages, $3.00.

Mackey's Manual of the Lodge, or Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow-Craft and Master Mason, with Ceremonies relating to installations, dedications, consecrations, laying of corner-stones, etc. Price, $2.00.

Mackey's Masonic Ritualist, or Monitorial Instruction Book. By Albert G. Mackey, Past General High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of the United States, Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prince of Mercy, etc. Price, cloth, $1.25; tuck, $1.75.

Mackey's Text-Book of Masonic Jurisprudence. Illustrating the laws of Freemasonry, both written and unwritten. This is the great law book of Freemasonry. 570 pages. Price, $2.50.

Allyn's Ritual of Masonry. Illustrated by a large number of engravings, and containing a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, Orange and Odd-fellows' Societies Price, $5.00.

TOPICS OF THE TIME.

The Christian Convention held in Chicago last week was a memorable meeting in respect to attendance and the character of the speaking. Farwell Hall was filled for three days, morning, afternoon and evening, with most attentive hearers, upon whose convictions such speakers from England as Spurgeon the younger and Rainsford of London, and Mackay of Hull and from our own borders as McNamara, Brooks, Whittle, Smithson, Pierson and Erdman should have some measurable effect. It was emphatically a Christian convention. The eloquent exhortations were directed to the consciences of church members, and were pointed enough to have produced a deep humiliation and "purging from dead works" and a lively zeal for the souls of men. The addresses were reported verbatim and will be worth reading in every pious home.

The defeat of the Republicans in Ohio last week Tuesday by some 20,000 votes, and the election of a large majority of Democrats to fill the twenty-one seats in the House of Representatives belonging to Ohio, is a political earth-slip which astounds some good people, but will in the end encourage them. The Republican party had engaged to close the 15,000 saloons in the State on the Sabbath along with other business. They had already imposed a heavy though unconstitutional tax upon these dens, and had thus angered the keepers, who, joined with the Germans, turned away from the Republicans some 45,000 votes. The victory will be the Waterloo of the saloon system in Ohio; since it was obviously carried in the interests of free liquor without regard to times or seasons, and the perpetuation of such an iniquity by ballot cannot long stand in a community where moral sentiment prevails. The glory of their victory will lead the rum party to indulge in excesses that will tend to their extinction on the one hand, and to cause loathing on the part of peaceable citizens on the other who will soon see that political parties have assumed a new line of battle, and the old names Republican and Democrat will lose their charm over the ballot. Let us hope that the conscience of the Ohio Republicans will assert itself in this hour of defeat and trial, and that they will not be satisfied with a mere temporary and partial limitation of the liquor business, but placing themselves behind the bulwarks of prohibition, begin the battle anew with the certainty of victory in a few years.

The successful operation of refrigerator cars is opening a new trade in beef between Chicago and the Atlantic cities, allowing the slaughtering of animals to be done here, while the meat in excellent condition is transported to Washington or New York where it undersells the local rates and causes consternation among the butchers, with much the same effect as when last year the same product was shipped in ice-cooled vessels to England. Some of the largest packing houses of Chicago are turning their attention to this business and are investing heavily in it. It has these points in favor of its success: The cruelties of the transhipment of living cattle will be abolished, the freight on the waste parts of the animal will be saved, and the useful portions of these parts will furnish material for manufactories. The prospect opening before this business is setting afloat rumors, which may be correct, that companies in Texas and Colorado, with vast resources in money and cattle, are also preparing to go into this business, and thus solve the question of transporting cattle by a short process.

A few days ago at Syracuse the temperance organizations of New York combined in a "State Constitutional Prohibition Amendment Association." Beginning with a name which ought to be unconstitutional, the body proceeded to incorporate other elements of weakness in their organization, one article of the constitution making special mention of the secret temperance lodges, and taking them into the bosom of the society open-armed. Rev. N. Wardner, editor of the American Wesleyan, with others, made bold and brave battle against this bargain and sale to the lodge, but was defeated by resort to the "previous question" and a close vote. An editorial in the Wesleyan says it was evident there had been "secret manipulations of secret society high-titled functionaries behind the scenes," and in its organic paper the body "most clearly put its hands of benediction on the heads of the secret cabals." He well adds in confirmation of Dr. Jewett, and scores of other disinterested and successful men among our leading temperance men: "Since the great Washingtonian temperance movement was cooped up and smothered by secret societies, they have been the bane of the temperance cause. Hope and success to temperance is coming back just in proportion as those secret lodges die and God's methods of reform are adopted."

The Freemason Grand Lodges are disowning their offspring. Jo. Smith was a Freemason we are told; at least, he incorporated a large portion of the oaths and ceremonies of the first three degrees in his initiatory rites of Mormonism. The Mormons were all Masons in Nauvoo, and at the time of the killing of the Smiths and their general unpopularity throughout the State, they were cut off by the Grand Lodge of Illinois, as its official records show. Now, at last, when the nation is roused and in earnest that the abomination of polygamy shall cease, the lodges begin to condemn their Mormon waif. It might be thought of a society, which is so excessively virtuous and chaste that its members must swear horribly that they will preserve the virtue of certain females, that it would have been foremost to condemn a system corner-stoned on lust. But they forgot to pass upon this item possibly. The following from the Grand Lodge of California is the first declaration we have seen in print from any body of Masons; and we only have to say of it, if the truth had been told in the preamble there might be sincerity in the resolution. Read—

"WHEREAS, It is a fundamental principle of Masons to believe in and fear God and keep his commandments, and also to be true and loyal to the Government in which we live; and, whereas, we believe that Mormonism, as now existing in the Territory of Utah, is wanting in both particulars; therefore,

"RESOLVED, That we sympathize with the Grand Lodge and Masons of Utah in the stand they have taken against the abomination of Mormonism, and approve of their action in refusing to receive advocates and upholders of that system into the Masonic fraternity."

On the 9th inst. the steamship Herder of the Hamburg-American line, went ashore near Cape Race, Newfoundland, and with most of her cargo proved a total loss. On board were 170 passengers and a crew of 118, who were providentially saved with their baggage and the mails. The Herder was the finest vessel of the line and was rated at 3500 tons burden. No danger was apprehended until at 2 o'clock in the morning the great vessel rushed upon the rocks without any of the officers being aware of the near proximity to land. Subsequent dispatches from Newfoundland inform us that this singular disaster on a smooth sea was no mischance, but that those who had charge of the ship were in a state of intoxication at the time of the wreck and thereafter. The Herder was thirty miles out of her course, the log was never heaved and the most criminal carelessness is charged upon the officers. There was wit enough left, however, to get everyone off to shore; but had not the sea been tranquil the loss of life would have been fearful. An investigation of the case is demanded, and then we shall know how much to place over against the credits from the license of the sale of beer.

A Shot at the Pocket-Book.

A Proposition Worth Considering.

BY REV. A. J. CHITTENDEN.

It has seemed to me that we are not employing all the agencies that might be made effectual in checking the growth of secretism. Yet I am not fully decided as to the wisdom of that which is proposed in this letter. I offer it to your readers for their consideration; and if it seems to be according to good civil policy or Christian spirit, I shall be glad to see their responses; and if not, their objections will be valuable.

It is not over-stating the case to say that three-fourths of all the candidates for the favors of the lodges are induced to apply because of the business or professional advantages expected. If we add the expectation of office, nearly all the motives that make Masons or Odd-fellows have been stated. Now while we are exposing the trap, it is certainly a fair question to raise—Can we not remove the bait?

The American party is doing something to remove the bait of OFFICE. If all the voters in the land should decide to give no more offices to the lodge members it would be a move most effectual for the reduction of lodge interest in our country. In other words, to Boycott the entire set of office-seekers that come from the secret chamber would be an effectual stroke for the relief of the country from the government of the "secret empire."

It will be a step nearer the thing to be proposed if I allude to another and parallel case. I suppose none of your readers would patronize a grocery or drug store where intoxicating drinks were sold to inebriates or to any one else. The refusal to trade with him might be called "evil for evil." And it would be returning evil for evil. And when any person becomes a criminal, in any sense, towards the community, he must expect that the community will punish him in some way.

In such a case the evil returned is not under the rule of private but public relationship. It is not a personal resentment but a social, public, commercial penalty. We are therefore at the place to ask, why should we continue to give our trade or patronage to men who are organized against our interests and against the interests of other business and professional men who need, under the circumstances, our entire patronage? It is my carefully formed opinion that since the lodge members are in effect organized outside of society general, and against society general, the society with which they are commercially at war should withhold its business support from such an outlaw element.

To state the reasons more orderly, I say—

First, on the ground of war policy, we ought to weaken the enemy. The lodge system is an organized war upon society. Why should we hesitate to carry the war into Carthage? The enemy allures to its ranks the young and vigorous who are entering business, and the promise is that the candidate for lodge favor shall have equal chances if he has their fraternal endorsement; which carries the implied threat that without such endorsement, the young man in business cannot compete with the member of the fraternity. But let it be known to him that only one-quarter of the people are in the lodge and that a large part of the outside element have determined to withhold patronage from traders in league, not one in ten of those who now feel compelled to join them would hear to the solicitation for a moment.

Why should we let the enemy fatten on new victims when we have it in our power to make it unprofitable to join the lodge? If Masonry has a great, good cause to further in the interests of men, let us see how long they will continue to maintain the lodge at a sacrifice. But we know what they are. Their character and operations are no longer a mystery. They are organized foes to society. Their commissary train should be captured as soon as possible. Withhold trade and professional patronage from the Mason and the Odd-fellow, and their bands will break in sunder as surely as selfishness rules their enterprise.

But secondly, I would withhold trade from the Mason and his kind because we owe it to the man who refuses to buy their indulgences to see that he does not suffer in trade by not being a Mason. Not every groceryman is a lodge man. It has often been a thought with me that such as are not lodge-bound might ask us, "Why do you strengthen the secret powers by giving them your custom, when we are suffering in trade for the sake of principle? We shall certainly get no more than our share of traffic if the anti-secret element give us the favor of their support." We owe it to the doctor, the dentist, the lawyer and the merchant who has not gone under the yoke of knavery, to see that he does not suffer overmuch for his manliness.

Thirdly, I would refuse to trade with the lodge man or employ him because the highest welfare of the man himself and of the uninitiated of our young men require some standing protest of this kind on the part of those who are enlightened. Then whenever the Boycotted merchant or professional enquired for the reason of our conduct there would be a self-made opportunity to witness a good profession before many who would not, in the ordinary way, hear a word from us. The pocket interest makes good hearers. Our enemy now feels strong, and he is therefore impudent.

Such a course would also make the best possible opportunity for rendering a more public reason for our course and calling the attention of the people to the hidden powers that are ratholing society. Nothing could be more seemly and reasonable than to address the business and professional men of any town or city in these words:

Whenever it is discovered in any society, that a portion of its members have conspired together to secure to themselves an unequal proportion of the advantages of that society, it becomes both right and necessary to counteract such a conspiracy against the community by making it unprofitable to become a party thereto. Whatever injury can be inflicted upon such a clandestine body of men without imparing the good order of society it is the duty of every good citizen to inflict. The power of bestowing business or commercial patronage is one of those powers reserved to the individual; and which should be exercised for the punishment of evil-doers and for the reward of them that do well. It seems to be the dictate of reason and common prudence to discourage the formation and growth of all clubs or leagues of commercial favoritism, in civilized communities; and it is the publicly avowed decision of the undersigned, and many more, to have no unnecessary business relations with those persons whose secret sworn obligations render it certain that they will work injury to others in trade and impair the healthiness and general integrity of any commonwealth in or under which they are encouraged to work.

Faith Healing at Old Orchard.

It is well known to those who care to know that Dr. Charles Cullis of Boston, has for many years been teaching to people sick with diseases incurable by human means, that Jesus Christ is still able and willing to heal the body, and that many have been permanently restored to health by the prayer of faith. Rev. Hugh Johnston, in the Times of Refreshing, gives the following statements in reference to the recent Faith Convention at Old Orchard, Me.:

Two women, who came with crutches, went away with the use of their limbs, and carrying their crutches. Another cried out "Glory! glory! God has heard my prayer! I am loosed from my bonds!" A lady who had been bedridden for eighteen years, and who was brought in a chair with attendants, next morning arose, dressed herself, walked down stairs and appeared at the open-air services, walking about the encampment, and giving glory to God. I had not the opportunity of conversing personally with those restored to health in answer to prayer, but, at the closing service of the Convention, nearly one hundred bore testimony that they had been healed on the grounds, during the week, by scriptural means and without the use of medicine. Why should it be thought incredible that God should, in these days display his power in physical healing, when through the ages, he has revealed himself a Jehovah Rophi, the Healer? when these signs shall follow them that believe, "They shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover;" when there have been gifts of healing, breaking out at intervals, through all the Christian centuries, Mosheim declaring that they had not ceased in the fourteenth century, and, later still, such eminent saints as Luther, Baxter, Knox, Livingston, Wesley and Benson bearing testimony to the same power? Everywhere the Lord is awakening the attention of his people to the question; and even in cases where healing has not come in answer to prayer, there have been such rich spiritual manifestations attending the exercise of faith, that the Divine Father seems to have had some better thing for them than mere physical healing. The gift of faith for healing, and the prayer of faith that saves the sick, seem to be charismatic; but the believer who is unwilling to have his sickness removed by prayer, lest it should not be the Divine will, and yet continues the use of medicines, is quite as inconsistent as those Christians who first ignore the power of the Saviour, limit the Holy One of Israel by their unbelief, and then declare that the age of miracles is past, that the special powers were only needed in the beginning of Christianity!

REFORM STORY.

Holden with Cords.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "LITTLE PEOPLE," "A SUNNY LIFE," ETC.

Chapter XXIV—He Giveth His Beloved Sleep.

To my grandfather it seemed as if the murder of Morgan, revealing as by a lightning flash the hellish spirit of the institution, to which like many another honest Mason he had rendered a blind fealty only next to that he gave his God, was like a blow at his own vitals. He lost much of his old loquacity and cheerfulness, and as the cold weather set in he grew feebler but he said little—only once when he asked my forgiveness—my dear, blessed old grandfather!—for having persuaded me into the lodge.

"I never thought I was advising you for your harm, Leander," he said pathetically; "but you see I became a Mason when I was a young man, just before I sailed on my first long voyage. And the way it happened, Dr. Damon stopped at our house one day when mother was fixing me off. He was a great man in our part—Dr. Damon was. So mother bustled round and set out the decanter and sugar and hot water; and he stirred and sipped while she was telling how bad she felt to have me go off to the ends of the earth on a three years' voyage. I remember just how the Doctor looked. He was a handsome old gentleman with silver knee buckles and a great flowing wig, and just as stately and polite in his way of speaking, especially to women, as if he had been brought up at Court. 'Madam,' said he, 'your son ought to become a Freemason. I may say that I have heard of numerous well attested cases where inability to give the Masonic sign has cost a man his life. But I would not wish to be understood as referring entirely to its advantages in times of peril. Admirably as you have trained your son he needs the moral safeguard which joining such an institution will throw about him; and I trust, my dear Madam, that you will use all your maternal influence to induce him to take this step before he sails.' Well, mother—poor dear soul—believed what Dr. Damon said. Why shouldn't she? And so after he had gone she pondered it over for awhile, and then she said to me, 'Well, David, my son, perhaps you had better do as the Doctor says. It is because sailors are subject to such dreadful temptations that I worry about you so. There is nothing in the world that I want so much as to see you a Christian, for then no matter what happened to you, if you were shipwrecked or taken by pirates, I should know you were all right for the other world. Next to that I want to see you possessed of principles so strong that they will resist all temptation. A young man can have these and not be a Christian, but he can't have them and be far from the kingdom. So if becoming a Mason will help you to be more steady and moral and upright, why I want you to join them.' That was enough for me. I thought a good deal of my mother. Well, when I come to join, it was all as different as could be from what I expected. The oaths and penalties shocked me, but the charges and lectures all had such a good moral and religious sound to them that they helped to quiet my mind a good deal, and I never let mother know that I wasn't perfectly satisfied with it. When I came back from my first voyage she was dead. I only stayed at home a few weeks and then I was off again. It was on my second voyage that I experienced religion,—you've heard me tell about it, Leander. It was one awful night when a typhoon had struck our ship, and every man of us seemed booked for destruction. I kept thinking of mother, and how unfit I was to join her in the other world. I could see her just as she used to look going about her work and singing, 'When I survey the wondrous cross.' Why in all that awful noise of wind and water, and the crash of falling masts and parting timbers, I could seem to hear her voice, and it was just like an angel's telling me to repent of my sins and flee to Christ for refuge. Masonry didn't help me much then. It was Christ and Christ alone that I wanted.

Well, of course between my voyages there wasn't much time to attend the lodge, and when I give up the sea and settled down to a landsman's life I had got out of the way of going at all. But I reverenced the institution. I thought it must be good and according to the Bible, or else ministers and deacons wouldn't uphold and support it. My objections to the ceremonies and obligations I reasoned away,—you know how, Leander—till I really saw nothing in them inconsistent with my Christian profession. I thought it was a divine institution that could neither do nor teach anything wrong, till the murder of Morgan opened my eyes. Mark Stedman told me no news. I was already convinced in my own mind that Morgan had been killed, but I fought against the conviction, I wasn't willing to acknowledge it, till Deacon Brown in private conversation with me justified his murder,—only the day before Mark came home. Then I knew that the whole system was of him who was a murderer from the beginning. God deliver me from the stain of blood-guiltiness in this matter."

My grandfather leaned back exhausted in his chair, and I realized with sudden pain how pale and feeble he had grown.

Now one word with that large and respectable class of readers who "can't believe that Masonry is such a very bad thing after all when so many good men belong to it." It is true there are good men in the Masonic order. Remembering my grandfather's spotless life, his spirit of universal kindliness to all created things, his humble conscientious performance of every known duty, God forbid that I should deny it. But if we once admit the sophism that a system must be good because good men support it, where will it land us? Shall I tell you where, dear intelligent Christian reader? Into the days when so many good people believed religiously in hanging witches, and if pressed hard for a reason for the faith that was in them could have given chapter and verse in support of their sanguinary creed with refreshing promptitude; into the days when good Christian judges believed that the prison, the scourge, and the pillory were means of grace for enlightening the blind consciences of heretic Quakers; into the days when so many good people North and South upheld the system of human slavery, and wished reformers would stop all this disagreeable agitation, all this unpleasant talk about "coining the heart's blood of the oppressed;—it was so much better to let disagreeable subjects alone!" O my Christian brother, O my Christian sister, shame not the thinking mind and noble heart God has given you by any such fallacious reasoning! Accept like honest men and women this one square issue. Either Masonry is right or it is wrong. Either it is a false religion or the true one—a worship of God or a worship of devils. Is indifference to it compatible with loyalty to Christ? Can you be truly his yet care not whether he reigns over the world or anti-Christ? There are good men in the lodge, poor, hood-winked, cable-towed victims, Sampson-like shorn of their strength, and made to grind in the prison house of a secret oath bound organization. But these good men would come out of it by scores and by hundreds, walking open-eyed and unfettered in the full strength of their Christian manhood, if you bore your faithful testimony against it; if you refuse to fellowship Masonry in your churches or tolerate Masonic pastors in your pulpits.

Which reminds me that I have another word to say to a certain class of Christian ministers "who never were Masons, and don't believe in secret societies."

"My dear sir, I am glad to know that you have such decided views of the evils of secretism. Of course you sometimes preach on this subject from the pulpit?"

"O, no. In fact it wouldn't do. I have two or three Masons in my church, and quite a sprinkling of Odd-fellows, and other secret society men, and I should only stir up a rumpus and perhaps split the church. Besides I am set to preach the gospel, not Masonry or Anti-masonry.

"But Christ preached against the corrupt doctrines of the scribes and Pharisees. St. Paul preached against idolatry, Luther against the sale of indulgences. Didn't Christ and Paul and Luther preach the gospel? And you yourself, if I am not greatly mistaken have been known to allude more than once in your pulpit discourses to the sin of intemperance."

"Ah, well, that is a safe subject. It can't stir up strife nor hurt my influence as a public discussion of Masonry would be sure to do. A pastor must be careful not to give unnecessary offence, and so hurt the cause of Christ. I trust you understand me."

"My dear sir, I understand you perfectly. A certain old Hebrew prophet and reformer who was never afraid of hurting his influence by denouncing popular sins, has well described what the cowardly, time-serving pastor, too fearful of his bread and butter interests to wage any warfare against those same unpopular sins does not do. 'Ye have not gone up into the gaps, neither made up the hedge for the house of Israel to stand in the battle in the day of the Lord.' Shame on such hireling shepherds 'who daub the walls of Zion with untempered mortar!' It may be more tolerable in the day of Judgment for men like Elder Cushing who, blinded by their fanatical zeal for the lodge, committed the unholy sin of Cain, than for you who acknowledge Masonry to be an evil yet will not lift up your voice when you see the sword coming."

Mark Stedman, since his renunciation of the lodge, had gone contentedly back to the most common drudgery of the farm, but that strange peace and joy which he had so vainly sought in the puerile traditions of men overflowed his soul like a river when all the windows of heaven are opened, and bank and dyke are powerless to keep in the swelling waters. And it was no surprise to us when a proposal came to him to preach. Mark after thinking and praying over it for one whole day as he chopped the wood and fed the cattle, chose his life work—to be a poor circuit preacher not always knowing where his daily bread should come from; and only sure of two things, poverty and the contempt of the world, on all whose honors and preferments he was now turning his back.

But poor Rachel seemed to profit but little from the spiritual help Mark was so eager to proffer her. There sometimes are souls that in their vain struggles after spiritual light and liberty are like birds that fly into a room and beat blindly against the windows when all the while the door stands open. The kindest endeavors to help them find their way out only adds to their bewilderment.

I have already mentioned that a peculiar attachment existed between my grandfather and Rachel. One day she was sitting by his side. His great print Bible lay open on his knee, but he was not reading. With spectacles pushed back he was gazing fondly on the tiny six weeks' old who represented his name and line in the fourth generation but whose advent I have hitherto neglected to chronicle.

"I don't know, Rachel, as you ought to have given him my name;" he said finally. "David is so old-fashioned."

"I don't care for that," answered Rachel, promptly. "I want my boy to bear the name of a good man and grow up like him. And I always fancied David. There is something so strong and brave in the sound. Who knows what Goliath my boy may have to fight when he grows up."

"That is true," said my grandfather gently.

"And I want to train him right," continued Rachel. "I am afraid I shall make mistakes. If I was only a Christian I should know how."

"But Rachel, why ain't you one?" asked my grandfather. "There is Mark now, I never saw anything like the boy. It almost seems as if he had seen the Lord face to face just to hear him get up and pray."

"Mark is so different from me. He could always understand and enjoy things in books that I never could. And it is just so in religion. When he talks to me I feel as though he was standing on a ladder of sunbeams and calling to me to come up. I see no earthly way of getting to the top. Now Leander and I would understand each other better I think, but there is another thing. When he went to the lodge that seemed to shut us off from talking about religion to each other. It seemed as if he was seeking salvation one way and I another. So the wall kept growing higher. I've seen the same thing in other women. They go to the prayer meeting and their husbands go to the lodge. How can they sit down together and talk of their spiritual interests? But I don't want to blame Leander; he never meant to make it any harder for me. And if I had been the right sort of woman I never should have let such a little thing hinder me. But it must be I am not one of the elect. If I was I should have been a Christian before this."

And poor Rachel, who felt that Mark's call to the ministry was only another proof that the same inscrutable will, which had made him a chosen vessel of grace, had only doomed her to be an heir of destruction, sighed as if the end of the matter was reached.

"Rachel," answered my grandfather, seriously, "I am a poor, unprofitable servant, not fit to teach the way of life to anybody; but my Bible tells me that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin, and I believe what it says. Now the way I feel about Mark is that the Lord is separating him to a special work, and that is why he is filling him so full of grace beforehand. He'll need it all before he gets through. But the free gift is for you and me just as much as for Mark. God makes his sun and rain to come down as freely on a blade of grass as on the tallest oak. And so I take this gift—this unspeakable gift, just as I take my daily bread without asking any questions whether I'm elected or not. I do as David did. I take the cup of salvation and call on the name of the Lord. O it's just wonderful, this free gift to poor sinners like you and me, Rachel!"

Rachel had listened with a new light dawning in her eyes which finally spread all over her face like the sun new risen.

"I'll try your way," she said slowly. "Somehow it seems common sense. I can understand it."

And then she put on her shawl and bonnet, kissed my grandfather and tripped home. But that night she sang snatches of hymns over her baby's cradle, she sang when she was getting tea and moulding biscuit; and the light did not leave her face. It never has left it, it never will; for it was the peace which passeth all understanding.

In the hours of the early morning between two and three there came a knock at our door. It was Joe.

"Come over, quick, Leander," he said, "Grandfather is dying!"

Quickly as Rachel and I obeyed the summons Joe's words were all too true. The shadowing presence of the dark angel had gone before us and filled all the hushed silent room as we entered it.

He lay breathing heavily, but smiled on us both, though it was on Rachel that his eyes slowly filming over with the mist of death, rested with the tenderest, longest gaze.

His lips moved as she knelt weeping by the bedside, and we just caught the low accents—Huldah. It was the name borne by the beloved wife of his youth, and in that hour of near reunion, with the shores of time fading away, and all the eternal realities of the unseen world ready to burst on his vision, he blended the sight of one with the memory of the other.

Joe had gone for the doctor. But his face when he came inspired us with no hope. He asked a few questions, then took a seat in silence as powerless as any of us in the dread presence of death.

The sun was rising when my grandfather passed away. He had been lying very quiet. Then all at once a strange rapt look came into his face. Who did he see, in that last solemn moment when the veil was rending which hid all that wonder of gold and jasper and emerald, of white-robed multitudes, and harping choirs from his view? "Who shall separate us? Who shall separate us?" he whispered. And then a few deep breaths, and my grandfather was where in truth nothing should or could separate him from his Lord and Saviour. No lodge with its man-made traditions, its false worship, its anti-Christian rites, to come between and make his love wax cold. As a bird from the snare of the fowler he had escaped—into the immortal air of heaven.

"Leander," said Mark, as we stood looking sadly down on the dear familiar face settled to it last long sleep, "I can't help feeling glad that he is now out of the reach of slander and persecution. The lodge would no more have spared his gray hairs, after he had renounced it, than it will spare us. But we are young and strong for the conflict, while he was old and feeble, and it would have broken his heart."

I could not speak for tears, but I knew that Mark was right. My grandfather had been taken from the warfare that was even then beginning; a slow, insiduous wearing warfare—that would only end when we laid our armor down forever.

Another Masonic Commentator.

BY H. H. HINMAN.

"The Key Stone of the Masonic Arch: A commentary on the laws and principles of ancient Freemasonry, by Chas. Scott, A. M., P. G. H. P., P. I. M., K. T., etc., etc., Jackson, Miss.," is the title of a work profusely recommended by many Grand Masters, including Rob. Morris, who says he learned his Masonry in Mississippi. The author claims Masonry is true religion, and all its symbols as so many types of the Christian religion. He seems especially anxious to have it established on a historial basis. He says that "Ancient Craft Masonry originated at the building of Solomon's Temple." "The degrees purport to be founded in the wisdom of Solomon, king of Israel, Hiram, king of Tyre, and Hiram, the son of the widow. * * * If they did not originate with these persons then the statements contained in our ritual are false, and the whole system, as revealed, a vile imposition on the credulity of men."—Page 18. Sage conclusion! A Daniel come to judgment! But A. G. Mackey, Daniel Sickels and Thos. K. Parvin affirm that this is not true, and that the Masonic story is only a legend, copied from the ancient mysteries, while the Grand Lodge of Illinois says the Master's degree was not manufactured till about the year 1721. Truly it is "a vile imposition on the credulity of men."

Our author says that Hiram Abiff was a type of Christ, and that he is the mediator of Masons. He says: "As the freed Mason enjoys in our solemn assemblies the symbolic presence of Hiram, the builder, and in all parts of the lodge beholds the unmistakable emblems of his being a mediator of the craft, so in God's holy church is the son of glory ever present, a living stone of singular beauty, thrown away among the rubbish, but at length found and erected to be a chief corner stone, etc. (Page 247.) He especially relies on Masonry to prove the doctrine of the resurrection. He says, "If there be no resurrection then the craft is under the law." (Page 281.) Again he says, "While the third degree met the wants of the workmen, the person in whom all their hopes centered, and through whose merits they were raised to that degree, was himself a beautiful emblem of the Messiah." (Page 285.) Again, "The great and chief design that was drawn on the Masonic trestle board was the design of atonement; without which the original covenant which was made by our Grand Masters would have been made in vain, and the knowledge of the mysteries forever lost. (page 293).

The remarkable feature of this author is that he makes the Master's word to be not simply the name of God, but the gift of the Holy Spirit, and the earnest of their inheritance in heaven. "In all the secret societies," says he, "there are certain words adopted for the purpose of distinguishing their members from the rest of the world. The words which are used in Masonic intercourse were chosen on account of their Spiritual references. "The word which is translated "pledge" in the Scripture is in the Greek arrabone (Mah-hah-bone). All who can produce this arrabone (Mah-hah-bone)—this pledge, this word, at the great day, shall be invested with the word of eternal life." (pp. 313, 315.) What a pity it is that Masons are forbidden to say this word aloud! How soon would all mankind be saved if they could only shout Mah-hah-bone from the house tops.

Again he says: "A Master Mason represents a raised and sanctified being. The deep mysteries lying in the forms and ceremonies embrace a powerful illustration of the earlier state of man, and that later state, when he shall stand in the presence of God divested of all the impurities of nature, a new and holy creature, redeemed by the costly blood of the Supreme Master." (pp. 350, 357).

We commend this especially to our holiness brethren who think that when men profess entire sanctification they ought to get out of the lodge, and are disposed to blame several Masons who profess holiness and still hold on to Hiram as a mediator.

Wisconsin State Meeting.

Rev. Enos Collins, president of the Wisconsin State Association writes asking the friends in that State to bestir themselves in preparation for their annual Convention which it is proposed to hold November 21st, but the place is not yet fixed. Friends who desire the meeting will please write immediately to Bro. Collins at Coloma, Waushara county. There are a number of good points in the State where the reform has a strong constituency enough to sustain and welcome. Let there be a little energetic canvassing so that the notice can be given in the next Cynosure. Let Wisconsin be roused for the best State meeting she has ever held. Act promptly and write directly to Elder E. Collins, Coloma, Wis.

Is Kansas Ready?

Olathe, Kan., Oct. 9, 1882.

Editor Cynosure:

My Dear Brother:—I see a notice in the last Cynosure from Rev. P. F. Feemster in regard to raising the $500 in Kansas for a good lecturer the coming year. He says the proposition is more than met. If so, I am ready on my part. My offer was to give $50 if $450 could be raised. Now, if that offer is met, let us have a lecturer at once and go to work. It is time now we had a man in the field. If the offer is not yet met it ought to be. There is much to do, and the time is short. I know of no way to meet the secret lodge question but to organize, agitate, discuss. Bring the whole question before the public. This cannot be done without money and organization. We must bring all our powers into order and form and then press the question. We must finally vote it down and out. We are organized in this city and county, and are meeting every two weeks in the Wesleyan church, in Olathe. The lodges are thoroughly organized too. They have some eight or ten intrenchments. They have organized the "Knights of Labor" in the last three months, and now they number over 200 names. So you see all of their forces are at work. Hence, we must needs work, or we shall not be guiltless if the truth suffers.

Yours for truth,
H. Curtis.

In 1881 there were expended in the United Kingdom, for alcoholic drinks, $635,000,000, an increase of $24,000,000 over the previous year. In ten years have been expended more than $7,000,000,000. The indirect costs and losses are believed, by Mr. William Hoyle, the great authority on this subject, to be nearly as much in addition. In the last 25 years, the resulting evils—pauperism, lunacy, and crime—have gained ground in spite of all opposing agencies.

NEW ENGLAND.

THE NEW ENGLAND BOARD of the National Christian Association has it headquarters at No. 8 Portland St., Worcester, Mass. A full supply of books and tracts constantly on hand. Orders promptly filled. Correspondence solicited. E. D. Bailey, N. E. Sec.

—Mr. S. A. Pratt, who is always finding some good way of scattering facts, has had printed a quantity of slips containing the letter of Dr. Howard Crosby to the Batavia convention.

—Mr. Spaulding is already in N. H., aiding about the convention, while Rev. H. T. Cheever and the N. E. Secretary start for there tomorrow (Tuesday,) hoping and praying for a great convention.

—Connecticut friends are moving slowly about their State convention. The delay is not through neglect but for temporary reasons. They desire to make it successful and hence are not rushing headlong into it.

—Brother Zeba Smith of Montpelier, Vt. writes: "The reform is what I delight in. I am with you in heart in this work. I am glad to read what you have done and are doing to spread light and truth in New England and that the Lord is blessing you and those other dear brethern who are laboring in the Lord. I hope you will live to see Masonry and all other secret societies done away with in our country."

—A new friend from Maine writes: "I like the platform that the American party has got up. Everything tends to reform. I abhor all secret societies."

—The responses to the appeal of the N. E. Board for pledges have commenced to come in. The promptness of some friends is certainly inspiring.

Congregationalists as a Sect.

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 9th, 1882.

Out of sympathy for the burden-bearing Cynosure, I have almost concluded to hold my peace about sectarianism. There is evidently such a degree of sensitiveness on the subject that the poor Cynosure, which has to suffer, whoever is to blame, needs to push chiefly the issue Christ or anti-Christ, unburdened with other issues. By the way, it is commonly supposed that reformers belong to the order of pachyderms, because of the thickness of their skin, but a close inspection reveals the fact that even they have tender spots where they must be touched lightly and when hurt no animal can scream louder! Since printing my thoughts on the subject of denominationalism, I have heard from various quarters facts and arguments which proved, if they prove anything, that there is no such thing in this country as sectarianism. We are all mistaken about it. One brother has proven to me that the Baptists are not sectarian, another that the Methodists surely are not, and now a brother has sent me arguments from a Congregational source which prove conclusively that Congregationalists are not sectarian; another has shown beyond a peradventure that the Disciples are not, while I have employed the same arguments used by these brethren and have demonstrated that the Presbyterians are not, ergo there is no sectarianism in the country. With this conclusion it is manifest that all our writings on that subject are useless. It is needless for me to add, however, that I am only strengthened in my conviction that we are guilty of a grievous error in dividing ourselves into sects—an error which must be corrected if we would see the complete reign of Christ hastening on.

My pen touches upon this subject this morning by the request of a venerable brother who asks for facts and arguments on the question whether the Congregationalists are sectarian or not. The source of the question, the important reasons for asking it just now, and the conviction that my answer will not provoke irritation and needless discussion, lead me to state my convictions publicly as requested, hoping to aid the brother in the solution of an important question and hoping also to contribute a mite toward the general discussion by which the truth will become manifest.

Of the Baptists, Presbyterians, (all branches) Methodists, (all branches) Freewill Baptists, Disciples, Congregationalists, and some others, it may be said, in general, that they have taught with great unanimity the vital doctrines of the Gospel—the Trinity, the Inspiration of the Scriptures, the Atonement, Regeneration, Future Rewards and Punishments and Christian morals, including Sabbath observance. They have separated on the ordinances and church government, both of which are temporalities, since in heaven we shall neither be baptized in water, nor be governed by synods and conferences.

Those, who are "endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace," hold (1) that they only are entitled to church-membership who apprehend reasonably well the vital doctrines, who give evidence of being born again and whose morals are exemplary; (2) that whereas an honest difference of opinion exists concerning the administration of the ordinances (baptism and the Lord's supper,)each local church should act according to its own convictions and is the only ecclesiastical body authorized to determine the question; but a difference of method should not deter neighboring churches from Christian fellowship, and co-operation in missionary enterprises; (3) that all local churches are independent, self-governing bodies, not subject to the government or control of synods or conferences and that all ecclesiastical bodies which assume governmental control are extra-scriptural and therefore usurpers; (4) that all Christian bodies besides the local church should exist only to promote missionary enterprise or for mutual helpfulness, and that they should be supported by the churches only so far as their usefulness commends itself; (5) that all missionary enterprises should be conducted with a view to preaching Christ and not to the promotion of sectarian or denominational ends, whereby discord results; (6) that existing customs violate both the spirit and letter of these principles and render strife and discord inevitable.

I am not authorized to speak for others but the foregoing propositions embody the principle considerations on the subject, as held by me. There is much to be said in praise of the good done by all the denominations in the preaching of the Gospel, but their position on the subject of divisions or schisms is untenable and reprehensible. Now I am asked to show in what respect the Congregationalists are blameable, if at all. It may be affirmed of them as of others that everybody can see their fault except themselves.

(1.) When a man is converted he becomes a Christian, when he joins the church he is called something else,—Methodist, Baptist or Congregationalist. The signification of this is that he has now joined a sect. Before, he knew no fellowship but the fellowship of the Spirit, now he feels a denominational bond drawing him toward a certain class of Christians and away from certain other classes. While many local churches have avoided the error of adopting sectarian names the denomination as such has erred in this respect.

(2.) In theory the Congregationalists originally held to the independence of the local church, but their practice for many years has been strangely divergent from the theory. (a) They have, in many cases, used persistent and strenuous endeavors to prevail upon churches holding independent positions to submit to the denominational yoke, urging that the ecclesiastical union of churches was a duty and that independence was selfish. (b) The National Council was organized under the cry "We are a denomination." A few years ago that phrase was greeted in associational meetings with applause whenever used by the speakers (c.) Much of the money raised for missionary purposes is raised by an appeal to denominational pride, showing that the spirit of sectarianism has become of sufficient monetary value to avail in appeals for money. (d) It is not the general usage (there may be exceptional cases) to aid struggling churches unless those churches have submitted to the control of the denomination. This is certainly significant. If the prime object were to aid Christian churches without reference to denominational advantage, those churches which persist in independence would receive aid. The claim is that if they render aid they aught to have some control, but this claim discredits the very idea of independence and is a virtual concession that independence is good only as a theory while practically the only guarantee of safety is in this fact of ecclesiastical control. If the object be not to secure denominational advantage, why should not those independent churches in the vicinity of Berea College, for example, be freely aided in their needs, without requiring as a sine qua non the abandonment of their independence and submission to the denomination? The very effort made to bring them into the denomination shows that being in is something different from being out. The difference is in the one position they are non-sectarian, holding equal fellowship with all God's people, while in the other they become sectarian. (3.) The Congregational churches in New England manifest, at this time, as much denominational zeal as any of the other sects. The papers and pulpits land the spirit and cherish it as condusive to growth, while the associations offer no rebuke but vie with other agencies in promoting the same feeling. It is argued that the denomination has fallen behind the other denominations numerically chiefly for want of party spirit, and hence the new cry is "We are a denomination."

(4.) In conversation with ministers and intelligent laymen on the subject, they argue that the denominational spirit is useful in stimulating healthy (?) rivalry among the churches. This kind of argument seems to be in general use and is not being opposed by any leading Congregationalist in New England to my knowledge.

(5.) The Congregationalists, while having theories admirably adapted to the promotion of union, are making no effort in that direction. It does not seem to me that we can exempt them from the charge of sectarianism, in view of all the facts given. These things are not said in any spirit of hostility, nor yet for the purpose of wholesale denunciation, but solely for the discovery of their position on the important question of the unity of God's people.

It has occurred to me that it might aid the solution of the question under discussion to ask, What changes or charges would be necessary in the Congregational church to render it undenominational and unsectarian? (1.) The name should be changed to simply Christian Churches or Church of Christ. Where there are several such in a place their local appellation might be first, second, etc., or they might be called by the location. In this respect the Disciple or "Christian" churches are without fault and have set an example worthy of imitation.

(4.) The independence of the local churches should be fully recognized and the right be inviolate. The recent attempts at centralization should be abandoned and the church return to its mission of evangelizing the world.

(3.) Christian unity should become a principle constantly advocated and unremittingly practiced. No effort should be made to plant Congregational churches but every possible effort should be put forth to unite the people of new settlements in one Christian church, which recognizes no head but Christ himself.

(4.) The utmost liberty should be allowed such churches in the administration of the ordinances and the mode of government. If a church believes it to be its duty to allow none but its own members at its table, suffer it that liberty; if it is governed in its discipline by presbyters, do not interfere with it. It is not necessary to Christian union that there should be perfect uniformity in those things which apply only to the local church. These churches should be taught that the basis of their fellowship is not uniformity of outward forms, but Christ in the heart. Such a position on the part of any considerable number of churches would command the attention and respect of the people and shame the sectarian spirit now prevailing.

But, to me, the gravest objection to all the churches is that they have so far ceased to teach true godliness and are so far allied with the world. A reformation must take place in all the churches or we shall have no churches worth uniting. The man who at this time is defending the church when he ought to "Cry aloud and spare not" is making a serious mistake. The New England churches have adopted, one at a time, Christmas, Easter and Lent, they are now advocating that our annual fast day be put on "Good Friday" and last year the city schools of Worcester made "St. Patrick's day" a holiday. In all this the Catholics have yielded not an inch of ground but the Protestants have been walking over to the ritualistic churches, unmindful of the pit from whence they were digged. The worship in our large churches is almost as formal and unspiritual as that of the ritualistic churches, while revivals are few, and now the great American Board has been compelled to notice these facts because its treasury is suffering. Men who suppose that the sustaining of their denominations is the great business of life are mistaken. Let us pray that God will raise up men who care nothing for party ties but everything for Christ and his Kingdom. E. D. Bailey.

REFORM NEWS.

Bro. Feemster's Kansas Work.

RUSSELL COUNTY.

Kennebec, Kan., Oct. 9, 1882.

Dear Cynosure:—It is with pleasure that I am able to report having seen and heard an Anti-masonic lecturer. Rev. Paul S. Feemster came to this place late Saturday, Sept. 30th. Sabbath morning he preached from Psa. 104:34: "My meditation of him shall be sweet: I will be glad in the Lord." His sermon was very interesting and instructive. In the the evening he spoke on "The religion of the lodge compared with the Christian religion." His arguments were plain and powerful, and exceedingly interesting, which received the closest attention. I would to God every lodge-going professing Christian in Kansas could have heard him. It was the best thing I ever heard on the subject. I can cheerfully recommend Bro. Feemster to the friends in Kansas. Give him a call, and then do all in your power to get everybody to hear him. You will be richly rewarded.

On Monday evening he was to lecture on the educating power of the lodge, and show what it is training men to do. But for some cause or other there were but few out, and consequently no lecture. This I sadly regret; however, I trust good was accomplished. The people are generally indifferent on this subject.

For my part, I feel a greater interest in the cause than ever before.

This part of Kansas has suffered very much from the severe drouth. Corn, potatoes, and many other things are almost an entire failure. Of late we have been blest with delightful showers. Pasturage begins to look green, and fall grain is growing rapidly.

Respectfully, R. B. Landon.

RILEY COUNTY.

Manhattan, Kan., Oct. 11, 1882.

Editor Cynosure:—Rev. P. S. Feemster has been here and has gone. He preached Sabbath morning, the 8th, for Rev. Mr. Gale, pastor of the Baptist church, and in the evening in the same church, on the religion of the lodge compared with the religion of the Bible. I think he demonstrated clearly that Masonry was a religion and claimed to purify and save men without Christ, but wofully different from the Christian religion.

Monday evening he lectured in the Congregational church on the educating power of the lodge over its members. Tuesday evening in the Baptist church, on the power of the lodge in church and state. We had very good congregations considering rain, mud and darkness. Everything was quiet, and good attention given. A number have expressed to me their favorable opinion of the sermon and lectures and unfavorable opinion of the lodge. I think a good impression was made that will bring forth fruit. Bro. F. shows himself a true and devoted Christian, and carries the Christian spirit with him. Masons and lodge men generally took good care to be out of the way. Our trust, and hope for success is in God. H. S. Limbocker.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Reply to Rob. Morris.

DEAR SIR:—In a former letter, after briefly reviewing your "Monitor," and "Nature's Keys to Bible Truth," I expressed the suspicion your design in sending out the latter was to sow the seed of Freemasonry in the minds of Sabbath school children. I requested you to clear up the matter, if my suspicions were ill-founded. In your reply you have made no allusion to this matter; and as "cubic stones from the Masonic pavement" (with a tessellated border,) and stones from the late invented tomb of your mythical Hiram are not exactly "nature's keys," and are not specially fitted to unlock any obscure passage in the Bible; and as in the hands of a Masonic superintendent they may be used to awaken curiosity and draw the minds of the young towards the mysteries of the lodge, I suppose it fair to assume that such was your intention. You sell "Keys to Bible Truth," but you fold up in the parcel an advertisement of Masonic mysteries. The transaction, to say the least, savors strongly of Masonic art.

I also reproved you for offering to your fellowmen two religions, the one entirely formal with the promise of justification by Masonic rites and Masonic works, and the other spiritual, with justification by the grace of God through Christ, schemes entirely incompatible. This point you have not met directly.

1. You complain that I did not come to you privately, according to your views of 18th of Matthew. To this I reply that private offenses are to be dealt with in a private way. "If thy brother trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone." But you have committed no offense against me in particular. The offense of a professing Christian in practicing and advocating and propagating Freemasonry, is an offense against Christ and his church, against the government which God has instituted, and against mankind. Your offense, therefore, is a public one. You have yourself flaunted it in the face of the world; and there is, therefore, no wrong or unfitness, in my dealing with you in a public manner.

2. You allude to the time when, having been "assured" that it was all right, you put your conscience and your soul into the hands of poor fallible men like yourself, and swore to uphold constitutions and obey laws and edicts of which you knew absolutely nothing; to keep the secrets of Masonry and Masons although the welfare and the authority of the State might require you to disclose them. And you say that you "went forward with much confidence, and found that the explanation of every ceremony was moral, sensible and Scriptural." Your language seems to be guarded here. The ceremonies themselves may be immoral, foolish, unscriptural and wicked; but the "explanation" is all very "moral," and even "Scriptural." You find no warrant in Scripture for submitting to the hood-wink and cable-tow, or for appearing in the semi-nude state in which you allowed yourself to be led into the lodge, or for ambulating around the altar and "with the sun" as an act of worship. And then as to the oath itself; is that one of the "ceremonies?" And if so, where is the warrant in the Bible for you to take, or for the Worshipful Master to administer to you, an oath such as that above cited? Or where is the warrant for his administering to you an oath at all? The government which he represents, and to which you swear allegiance, is a government unauthorized of God. God has ordained three institutions for the welfare, government and salvation of this world—the family, the church and the state. Any other is sheer usurpation and rebellion against God. But whilst on the morality of the order and its ceremonies, (other readers will pardon the violence of the supposition,) what would be thought of your morality, or that of the church in which you are an officer, if, on receiving a member or installing a pastor, you should administer the following as part of the "covenant:" "Furthermore you solemnly promise and swear that you will not have illicit carnal intercourse with the wife, mother, sister or daughter of a member of this church, you knowing them to be such?" That part of your Masonic "covenant" shows the morality which Masonry teaches, and also the measure of confidence which Masons really have in one another!

3. Your rejection of the name of Christ in the lodge. You do confess your belief in the Lord Jesus, and your hope of salvation through his blood. But you confess that you ignore him in the lodge "because Freemasonry is more ancient than the Christian era, and because it is cosmopolitan." Now if these claims were true, I can see no reason here why the King of Kings and the Saviour of men should be denied or ignored. Lying "is more ancient than the Christian era," and also "cosmopolitan." But must the Son of God, and the only Mediator between God and men, be therefore put in obeyance before the author of lying? Or, are the Lord Jesus and his religion to be put in obeyance before the heathen mysteries, because those mysteries were practiced before the "Christian era?" The Saviour has said, "Whoso shall confess me"—not before my friend, but "before men"—"in this sinful and adulterous generation, him will I confess." "But whoso shall deny me, him will I also deny." Why—O why, if you believe in and accept Jesus as your Saviour, do you confess him only before his friends, but deny him before his enemies? Do you think that he will not regard it? But as to the age of Freemasonry, you have no warrant in history for the antiquity you ascribe to it, unless you acknowledge its identity with the heathen mysteries, from which speculative Masonry is undoubtedly borrowed.

4. As if to make up for the dishonor done to Christ by the rejection of his name, you say that "sometimes the Divine Man is brought in as an exemplar of virtue," and that in a convention of seven lodges in the city of Smyrna you made this point with your utmost force, and all present, Mohammedans, Jews, Greeks, Arabs, Turks and Christians applauded. This, Dr. Morris, as a remarkable admission; and first, it is not quite certain whom those Masonic Jews, Greeks, Turks and Arabs supposed to be intended by the "Divine Man." In the legends of the Orient, from which Freemasonry is chiefly taken, Bacchus, Adonis and Hiram Abiff have all figured in that character. But supposing that they all understood you as referring to Jesus Christ of the New Testament, it was not as a Saviour, and the only Saviour of sinful men, but simply as "an exemplar of virtue" that you hold him up to their view. You had before you there seven lodges of your fellowmen, all in utter darkness as to the way of salvation for the soul, and all with you pressing on to the judgment seat of Christ. You had their confidence, for they had met for the very purpose of doing you honor. Had you had the spirit of Paul or Luther, or of many a more weak and humble believer whose heart had been touched by the grace of God, what an opportunity there was for you to have confessed yourself a disciple of Christ and to have pointed those ignorant men to the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world. But no. There you stood before those enemies of the truth of God, taking their side in the great controversy about religion, denying the Lord Jesus as a Saviour, but offering or commending him as an "exemplar of virtue." To your American lodges you have done for Hiram Abiff just what you did in Smyrna before Jews, Greeks, Turks and Arabs for the Son of God, and in terms just as lofty. Thus in your Monitor, page 61, referring to the legend, you say, "It exemplifies an instance of virtue seldom equalled and never excelled in the history of man,"—putting Christ, the Saviour, and Hiram Abiff on the same level! I am inclined to dwell on this painful record which you have made of yourself, but I forbear. Peter, when in great danger as he supposed one night, denied his Master. But he did not justify and defend the denial for ten years after.

But you go on to say "When Freemasons desire to introduce Jesus Christ in his fullness into Masonry, we go into the commandery." That is, after you have gone through with seven degrees of heathen Masonry, and have promised to adhere to it all, you crown the whole, as you imagine, with a degree of Christian Masonry—putting Christ and Belial together. On this, I remark that Mackey says the Commandery "is no part of universal Masonry," but a mere side-show, and your own words imply as much. For you say "Freemasonry is cosmopolitan," and the religion of Masonry is "a religion in which all men agree." But be this as it may, however interesting to you may be the chamber of reflection with its skull and bones, the three years pilgrimage and warfare, the delta and the transparency of the ascension, and drinking wine from the human skull, with the horrid and blasphemous oath connected therewith, the Christ of the commandery is not the Christ of the Bible. It is not the Christ who said "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden," and "he that hath no money come." It is not the Christ who said, "To the poor the gospel is preached," and "in secret have I said nothing," but a false Christ foretold in Matt. 24, when the Saviour says: "For there shall arise false Christs, in so much that if it were possible they shall deceive even the elect, wherefore, if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert, go not forth, behold, he is in the secret chambers, believe it not." And you know very well that of the nine thousand beer-guzzling Knight Templars who gathered at Chicago two years ago not one in five made any pretentions to a personal interest in the Lord Jesus.

Having spoken of Adams, Seward and others, as "taking up other hobbies and seeking political power by other methods," you pass on to speak of Charles G. Finney and David Bernard as "renegades." I cannot credit you with ignorance or prejudice here. There is a degree of impudence in the application of such a term to such men for which corruptness of moral principles alone can account. According to such a use of language, Saul of Tarsus, after his conversion, was a "renegade," and if a man forsake the faith of a Moslem and becomes a Christian, he is a "renegade." Washington, when he renounced the government of George III., was a "renegade." And if a man joins a band of robbers, promising to stand by them, but coming under the influence of the gospel is lead to repentance, he is a "renegade." Mr. Finney says he was "converted from Masonry to Christianity." And when I asked Mr. S. E. Starry, of Iowa, "How did you happen to leave the lodge?" he answered as with a shout of joy, "Why, I got converted." And when the Holy Ghost takes hold of a man it takes him out of Masonry, and takes the Masonry out of him." Yet if a man has promised to continue in idolatry or to stand by a band of robbers, and then repents, forsakes his sinful ways, and enters on a life of godliness, he has, to your mind, "betrayed faith," and committed a "monstrous sin." But you proceed and say that had you found a company of Masons whom you describe "engaged in law-breaking and law-defying acts, you never could have gone out before the world and broken your sacred pledge;" but you would have covered their "law-breaking and law-defying" as the two sons of Noah covered the shame of their father. You would thus defy the law and disregard your civil oath; for you never could break your "sacred pledge" to the lodge. In your work on Masonic law (Monitor, page 140), you seem to have had this very case in mind when you wrote, "The covenant is irrevocable, no law of the land can affect it, no anathema of the church can weaken it." And you have shown here, not only the deep corruption of the institution you represent, but how deeply a man like yourself can be corrupted by it. I had much more to say on this point, but I forbear.

6. As to the falsehoods in Masonry, you say, "I have not found them." If my letter were not so long, I would point out a score or more of these; such as, that the Apostle John was a "patron of Masonry." But I will just refer to the words of the late Dr. Aydelotte, who, when asked why he renounced Masonry, replied: "Why, it is lie all over."

7. You finally refer to Salem Town, to whom you pay a short adoration, and say that with him you wish to make Masonry the handmaid of the Christian religion. I attributed this language to him from a dim recollection; but on turning to such of his writings as I happen to have, I find that he makes Masonry a religion, and presents it as a saving religion. I met this gentleman some thirty years ago, and confess that I found him a person of pleasing address, entertaining and instructive; withal a scholar, and, like you, an elder in the Presbyterian church. But in his writings on the subject he certainly teaches that Masonry is a saving religion; and you, in your Monitor, have done the same thing. Thus on p. 21–2 you teach the "Entered Apprentice" that he is to fit himself for the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens—not by coming to Christ and being sprinkled with his blood, but by works—breaking off the vices and superfluities of life with a gavel. On page 35 you make the lodge equal to the Christian church, when you say of it, "No institution was ever raised on a better principle or more solid foundation," and the same thing in a hymn composed by yourself, p. 332, when you speak of the Mason's home in the lodge as "The brightest scene that's found below"—brighter than the church of Christ, though illumined by his spirit and blessed with his favor. You certainly teach that the religion of Masonry is a saving religion, and by implication that Christ and his blood, or faith in him, are not necessary to salvation. You punish a man for passing counterfeit money. But Freemasonry is a counterfeit religion; the lodge is a counterfeit church, and its Christ is a counterfeit Christ; and with these men are cheated "out of their money and out of their character and out of their souls."

Dr. Morris, it is impossible for a man intelligently to embrace Masonry as taught by yourself, by Pike, Mackey, Sickels, and the great mass of Masonic teachers, and be a Christian at the same time. But just now I am disposed to look at you with an eye of charity, and say you are certainly deceived. But whether you are deceived as to the nature of Masonry or of Christianity I am unwilling to pronounce. It is difficult to conceive that a man of talent and learning like yourself should give forty years to the study of Masonry without knowing its character. But when I see that you are deceived as to the history and pretentions of the institution, and that you have taken and administered oaths thousands of times without ever once seriously inquiring into the nature of an oath, I dare not deny the possibility of your being deceived as to the whole thing. My fear is, however, that your personal Christian experience is a mere delusion.

My dear sir, eternity is real, and these things are not to be trifled with.

WARREN TAYLOR.

Sectarianism.

A sectarian is one of a sect, and sectarianism is devotion to a sect. Sectarianism is of two kinds, a right and a wrong kind. The right kind is where a person is devoted to a sect for the sake of the truth represented by that sect. The wrong kind is where a person is devoted to a sect for selfish ends or from party pride. The words "sectarian" or "sectarianism" are seldom used in the first sense above, but almost always in the last sense, and as a term of reproach.

Who are sectarians?

Our Lord Jesus Christ was one, for he would have no fellowship with any of the numerous sects of his day, but organized a new sect. Paul was one, for he passed by all other sects and united with "that sect everywhere spoken against." Luther was one, for he left the Church of Rome according to the prophetic call in Revelation, "Come out of her, my people," and he formed a new sect. These were sectarian leaders. The College Church of Wheaton is a sectarian church, for it inscribes upon its banner, "No fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness," and thus separates itself from all fellowship with churches united to lodgery. The Baptists are a sectarian denomination, for from the earliest Christian times they have held the truth against the errors of the Romish church. These are mentioned as illustrations, and many more might be mentioned, but these are sufficient. Even the N. C. A., working as it does for the advancement of one phase of the truth, is in spirit, although not in form, a sect. All these are sectarian in the right sense, and all are to be commended.

A few years ago a church member advised a young convert to unite with the Congregational denomination, as that denomination was the wealthiest in the place, and his business prospects would be materially improved thereby. That adviser was a sectarian in the bad sense, and worthy of censure.

Water and oil never will unite; no more will truth and error. A mixture of the two may be forced and all seem to be harmonious, but it will prove to be a grand delusion and snare; the pure water of truth will sink out of sight and the oil of error float on top. We find illustrations of this in the secret lodge where good men and bad men mingle; in the church which covers Freemasonry, and in the union church (so-called) where Methodists, Congregationalists, Baptists and what not are fenced in together (a sort of Barnum's happy family). Let some member assert his Christian manhood and speak his convictions, and at once an explosion follows. The truth is then set free, 'tis true, but how much better had it been if the truth had never been trammelled, for through the truth God's people are to be made one, and in no other way.

When truth meets error a separation or division follows, but when error has been vanquished, reunion and peace. The preaching of our reformers against lodgery has torn many a church asunder, and has separated us from a great portion of the Christian world, yet who among us doubts the ultimate triumph of our cause, and the reuniting of God's separate people on our side of the line. So it is with every struggle for the truth. The Anti-masonic cause seems to us of first importance just now. That is because objects near to us seem to be larger and of more importance than objects in the distance, and moral questions of this age seem to be of greater intrinsic value than moral questions of a past age. Anti-masonry, because we are in the midst of the struggle, assumes huge proportions, while other questions of equal or even greater importance (because the heat of the struggle has passed by) fade away into a misty cloud. And because this is so, some are disposed to underrate and even sneer at other issues, even to so far forget themselves as to call the contestants in such issues "sectarians," seemingly forgetting that they who live in glass houses should not throw stones, or that he who tosses a ball may have it rebound upon him.

Let us not forget that while many of our noble reformers have suffered much at the hands of Masonry, and may be called upon to suffer much more, so far at least the conflict has not been so costly in human sacrifice as some other issues not yet settled, but begun so long ago that the heat of the battle has passed away. Not a few articles in the creeds of the great denominations have paid the price of martyr's blood. They represent hard fought contests for the truth which are cherished in the memory of many of God's dear children. To ask these denominations to cast aside their laurels, to forget their triumphs, and to unite with a little band of reformers, who among themselves do not yet agree, is asking too much. Would any Anti-mason, after his cause has triumphed, yield his laurels at the asking? Then let him not demand of others what he himself would not yield under similar circumstances. ALBERT M. PAULL.

—Some people say, "Oh we know we are saved, because we are so happy." It is by no means a sure evidence, for joy may be carnal, unfounded, unspiritual. Certain Christians are afraid that they can not be in a saved state because they are not joyous, but are saved by faith and not by joy. I was struck with the remark of Ebenezer Erskine when he was dying, and some one said to him. "I hope you have now and then a blink to bear up your spirit under affliction;" he promptly replied, "I know more of words than of blinks;" that is to say, he had rather trust a promise of God than his own glimpses of heaven; and so would I. The word of God is a more sure testimony to the soul than all the raptures a man can feel. I would sooner walk in the dark, and hold hard to a promise of my God, than trust in the light of the brightest day that ever dawned. Precious as the fruit is, do not put the fruit where the root should be. Please to recollect that. Joy is not the root of grace in the soul; it is the fruit, and must not be put out of its proper position.—Spurgeon.

Obituary.

JOHN BOWMAN, father of Rachel Ulsh, was born Jan. 13th, 1793, married in 1815, died at the home of Benj. Ulsh, Silver Lake, Ind., Aug. 1st, 1882. Father Bowman lived a long quiet and amiable Christian life; for nearly half a century in meekness and steadfastness he walked with God in connection with the Baptist church. Fully equal if not superior to his surroundings in point of intelligence he seldom varied his deportment and hence his influence was permanent. He was a constant reader of the Bible and Christian Cynosure, and therefore was well prepared to vote the American ticket from first to the last. Father Bowman has gone to his rest as we believe fully prepared leaving us the testimony of a long life to encourage us to go on in the field of Christian work. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." S. L. COOK.

Died at his home near Poplar Hill, Kansas, April 28th, JOHN ZIEGLER, in his 48th year. He was born in Ohio, in 1834. His parents moved to Indiana, when he was four years old, He married Miss. C. E. Wilson in 1865. He removed to Kansas in 1879 with his family. He was opposed to intemperance and sin. He liked to read the Cynosure. He delighted to read the sermons to his family on Sabbath. He voted the American ticket once in Indiana and once in Kansas. His trust was ever in the Saviour, knowing he does what is best. He leaves a wife and three daughters to mourn his loss: But we feel that our loss is his gain. Our prayer is that God will bless you in your efforts. C. E. Z.

Mrs. MARGARET GRANT, mother of Mrs. Prof. Bailey, died peacefully at her home in Wheaton, Ill. Sept.——, ult., in her 76th year. She was born at Argyle, Scotland, and removed to this country with her parents when 14 years old. For twenty years she resided in Wheaton, whither she removed for the purpose of educating her children, six of whom are living of the eleven born to her. Mrs. Grants parents were Presbyterians, and she was trained in the earnest and sturdy faith of that denomination, nor was the effect of that training lost either upon her or her children. For years confined by feeble health to her home yet her deep and constant piety was always an encouragement to other Christians who regularly enjoyed the blessings of public worship. She was in early and middle life a great reader, especially of history, and by this means became unusually intelligent, instructing her children, and finally placing them in a situation to secure a liberal education; this plan was somewhat disarranged when her three sons answered the call of their country during the war. Her death was calm and triumphant; longing for the presence of her God, she prayed that her Saviour would take her to himself, since her work here seemed to be done.

I cannot be satisfied with any small views of Jesus. He has revealed himself to me in such large proportions that small views of him are impossible. I have come to see that the Bible is a book—the book—for the soul. It is not a book calculated for the earth-bound, but for the heaven-bound; and to heaven I am bound. It is a journey sooner or later I must take. My heart rejoices at the thought. I contemplate with pleasure the proofs I am internally getting that the light and the love of the heavens are becoming mine.—Morning Watches.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1882.

SECTARIANISM.—We print two strong articles in this number on the above subject. They are earnest, and our readers will be interested in them. But for reasons suggested by one of the writers (Prof. Bailey,) we must diminish if not discontinue the discussion. Two things in the matter are very obvious:

1st, that the names Presbyterian, Baptist, Congregationalist, Methodist, etc., must certainly pass away before Christ comes, and his prayer, "That they all may be one," is answered.

2d. That to form a new sect, whose creed is that there shall be no sect, though often attempted, has never tended to unite God's people.

Our idea of Christian union in this: Christ's church is as if wrecked and floating in fragments; if we all swim for the Rock, we shall be united when we get there. Ten thousand people in a tangle on a common, will all move in harmony if they start toward the same point of compass. We must put off all sectarianism ourselves, oppose all that opposes Christ; and hail as brothers all who manifest a living faith in him.

Theological Apostacy.

On the 20th of September last, Dr. Newman Smyth, who was rejected by the Board of Visitors as a professor in Andover Theological Seminary, has been installed pastor of the First Church of Christ (late Dr. Bacon's) in New Haven. He read a statement of his belief to the ordaining council in which he said: "The day of judgment for the individual is his confirmed self determination in good or evil." Answering questions he said: "Revelation in the word of God is progressive." "Conversion is bringing the person out of this inner wrongness back into rightness." "I do not think we have definite Scriptural authority for such a belief, [probation after death] unless we construe with that liberality with which we construe other passages," etc.

Question. "Are there any persons whose probation is necessarily not decisive at the end of this life?" Ans. "Yes; infants, idiots, some heathen, some of the spirits to whom Jesus preached in prison." These are specimens of his utterances. The council was large and the vote to ordain was unanimous, one member not voting.

The same week a large council voted to install Rev. F. A. Thayer at Quincy, Ill., whose ideas and views generally, resemble Dr. Newman Smyth's. Mr. Thayer is reported by the press to hold:—

"That there be those in pagan lands living without the light of the gospel, who have not had a moral probation, or those in Christian lands dying at any period of life without an adequate moral probation, such probation will be granted them."

This of course lays the foundation for prayers for the dead, purgatory, universal restoration, etc., etc. For if some are in probation after death we should pray for them. Their state is purgatorial and the finality is Universalism.

We have read some six or seven close-printed columns from these candidates and their large councils, and there is scarcely a text of Scripture quoted or interpreted in the whole mass. Dr. E. P. Goodwin thus characterizes this theological apostacy in his late sermon before the American Board:

"The doctrine of sin and its penalties explained away, the crucifixion only a picture, retribution hardly more than a figure of speech, and a bow of promise spanning even the pit of perdition—just so far as views like these prevail, there must inevitably result apathy in the work of missions. To preach such doctrines to the church, confronting as it does a lost world and an impending judgment, and expect thereby to arouse it to duty, would be like giving chloroform to an army on the era of battle, to inspire it for the struggle. Worse still, such doctrine not only stupefies the church, but it furnishes to heathenism weapons with which to resist the gospel."

The American Board.

The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions held its seventy-third annual meeting in Portland, Maine, during the first week of the month. The anniversary was attended by several thousand persons, and an expenditure of $649,424 is reported for missions. The relation of the Board to the evangelization of Egypt is ably discussed in the speech of Rev. Henry T. Cheever of Worcester, on another page. The matter was considered of much importance, but for prudential reasons, lest the safety of the American missionaries in Asia Minor should be hazarded, the reference to a committee of investigation was deemed wisest.

It is also reported in the press dispatches that another question of some significance was presented, but not formally before the body. The harmonious flow of the meeting was interrupted by the distribution of a pamphlet entitled the "Controversy between the Missionaries of the American Board and the Evangelical Armenian Churches in Turkey," which is said to be written in opposition to the present methods of the Board in restraining the independence of the Armenian churches and keeping them so far as possible, under missionary control. One of these is to employ educated native preachers as helpers and subordinates only and not as missionaries, though by natural ability and the acquisitions of study they may be well fitted for such work. The young brother, G. H. Filian, lately ordained at Wheaton, is a young man of superior talent. Before coming to this country he was pastor of an Armenian church in whose membership were three American missionaries and their families. Every Sabbath these missionaries sat in the congregation, and refused his request that they should preach, by the excuse that "he could do it so much better." But the Board will not now employ him. Bro. Zaraphonithes, whose quiet efforts in the islaud of Andros, Greece, have been so successful, was also refused employment by the Board, although well educated and having much experience in Gospel labor in Western Asia. The objections of the Board, so far as they are made public, do not seem to answer the charges made against its management.

—Friends in New England, Michigan, Iowa and Illinois have some responsibility respecting the monthly papers now established for circulation in their territory. Being furnished at so low a rate they will form a kind of picket line, the avant couriers of reform lectures and literature. Let them be sustained and encouraged by every Cynosure reader.

—Secretary Stoddard spent the Sabbath near Morris, Ill., where he preached in a Methodist church, on the religion of Masonry. There was a very urgent desire that he should stay and lecture on Monday evening, but it was finally determined to wait until wider notice could be given and other more favorable circumstances transpired. He expected, as we go to press, to start for the East again on Wednesday at latest, visiting Washington City on the way, and arranging to permanently occupy the field opening in that direction as will be seen in Bro. Hinman's excellent letters. In regard to the latter let us pray that the whole season's work may follow with equal success its opening. Bro. Stoddard hopes to return in time to join Pres. J. Blanchard and Bro. Edward Mathews at the Indiana State meeting.

—A very interesting missionary meeting addressed by Profs. Blanchard and Stratton was held on Sabbath evening in the College chapel, Wheaton. The meeting was arranged in consideration of the fact that Bro. Henry M. Bissell and his wife, both of them graduates of the College, were paying a farewell visit to relatives in Wheaton before leaving for mission work in Mexico, for which they engaged during the late meeting of the American Board in Portland. Mrs. W. I. Phillips is sister of Bro. Bissell and Mrs. Prof. Stratton and Mrs. Bissell are sisters. It was expected that Bro. B. would speak, but he was unable to do so because of a very severe cold taken on the cars; a most excellent letter from him was read, however, and the prayers of al. were engaged for a baptism of the Holy Spirit to come upon these dear friends as they go to their distant and dangerous field.

—Bro. Bourne, pnblisher of the Iowa American, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, writes that subscriptions are coming in rapidly for the new paper; but he finds the post-office department objecting to the enterprise, or at least refusing ordinary passage through the mails, because it is printed in Chicago. The Cedar Rapids functionary must read again his orders and he will find every objection of this kind removed. The Iowa subscribers need not fear. Their paper will come all right, after a turn or two of the official screws fails to blanch their cheeks, and scare them from their enterprise.

—Bro. Wm. M. Love, editor of the Banner of Truth, Baker, Mo., announces that he will enlarge the paper beginning with the January number. The Banner has been the medium of many excellent arguments for the reform. We rejoice to see that it holds on through the trials of the first year, and hope Bro. Love will be amply sustained in his work for the purity of the churches of southwestern Missouri.

—The Christian Witness, of New Market, N. H., is also expecting to enlarge and its January number will come out with eight instead of four pages. These indications of prosperity are God's answer to many prayers. May he also give great enlargement to the faith and grace of all reform editors.

—Elder Nathan Callender, of Thompson, Penn., lately visited Cortland county, in central New York, to see old and dear friends and to do good as he had opportunity. He was greatly rejoiced to find a company of brethren all ready to receive the truth in Christ respecting the secret lodges. "God has opened the hearts," he writes, "of a band of live men and women to the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, and, of course, to the spirit of free inquiry on the moral issues in the church. This noble band feel compelled to break fellowship with the lodge power in the church." Bro. Callender wishes papers and tracts sent to these friends to inform them more perfectly of the work now being done for a pure and holy Christianity. On Wednesday evening of last week Bro. Callender had appointed to publicly address the people on "The Gospel of Jesus compared with the Religion of Masonry." From this good soil and good seed God grant may grow a rich harvest for his Kingdom.

NOTICES.

Indiana.

The annual State Convention for Indiana will be held at Carthage, Rush county, October 24th 25th, and 26th. Friends of the reform in the State are urged to make immediate preparations to attend. The place selected is a grand one for the convention. Friends from the West will leave the train (P., C. and St. Louis railroad) at Charlottesville, others at Knightstown.

Signed by Ex. Committee: S. L. Cook, J. W. Lowman, Benj. Ulsh, Wm. Small, E. Hansen.

Frinds of our cause and public advocates who positively intend to come from a distance to attend this convention, please send your names to Box 184, Carthage, Ind., as early as convenient. We wish to make arrangements as well as we may be able for your welcome and entertainment. J. M. CLARK.

Illinois.

The Illinois State Convention will be held November 1st and 2nd next in the Independent church, Tonica, La Salle county, on invitation from brethren in that church. Entertainment will be free and all who desire it will please send their names as soon as possible to N. Richey, Tonica, Ill. Let there be a grand meeting at this central point. Rev. D. S. Faris of Sparta, Elder N. E. Gardner of Haldane, and other able speakers will be present. The Convention will open on Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 1st.

N. E. Pennsylvania.

The annual meeting of the Northeast Pennsylvania Christian Association, opposed to the lodge, will be held in the church at East Herrick, Bradford county, Pa., commencing on the evening of Tuesday, October 24th, 1882, at 7:30 o'clock. The meeting will continue through Wednesday the 25th. Brethren from all parts of Pennsylvania are specially requested to meet us there in conference to form tickets for the State election and plan future campaigns.

THE SOUTHERN FIELD.

First Impressions of Washington.

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 3d, 1882.

DEAR BRO. KELLOGG:—Our Saviour and his apostles set us the example of making great cities the centers of reformatory influences, and as I sit here directly in front of the National Capitol, with its great dome rising before me, I cannot but think that they were wise, and that we may wisely follow their example. It was truly a "National Era," when Dr. Bailey established here a paper that plead for the rights of man, and the overthrow of oppression, and we have witnessed his wonderful success. The slave power had its seat here. So has the lodge power, and from here perhaps better than elsewhere should shine out the electric light which reveals its abominations and will overthrow its dominion.

I reached this city on the evening of Sept. 29th. Coming from New York, with its elevated railroads darkening some of the principal streets, and its constant roar and bustle, it seemed a little strange to see the hard, smooth asphalt pavements; the comparative quiet; the great government buildings scattered widely over the city; the great number of parks, all beautifully fresh from recent rains; a system of street railways more commodious and cheaper than I have seen elsewhere; and withal, a city of vast dimensions, but a population scarcely one-fourth as great as Chicago. Nevertheless it is a grand city, beautiful for location, laid out with surprising skill and adorned with every appliance that art could devise and unstinted wealth could purchase. I have little time for sight-seeing. I have visited the Capitol, walked through its rooms, viewed the paintings and statuary, but rejoiced more in the beautiful grounds which surround it. The Smithsonian Institute, the Washington Monument, and the White House I have merely seen from the outside but hope to have some time to view their wonders.

I have not forgotten my work. My first visit was to Howard University, which occupies five buildings on the heights on the western side of the city. It has 300 to 400 students with Theological, Law, and Medical departments. The last has about one hundred students. I met President Patton in his theological class, and listened to an able lecture on miracles. He has promised to arrange, if practicable, for a lecture for me this week. Prof. Fairfield tells me that none of the faculty belong to any secret society, but that many of the students are Masons, Oddfellows, etc., and he now writes me an invitation to address them on Thursday the 5th inst.

On Friday evening the Washington Christian Association met at the house of Dr. Gross, 311 East Capital street. The number present was not large but they were thoroughly in earnest. It was of such that the Lord said, "Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." By invitation I addressed them and some time was spent in considering ways to promote our reform. Two things were suggested: That we have an agency here like that in New England, and that one or more colporteurs be employed to distribute the publications of the N. C. A. It is believed that a considerable part of the expense could be raised here. In view of the great influence that Washington exerts as a moral and political center, it seems to me most eminently desirable.

Sabbath I visited the meeting of the Friends and in the afternoon the Free Methodists; and in both instances found them in hearty sympathy with our principles. At 4 P. M. I visited the meeting of the W. C. T. Union and was greatly pleased with the earnest and excellent spirit that was manifested and the good work they are doing. Since then I have called on many different persons more or less in sympathy with us. Among them Bro. T. F. Dolan, who publishes The Sword, a monthly paper that cuts right and left, smiting alike secretism and sectism and all other idolatries. His paper has attained a circulation of 7,000 copies and deserves the success that has attended it. Bro. G. W. Donaldson has, at his own expense, published and distributed a large number of tracts on Odd-fellowship, (he being a seceder,) Freemasonry, intemperance, etc. Bro. John Whiteford carries on a mission for the poor, the maimed, and all who are too miserable and wicked to get aid elsewhere. By him they are fed, clothed, admonished and comforted, till they can get on their feet and shift for themselves. He has two hand presses, writes tracts, gets them stereotyped, and then prints and distributes them. He never fails to bear testimony against the lodge. All sorts of people contribute to the support of his mission, and yet he never fails to rebuke even his warmest supporters. The world calls him a fanatic, but he is a remarkable man, and deserves the sympathy and aid of all who love truth and righteousness.

The next meeting of the Washington Christian Association is appointed for next Friday night. We hope for a full attendance. Pray for us, for "except the Lord build the house they labor in vain that build it."

THE WORK BEGUN—HOWARD UNIVERSITY AND TRACT DISTRIBUTION.

OCT 9th.—"All things work together for good to them that love God." This is always true, but not always apparent. Yet since I have been here I have indeed felt that the good hand of the Lord was with me, and that ways of profitable labor were being constantly opened before me.

On Thursday, the fifth, I met the faculty and students of Howard University. The hour from 12:30 to 1:30 P. M. was fixed on as the only one when all the students of the various departments could be together. There were present about 350. Some of them were Masons and members of other secret orders, but most of them, including the faculty and teachers, were not in sympathy with any form of organized secretism. I was introduced by Pres. W. Patton, who offered prayer. I spoke about an hour and had fixed attention. At the close I distributed a large number of tracts, which were eagerly sought for and a strong desire was expressed to know more of the matter. Pres. Patton and others expressed themselves as well pleased with what had been said.

Since then I have visited them and presented, for the College library, some of our standard publications, and spread on the table of the reading room a large number of tracts. I hope to furnish each member of the theological class with a copy of "Finney on Masonry." Last year some one gave each of them a copy of his Autobiography, a book that is incomplete without his last testimony against the works of darkness.

On Friday evening the sixth, our Washington Christian Association met at 311 East Capital street. Quite a number were present and brief addresses were made by Bros. Dolan, Wolfe, Whiteford, Gresham, Mrs. McPherson and myself; and steps were taken to secure an agency and regular colporteur work in this city.

Yesterday the Sabbath I attended Friends meeting and enjoyed great freedom in speaking. In the afternoon and evening I was with the Free Methodist people and enjoyed their earnest spiritual worship. To-night I expect, D. V., to lecture on the works of darkness in the Free Methodist church on Massachusetts Avenue.

This city is a most important field for the promotion of reform principles. There are quite a number of earnest Christian people who oppose secretism from Christian conviction and who will never rest day nor night until it is overthrown. There are many others who oppose the lodge because of the injustice which characterizes appointments and promotions. It is a common thing to see a mere novice, who is comparatively incompetent, promoted over the head of faithful and efficient men and women. It is utterly absurd to demand a civil service reform so long as there is a system of favoritism that sets aside everything that does not promote its own interests. There can be no civil service reform so long as the lodge rules in Washington. Some people are beginning to see it.

We have here quite a number of active tract distributors, and if we have the means we will "sow Washington knee-deep with tracts." I am satisfied that more good can be done by putting reform literature into the hands of Christian people, than by the same expenditure of means in any other direction. Who will aid us in holding up a standard of righteousness here at the heart of the nation?

LECTURES AND TRACT WORK.

OCT. 11.—The work here progresses favorably. On Monday the 9th I lectured in the Free Methodist church to a fair audience made up of radical Christian people. I spoke an hour and then listened for an hour to earnest remarks by the brethren present. Some had never given the subject any particular thought and did not know of the existence of the National Christian Association, but they were impressed with its importance and the duty of active opposition to the power of the lodge. Others are earnest workers in our reform and will do all they can to sustain the standard true Christianity. One brother of much note as an evangelist who had hitherto been but partly informed and partly awake to "the abomination that maketh desolate," expressed his determination in future to "cry aloud and spare not." He goes from here to Willimantic, Conn. I trust Bros. Barlow and Conant will find him a true yoke-fellow. A judge from East Tennessee who heard my lecture and has since read Finney says that he renounces the seven degrees of Masonry that he has taken.

Yesterday I went to Alexandria, Va. It is a delightful sail down and across the Potomac, and there is a very fine view of this city from the river; but Alexandria is a sleepy old town, only just beginning to wake up, and feel the pulsations of a renewed and better life than in the days of slavery. I expect to go there to lecture to-morrow night.

Last night I attended the Society for the Promotion of Arbitration at the Friends (Hicksite) meeting-house. They have a large neat house of worship, and though few in number seem to be zealous of good works. The address was given by Rev. Dr. Hicks (Gitteau's spiritual advisor,) and though able, was wholly irrelevant. Dr. Hicks is a high Mason and a so-called liberalist in theology. He went out of his way to tell us that he did not believe in any personal devil, and seems to be running an unequal race with Beecher, Thomas, and Swing. He has an independent church, the corner-stone of which was laid with Masonic honors. The president of the Peace Association is Hon. Fred. Saunton, territorial governor of Kansas, an able and amiable man, but destitute of faith in Christ as a Divine Saviour. The great mistake of the reformers here is that this class of men have been put in the lead. They have forgotten that Christ said, "Without me ye can do nothing."

The W. C. T. U. has acted more wisely and are doing an excellent work.

Much is being done here in the circulation of tracts. I have never been where they were more kindly received and read. I want to put some of our reform literature into every Christian family in this city. To-day I visited the Capitol and walked through the parks, and gave out a large number of tracts to the multitudes of people, who are largely persons from abroad, and are viewing the sights of the city. But two persons (one a white and one a colored Mason) treated me discourteously. I have great confidence in our ability (God helping) to do a great work in this city. Yours for Christ,

H. H. HINMAN.

—Almost the only College which shows any falling off in attendance this fall is Cornell University—supposed to be from a loss of confidence on the part of parents in the religious and moral influences which have hitherto prevailed there, especially under the administration of Vice-President Russell.

HOME CIRCLE.

A Storm At Sea.---The Rescue.

"Mother, you will let me go?"

A terrible storm is sweeping along the wild cost of North Devonshire. The Dynmouth life-boat is prepared to make its way to a foreign vessel, which, at some short distance from the land, is showing signs of dire distress. The life-boat crew is complete, with the exception of one man. Young Will Carew, a Dynmouth fisher lad and an expert sailor, is offering to fill the vacant place. At first he bends down gently to a woman, who stands beside him on the dreary shore, and in his clear, brave voice that we hear above the raging of the storm. "Mother, you will let me go?" The mother has been a widow only six short months. Her husband was a fisherman; he put out one bright day last spring, the last time in a fishing-boat, upon a delusively calm sea. A sudden squall came on; broken fragments of the boat were seen next morning on the beach, but the fisherman returned no more to home and love. And now the son asks permission to brave the horrors of the sea, which his father found so pitiless.

A fierce, passionate refusal rises to the woman's lips. But her sad eyes move slowly toward the distressed vessel; she thinks of the many loved lives in jeopardy within it, thinks, thinks with a sudden pang of agonized pity, of many distant, dear homes in peril of bereavement; she turns to the boy, and her voice is calm and courageous as his own: "Go, my son. And may God Almighty go with you, and bring you safe back to your mother's heart." Hurriedly she leaves the beach, hurriedly seeks her desolate home, and alone she wrestles with the pain of her old sorrow and her fear. Morning dawns again. The storm has spent itself. Sullenly the waves are tossing their haughty heads, but the sea's worst fury is over at last. A gallant vessel has gone down upon the waters, but the Dynmouth life-boat has nobly fulfilled its noble task, and all hands on board the vessel have been saved.

Why does young Will Carew linger in hesitation outside his mother's door? Bravest of the brave he has shown himself throughout the night. Why does he shrink from the proud welcome that awaits him from the heart nearest to his own? Beside him stands a tall, worn man; a man whom he has rescued from a watery grave; a man whose eyes full of tenderness never leave his own. Around the two throng Dynmouth villagers; many hands are thrust toward the man in happy recognition. "Who will dare to tell her?" So speaks a voice well-nigh choked with emotion. "I will." And Will Carew makes his way through the awe-struck crowd. Another moment and he is in his mother's arms. He feels and knows, for the first time, the whole depth of that wondrous maternal love, which Love Omnipotent has chosen as its best earthly token.

"Mother, listen. I have a tale for your ears. May God teach me how to tell it right. One of the men saved last night was a Dynmouth fisherman." The boy's voice is soft and grave, but it is evident that he steadies it only with a strong effort. "A fearful storm had overtaken him upon the sea, one day, not many months ago. He was observed and saved by a foreign vessel. The vessel was outward bound. Away from home, from wife, from kindred, the man was forced to sail; and by wife and kindred he was mourned as dead, He arrived at the vessel's destined port, only to set sail again with the first ship bound for England. Last night he found himself within sight of home; but a wild storm was raging on land and sea, and once more the man stood face to face with a terrible death. Help came in his need; help, God-sent, God-directed. And—" The boy breaks down now. On his knees, by his mother's feet, he clasps her hands convulsively in his, and his voice comes only through his thick sobs: "Mother, darling, try to bear the happy truth. When your brave heart, a heart which, in the midst of its own sorrow, could feel for the sorrow of others, sent me forth last night to the succor of the distressed, you knew not—how should you know?—that you sent me to the rescue of my dear father's life. God gave him to me. God has given him, mother, back to our grateful love."

Not another word is spoken. Locked in each other's arms, mother and son pour out their hearts in a flood of unspeakably happy tears. A step is heard; the rescued man stands by his own fireside, remembering with deep emotion, that his place there had been won for him by the skill and courage of his son. With a cry of wild joy, the mother rushes forward, and her head finds its long lost place upon her husband's breast.

Ah! Love, supreme, unutterable! Strange, indeed, are the paths through which Thy Divine wisdom leads Thy children to pure happiness! In mute reverence we bow before the mighty tenderness which crowns and blesses earthly love. —Olive Leaf.

Something to Hold on By.

The late Dr. Colver had great originality and quaintness of speech, and always adapted his language to the capacity of his hearers. As he was one day lecturing to a class of colored students of theology, on the composition of a sermon, in the presence of some white visitors, he said: "You should always be careful to have at least two mules' ears to every sermon."

The white visitors looked at each other in blank surprise, not knowing what to make of such a strange remark; but the colored students seemed to be in no such difficulty, and to enjoy it greatly, for as they were accustomed to ride mules without either saddle or bridle, they were compelled to hold on by the ears, and they knew the mule's ears were something to catch hold of and hold on by.

We are sorry to say that a great many sermons of white ministers do not have these mule's ears—there is no prominent feature in them—and it is hard for anybody to remember them, because there is nothing for the mind to catch hold of and hold on by. Moral: "Point your sermons."—Ex.

The Lost Opportunity.

Just before the great fire in Chicago, a western missionary bishop was pleading the cause of missions in one of the churches of that city. A wealthy gentleman listened to the appeal. His heart was stirred within him, and on going home he told his wife that he had made up his mind to send the bishop five hundred dollars. Something occurred on Monday to put the matter for the time being out of his mind, or rather induced him to postpone it for a few days. The fire came. The church was consumed, and the gentleman's wealth was swept away. Soon after, he met a former pastor who visited the city to see and comfort, as far as he could, his old parishoners. He told him with great emotion that, in the midst of his ruin, there was one thing which gave him more trouble than all the rest. This surprised the pastor, and he asked with much earnestness what could give him more trouble than the loss of all his property? The gentleman then stated the circumstances of the bishop's visit and address, and of his purpose to contribute. "But you had not made any promise to the Bishop, had you?" "No, he knew nothing about it, but I had promised God that I would do it, and I ought to have done it on Monday morning, as I intended to do, but I allowed something to divert my mind, and put it off, and the opportunity was lost! Lost forever! This gives me more trouble than all my other losses." What a lesson does this read to us all!—A Christian Worker.

—Some one has uttered a truth which ought to be engraved on the tablet of every Christian heart. It is as follows: "No man can do the best work that is in him without a certain amount of kindly sympathy." How applicable this is to the minister of the gospel! It makes all the difference in the world whether he has the sympathy and co-operation of his church members. If they do not take hold with them, they will be very apt to cripple him, and ten to one they will censure him for his inefficiency when they have been the main cause of it.—Morning Star.

Never Mind What "They" Say.

Don't worry or fret
About what people think
Of your ways or your means,
Of your food or your drink,
If you know you're doing
Your best every day,
With the right on your side,
Never mind what "they" say.

Lay out in the morning
Your plans for each hour,
And never forget
That Old Time is a power.
This also remember
'Mong truths old and new,
The world is too busy
To think much of you.

Then garner the minutes
That make up the hours,
And pluck in your pilgrimage
Honor's bright flowers.
Should grumblers assure you
Your course will not pay,
With conscience at rest,
Never mind what "they" say.

Then let us, forgetting
The insensate throng
That jostles us daily
While marching along.
Press onward and upward,
And make no delay—
And though people talk,
Never mind what "they" say.

A True Hero.

"Oh, to be a hero—a real hero!" sighed little Frank Fanning, as he closed the book he had been straining his eyes in the twilight to read, which told how a little drummer boy had kept up his rub-a-dub all through a fiercely fought battle—his little red coat seen here, there and everywhere, as he moved among the soldiery, cheering them with the gay sound, until the close of the day, when they had gained the victory, they noticed that the sound grew fainter and fainter, and fainter, until some one going up to the spot where he had sunk on the ground discovered that the brave little fellow's life-blood was ebbing through a mortal wound caused by one of the bullets of the enemy; but still his last, expiring effort was to keep up the rah-tah-too, and his last glance was for the flag in which they wrapped him as they laid him away to his final rest, while on the rude board that marked his grave they cut the words:

"HERE LIES A LITTLE HERO."

"That was worth dying for," thought Frank when from the adjoining room some one called his name.

It was his mother, and it was the third time she had called him.

"Yes, mother, I am coming," he answered, springing up.

"I wanted a glass of water, my son, I am thirsty."

Frank felt a little pang of reproach, for his mother was an invalid, and unable to move from the lounge on which she was carried every morning, and she depended on her little boy to wait upon her.

"I ought to have come before, mother," he said, "but I was reading such a splendid story. It was about a boy hero, mother. Oh, I wish that I could be a hero."

"And so you may be, my son! Do you know what heroism means? It means self-sacrifice. Always remember that. There is no man who entirely forgets self but is a hero. He may not know it himself, the world may never recognize it, but there is one who knows it, and who will one day reward it."

Somehow Frank could not forget his mother's words as he lay that night with wide open eyes, in his little bed. Whenever he closed them he seemed to see that soldier boy's grave, and the sentence written above it. But one might be a hero, and yet not die. He could not understand it, and so, wondering, he fell asleep.

How good Frank had grown! thought Mrs. Fanning, in days that followed. She had no longer to call but once, when, no matter what he was doing, he hastened to her side. How often she blessed him in her thought! but spite of his loving care she felt herself growing paler and weaker every day. It was mental trouble, the doctor said, as much as physical. Her mind must be kept free from care. But this was the one thing that Frank could not do, though he well knew what was troubling her.

Every week their little hoard at the bank was decreasing, and Mrs. Fanning, who was a dressmaker, could do no work. Another month—if she continued ill—there would be hardly enough left to pay the rent.

On his way home one afternoon from school, bitterly revolving all this in his mind, Frank, glancing up, found himself opposite a large factory outside of which was a placard on which was written in great letters:

"HANDS WANTED."

The boy looked down at his own hands. They were small, and unused to work. "But they were made to use," he whispered to himself, with sudden inspiration. "Other boys make money—why may not I?"

Five minutes later he stood before the superintendent. In ten minutes the agreement had been made. He had to go to school one-half day, the other half he had to work in the factory, and for this he was to receive three dollars a week—enough to pay the rent.

True, it would take away the only hours he had for play—no more skating, no more sledding. But never mind that, Frank thought, gulping down a sigh of regret, and manfully trudging homeward.

At the door he paused.

"I won't tell mother," he whispered; "it would only trouble her. She will find it out soon enough."

One day, when she needed and missed him, she reproached him for thinking more of his play than his mother; but though he grew a little pale, he said nothing.

The month was drawing to a close. The time was approaching when she must learn the truth, else how could he account for the money.

Never mind. He would tell her how much happier he was, knowing he helped her, and how little he missed out-door sports. Next Winter, when she was strong and well again, he would enjoy them all the more.

It was the last day of the month, and Frank was on his way to the counting-room to receive his pay, which he had left in the superintendents hands, until the whole amount had been reached.

When passing some machinery, it was suddenly put in motion. Directly in his pathway stood a little girl, and as the great wheel slowly revolved Frank saw that it had caught a corner of her dress. The next moment he only knew that the dress was freed, that the child's life had been saved, and that his own right arm hung broken and helpless by his side. It had all taken such a little time he could scarcely realize it himself. He wondered what it all meant when they crowded around him.

"He is a little hero?" said a voice, and then it all grew dark, and the little fellow knew no more. When he recovered consciousness, his mother's pale face was bending over him.

"You're not angry, mother?" he whispered. "I could not help it."

"My precious little hero!" she answered, sealing his lips with her kisses.

Then he remembered all, and what that other voice had said. But what could this mean? He a hero? He who had never done anything heroic in all his life?

He had time to think it all over in the long weeks that passed before the broken arm mended and he grew strong again. But one day the factory superintendent, who had insisted upon paying all the expenses of his illness, so that he might get well in his own time, came in and handed him, with a smile, a little box.

On opening it a bright, gold medal lay before his astonished gaze, and on it was written:

"IN MEMORY OF A BRAVE AND NOBLE ACTION."

"Mother!" he cried. "See here! What does it mean?"

"It means," she answered, solemnly, "that my boy has forgotten self in others, and that he is his mother's hero."

Tears fell thick and fast down the boy's face. He had done so little, he thought, and they had made of it so much.

Nor was this all, for the next year the superintendent found a place for him in his own private office, where he might grow up a good and useful man.

To his mother health and strength had returned, and all was happiness in the little cottage; but Frank had learned a lesson he never forgot—that it was the quiet home circle, in the every day unselfishnes and thoughtfulness for others, rather than the battle field, where the first seeds are sown which makes the hero.—Golden Days.

LESSON 5, October 29.—JESUS BETRAYED AND TAKEN.—Mark 14, 43-54.

(43) And immediately, while he yet spake, cometh Judas, one of the twelve, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves, from the chief priests and the scribes and the elders. (44) And he that betrayed him had given them a token, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that same is he; take him and lead him away safely. (45) And as soon as he was come, he goeth straightway to him, and saith, Master, Master; and kissed him. (46) And they laid their hands on him, and took him. (47) And one of them that stood by drew a sword, and smote a servant of the high priest, and cut off his ear. (48) And Jesus answered and said unto them, Are ye come out as against a thief, with swords and with staves to take me? (49) I was daily with you in the temple teaching, and ye took me not; but the Scriptures must be fulfilled. (50) And they all forsook him and fled. (51) And there followed him a certain young man, having a linen cloth cast about his naked body; and the young man laid hold on him: (52) And he left the linen cloth and fled from them naked. (53) And they led Jesus away to the high priest: and with him were assembled all the chief priests and the elders and the scribes. (54) And Peter followed him afar off even into the palace of the high priest: and he sat with the servants and warmed himself at the fire.

PROMPTINGS TO FURTHER STUDY.

On what previous occasions had Jesus escaped a multitude who sought to kill him? How can you give a scriptural explanation of his escape then and his surrender now? At what time did God send forth his Son to redeem them who were under the law? What fate threatens those who do not in sincerity kiss the Son? What two Old Testament prophets foretell Jesus' presence and work in the temple? Can you mention a place where Jesus' teaching is foretold in the Old Testament?—Scholar's Quarterly.

NOTES.

(43) "Cometh Judas." Between one and two o'clock Friday morning. The movements of Judas, after the last supper, we may readily picture to ourselves in the outline. Going immediately to Caiaphas, or to some other leading member of the Sanhedrim, he informs him where Jesus is, and announces that he is ready to fulfill his compact, and at once to make the arrest. It was not the intention to arrest Christ during the feast, lest there should be a popular tumult (Matt. 26:5); but, now that an opportunity offered of seizing him secretly at dead of night, when all were asleep or engaged at the paschal meal, his enemies could not hesitate.—Andrews. "One of the twelve." The evangelists do not conceal the fact that the traitor was one of their own number. Why was such a man chosen to be one of the twelve? (1) There was needed among the disciples, as in the church now, a man of just such talents as Judas possessed,—the talent for managing business affairs. (2) Though he probably followed Christ at first from mixed motives, as did the other disciples, he had the opportunity of becoming a good and useful man. (3) It doubtless was included in God's plans that there should be thus a standing argument for the truth and honesty of the gospel; for, if any wrong or trickery had been concealed, it would have been revealed by the traitor in self-defence. (4) It is a relief to modern churches to know that God can bless them, and the gospel can succeed, even though some bad men may creep into the fold.—P. (45) "Kissed him." The Greek word here is more forcible than the one signifying kiss in the previous verse,—kissed him with fervor, and frequently. The signal as arranged was to be simply a kiss. The signal actually given was kissing, accompanied with embraces; which was entirely in keeping with the excitement of Judas and the desire he felt that there should be no mistake as to the person intended.—Meyer. What was Judas' motive? (1) Anger at the public rebuke given him by Christ at the supper in the house of Simon the leper (Matt. 26:6-14). (2) Avarice, covetousness, the thirty pieces of silver (John 12:6). (3) A much larger covetousness,—an ambition to be the treasurer, not merely of a few poor disciples, but of a great and splendid temporal kingdom of the Messiah. He would hasten on the coming of that kingdom by compelling Jesus to defend himself. (4) Perhaps disappointment because Christ insisted on foretelling his death, instead of receiving his kingdom. He began to fear that there was to be no kingdom, after all. (5) Perhaps, also, Judas "abandoned what seemed to him a failing cause, and hoped by his treachery to gain a position of honor and influence in the Pharisaic party." (47) The bringing of the sword was part of the misconception which Jesus had not cared further to remove at the supper; and, if Judas had pressed into the inclosure, they may have been entirely unaware as yet of the number of the captors. Future years would teach them that Christ's cause is served by dying, not by killing. The full reply of our Lord on this incident must be found by combining Matt. 26:53, John 18:10, 11.—Cambridge Bible for Schools. This act of violence, indeed, not only compromised the safety of Peter, but even the Lord's cause. Jesus was all but hindered thereby from addressing Pilate in the words so important for his defence against the crime with which the Jews charged him (John 18:36).—Godet. How common is the conduct, even in good men, to run before they are called, to be very forward to set themselves on work in the greatest matter, but to be backward and diffident when God commands!—Wogan. If a man be zealous for Christ, he must be zealous within the compass of his calling; and not be zealous first, and then look for a calling; but first look for a calling, and then be zealous.—William Perkins. Christ's reply to Peter's act, as given in Matt. 26:52, 53, is full of instruction: "Put up again thy sword into its place; for all they that take the sword shall perish by the sword." There is no possibility of advancing Christ's kingdom in such worldly ways, by force, by depending on the rich, or on state patronage. And there is no need of such aid, either for Christ or his kingdom. God can always save them from worldly trouble if that were the best; for "thinkest thou I cannot now pray to my Father, and he shall presently give me twelve legions of angels?" (49) "Took me not." The offence with which he was charged was one of teaching, not of robbery or violence: it was open, public, unconcealed, and the time to arrest him was the time of his teaching; he had neither hid himself, nor surrounded himself with his followers for self-protection; the indignity of this midnight arrest was, therefore, gratuitous.—Abbott. (53) "To the high priest." We learn from John (18:13-15) that Jesus was first taken to the house of Annas, and, after a brief delay here, to the palace of Caiaphas, the high priest.—Andrews. It was the duty of Annas to examine the sacrifices, whether they were without blemish: there was significancy in it that Christ, the great Sacrifice, was presented to to him, and sent away bound as approved and ready for the altar.—Lightfoot. The actual high priest at the time was Caiaphas; but this Annas had been high priest, and as such enjoyed the title by courtesy. Being also a man of great wealth and influence, and of active habits, he took upon him much of the business of that high office, as a sort of assessor to, or substitute for, Caiaphas, who was his son-in-law. Hence the evangelist describes them both as "high priests" (Luke 3:2), as they were in fact.—Kitto. Caiaphas, we must remember, had already committed himself to the policy of condemnation (John 11:50).

THE AMERICAN PARTY.

Nominations for 1884.

For President,
JONATHAN BLANCHARD,
of Illinois.

For Vice-President.
JOHN A. CONANT.
of Connecticut.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

A POLITICAL MEETING will be held in connection with the Illinois State Convention, on Thursday forenoon Nov. 2 during a recess of the Convention. Tonica is in the center of a section of country full of old line Abolitionists. Benjamin Lundy's paper, the first Abolition sheet in the West, if not in the country, was published near by. This should be a grand rallying point for reform politics. American voters, come to the meeting.

The altered tone of politicians in regard to reform questions is very noticeable. Governor Foster, of Ohio, says: "A discussion of what is to be done with the saloons and whiskey is what the people want to hear. * * It is crowding to the front." If Anti-masons stand by their principles they will soon see that the lodge question is "crowding to the front."

Political Meetings at Wheaton.

On Monday afternoon last week a convention of the voters of Kane and DuPage counties, Ill., was called to meet in the lower College Chapel at Wheaton to consider the nomination of a candidate for representative to the State Legislature who would stand by the principles of the American platform. There was a good representation of the American voters present and after a due consideration of the issues already presented to the voters of these counties, it was decided to nominate a representative. The honor fell upon J. P. Bartlett of Blackberry, Kane county, a man of worth and intelligence, well known for his position on the lodge question, and a life-long laborer for temperance. It was also voted to recommend to the voters of Illinois that they support in the election of November 7th: For State Treasurer: PETER HOWE, of Marshall county; and for Superintendent of Public Instruction, HERMAN A. FISCHER, of DuPage county. The political meeting at Tonica will doubtless ratify these nominations. The near approach of election day made the nomination seem advisable. Measures were also taken to hold a number of political meetings in favor of these candidates.

The first of these meetings was held in the Court-house at Wheaton on Wednesday evening last. Prof. O. F. Lumry presided and after prayer by Rev. W. W. Stewart addresses were made by Rev. J. P. Stoddard and Pres. C. A. Blanchard, of which it may be said by all who listened, whatever their political creed, that they have seldom listened to better speaking. It was voted to meet again this week on Wednesday evening when it is hoped that Gen. J. W. Phelps will speak, who has been a month in Chicago looking after his business interests here. Different parts of DuPage county will be reached this week and next, and every vote with a conscience behind it will if possible be gained for the American candidates.

Arbitration.

Judge Fanchier's Court of Arbitration in New York is peculiar. It has no lawyers, no jury, no costs, and no appeal. The usefulness of this Court is appreciated by the mercantile community, and it is hoped the next Legislature will greatly enlarge its powers and widely extend its already great benefits in settling important cases. So says the New York Advocate. If it is so beneficial in peacefully settling important commercial matters, why could such arbitration Courts not be made equally useful in settling differences between nations. One plank of the American Party platform advocates this way to avoid war. We hope the time is not very distant when every nation shall have such a Court of final appeal. In this country, townships, counties, commonwealths, some of the last as big as kingdoms of the old continent, settle their disputes in courts and that is the only way of it, and who will say that justice is not as often done all parties, in that way, as by appeals to arms. Yet what misery is avoided when settled in this Christian way! Our combination of great commonwealths is setting the other countries that delight in war a noble example of successful arbitration of public disputes that all might profit by and "learn war no more."—Sandy Lake News.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

—The United Presbyterian churches are meeting with much encouragement in their efforts to raise a memorial fund of $50,000 to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the union of the Associate Reformed and Associate churches.

—The Allegheny Presbytery has refused to allow Rev. John Ker permission to ride on a Sunday train to and from divine services, fifteen miles up the railroad. After a heated discussion, the vote stood eleven for and fifteen against.

—The American Missionary says: "One of our old friends writes: 'Do the colleges and literary institutions supported by the American Missionary Association prohibit the use of tobacco, as well as of intoxicating liquors, among their students, as Oberlin does?' We are happy to inform him and all other friends that this is the rule in all of our schools, and that they would be delighted to observe the freedom of all our school buildings from the pollution of tobacco. It is a fine element in the formation of character, as well as a matter of health and of economy."

—About fifty children of the four hundred missionaries that have been appointed by the American Board of Foreign Missions, are now laboring in the foreign field. The three classes in Princeton Seminary last year numbered 119. Of the 119, 31 were sons of ministers, 23 sons of elders and 6 sons of deacons.

—Brethren Moody and Sankey have begun their fortnight's work in Paris. The Intelligencer says: "It strikes us as a notable and significant event, calculated to excite the imagination and stir the heart. Moody in Paris!—the Paris of Clovis and Louis Quatorze and Napoleon III.; of Abelard and Voltaire and Eugene Sue; of Mirabeau and Philip Egalite and the Commune; of Richelieu and Coligny and McAll; of the Bastile, the barricades and the Bois de Boulogne. The voice of one crying in the wilderness, more waste and howling than that which rang with the summons of the Forerunner; a city as imperial and as profligate as that through whose streets the prophet cried: 'Yet forty days and Nineveh shall be overthrown!'

'And what will the proud and gay and infidel city go out to see? A greater than Jonah, a greater than John, by so much as he brings the fulness of the Gospel of the Kingdom. Yet whether they will repent at his preaching, and whether he will be a veritable forerunner of a still Mightier One, will depend upon the Spirit of the Lord. That the Spirit may be poured out on Paris, should enlist the faith and prayers of the Christian world."

The American Board and Egypt.

At the late meeting of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, in Portland, Me., Rev. Henry T. Cheever, of Worcester, introduced a resolution amending the report of the committee on the missions in the Turkish Empire. The matter was referred to a special committee who may, if deemed best, visit Egypt and ascertain all the facts in the case to report next year.

The amendment to the report on Turkish missions offered by Bro. Cheever, and his speech upon it are as follows.

The amendment reads:

That the Secretaries of the Board be requested if in their united wisdom and that of the Prudential Committee it shall seem best, to address a memorial to the government of Great Britain on the part of this Missionary Board, and the united supporters of Christian Missions in all Mohammedan states, asking, in view of the significant success which God has lately given to British arms and intervention in Egypt, thereby putting it in the unquestionable power and right of Christian England to do whatever she will that is just for the hitherto oppressed people of that land, that the English premier and parliament will now use their providential opportunity to establish and secure perfect equality of rights as to religion, and the untrammeled profession and propagation of the gospel in those parts: so that henceforth, Moslem and Christian throughout all Egypt shall be alike free from restraint and persecution in the exercise and inculcation of their chosen faith.

Mr. Cheever said: It is not for me to take up any time of this great missionary assembly in arguing the friendly amendment I have offered to one of the reports here presented on Turkish missions. The proposition contained in this amendment is its own best argument and defence. It carries in itself and on the face of it its only leave to be. Its recommendation will, I think, meet the warm approval of almost every friend of missions and of humanity in all the Mohammedan countries to which we have access. But will the president allow me to say further, that in my judgment the Prime Minister of England himself will be glad of such a voice from the great missionary boards in America, as well as Great Britain, that have their evangelizing agencies, schools and churches in the wide region of country whose destiny under God is now so wonderfully put in the hands of Protestant England. He will hail and be helped by the moral support that such a word will give him, in now securing as a prime condition of settlement in the East the most liberal guarantees of future protection and safety to all Christian confessors in the kingdom of the Khedive, and throughout the dominions of the Ottoman Porte. So shall the "dark continent" to which the land of the Pharaohs is the great northern gateway—rent asunder by what Dr. Storrs described so eloquently yesterday, as the tearing tornado of war, making a new way for the Gospel—so shall Africa be henceforth wide open to an aggressive and all-conquering missionary Christianity. Who knows, sir, but Gladstone will prove to be the English Cyrus of the 45th chapter of Isaiah, the anointed Shepherd of the British Israel, whom God hath raised up in righteousness at this latter day like the Persian Cyrus of old, and "has holden his right hand to subdue nations before him and to loose the loins of kings? For thus saith the Lord, (verse 14,) "The labor of Egypt and merchandise of Ethiopia and of the Sabeans, men of stature, shall come over unto thee, and they shall be thine; they shall come after thee. * * They shall fall down unto thee: they shall make supplication unto Thee, saying surely God is in thee and there is none else. There is no God."

Now, Sir, is it not meet for us in republican America, guided by both prophecy and Providence, as the loyal subjects of Christ our only King, on the broad platform of this honored Board, with its personal history of noble heroes and heroines for the last seventy years as given in the paper of Dr. Alden to-day;—is it not meet for us that we warmly congratulate the English Premier upon the enlargement under him, if not of British Empire, yet better than that, of British opportunity to advance the glorious Gospel of the blessed God in the realm of the False Prophet, even in Egypt itself, so long the "basest of Kingdoms?" And without a trace of flattery, in the interest only of truth and freedom, may we not apply to him, with a generous enthusiasm, the words that Milton addressed to Cromwell in his day:

> Gladstone, our chief of men, who through a cloud,
> Not of war only, but detractions rude,
> Guided by faith and matchless fortitude,
> To peace and truth thy glorious way hast ploughed,
> And on the neck of crowned fortune proud,
> Hast reared God's trophies and his work pursued!

Yet much remains to conquer still. Peace hath her victories no less renowned than war! Those victories of peace let us help him to win by sending our word of lofty cheer under or over the great deep, and by imploring for him continued prowess and guidance from the great Head of the Church militant and triumphant.

And now let me add to what I have said, the plea of a corporate member of this body, Dr. George B. Cheever, of New York, late pastor of the Church of the Puritans, who says in a letter of date Sept. 30th, Englewood, N. J.: "I wish to suggest the propriety of sending to the Board in Portland some expression of opinion and interest in regard to the great crisis as to liberty of religious belief and Christian education in Egypt; and the wonderful providence of God in so suddenly putting it in the power of the British government to assert and establish the divine law of freedom; the freedom of preaching the gospel and believing it, and making confession of Christ and teaching his faith, without molestation, without penalty of property, of imprisonment, or life. The question is between the freedom of conscience toward God and Christ and the Christian Scriptures on one side; and the despotism of Mohammed and the Koran and the sword on the other. The English government has the power and the right, if its parliament and ministers please, to determine this question, at any rate for Egypt, justly; and to protect and secure every person and family from persecution for religious opinion. The liberty of teaching and preaching and believing ought to be made at least as broad and sure as it is in England. Never should a Christian be permitted to molest a Mohammedan, nor any Mohammedan a Christian on account of his religion, and if any one be pursuaded to change his belief and turn from either side to the other, he should be free to do it, and be protected by the law and the whole power of the government in doing it. This principle once established, (and at the present crisis the announcement of it as indispensableto a settlement of the country in peace, would be its establishment) this principle once settled there would be an end of the dreadful fanaticism of the Mohammedan Koranic cruelty in Egypt at least; and the way would be opened for the same Christian victory everywhere. It would be the beginning of the end of the Turkish dominion and of the ferocity of Islamism. God is offering to England the glory of this conquest, and if the government will but accept the opportunity and the mission it will make them the foremost nation in the world; and the deliverance wrought in Egypt, and the door there wide opened for the truth as it is in Jesus, that event may be followed with incredible rapidity through the whole Oriental world by similar openings and deliverances. Nations may be born in a day.

"Now ought not our great and influential missionary society to speak out? The proclamation of religious liberty by them, the demand for it in God's name, at such a crisis, would be a blow against the progress of Romanism as well as the power of the False Prophet. The effort is worth making, at any rate, and now is the time. England would be encouraged and animated by it. Well put, a united expression of opinion and desire might be wonderfully effective. So shall they fear the name of the Lord from the west, and when the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him."

I pray God, Sir, that this Board may be fully up to the hour, and that no timid considerations of prudence and expediency may be allowed to smother a bold demand for present freedom for the word of God through the ancient realm now so grandly open to God's British Israel. Let it be proclaimed world-wide that the Christian world now expects of Protestant England what Lord Nelson said England expected of every man in his fleet—to do his duty.

Words of Life for every Day.

SANCTIFY THEM THROUGH THY TRUTH; THY WORD IS TRUTH.

Thursday, Oct. 19.—Be ye therefore followers of God, as dear children; and walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling savour.—Eph. 5:1–2.

Friday, Oct. 20.—But fornication, and all uncleanness, or covetousness, let it not be once named among you, as becometh saints; neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting, which are not convenient: but rather giving of thanks. —Eph. 5:3–4.

Saturday, Oct. 21.—Let nothing be done through strife or vain glory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves. Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others.—Phil. 2:3–4.

Sabbath, Oct. 22.—Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted.—Isa. 53:4.

Monday, Oct. 23.—For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places.—Eph. 6:12.

Tuesday, Oct. 24.—Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men.—Phil. 2:5, 6, 7.

Wednesday, Oct. 25.—Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.—Phil. 3:13–14.

COUNCIL-IATORY.—Rev. Dr. Newman Smyth has driven his couch and four into New Haven, spite of Westminster Confessions and Cambridge Platforms. And Rev. Mr. Thayer glides, four in hand, with equal facility into Quincy, Ill. One cannot help wondering, what all the fuss has been about; and who has been mistaken, or who has backed down. The Councils, in substance, find that the doubts or deviations of these brethren are only matters of "speculation;" and they, on their part, assure the Councils that these speculations will not influence their preaching.

Inasmuch as the said speculations are already well-known to their hearers, and affect the very practical question of a probation after death, we do not see how they can help affecting that "terror of the Lord," which the preacher must "know" in order to "persuade men." And inasmuch as these clergymen do not profess to find authority for their view in the Scriptures, we do not see why or where the rationalizing, —or "speculating"—process shall stop. In the case of Mr. Thayer, we notice that the Council took pains to declare itself sound on Probation, and its copartnership with the candidate only a "limited" one. Hereafter we trust if ministers must "speculate outside" of Revelation, they will consume their own smoke, and not puff their cinders into the public eye.—Intelligencer.

HOME AND FARM.

STRAWBERRIES.—For the past few weeks I have had a great many postal cards and letters asking me to state in the Advance Argus what I think about fall planting of strawberries, and whether there would be really a chance of getting some fruit from these plants next June, and also, what I think are the best kinds to plant on the different kinds of soil, &c. Now, to make this subject as plain as possible, so that it will answer the most questions in the fewest words, I will just state to you what my experience has been. For instance, last season I planted out a piece of strawberries where I had a piece of early potatoes. The first plants were set on the first week of August, but on account of the drouth they did not amount to much, and only about a third of them lived until fall. The next rows I planted from the first week of September until the last of the month. You see I planted a few at a time, expecting every day that it would rain. Then I did not plant again until the end of October, and I even planted a few as late as the middle of November. Well, the patch being planted, nothing more was done until it began to freeze pretty hard; then I took some straw and went along the rows dropping a good handful on each plant; then got some corn stalks that had been thrown out of the barn after the cattle had picked it over, and threw a few stalks on top of the straw. This was to keep the straw from blowing away, which it did. Nothing more was done on this patch until spring, when I gathered up the stalks, letting the straw remain. The plants soon pushed themselves up through the small quantity of straw and made a rapid growth. I did not see much difference in their growth. Those which were set out first did not seem a bit more forward than those planted last. I suppose the drouth stunted them; anyhow, they grew first rate and bore what some would have called a good crop; but I will say near upon a half crop, and such fine berries too. Well, I just felt proud of this patch. Seeing that I had the start of those who claimed that fall set plants were of no account, I let them stand until they were dead ripe, just for people to see, and by the side of them were a few rows that were planted last spring, and when people would ask me which was the best time to plant, spring or fall, I would tell them to go and look at the two patches and judge for themselves, when they would always decide in favor of fall planting. The kinds that I planted on the above patches were chiefly of the Crescent Seedling variety, but it should be borne in mind that more depends on covering up the fall set plants than anything else.—James Turner, in Advance-Argus.

WEEDS ALONG THE ROAD SIDE.—Some farmers appear to forget that their land extends to the middle of the roadway, and that they have rights and duties in connection with the road sides. At this season it is common to find by the way side the largest weeds in the neighborhood. They have had it all their own way and this has been to ripen a large crop of seeds. Such neglect of the road side is a great mistake, as it not only gives a neglected appearance to the street, but is the means of propagating weeds that do much damage to the crops in the adjoining fields. It does not matter how clean the cultivated crop may be kept if weeds are left to grow just over the fence. It is too late now to do more than collect and burn these, but in doing this, the seeds should all be killed, to make the work of subduing these pests less burdensome in the future, besides adding to the attractiveness of the street.—American Agriculturist for October.

What all men everywhere need is the truth. It is the knowledge of the truth, says the Founder of Christianity, that makes men free. But men have to be urged to seek the truth and to prize it at its real value.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity ☐ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 60 cents; per dozen, $5.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.00. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞ The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degrees of Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Valance's Confession of the Murder of CAPT. WM. MORGAN. This confession of Henry L. Valance, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan in the Niagara River, was taken from the lips of the dying man by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine County, Wisconsin, in 1848. 10 cents each; per dozen. $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers. 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 De-GREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen. $3.50.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen. $1.25

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear disension of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Re-PUBLIC, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen

MISCELLANEOUS.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00

General Washington Opposed to Se-CRET SOCIETIES. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Chris-TIAN RELIGION. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the In-ITIATE. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. Each of these able writers in clear, forcible language treats the subject in one or more of its varied phases. Rev. David McDill in six chapters treats of 1. "Their Antiquity; 2 Their Secrecy; 3. "Oaths and Promises;" 4. "Profaneness" 5. "Their Exclusiveness;" 6. "False Claims." Prest. Blanchard handles the topic: "Shall Christians join Secret Societies?" in a masterly way, showing clearly that they are all opposed to the genius of Christianity; and Dr. Beecher closes with his Report on Secret Societies, which was adopted by the Congregational Association of Illinois at Ottawa in 1866. In cloth, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.25. Paper cover, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association, condition of the Carpenter donation, with engraving of building donated by Mr. Carpenter; tables showing the number of pastors and communicants in churches that exclude members of secret societies, tabular view of local, county, state and national conventions, and list of organizations auxiliary to the National Christian Association; brief opinions of eminent men on secret societies, and testimonies of religious bodies against them. 25 cents each; per dozen, $1.50.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Greene, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. Unpublished Reminiscences of the Morgan Times, by Elder David Bernard; Recollections of the Morgan Trials, as related by Victory Birdseye, Esq., and presented by his daughter, Mrs. C. B. Miller; Secretary's Report; Roll of Delegates; Songs of Mr. G. W. Clark; Paper by Enoch Honeywell; Constitution N. C. A.; Reports of Committees and a Report of the Political Meeting. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing Official Reports; Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, P. D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D. D., Prest. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D. D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquilette; also Report of the Political Mass Convention, with Platform and Candidates for the Presidential Campaign of 1876. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 31 Cynosure tracts In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies; and the dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized secrecy are shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public. Those who wish to circulate anti-Masonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from. 20 cents each, per dozen, $1.75.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. W. P. M'Nary, pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind. This is a very clear, thorough, candid and remarkably concise Scriptural argument on the character of Freemasonry. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen. 75 cents.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and CHURCH. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret SOCIETIES. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

EZRA A. COOK,

No. 7 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO.

In the Coils; or the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historial sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of every-day life, and showing how individual, domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. Parents who wish, not only to keep their children out of these night-schools of Satan, but to give them arguments against them in the most attractive dress, will do well to purchase this book. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Ad-DRESSES. In this scathing review the lying pretensions of the order are clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Letters on Masonry. Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian religion. Paper cover, 30 cents each; per dozen, $2.50.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers; price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship (old work), by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen, $7.50.

Freemasonry and the M. E. Church. Let every lover of truth and justice read this report of the trial of Rev. J. T. Michael, showing how he was driven out of the M. E. church for opposing Masonry and loving Methodism. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Ma-SONRY. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocate, and afterward in pamphlet form. The Evangelical Repository, reviewing it, says: "This pamphlet consists of a series of articles originally published in the Church Advocate, Lancaster, Pa. Elder M. S. Newcomer opposes secret societies, and especially Freemasonry and Elder G. W. Wilson defends the system. We are free to say that Mr. Newcomer has thoroughly routed his opponent at every point. Mr. Wilson speaks by the book, as he is a Royal Arch Mason." 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT.

Ninety-nine more Clubs of ten within the next twenty-three days! Shall we have them?

At this writing the majority of the readers have not had time to reply to our proposition to mail the Cynosure, folded, trimmed and pasted, one day earlier after Jan. 1st, 1883, if they will send us the cash for one hundred clubs of ten within thirty days from the date of the last issue of the Cynosure, Oct. 12th, 1882.

The first $15.00 was received to-day from C. Derbyshire, whose name is placed first on this roll of honor. The money is acccompanied with earnest prayer that the subscription list may be much enlarged.

Secretary J. P. Stoddard says, "I see the importance of an enlarged circulation for the Cynosure in a clearer light than ever before."

Mrs. Bailey, who favored us with a call to-day, says: "Mr. Bailey has always realized the importance of the circulation of the Cynosure in New England. There it is the basis upon which we work."

H. H. Hinman writes from Washington, D. C.:—"I think the improvement greatly needed and that it would greatly increase the value of the paper. I SHALL DO WHAT I CAN TO BRING IT ABOUT."

M. L. Worcester accepts the proposition, all but advancing the money, and goes immediately to work for subscribers prepared with Cynosures, containing the picture of the Morgan monument statue on the first page, also some of the last issue, tracts, etc. "I had purposed," he writes, "to spend about two weeks in the interest of this very valuable paper, but failing health and circumstances are against me. I trust that I shall be able to procure from ten to twenty subscribers notwithstanding these hindrances. I have but a little time to labor for the interest of Zion and welfare of our country; therefore with my might I shall do what I find to to do." So this brother may take two shares in the one hundred.

H. Curtiss will do something in this line.

W. I. Phillips, we have reason to hope, will soon have his name enrolled as one of the hundred.

Dr. Gross will be one of the hundred if certain arrangements are made.

S. M. Good will be one of the one hundred if he sells his farm this month as he hopes to.

J. S. Yaukey and others will bear this subject to the throne of grace. Certainly the cause of Christ will be greatly advanced by the enlarged circulation of the Cynosure. Will not many eagerly come forward and fill up the ranks of the "ONE HUNDRED.

A subscriber away out on the frontier writes: "I am contented to be dressed in rags with my feet wet every day in consequence of shortness of means (having moved here two years ago, and my crop failed the first year,) but give me Jesus first, my Bible second, and the Christian Cynosure last and long as I live."

It will require self-denial to sustain the Cynosure on the part of many. It is a great enterprise.

L. H. Hull. "Am on picket duty all the time and canvassing too."

David Owens, "I think I can get two or three new subscribers."

Moses Ferrin.—"I now am going to try to get more subscribers for the paper."

Mary Pinkney; "I shall try to get subscribers if I can on the $1.00 plan. I am trying to spread the Cynosure."

So long as the Extension Fund holds out new subscribers may betaken at $1.00 each. But if persons are able and willing to pay regular rates it is well to allow them to do so and save the Extension Fund for those who cannot afford to pay more than $1.00 a year.

H. S. Limbocker sends two hoping to get one or two more soon.

J. N. Norris and C. M. Livesay send three for a year each.

H. C. Stegner sends four for a year each.

NEWS ITEMS.

—The Commissioner of the Land Office in his annual report states that the lands now embraced within the limits of the public domain amount to 900,000,000 acres, including Alaska. He recommends that the Pre-emption law be abolished, as the Homestead laws cover all cases now arising.

—Dickson, the foreman of the star-route jury, threatens to procure a Congressional investigation into the question of jury-fixing. The fact that he has delayed so long in swearing out warrants for the arrest of those he charges with approaching him corruptly has about destroyed all faith in his stories.

—Serious charges are made by Commander Pearson, of the United States steamer Wachusett, stationed at Sitka, against Gouverneur Morris, Collector of Customs for Alaska. Frauds on the Government through the importation and sale of liquor, drunkenness, the ruthless slaughter of Indian dogs, and conduct generally offensive to the natives and the naval officers on duty at Sitka, are some of the allegations.

—The 100th anniversary of the birth of Daniel Webster was celebrated Thursday the 12th, with peculiarly interesting exercises at Marshfield, Mass. President Arthur and Secretaries Lincoln and Chandler, Senators Hoar and Dawes, Gov. Long, Mayor Green, and other notables were present.

—Mr. Herbert Spencer the English philosopher, is now spending a few days in Philadelphia as the guest of Mr. G. W. Childs, after which he will return to New York, and then as soon as possible, set sail for his home in England. His health is so poor and the inevitable annoyances of travel are so great that he has given up all ideas of visiting the Far West.

—The recent Denver Exposition was a financial failure. It is stated that the grounds, building and furniture cost $235-000, and only $100,000 of the bonds issued were sold; while nearly every man who bought a special privilege in the building lost heavily.

—H. W. Beecher has formally withdrawn from the New York Congregational Association on account of his difference of theological views.

—A mob attacked the jail at Evansville, Ind., on Wednesday night and after a desperate fight with the officers secured a wife-murderer named Richmond whom they riddled with bullets. One of the lynchers was killed in the fight.

—The engineer's estimate of the cost of the great Brooklyn bridge was seven millions of dollars, and not to exceed that sum. The expenditures up to the present time have been $13,973,490. The general belief is that three to four millions have been stolen by the construction ring and the trustees.

—The indictment against the rebel chiefs of Egypt contain three counts. First, instigating massacre; second, directing the burning of Alexandria; and third, abusing a flag of truce. A list of the prisoners awaiting the court-martial is handed the British Consul-General. It contains 113 names, exclusive of the prisoners in the provinces, who number thirty.

—The Khedive received a deputation of the National Grand Lodge of Freemasons. He thanked the deputation for their kindly visit, and said that he could not be sufficiently grateful to England for the assistance she had rendered him.

TOPICS OF THE TIME.

Two hundred years ago last Sunday William Penn., the favorite of Charles II., landed at Chester, a suburb of Philadelphia, to begin the foundation of a free state—the scheme which had filled his mind for years. The Continent was full of English refugees, some for political reasons, but most for conscience' sake. It was nobly planned that a colony, where political and religious freedom might be secured, should be planted in America. No one else could have obtained from the luxurious Charles so broad a charter as Penn, who for various reasons held a place at court in spite of the obnoxious principles of George Fox which he had embraced. To Americans, Benjamin West's picture has made the name of Penn a household word because of his method with the Indians, which had never been fairly tried by any of the early colonies. It was fitting that the celebration of the founding of this new state should be of a religious nature. Thus the anniversary began in the churches. It will be continued through the week, but will close shamefully with the deepest insult to William Penn and the whole body of Friends, and no less to the nation which is proud in pointing to him as one of its founders. Thursday is to be given up to the Freemasons as "Knight Templar" day, and Friday will be "Military" day for the parade of citizen soldiery. The genius that would attempt to honor the name of Penn by introducing features so hostile to his well known principles might well become the infamous Jeffries, from whose courts Penn's colony received many innocent but plundered and scarred victims.

The Mormons are preparing for the approaching election, and on Saturday held, for the first time it is said, a political meeting. George Q. Cannon, the rejected Congressional delegate, spoke, denouncing the attempt to despoil the Mormons, and manifesting great concern lest the Constitution should not be violated. The meeting gave him a vote of confidence. The Gentiles are also active, Judge Van Zile, U. S. attorney, and other speakers are making a thorough canvass, and have large audiences, but not always favorable ones. The Mormon spirit is proud and unbroken, and there will be voters enough who will escape the charge of polygamy to carry the election. They will maintain the proclamation of Taylor, Cannon and Smith in August, which says: "In regard to our religion or our eternal covenants we have no compromise to make nor principles to barter away. They emanate from God, and are founded upon the rock of eternal ages. They will live and exist when empires, powers and nations shall crumble and decay, and with the help of the Almighty we will guard sacredly our covenants and maintain our interests and be true to our God while time exists or eternity endures." It is evident that the Mormon leaders mean to carry their case to the utmost, and fanaticism has made them eager followers.

The Star-route trial is a train off the track floundering in the mire. The interest in the main culprits has been skilfully diverted by them, and especially by Ingersoll, their lawyer, to the charges of bribery made by some of the jury against government officials. It is now found that the truth, so far as the public will be likely to judge, lies between Dickson, the foreman of the late jury, and a worthless fellow, who somehow had got employment on recommendation of Secretary Lincoln. Two other employees who are charged with offering bribes will be placed under arrest. This diversion, which promises to be not soon decided, raises the hope of the principal thieves that their cases will be put off till some change can be brought about in the Attorney General's office. If Brewster or his able assistant, Merrick, were disposed of they would look confidently for acquittal. Judge Wylie, they also have occasion to fear, and no untried means remain to prevent his again sitting in the case. The three jurors, Dickson (foreman,) Brown and Halmead, who make these charges of bribery are the men who, with one other, Martin, caused the disagreement of the jury. At every ballotting one of the four chief defendants was protected by the vote of one or more of these men. If an inquiry does not prove them to be Freemasons, and their oaths of secrecy the means by which the fraudulent verdict was obtained, we shall be much mistaken.

August 24th the New York Witness printed the unprepossessing likeness of Governor Buren R. Sherman of Iowa, accompanying his proclamation announcing the adoption of the constitutional prohibitory amendment. This proclamation simply announced the fact and closed by quoting the Masonic swagger "all persons will take due notice and govern themselves accordingly." Sherman is a Freemason. Unlike St. John of Kansas it was but a gingerly comfort he gave to the temperance men before the vote; and after it, when the legislature should have been called together to enact laws for enforcing the constitutional amendment, he failed to do so in order to give more time for his brother Masons, the saloon-keepers, time to make every cent in their ungodly traffic, and at the same time make profitable investments for the future when the new law should be enforced. Like McClellan at Antietam, the Iowa victory has not been followed up, and a correspondent of the Witness traveling in Iowa now finds "all the saloons open and doing a thriving business" while "the better portion of the citizens feel humiliated," and ascribe the trouble to the want of back-bone in the Chief Executive of the State." These good people will, alas, learn in time that a more positive influence than a pusillanimous governor—as much more so as the fearful Masonic oath can be—is behind all this betrayal of the temperance hosts of Iowa.

A CARD

TO THE ONE HUNDRED PERSONS WHO UNITEDLY INTEND TO GIVE THE CYNOSURE CANVASS

A GRAND OPENING!

Oct. 26th, 1882.

Are there one hundred? We hope so. There are certainly six. The remaining ninety-four have not yet been heard from; but every day we are looking for their letters.

SIXTEEN DAYS

only remain for the fulfillment of the proposition, will you not be prompt? To refresh your memories the proposition is printed this week on the eighth page.

As a slight token of our appreciation of your efforts just at this time we hope to send each of the one hundred a cloth bound copy of "Holden with Cords," next March.

Yours in the work,
EZRA A. COOK.

An Appeal

TO THE OLD COUNTRY DISSENTERS NOW SETTLED IN THE UNITED STATES.

DEAR FRIENDS:—One of yourselves, a friend to good government in these United States now addresses you, conscious that the cause which prompts his pen is worthy of greater ability to advocate its claims, and to induce you to give to it the same intrepid courage and thorough earnestness which characterizes your warfare against the baneful connection of church and state in the land you have left.

The National Christian Association in this land of your adoption asks your support as a body now engaged in a conflict of arduous character against a power more injurious to the cause of a pure Christianity and the fair working of the civil institutions of this new but great and prosperous country, than is the corrupt connection of the churches with the state in the United Kingdom.

The cause of good government here needs you and your sons, every one, to help it. You are the true successors to the principles of the very founders of a free government, on this side of the Atlantic. Your contests in the land of your birth has given you clearer views of the principles which should prevail than any other class of immigrants. You have the character to be relied upon; you have the honesty to avow your convictions; you have the courage to maintain them against organized social, political or religious forces. To what class of naturalized citizens shall Americans look for aid in the maintenance of good government if not to you? Shall they find support in Chinamen or in the tools of a despotic European priesthood? Shall they hope for ready support from men who cannot speak our common language or who are saturated with communistic ideas? All these have to be taught for a generation at least before they can be relied upon.

The National Christian Association respectfully invites every one of you who desires to maintain this Republic as a nation of free men, to unite with us against the insidious and dangerously subversive influences of the agents of the Secret Empire. If our country were a despotism there might be some reason for a degree of secrecy when reforms were proposed, but under constitutional government such as exists in the United States and in the United Kingdom, there is no need, no excuse for them. Where freedom exists their effect is to limit it, to restrict it, and to transfer it from constitutional safeguards to the control of secret cabals and to men who are responsible to all the dark obligations of the lodge.

And are not our colored millions in the South in danger of becoming victims to the cunning devices and plausible sophistries of error? They are free, but need instruction which could reach them through us and which you can give them by your language and your example. Nor is there a class of men whose words would be more gratefully appreciated than yours by that class of our people, for almost universally they know that from you their race has ever received a hearty support and cordial sympathy. Your power for good is thus immense among these millions in this your new country, and your trained minds can give assistance which will tell for the success of our government and preservation of a pure Christianity against the dangers which beset them from the secret empire—their direst and most dangerous foe.

There is danger to the institutions of the country from the secret societies which interfere with, and fetter their open, free, constitutional exercise. The influence of lodgery is felt in business, in politics, in courts of justice, and through official patronage. We need your aid to help us to purify and keep pure the free institutions of our great and prosperous country. Grander than the emancipation of the Southern slave will be the emancipation of oath-bound consciences, darkened and hardened thereby. The slavery of the South had its color line and was local. The despotism of secretism extends over men of every complexion, and of every creed, and of every land. It seeks a Universal Empire which shall rule over every government, and a universal allegiance to its creed which must dominate over every people, and over every other religion.

Englishmen by birth, if you would honor the memory of your heroic forefathers, who under Cromwell hurled a despot from his throne, and founded our nation; men of Scottish blood, if you would be worthy of the glories which cluster around your name and which your fore-fathers revealed in their self-denying struggles and victories for freedom of conscience; Irishmen, whose generous impulses and aspirations for good have so oft been thwarted,—here is now the field on which we can all unite for victory. Here all may unite to secure fame and blessing as great as any on record and as fraught with future good—and purer and nobler, because, as we trust, it shall be accomplished by peaceful and bloodless weapons.

We therefore beseech you to cast in your lot with us and so help to preserve and to transmit to posterity our free institutions, founded as they are upon the principles of our common Christianity. And may the God of providence guard and guide our beloved country in the future from the dangers of civil war and make it an instrument to bless the world by promoting peace on earth, and good will towards universal man.

A Freeman's Honor.

A freeman host in days of old
Here struggled 'midst the forest lair,
'Gainst savage foe and rival bold
For scanty fare and hearth-stone bare;
But prayed for aid in battle fray,
And trembled 'neath a tyrant's sway.

Through heat and sleet and battle toil
They bore the flag of Liberty,
O'er fell and dell and hallowed soil,
To lasting fame and victory;
And hearts that true for country burned
A master scoffed and slavery spurned.

The soulless sons of free-born sire,
For sinful lust and lawless gain,
In fancied darkness now conspire
To bend the knee to despot reign;
And but the tyrant's time abide
Their freemen guise to rend aside.

Lay Aside Every Weight.

The reformer is in an especial sense "compassed about with a great cloud of witnesses." Of necessity he is a "spectacle unto men and to angels" in just so far as the difference between his principles and those commonly held, and his energy in propagating them, entitle him to the name of one who re-forms. The apostle was speaking to Hebrew Christians, at a time when being such meant more of a sacrifice than it does in modern times. The words quoted are at the close of Paul's wonderful summary of the triumphs of faith in God over all the obstacles of Satan to Christian progress, from Enoch down through the ages to the martyred prophets. The figure used is that of the Roman arena, where Christians as athletes are about to start on the race to which the active Christian life is so like. Around and above them rise tier on tier of spectators, beginning with earth's varied population in the lower seats, rising through the long rows of the prophet and patriarch dead, who have already overcome the world through faith, and lighting up above into a fleecy cloud-belt rustling with wings and audible with murmuring voices of angelic hosts in anxious suspense, while yonder in glorious majesty sits as Governor, Judge and Aid, the beloved and adorable one who in the person of his Son has given his life that success in the Christian race might be possible. Pointing to the concoursed spectators of earth and heaven, and to the difficulties of the road, Paul calls out to the racers, "Lay aside every weight!"

So it is in reform work. Above is the Governor and Director of all real reform work; next, the angel watchers, and the spirits of those who in like labors have come off successful through faith and have gone to their reward; and nearest of all are the worlds' people whose admiration and imitation is one object of the race to win, as in the Christian race of which Paul directly spoke. And in the one as in the other, there are both "weights" to be laid aside, and a race that will be lost if weights are carried.

Supposing that of the athletes one should persist in wearing an artificial hump on his back; another should have his sandals half a foot too long, another should try to run with his long toga on, while others should be continually casting opprobrious epithets at those of the spectators who did not immediately shout approval of their course and begin preparations for a similar race? Suppose that during the race two of the athletes began to bandy words with each other? Suppose that one with a natural deformity should obtrude it upon the spectators' gaze at every opportunity, and that others should fasten bags of gold to their persons before starting? What would be the result, compared with what it might have been? The man who holds to his unpleasant, artificial idiosyncrasies will find himself a laggard at the end and disliked by the spectators he would win; the man with additions built on to the Gospel sandals of the "Preparation of Peace" will find that exaggerations, even of good doctrines, are neither practicable, beautiful nor true; he with the garment of ease and exclusiveness about him will learn too late that "striving" and Scriptural neighborliness are absolute essentials; he whose tongue is illy active will see that hard names make no admirers and wasted breath helps not in a race; they with the quarrel may lose sight of the goal altogether; he with the deformity will learn that hideousness is not attractive; and those carrying gold will find that in a race they cannot be bound to things of earth, however seemingly good in themselves. If these were all the contestants in the race it would be a failure. Some one of them would doubtless reach the goal first, but it would be a race of snails and turtles in place of trained, enthusiastic athletes; and instead of the audience being won to admiration and imitation it would disperse amid a hissing storm of disgust, wondering why the governor of the race permitted such things to be.

Is there not a lesson from these things for reform and other Christian work? Men who carry on reforms are apt to be men of strong individuality, which pushes into unpleasant prominence any disagreeable traits or habits they may have. They do very much good in spite of these, but how much greater would their influence often be without them! Again, reformers are sometimes extremists in good directions. Because most others wear only a heel instead of a sandal, some wear worse than a Chinese shoe to make up for the deficiency. This is not wholly bad, but the middle ground has truth and much the best success with it. This point is closely connected with the use of harsh characterizations in regard to persons not yet favoring the reform. It has not been an entirely unheard of thing for adhering Masons to be told that they were not and could not be Christians. Now, no man is the judge of that matter—God is. Masonry is a terrible evil, and objectively, always a sin; so, years ago, were slavery and the use and sale of intoxicating drinks, and either was probably as bad as Masonry; but no one thinks of saying either that because ministers and deacons were engaged in them they were good or that because they were wicked every one complicated in them was lost eternally. Until a man sees that he is wrong and then wilfully persists in his evil we are not warranted in saying that he is not a Christian. Just when that point is reached omniscience alone can tell; hence the fartherest men can go in condemning those who profess Christianity is to say that they are not living consistent Christian lives. Anything further than that is assuming God's prerogatives and forfeiting the confidence of men in our correctness on other points, as well as rousing their enmity to no good purpose.

It has been something of a question with some as to whether we did not occasionally go too far in making positive accusations, against even the lodge, without positive proof of them. Some have expressed such a belief, directing their criticism particularly towards items and articles which have sometimes appeared in the Cynosure. Unquestionably, self-evident and clearly-proven arguments and assertions are best, let them cut as they may; but accusations against or positive assertions about secretism which are not clearly provable have a smack of injustice about them which repels a candid mind, and sometimes makes prejudiced enemies of those who might otherwise be friends. A few clearly sound arguments are better and stronger than even the very same arguments with a mixture of additional ones not easily demonstrable. A carping spirit is not one that Christ ever manifested, nor is it one that will ever attract support or add strength to any movement. On the other hand, a truly and correctly broad view and Christian-neighborly spirit will disarm much of opposition and rally all the friends of any good cause. In the presence of such a "cloud of witnesses" and facing such obstacles as the reform Christian has to meet, it is absolutely essential, lest the work be hindered and God dishonored, that we do really "lay aside every weight" and press forward. And everything, whether in personal character, utterances or methods of labor, which are not found in kind, in the character, utterances and methods of work of Christ, would seem unquestionably "weights," to be laid aside. In him were no unpleasant idiosyncrasies, natural or acquired; seldom did he make an assertion that did not carry its own credentials and was not accepted on sight; and never do we find a hint at unkindliness or acerbity, even in his most scathing denunciation. His instruction to us was to be "wise as serpents, harmless as doves;" "laying aside every weight," and then, with these characteristics, "running with patience" and "pressing forward unto the mark" of the final completion of the all-embracing reform which he, our Pattern in all things, began.

VISOR.

About Secret Associations.

The number of secret associations, or "orders," as they are often called, is largely increased within a score of years. They have well-nigh honey-combed society, and must have a great influence for good or for ill. Incidentally they must accomplish some considerable good; but taken together, their good appears to us to be eclipsed by a midnight darkness of evil. To go no further than this: does it seem right, when pursuing a lawful occupation, to find one's self secretly circumvented because he stands on a Christian manhood and citizenship, and not on some secret brotherhood?

There are sufficient reasons why these associations ought not to exist; yet, considering the corruptions of the natural heart, it cannot be wondered at that worldly men enjoy them, and seek the advantages that they together make to flow from them. But with Christian men the case is quite different. Being solemnly obligated to Christ—an obligation that necessarily admits of no rivalship—it must be wrong to so vitally obligate themselves beforehand to a society whose principles are avowedly in great measure unknown. If we cannot know these principles before assuming them, then we bind ourselves to what may prove to be wrong, and therefore to anti-Christ. We therefore unevenly yoke ourselves together with unbelievers.

These societies are not Christian. It is not wrong in every instance to associate with worldly men; but it is wrong to associate with them from a worldly stand-point. On this account we should let these secret associations alone. "What part hath he that believeth with an infidel?"

Many of the ceremonies in these associations are childish, puerile, and utterly objectionable to sanctified habit and taste. To touch them is to be defiled with them.

We understand that these associations are, the most of them at least, deliberately Christless. Some may have no prayers; but we know that others have prayers, from which both the name and atonement of Christ are purposely and carefully excluded. And yet, professedly Christian men—Christ's men—hold active membership in them; they become personally responsible for the Christlessness of these institutions. The fact is undeniable. The idea is monstrous.

Again: worldly men feel the need of moral support; so they seek it, on a Christless and worldly basis; and their professedly Christian brother-members stand by and tacitly and substantially bolster them up in a code of morals without salvation. "Am I my brother's keeper?" Of course you are.—Christian Harvester.

AN UNANSWERABLE REPLY.—An infidel Jew in the east of London not long ago interrupted an open-air preacher with the remark that "No such man as Jesus Christ ever lived." A working-man in the audience turned to the objector and said, "You brought me a bill for some things I bought of you the other day." "Yes I did." "At the top of it after the month you wrote 1881?" "Yes." "What do you mean by 1881?" There was silence; the Jew did not know what to say. "What does 1881 mean? You go back and back, till you come at last to the year 1. What happened then? It is the first year of what?" The Jew had to confess, "It was the birth of him you call Christ." "Then," replied the working-man, "don't say that such a man never lived. If he never lived, you have no business to put 1881 on the bill."—Ex.

REFORM STORY.

Holden with Cords.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "LITTLE PEOPLE," "A SUNNY LIFE," ETC.

Chapter XXV—The Warfare Begins.

O, how we missed him! how hard it was to keep on missing him every day!—but over our loss, as over every other void that death makes, flowed the cold remorseless tide of plans and purposes for the morrow. Miss Loker had received a pressing call from a lately widowed brother to come and keep his house for him; and my mother, in her invalid state of health was only too glad to resign all her household cares into Rachel's hands, while I took my grandfather's place as head of the family. As Rachel and I prepared to move from the little home he had built and furnished for us with such loving care scarcely more than a year before, thinking doubtless, as we ourselves believed and hoped, that with his hale hearty frame a long, green old age might yet lay before him.

"He took such pleasure in planning it for us," said Rachel, tearfully. "Even that end window he had put in just because I happened to say that I always wanted a kitchen to have the morning sun. How I wish Joe might live here some day."

"Joe isn't one of the stay-at-home sort. By the time he is twenty-one he'll be striking out for himself in Kentucky or Illinois."

"Then Mark, perhaps, if he should ever get married,—and I suppose he will some time."

But any thought of marriage seemed at present far from Mark's head, which I privately considered was a lucky thing; for while I cherished the most profound respect for his talents and learning, I had an equally small regard for Mark's abilities in any such practical line of effort as the supporting of a family. And I only smiled at Rachel's last suggestion.

So in that immutable order of things which has ever been and ever will be while the human generations come and go, new hopes blossomed where the old had perished, and one morning when the snow lay thick and white over my grandfather's grave, I took his place, and conducted with faltering voice the family worship.

Rachel had told me the whole of that last conversation with my grandfather, keeping nothing back. The gentle Quakeress had uttered no false warning. Unwittingly I had put a stumbling block in the way of Rachel's salvation. Instead of joining her in her search after Him who is not far from any one of us I had tried to satisfy my conscience with the Christless prayers and rites of the lodge. But now we were in deed and in truth one:—fellow pilgrims together through a troublous world, and heirs of the same blessed hope, a far more eternal and exceeding weight of glory when we both should pass to an immortal reunion beyond the veil.

But I was not yet entirely free from the lodge fetters. Like Mr. Jedediah Mills, I considered that "an oath was an oath" under all circumstances, and any violation thereof a crime "to be punished by the judges." It was Rachel, who, with her clearer understanding of Scripture truth, gave the blow that finally knocked apart those shackling obligations too fully and completely for any earthly power ever to clench again.

"Leander," she said suddenly to me one day, "I thought at first it was a dreadful thing for Captain Morgan to break his oath. But I have begun to think differently. Now listen while I read this verse: 'If a soul swear, pronouncing with his lips to do evil or to do good, whatsoever it be that a man shall pronounce with an oath, and it be hid from him; when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty in one of these.' Then it goes on to tell how he must bring a trespass offering for his sin. Now if there was any provision made under the old dispensation for rash and foolish oaths there must be under the new. Masons don't know what they are swearing to when they take these obligations, or in ninety-nine cases out of one hundred they wouldn't take them at all. It is hid from them."

"But Rachel," I said doubtfully, "Are you sure that is what the verse means?"

"Well, if you don't believe me, come and read Bagster's explanation of it: 'This relates to rash oaths or vows which a man was afterwards unable, or which it would have been sinful to perform.' I hope you don't doubt Bagster. There now," continued Rachel triumphantly; "what can be clearer? Shall a Christian keep a wicked oath that wouldn't have been binding even on a Jew?"

I did not reply at once, for I was reading the verses that followed. How graciously that old Levitical law stooped to the necessities of the poorest.—"He shall bring his trespass offering unto the Lord, a lamb or a kid of the goats . . . or if he be not able to bring a lamb then he shall bring for his trespass which he hath committed two turtle doves or two young pigeons . . . . but if he be not able to bring two turtle doves or two young pigeons, then he that sinned shall bring for his offering the tenth part of an ephah of fine flour." Should the blood of God's eternal Son be of less efficacy to purge my conscience from the guilt of these rash, blasphemous Masonic vows? To this day I feel the thrill of recovered freedom that tingled through every vein when I read that old Jewish law, and realized that once more I was a man;—no longer a cowering, shivering, faltering slave, bound with the self-forged manacles of a lodge oath.

Just then Mark Stedman came in. There are some natures that the first bugle note of any great moral conflict seem to rouse instantly to action. Like the war horse of Scripture, pawing in the valleys and rejoicing in his strength, they smell the battle afar off, and say ha! ha! to the sound of the trumpet. And Mark Stedman belonged to this class of minds, predestinated by their very constitution to fill the ranks of the world's martyrs and reformers.

"I have been subpœned to appear at the next sitting of the county court to tell what I know about the murder of Morgan;" he said, as he stood warming his hands at the fire. "I shall start early to-morrow morning. It really looks now as if the courts were going to take up the matter vigorously; and if so they can't help finding bills of indictment against some of the leading actors in this outrageous business."

"But what is the use of indicting if they don't convict? I wouldn't snap my finger for any chance of conviction with a Masonic jury to sit on the case. And what else can you expect but a packed jury when the sheriff who summons it is a Mason? Depend upon it the Masonic institution will shield Morgan's murderers to the uttermost. I am not enough of a prophet to say what the final outcome will be, but I am sure that law will be evaded and justice hampered in every conceivable way to clear the guilty parties."

"I know that," answered Mark, "but I believe in the final triumph of right."

"So do I—when there comes that grand general settling up in the other world," I returned. "By the way I saw a newspaper paragraph the other day which convinced me that the father of lies was busy at his usual occupation. It reported that Captain Morgan had been seen by a lately returned sailor in the streets of Smyrna, disguised as a Turk."

"As though anybody would be fool enough to believe such a silly falsehood!" said Mark, indignantly.

"There'll be plenty to believe it. Falsehood is the chief engine of the lodge. But here comes Joe with a letter—for you, Mark."

Mark tore open the epistle, gave a brief glance at the contents, and then handed it to me with a smile on his grave, resolute young face.

"You see the fight has begun, Leander."

It was a wretched scrawl—for the writer had evidently tried to disguise his hand—threatening Mark in scurrilous and abusing terms and ending thus: "I know four Royal Arch Masons who stand ready to dispatch you as a traitor against the most heavenly and benefice[illegible] institution on earth. ONE OF THE F[illegible]R."

"Quite an interesting communication, isn't it?"

said Mark, coolly; "but not the first I have received of like nature."

"Mark, you must go armed. You ought to carry pistols."

"No, Leander. I have thought it over, but the servant of the Lord must not strive. Shall I rely on an arm of flesh when Jehovah himself has promised to be my shield? Besides, men who will take the time and pains to write anonymous threats are usually too cowardly to dare do anything more. Nothing troubles me about these letters but the postage on them. It is rather too bad to have to pay for the privilege of receiving personal abuse."

"Mark;" said I, finally, "You are not going to start on this journey, short as it is, alone. I shall tell Rachel that I really want to hear the proceedings of the court, which is the truth. And having none of your conscientious scruples about the use of carnal weapons, I mean to go armed to the teeth. If anybody meddles with us it won't be for their health."

Mark demurred, but my mind was made up. I took Joe into confidence, however, for since our grandfather's death there had been a wonderful change in the lad. The maturity and steadiness of manhood was fast replacing his boyish thoughtlessness and mischief, and I knew I could trust him not only to keep the alarm I felt from Rachel, but to manage matters during my brief absence. So that everything was in readiness for my early departure with Mark the next morning; when, just as the candle was beginning to burn low in the socket, and the great kitchen clock stood on the stroke of nine, there was a rap at the door. As I opened it, to my inexpressible surprise the light fell full on the familiar features of Sam Toller.

"Why Sam!" I exclaimed. "Come right in. How do you happen to be in Brownsville?"

"Wall, I'm on kinder pressin' business," said Sam, as with weary, foot-sore tread, he followed me into the kitchen. "I've walked a'most from Rochester to let ye know about it. The Masons have laid a plan to kidnap Mark Stedman on his way to court so as to stop his giving testimony."

"How did you find out about it Sam," I asked after a moment's silence.

"Wall, ye see the way of it was I overheard accidentally enough of their talk to make me suspicion that they were up to some mischief. So I jest steps up to 'em and gives 'em the sign, and sez I, 'I'm yer man, ready to do anything ye set me to, ready to shed my last drop of blood in defence of the glorious institution of Masonry!' And after I had made 'em think by talking in that way awhile they could make a tool of me easy, I found out what they were up to. Their plans are all cut and dried. There's a lonesome part of the road, jest the other side of Savin's Bend where he'll have to walk a piece if he goes by stage; and they calkerlate to waylay him there. They'll all have masks on, so it can never be known who they be. Wall, I spoke up and sez, 'Gentlemen, I can help ye in this ere business. I know Mark Stedman and he knows me; and I can make him play into yer hands as easy as a woodchuck walks into a trap.' So they kinder debated over it awhile, and then the leader sez to me, 'The d———d villain's mouth has got to be stopped. We'll pay you fair for the job if you undertake it!' So we struck a bargain, and then the whole party of us went to the tavern to get a drink; and while they were treating each other, I contrived it to slip off by saying I had got to see to the horses. So here I be. Now what's to be done about it."

"Sam, you're a good fellow, worth your weight in gold;" said I, shaking his hand with a fervor of gratitude, as I realized how narrow had been Mark's escape. "But I don't want Rachel to know anything about this at present. And Mark need not be told of it till morning. Then we can take counsel together. Do you think any of the Brownsville lodge are in the plot?"

"I don't want to name names when I ain't sartin," answered Sam, cautiously. "Them that's got the job on hand don't belong in Brownsville. But I tell ye, Leander, Masonry is as full of long arms as that devil fish Tim Kendall was telling about seeing when he was off on his cruise. They keep swaying about ready to clutch ye, and once get a hold they never let go. The only way to do when they grapple a man is to chop off its arms and leave a part of the critter sticking to the flesh."

Rachel just then entered with that smile on her face which only mothers wear when they come from bending over the rosy sleep of their first born. Our little David was growing finely, a bright healthy babe; and we were so proud of all his little budding infantile accomplishments as most young parents who see in their eldest darling something they will never see in any child later born, for it is the first blossoming of their young hopes—as Scripture puts it "the beginning of strength."

She started at seeing Sam quietly domiciled in his favorite corner, but it had been a family prophecy that "we should see Sam Toller back some day when we least expected it," and after a few surprised inquiries, she hastened to set out a substantial supper of cold meat, brown bread and cheese; nor did she hesitate to cut a generous triangle of mince pie, to all of which Sam did justice in a way that would have appalled the dyspeptic generation of the present day.

But Sam seemed to miss something. His eye kept wandering to the empty arm-chair. There it stood in its old corner, just as my grandfather left it the night the death angel summoned him. Even his Bible lay on the stand with his spectacles beside, for Rachel, with that strange clinging of soul to the poor mute things its beloved will never again need, would not have them put away. Then he said hesitatingly:—

"The Captain—he's well I hope."

But when we told him with voices broken by tears that the kindly smile had vanished forever, and the eyes that never glanced sternly save at some story of wrong and oppression would beam on us no more,—that the Captain had reached a port beyond storm and shipwreck even the Eternal City of our God, with its pearly gates, its golden streets, its never ceasing fruitage—Sam Toller lifted up his voice and wept aloud.

Dover Academy is an institution founded many years since in the quiet village of Dover, Bureau county, Ill. It has passed through the usual vicissitudes of institutions of that class in our changing West, at times shut up, and then reopeniug under some vigorous hand. Bro. W. H. Chandler, presiding elder in the United Brethren Rock River Conference writes that at last session of that body it was adopted as a conference school. Dover was also made a preaching station. Bro. Chandler at present has charge of the latter. He writes: We intend God helping to build up a thorough anti-lodge school. I bespeak through the Cynosure an interest in the prayer of God's faithful ones. The lodge tide will be against us of course, but God is for us. We go forward trusting in him. The outlook for us at Dover is excellent." The prospect is truly more cheering for the prosperity of the school than for years past. President Allen of Westfield College visited Dover at its commencement in June and delivered an address. He was encouraged by the faith of the brethren in charge and regarded the outlook for the future as very promising.

—Rob. Morris writes with great suavity of manner to the Cynosure office, but he uses other speech in his letter to the Voice of Masonry and the lodge journals East. He was very punctual and verbose in his reports to them and maintained the reputation gained by cutting Masonic marks about Palestine. He lately wrote to his old Masonic friend, Macoy, of New York, that he has spent thirty years in trying to solve the Morgan mystery, and he has just been to Batavia to get the closing proof. Aha! thirty years vain search, but he has just been able to get "the closing proof." What conclusive evidence has he found which are not also open to Anti-masons. His thirty years hunt after Morgan reminds one of a ground mole burrowing through the earth to find the sun that warms him in summer.

Thurlow Weed.

The reports from the bedside of this venerable man, spared of God to give the most important testimony respecting the Morgan abduction, were early last week far from encouraging. Better symptoms prevailed later, however, and on Saturday Mr. Weed sent the following personal note to the editor of the New York Tribune:

New York, Oct. 21.—I am deeply sensible of the great kindness and sympathy of friends manifested to me in various ways. I am oppressed by my inability to make adequate acknowledgment. The members of my family have endeavored to do this in many cases, but there is very much that can be acknowledged only by grateful remembrances, such as calls of anxious inquiry and the sending of delicious fruits and delicacies from every direction—even from the hot-house of Alexander Mitchell, of Milwaukee. George Bancroft is only one of hundreds who have called and whom I was unable to see. I wish I could express my appreciation of the kindly interest which so many seem to feel.

While I am not without hope of improved health, I am far from sharing the confidence felt by those about me in my ultimate recovery. My thoughts necessarily dwell a good deal more upon the future than upon the present. A man who has lived more than four-score years has little reason to hope for length of days, and in that aspect of the case my thoughts are now much more fixed on the world to come than the world where I have enjoyed for so many years so much good and mercy and blessing. I am very thankful alike to my God, my Saviour, and my fellow-creatures for a world of kindness extending through a long life.

While I can never be indifferent to the welfare of my country, I have been too ill for several weeks to think as much as usual of political affairs. I can never be indifferent to the welfare of the Republican party—a party to which the country is indebted for the spirit which destroyed slavery and for the shield which prevented the destruction of the Union. In reference, however, to the methods employed in the campaign in this State, or to the prospects of their success, I have expressed no opinion.

Thurlow Weed.

—The lodge organs are beginning to talk of the Monument as they are wont to do (falsely) about Morgan himself. Says the Herald of Avon, N. Y.:

"It is said that the Morgan monument, lately erected in Batavia, when asked the question, 'Are you dead?' winks very naturally with the left eye. And it is also reported to have been seen coming out of a saloon before daylight one morning recently, with a bulge over the side pocket shaped like a bottle. It got into position in time to greet the morning sun and smile on the early A. M. passenger trains."

—The late Mr. Marquand, of Connecticut, one of the five corporate members of the American board, who died recently, once said of one who thought to do him a favor by preventing an applicant for aid from calling upon him: "I do not thank any man for coming between me and a solicitation for any worthy cause." The Missionary Herald appropriately says in connection with this: "A Christian should never be troubled because he is asked to give. If he cannot give, he may well be sorry; but if he does not wish to give, he ought to be more than sorry—he should be alarmed. Lack of money is by no means so sad as is the lack of a disposition to contribute of what one has. A man often shuts the door in the face of his best friend when he shuts off an appeal to his benevolence."

—All reforms are inaugurated and enforced by the people, by politicians never. They "catch on" behind when they feel very sure the people never meant business more earnestly and thoroughly than now.

—John A. Black, business manager of the Presbyterian Board of Publication, is making arrangements for establishing a Presbyterian book store in Chicago.

NEW ENGLAND.

THE NEW ENGLAND BOARD of the National Christian Association has it headquarters at No. 8 Portland St., Worcester, Mass. A full supply of books and tracts constantly on hand. Orders promptly filled. Correspondence solicited. E. D. BAILEY, N. E. Sec.

—A gentleman in Worcester supplied one of the M. E. churches with anti-secrecy tracts last Sunday morning, placing over 200 in the hymn books before the people assembled.

—A tract distributer met an Odd-fellow on the street and gave him a tract. The man was much enraged, and declared (as they usually do) that Odd-fellowship was "better than the church." This vain boast is the worst feature of the order—it "exalts itself above all that is called God" and thus betrays its anti-Christian character.

—Joel Holton, of Vermont, writes: "I have taken the Cynosure many years, and shall probably take it as long as I live. I am in my eightieth year. Have labored in the reforms of the day from early manhood, in the temperance cause, and anti-slavery cause—was made secretary of the first anti-slavery society ever formed in Vermont. Was Anti-mason from the early publication of Morgan's disclosure of its secrets."

—Another Vermonter is alive to the work: "May God prosper you in your work. It is a good work and you have Satan and his imps to contend with. I have seen the 'grand hailing sign of distress' given in the court room to prevent justice." Vermont has as much Anti-masonry in it as any State in New England and something must be done to develop it.

—A new friend, subscribing for our new paper and ordering tracts and books says: "I want your prices, for I want a lot of them. I am a seceding Mason, but do not mention my name in connection with it at present, as I am doing what I do as quietly as I can. I can give you some information of importance perhaps." When the reform progresses a little further the lodge will be surprised at the large number of men who are held in check by their cut-throat obligations, but who secretly hate the yoke and will rejoice at deliverance.

The New Hampshire State Meeting.

WORCESTER, MASS., Oct. 16th, 1882.

The New Hampshire sixth annual convention proved to be a most delightful occasion, and the expressions of thankfulness from the lips of those who had labored and prayed for its success were unmeasured and emphatic. The convention assembled at 9 A. M., Wednesday, Oct. 11th, and commenced its sessions with a devotional meeting led by Prof. S. C. Kimball. From the first it was evident the brethren were "in the spirit" and eager to follow his promptings.

After the business meeting, Elder J. G. Smith, of New Hampton, delivered an able address on the subject "Evidence of the near coming of the Lord." The address was listened to with profound attention and was highly commended even by those who took exceptions to the conclusions. It was expected that Deacon Increase Leadbetter, of Auburndale, Mass., would discuss the topic "Duty of a Christian towards Reform," but in his absence another good servant of the Lord, Deacon E. Smith, of Centre Strafford, N. H., discussed the subject with ability and was followed by others whose earnestness and enthusiasm were noticeable and augured good to the cause.

Rev. H. T. Cheever, of Worcester, who served as temporary chairman and remained in the chair at the request of the new president throughout the convention, gave a temperance lecture in the afternoon. His address was carefully prepared and ably presented. Mr. Cheever's presence and addresses added not a little to the strength of the convention and he well deserved the vote of thanks accorded him unanimously.

The second day, after the devotional meeting which lasted an hour, Mr. L. D. Bryant, of New Market, gave an address of great clearness and force on the "Sanctity of the Sabbath." Mr. Bryant argued forcibly for the binding nature of the decalogue, including the fourth commandment, notwithstanding the effort in some quarters to rest our Sabbath observance on other grounds alone than the command of God. He also included in his remarks some earnest exhortations and simple instructions about keeping the day holy. After his address others followed enforcing the leader's position upon the consciences of those present.

Prof. S. C. Kimball led the topic "The Relation of Christian Holiness to Moral Reform." Both the leader and those who followed advocated holiness of heart and life and made sad mention of the fact that many teachers of holiness are teaching only half the truth—they urge rightly the inner work but do not insist sufficiently upon a high standard of morals. Many of them show cowardice or culpable ignorance concerning what belongs to a perfect code of morals and refuse to bear witness against prevailing sin. Noticeably is this true of those who have been ensnared in secret lodges but prudently(?) decline to warn others against them.

Next followed a very interesting report of the progress of reform work in New Hampshire. No previous year has witnessed anything like the success of the past year. An entire change seems to have come over those parts of the State where work has been done. Heretofore the press, the churches, the ministers and the people, all joined with the lodge in its bold endeavor to destroy the reform and prevent agitation. Now three places sent invitations for the annual convention to be held in their churches, several secular papers courteously inserted the call for the convention, a leading denominational paper of the State did the printing for the convention and donated it, the people everywhere were respectful, while the church in which we assembled opened its house freely and furnished a local audience of sympathetic listeners. With these evidences of the favor of God and the success of the work we could do no less than sing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

The report on the State work was supplemented by an earnest appeal for an enlargement of our financial resources. It was stated truly that the reform waits in New England for nothing but the money to push forward with. Doors are opening on every hand. People are even eager to see the work progress but we are greatly straitened for means. No less than four capable young men have volunteered their services for work at small salaries, while every State is calling for workers, yet there is not the money at hand to warrant enlargement. It was stated that some men deeply interested in the reform were giving $10. a year when they could give $100, but their minds had not yet expanded to the urgency of the demand. It is a fact that some men, including some prominent ministers, are now secretly contributing to our New England work, not wishing yet to identify themselves publicly with us but earnestly praying for our success. Such a fact is significant and if friends only seize this favorable opportunity to press forward we shall gather great strength to meet the final struggle, when the lodge, infuriated by defeat shall turn on us again to make its last desperate effort to save itself. That time is coming and now is our favorable season to gather strength for it.

After the sermon in the afternoon the Lord's supper was celebrated at the request of members of the Baptist church in which the convention was assembled.

In the evening Rev. H. T. Cheever gave us a very able address on the anti-secrecy reform, urging with great force the duty of seceding Masons to publicly renounce their obligations, as in no other way could they atone for their complicity in evil or rid themselves of their yoke of bondage.

Dea. E. Smith, Aaron Foss, Garland Brown and their families, with others, are deserving of the highest praise for their interest in the work, but especially for their unbounded hospitality. Their houses became hotels which we used with the utmost freedom and we were made to feel ourselves perfectly welcome.

Bro. A. F. Spaulding rendered invaluable services in numberless ways, looking after little details which added much to the pleasure of the occasion. Elder Isaac Jackson and wife came down from their home in Maine to aid in the deliberations. Bro. Jackson several times addressed the convention with great acceptance. But "the time would fail me to tell of Gideon, and of Barak and of Samson" ('with the women also,') who "wrought righteousness."

A marked and important feature of the programme was the diversity of topics discussed, all of which had an important bearing on the general object of the convention, and were so treated as to enlarge our vision of the great reform in which we are engaged. The success of New Hampshire in combatting adversity and maintaining a State organization ought to unite its neighbors on the East and West side of it to go and do likewise. E. D. BAILEY.

Sixth Annual Meeting of the New Hampshire Christian Association.

The Sixth Annual Meeting of the New Hampshire Christian Association was held at Center Strafford, October 11-12. The following officers were chosen for the ensuing year: President, Elder J. G. Smith; Secretary, S. C. Kimball; Treasurer, Deacon E. Smith.

Vice Presidents: Belknap county, Elder J. H. Bartlett; Carroll county, B. M. Mason; Cheshire county, Deacon F. S. Wood; Coos county, Elder John B. Deering; Grafton county, Prof. J. K. Lord; Hillsboro county, Moses Sawyer; Merrimack county, A. H. Brown; Rockingham county, Rev. E. C. Cogswell; Strafford county, Darius C. Dargin; Sullivan county, Elder J. F. Varney.

Executive Committee: Elder J. G. Smith, Deacon E. Smith, Deacon Moses Pierce, L. D. Bryant, S. C. Kimball.

The following resolutions were passed:

1. That secret societies are a hindrance to happiness in the family, peace in the community, justice in our courts and purity in the church, therefore they should be discountenanced by all good people and prohibited by law.

2. That we commend the Christian Cynosure and Christian Witness to the public as faithful teachers of Christian truth and able defenders of pure morality.

3. That we will hallow the Lord's day, abstain from intoxicating liquors and tobacco, and labor to teach others to do so.

4. Thanks to Rev. H. T. Cheever and Prof. E. D. Bailey for able lectures and valuable counsel.

5. Asking the American Missionary Association to instruct their agents in the South to discountenance oath-bound secret societies.

6. Thanks to the people of Center Strafford for their ample and generous hospitality.

Able and effective lectnres on secret societies were given by Bros. Cheever and Bailey. Excellent sermons were preached by Elder J. G. Smith and Prof. Bailey. Mr. Cheever also lectured on temperance. Addresses of great value and interest were given by Elder I. Jackson of Maine, Deacon E. Smith of Strafford, and L. D. Bryant of New Market.

Upon the whole it was one of the best State Conventions ever held in New Hampshire. The glory of the Lord filled the house from the commencement to the close of the meetings. The Lord's supper was administered by Elders Jackson and Cheever with special blessing.

The attendance was good, the order perfect and the members of secret fraternities either stayed away or behaved like gentlemen. A new and better era has evidently dawned upon reform work in New Hampshire. Bro. Spaulding supplied the convention with Anti-masonic books and tracts. S. C. KIMBALL,

Secretary N. H. C. A.

—The Freemasons of Western New York find that the Morgan monument casts a heavy shadow. They are bolstering up by means of Masonic conventions. Such an one was held lately in Warsaw to drill rusty Hiramites in the fooleries and blinding worship of the three degrees.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A Cheering Letter from Michigan.

WESTON, Mich., Oct. 10, 1882.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Perhaps some of your readers would like to hear from this part of the field again. Your weekly visits are warmly welcomed by myself and others here, and especially of late have been eagerly read the stirring accounts of the meeting at Batavia, and the erection of the monument to the hero William Morgan. Hero he was, daring to take his life in his hand, that his fellowmen might be warned of the dangers which beset the liberties of the Republic. Foully murdered by the lodge power, and his murderers shielded from the avenging hands of justice by the same power, a monument rises to-day to vindicate his fame and to enroll him among the heroes of the past who have died to bless their race.

But will the monument be permitted to stand? An institution that demands and takes the life of an offending member, no matter how pure his motives, will not hesitate to insult the moral sense of mankind by, if possible, pursuing their victim, Satan-like, beyond the grave. But there is one thing the lodge power cannot do, that is stifle the voice of the printing press and utterances of honest, earnest hearts. While it is heart-sickening to see so many bow the sycophantic knee to this Baal, still it is a matter of rejoicing and of devout gratitude that there are some Elijah's left in the land. I bless God for the National Christian Association and the noble men who have it in charge. May it take a deeper and wider hold of the public conscience and interest.

Some friends here last spring bought an Anti-masonic library advertised in the Cynosure and presented it to the library of Kalamazoo Baptist College. I have the pleasure of assuring the contributing friends, and all others, that the books are eagerly sought after by the students and read, and debated over with all the ardor of student life. This is like sowing good seed in prolific soil. A copy also of the Cynosure has been subscribed for and sent to the reading room of the College. The friends of our cause can do a great and promising work by supplying the college libraries of our land with reading of this character. Whereever truth is allowed to enter it should be sent. The nauseating neutrality of so many of our religious papers should be an incentive to our workers to aid in the circulation of such as refuse to make obeisance to "the image of the beast." Some of our secular papers open their columns occasionally to an article letting light into the lodge dens.

The following was prepared by me and sent to the Adrian Daily Times which published it, the editor supplying the heading:

A HINT CONCERNING THE STAR ROUTE VERDICT.

The Times, in its issue of Monday, in speaking of the verdict of the jury in the star route trials, says:

"The verdict has caused more wonderment and conjecture than any other that has been given lately."

To some minds there is not so much cause for wonder, when the influences which are brought to bear in such cases are considered. Whoever will take the trouble to consult Wendell's New York Reports, vol. 13, pp. 19–22, will find the following testified and sworn to:

"Furthermore do I promise and swear that I will aid and assist a companion Royal Arch Mason when engaged in any difficulty; and espouse his cause so far as to extricate him from the same if in my power, whether he be right or wrong."

The above is not rant, but truth wrung from reluctant lips. The following extract from a letter from Senator Sumner of the U. S Senate, to the Hon. S. D. Greene, bearing date Jan. 13, 1854, I subjoin as an interpretation of the above:

"I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antagonistical to our free institutions, and tend to centralization and anarchy—Freemasonry and slavery; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free as our ancestors designed it."

In the light of the above it is not so much of a wonder that justice so often fails to get her dues. VERITAS.

I have no manner of doubt but that Freemasonry is used by rascally Goverment officers to cover their tracks, and that so few, so very few are ever convicted and such as are, like the whisky ring, are promptly pardoned.

But with every poison there is said to be antidote, so our antidote for the lodge virus is truth and light. That these blessed spirits may by sent everywhere on their divine mission is the prayer of yours, C. QUICK.

Chicago Exposition Notes.

While attending the Exposition book stand as relief for Bro. Phillips, there came along a young man, whose face was a benediction. He said he was pleased to see this good work going on in the way of enlightening the public on secret societies, stating that he had been strongly urged to join the lodge, and was at the point of joining, when he heard our self-denying brother Elder Austin lecture on secret societies. After investigating the subject further, he was perfectly satisfied as to the nature of the institutions, and was very grateful for the warning which kept him from getting into the clutches of the lodge.

On Wednesday eve. we had also experiences of an entirely different nature. A granger looking man stopped at the stand, and remarked, "Have you any of our lodge," "I presume we have. At least, the principal orders are represented here." He then began to assail our publications claiming their statements to be inconsistent with the truth. He also became much exasperated, and began to curse and swear, saying "these statements were all a pack of lies," seasoning his remarks with profanity, and unmeasured invectives. He was reproved for his indulging in oaths, but called in question my right to rebuking him; and, after a spirited discussion, he even denied that he had sworn, and tried to turn it off on the lodge oath. "No sir," we rejoined, "what you did was to break the third command of the Decalogue.

"Why no," said the lodgite, "I did not swear; at least I do not know what I said. What did I say? Mention the words I used, if you will?"

"No sir," we replied, "we dare not trifle with God's name in that manner."

"Well," he remarked, "it will not hurt just to state what I said; I beg pardon if I did swear."

We more and more see the truth of Paul's saying in 1 Cor. 15: 33: "Evil communications corrupt good manners." Also 2 Cor. 6:14,15:" "What fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness. What part hath he that believeth, with an infidel." JOHN SCHOENBERGER.

Sowing Beside all Waters.

SOUTH SALEM, O., Oct. 17, 1882.

The Presbyterian church in the United States of America, as a body, is not favorable to Freemasonry. The great body of its members have a strong dislike for it. Yet this large denomination, through ignorance and through fear, is, to some extent, though unwittingly to itself, made the conservator of the lodge anti-Christ, and tolerates in its bosom a viper which is poisoning its life-blood.

Yet here and there the light is breaking on this conservative body of Christians. An eminent minister and professor in one of our theological seminaries, lately said to me, "I do not see how an enlightened Christian man can go into a Masonic lodge." Some six years ago I was allowed to speak before Presbytery for half an hour on the subject of Freemasonry, and in course of my remarks characterized the lodge as a heathen institution. At this some laughed, and many opened their eyes. But the seed was sown. On my way home from that meeting an elder of three degrees, member of the Presbytery, who had already ceased to attend the lodge, said to me, "I see the evil. But Masonry is strong; it is not wise to oppose it." This year I met another elder in one of our churches, with whom I had never before become personally acquainted, and he said to me, "I am a Mason. I heard your speech at Hillsboro, and I agree with you. I found that the lodge interfered with my Christian duties, and I left it more than four years ago."

Yesterday another elder in one of our churches, living 20 miles distant, called on me and said that he heard my remarks at Hillsboro, and also got one of the tracts that more lately I had scattered in Presbytery, and he wanted more information. He took the "Scrap book," with a good lot of papers for distribution and subscribed for the Cynosure. I have also spoken on the religion of Masonry in half a dozen of our own churches. We move slowly. But "The world do move." WARREN TAYLOR.

From Bro. Tapley.

COLUMBUS, MISS. Oct. 5, 1882.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I write to send up my hearty cheers for the completion of the Morgan monument. I could not be present at the meeting of the National Christian Association but rejoice that the Lord was there. Every friend of reform may well thank God and take courage.

From the friends of the colored people many thanks are due to Bro. Roy for his noble address, placing in its true light the need of great effort to shield them from the grasp of the lodge. It speaks well for the American Missionary Association.

Brother Innes, of the Second Congregational church of Memphis, Tenn., lately visited us. He spent no time in exalting Hiram Abiff, or giving due guards in the pulpit (as I have seen others do) but preaches "repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ." I was glad to hear him and also to know that he is not under the dominion of secret orders.

There have been recently good opportunities to distribute reform tracts, which have been improved, at the meetings of different religious bodies. I hope that through the blessing of God currents of thought have been thus set in motion which shall result in good in many distant places. I bid brethren Hinman and Feemster God speed in their work. E. TAPLEY.

Our Mail.

Robt. Shemeld, St. Paul, Minn., sends for copies of Freemasonry Illustrated, which he intends to loan to reliable parties.

L. I. Wicker, Holly, Mich., asks

"Can you give me a receipt for corning beef so it will keep in hot weather or through the summer, the same as it does at the packers in Chicago?"

The Chicago packers keep their corned beef cold all summer with ice. Corned beef will spoil unless kept very cool. Make a strong brine, strong enough to bear up a potato. It is well to boil it.

Frank Bowman, Fairfield, Iowa:

"I think I can sell some of your works. * * Have had calls for them."

Christian reform literature is needed everywhere, wanted and called for when known. Circulate the Cynosure, books, and tracts. They come like cold water to a thirsty soul.

Mrs. S. G. Reed, Kinney's Corners, N. Y.:

"I feel to thank the Lord that he met his children at Batavia and so wonderfully blessed us. * * The brethren and sisters seemed to be filled with the Holy Spirit. It seemed just as though heaven was really begun here on earth."

Moses Pettengill, Peoria, Ill.:

"I enjoyed the Batavia meeting highly and trust that good will come of it."

J. A. Richards, Ft. Scott, Kansas:

"Batavia, glorious!

Words of Life for every Day.

SANCTIFY THEM THROUGH THY TRUTH; THY WORD IS TRUTH.

Thursday, October 26.—Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty. 2 Cor. 6:17, 18.

Friday, October 27.—Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God. 2 Cor. 7:1.

Saturday, October 28.—Finally, brethren, farewell. Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you. 2 Cor. 13: 11.

Sabbath, October 29.—And he cometh the third time and saith unto them, Sleep on now and take your rest: it is enough, the hour is come; behold, the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners. Mark 14:41

Monday, October 30.—Be ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you. Eph. 4:32.

Tuesday, October 31.—For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself. Phil. 3:20, 21.

Wednesday, November 1.—Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and mind through Christ Jesus. Phil. 4: 6, 7.

Obituary.

Died on the 25th of August, 1882, at Bowensburgh, Ill., FRANK E. MATTESON, aged 29 years. The only child of Mrs. J. P. Richards, of Belmont, Wisconsin, a young man of rare qualifications and goodness of heart. Uniting with the Congregational church of Bowensburgh at the age of 18, he was a consistent member until his death. Active in the church and Sabbath-school, he will be greatly missed by both. While he firmly maintained his Christian principles, he possessed the rare faculty of retaining the respect and friendship of all. He was a reader of the Cynosure, and was interested in the cause it advocates. The afflictive blow falls heavily upon his parents although our faith tells us he is at rest. **

Books and Magazines.

The latest contribution by the celebrated William Taylor to missionary literature is a neat volume entitled, "Ten years of Self-supporting Missions in India." This is also probably his best work on independent or self-supporting missions. The opening chapters are devoted to an exposition of the principles upon which his very successful mission work is based, and the closing pages show that the application of them is practicable in contrast with the long established methods of missionary funds and societies; also the South American missions founded on the same principles have a chapter. A forcible illustration of the self-suporting plan is this:

"The cattle kings of Wyoming told me when I was laboring there, that from the severity of some of their winters, they lost from three to five per cent of their cattle. I asked why they did not keep a supply of hay to keep the weaklings through? 'Give them hay and they quit work, and their example tends to demoralize the herd—cheaper to let them die.' That was a rigid application of the principle of self-support but that is the way they develop the hardy herds which require no feed in the winter, and hence can be multiplied without any reference whatever to the limit of winter supplies of hay or grain."

Paul's method of planting the Gospel is thus analyzed by the author: 1. Plant nothing but pure gospel seed; 2. The entire responsibility of church work and church government Paul laid on native converts, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, as fast as he could get them well organized; 3. He proclaimed "the laborer is worthy of his hire," taking it for granted that the Gospel was worth more to any country than the expenses of the messengers by whom it was promulgated; 5. He began in Jewish communities; 6. He remained in each great center of work long enough not only to effect a complete organization, with administrative elders, but to develop the Christian character of each member. These methods Mr. Taylor believes equally suited to the present work of evangelizing the world, and his interesting account of the Indian and South American missions confirm his theory. The reading of this book will do much to bring the church to a higher standard in respect to the great work of missions. Self-denial and faith are conditions of success too little considered in this age of money worship. The work is sold for $1.25, by W. C. Palmer, publisher of the "Guide to Holiness," 62 Bible House, New York.

"The Secret Society System," by E. E. Aiken, a Yale student, is a neat pamphlet of 110 pages comprising a series of five articles which appeared early this year in the Yale Critic. These articles have been revised and extended, and while they discuss the question with more direct reference to the college secret societies, yet the arguments and principles adduced are of general application. The writer, without venturing on ground not already traversed by other writers and speakers, has yet made industrious research and has drawn up an effective argument. The book is of peculiar interest from the fact of its being a Yale production and though viewing the subject from a student's standpoint, arrives at the same conclusions with thousands of clear-thinking farmers, mechanics, ministers and others in business and professional pursuits who have the courage of their convictions. We shall be happy to note that it has a large circulation and sale. Published by O. H. Briggs, Room 8, 289 Chapel St., New Haven, Conn.

The North American Review for November presents an unusually diversified table of contents, "English Views of Free Trade," by the Hon. John Welsh of Philadelphia, is a clear and forcible exposition of the difference between the economic situation of England and that of the United States, and of the considerations which make Free Trade imperative for the former country, if she would retain her present position as the world's workshop. Joseph Neilson, Chief Judge of the Brooklyn City Court, writes of "Disorder in Court-Rooms," a subject of interest to good citizens at all times. Dr. Wm. A. Hammond, ex-Surgeon-General of the U. S. Army, offers a "Problem for Sociologists," the problem being to determine the degree of responsibility before the criminal law, of persons affected by certain forms of insanity. "The Industrial Value of Woman," by Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, is a very able reply to an article recently published on "Woman's Work and Woman's Wages." "Advantages of the Jury System," by Dwight Foster, formerly a Justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, will command the attention of every thoughtful citizen, being a grave and learned defense of an institution which it is becoming the fashion to belittle and decry. The remaining articles are, "Safety in Theatres," "The Pretensions of Journalism," and a symposium on "The Suppression of Vice," by Anthony Comstock, O. B. Frothingham and Rev. Dr. J. M. Buckley.

The mystery of the authorship of the famous "Letters of Junius" is still unsolved. Attributed to Burke, Wilkes, Horn Tooke, Lord Littleton, Lord Shelburne, Sir Philip Francis, and others, they have never been proved to be the product of either. Their remarkable compression, point and brilliancy of language, their unrivaled sarcasm, boldness and tremendous invective, not only drew, at the time, such public attention as never before was given to letters of political controversy, but have won them a place at the head of the acknowledged classics in literature. In the beautiful and cheap edition, in which they are just issued by The Useful Knowledge Publishing Company, New York, they will be a temptation to which thousands of book-buyers will gladly yield.

A convention and an organ are a universal necessity for every new project among men. The young men who propose to straddle a bicycle and to make Dobbin an extinct animal have been holding yearly meetings and have now ventured upon a monthly magazine, The Wheelman, well edited, illustrated and printed, and published at 308 Washington St., Boston. These enterprising young riders suggest that their art will solve the question of good roads, since they are a necessity for bicycle traveling, and when this conveyance shall come into universal use, smooth and solid roads must follow.

Our thanks to the United Presbyterian Board of Publication for the voluminous report of the last General Assembly, held at Monmouth last June. The arrangement of this report is almost perfect and its compilers seem to have omitted nothing which could be properly included in such a document.

The Microcosm, the religio-scientific monthly magazine published by A. Wilford Hall, New York, whose original ideas on natural philosophy have aroused many indifferent thinkers, is now in its second volume. Lovers of scientific speculation will find much to occupy their spare moments in its pages whether they accept the conclusions reached or not.

The current numbers of Vick's Magazine and Purdy's Fruit Recorder, both devote some space to new berries—the James Vick strawberry and the Hansell and Souhegan raspberry—which promise to be valuable acquisitions to our list of small fruits.

—The beautiful incident of the orphans' journey from Germany to America is a most eloquent refutation of the Masonic boast of help in traveling. Read and make a note of it, to help undecieve men who are blinded by the lodge.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1882.

A PROPOSITION TO ONE HUNDRED READERS OF THE CYNOSURE.

If one hundred persons will each send in the money for a club of ten subscribers for the Christian Cynosure, ($15.00) fifteen dollars cash, (send the names of subscribers at pleasure) within thirty days from date (Oct. 12th, 1882) the publisher will order a folding, trimming and pasting machine for the Cynosure, so that the paper can be well pasted and mailed a day earlier than it is at present. For some time we have been wishing to make the above mentioned improvement, but as receipts have not justified the expense it has been hitherto postponed. Will you not accept this proposition and forward the money promptly?

Each week we will report the clubs received and promised and also the money sent on in advance for clubs.

Do you accept the proposition? By so doing you will thus confer a favor on all readers of the paper by affording them a well pasted paper mailed one day earlier than it is at present. Whatever increases the value of the weekly organ of the National Christian Association augments the power and hastens the triumph of our great reform.

ONE HUNDRED CLUBS OF TEN

subscriptions paid for within the next thirty days would be an appropriate introduction to our annual campaign for Cynosure subscribers which we hope will this season be enthusiastic, thorough, prolonged and successful.

Editorial Correspondence.

RUTHLAND, ILL., Oct. 17, 1882.

I came down here on Saturday by request of the president of the Red Ribbon club to speak on temperance. Sabbath morning I aided Rev. Mr. Wiard in the Congregationalist church, which had been in past years injured here by some weak and worthless ministers, so that it has run low. In the afternoon I addressed the Band of Hope, which is presided over by a useful, capable and ambitious young woman, who says she should have no objection to her husband belonging to a Masonic lodge and concealing the proceedings of one evening in a week from her during their life. She is fearfully unacquainted with the nature of the lodge.

In the evening I addressed a full and very intelligent house on temperance, and gave notice that I would speak against secret societies Monday evening, which was last night; all day yesterday it drizzled and rained. So last night was dark, rainy and muddy. Yet we had full forty or fifty persons out and Christ was with us. But in our small audience we had the master of the lodge and several members. The lodge master is superintendent of the Union Sabbath school, and an excellent superintendent he is. He is a bright, capable man, and I cannot but think he despises the foolery and falsehood of the lodge. We shall see. I am much pleased with this people. I am stopping with a family whose father was the pillar of the Chrstian (Campbellite) church, and the children belong to it. They are a very interesting Christian family.

I see by the papers that the Prohibitionists are playing smash with the Republicans in every district but one in Wisconsin. The Manitowoc district is Democratic, and as the Democrats preach the "spoils" doctrine and practice what they preach, they have the respect of the people more than the Republicans who want to give beer to the Germans and temperance to the Prohibitionists, and so, like the man with his feet in two boats is sinking between them. The Ohio Republicans have lost that State, and right across the river West Virginia has gone Republican, which was before Democratic! A double summerset in opposite directions. The temperance folks did both.

But to think of Prohibitionists denouncing "rings" and "machines" while they are largely made up of secret lodges, the vilest and most dangerous rings and machines which Satan ever invented! It cannot, will not stand.

Yours, etc., J. B.

Memoir of Myron Holley.

Elizur Wright of Boston has sent us for notice a biography of MYRON HOLLEY, born in Salisbury, Conn., and buried in Mt. Hope cemetery, Rochester, N. Y., at the age of sixty-two. A monument was placed above his grave by the Liberty party, at the instance of Gerritt Smith, who addressed a crowd of six thousand people present at the unveiling, June 13, 1844.

Mr. Holley did more for the great Erie Canal than any other one man, not even excepting De Witt Clinton. He embarked in the Anti-masonic political movement, owned and edited the Rochester Freeman, and edited afterward the Free Elector of Hartford, Conn.; both of which papers went down under him, though he was an accomplished scholar, an able and beautiful writer, and as an orator seldom surpassed. His personal magnetism and manners attached political friends and opponents to him while he was living, and drew encomiums from all men when he died.

That two Anti-masonic papers should fail and go down under such a man and such a mind, would be disheartening precedents to the friends of the Cynosure if unexplained.

The first cause of the failure was that slavery seized the popular mind, superceded the lodge-discussion, and set it aside. Mr. Holley founded the Liberty (anti-slavery) party in 1840 and died in 1841 before it had achieved success. He was buried while the cannon were proclaiming General Harrison's inauguration in Washington. The Democratic party had held the country with slight interruption, during the whole of Mr. Holley's public life, and as he was an Anti-mason and an abolitionist, his success in public life was a homage wrung from political adversaries, while the "Albany Regency" governed New York, and New York the Democratic party, which party governed the Union.

This was not all or the worst. Garrison started the anti-slavery movement in 1832. With exceptions too slight for mention, the ministry and churches refused him a hearing. He was enraged. He assailed both church and state. The churches were "Synagogues of Satan," and the American Constitution a "Covenant with death and a league with hell."

"Whoever," says Junius, "cries out against established order will always find abettors." Mr. Garrison's abettors were non-resistants who abjured all civil government; abjured the Sabbath; and spoke of the Bible as "Those old parchments" translated by order of a king who was a tyrant and a fool. Infidels and deists, Universalists, Spiritualists and Unitarians, hailed the coming of Mr. Garrison as the star of their morning; and, though in England Mr. Garrison's aiders and abettors were orthodox loyalists, he so managed as to conciliate and unite these extremes of opinion in himself. While in a convention in Boston, Sept. 20, 1838, he and his friends voted that:

"As every government is upheld by physical strength, and its laws are enforced at the point of the bayonet; we therefore exclude ourselves from every legislative and judicial body, and repudiate all worldly honors, and stations of authority. If we cannot occupy a seat in the legislature or on the bench, neither can we elect others as our substitutes in any such capacity."

This disgusted the leaders of the churches; the members followed their leaders, and for years produced antagonism between abolitionism and the churches of Christ. This threw off from the churches a galaxy of minds, such as the world has seldom seen. Gerritt Smith, Myron Holley, Theodore D. Weld, Elizur Wright, Beriah Green, William T. Allen, Ichabod Codding, J. M. McKimm, Wm. H. Burleigh, Henry C. Wright, the Grimke sisters, Lydia Maria Child, and a host more became come-outers, and many became blatant infidels; while Smith and Holley continued praying men till they died.

When I first knew Elizur Wright he was a professor in Hudson College, Ohio. He was afterwards secretary of the American Anti-slavery Society when I was one of its lecturers, and wrote me very complimentary letters. He was one of the founders of the Liberty party, and censured Garrison for denouncing it. He was in Georgia when a young man; and I think he was the same young man whom he describes in Mr. Holley's memoirs, who went to a camp of negroes exposed for sale near Atlanta, and saw among others a mother with a babe but three days old, born on the spot, awaiting a purchaser. To see the mass of Christian churches kept by the silence of their ministers and papers in stolid indifference to such and similar scenes, common throughout the South, excited in bosoms like that of Prof. Wright an intense loathing which threw them into infidelity, which mars and disfigures an otherwise interesting and important book—this memoir of Myron Holley.

Slavery is out of the way, and the lodge is coming again under discussion. May God grant wisdom to the ministry and churches of the present day to avoid the rock of worldly indifference which wrecked the faith of so many noble spirits during the anti-slavery discussion. The reform against secret societies has as yet furnished no such excuse for shunning it, to sensible and patriotic men. There never was a reform more free from extravagances of opinion and doctrine than ours. May every true American learn and heed it in time.

Prof. Wright's memoirs of Mr. Holley is an octavo of 328 pages written with his old time vigor. It contains a just and full account of the Anti-masonic and anti-slavery parties, and would deserve and have a wide circulation but for the fact that throughout the work he sneers at the Bible, argues against a personal God, and apologizes for Mr. Holley's belief in both.

Astounding Falsehood.

There is perhaps no fact in history which so excites in the Masonic lodge the grevious spirit of lying as the Morgan murder. While the opponents of Masonry have had from the first but one theory of the case, sustained by incontrovertable evidence, the explanations of the Freemasons have been as various and utterly conflicting as could well be imagined. The latest and basest has lately come to us.

Bro. Shaw, formerly of this city but now preaching in Cincinnati, has our thanks for a clip from the Enquirer of that city which reprints from the New York Telegram, an interview with Robert Macoy, the Masonic author and publisher, and "Grand Recorder" of some Masonic body. Amazement may be pardoned while reading his statement, thus:

"Morgan was a blacksmith living in Batavia. He was a thief, a drunkard and a wife-beater. These facts were not known to the lodge that made him a Mason until some time after he had joined the order. As a Mason he was an impostor, working his way among Masons by the grossest falsehoods. He employed the then Grand Lecturer, Blanchard Powers, to instruct him. He was thus enabled to play the character of a mercenary dependent upon Masonic charity. He took the Degree of Royal Arch at Le Roy, and began immediately to prepare an 'exposition' of such of the esoteric Masonic matters as he could remember or as would best serve his purpose. It became known to the Brotherhood that he was employed upon this shameful task, and they denounced him through the newspapers. On September 12, 1826, he was arrested upon a warrant for theft, and taken to Canandaigua. Four days later he was released, and taken in a carriage to Fort Niagara, at the mouth of the river by that name, a distance of 115 miles. This journey was made with his own consent. He was confined in the fort a few days in a room formerly used as a powder magazine. There all traces of him disappear.

"A body was found in the whirlpool below Niagara Falls, and it was said to be that of Morgan, but the identity was never established. The theory is absurd that Eli Bruce, Sheriff of the county, and the men who assisted him would have publicly conveyed Morgan over one hundred miles to throw him over the Falls. There was an alarming excitement over the affair. Anti-masonic associations were formed. They worked in the political campaign that fall and carried the State."

Masons never "knew" that Morgan was such an infamous wretch until he had defied their malignant hate and exposed their infamous system. Then no epithet was too vile to be heaped upon him. Such a statement might be expected of a person of Macoy's Masonic rank, but that a Freemason of ordinary sense should say his supposed body was pitched over the Falls is something new in their multiform stories. It is evidence seldom doubted of a man's good character when Freemason's unite to smirch it.

William H. VanDoren died in Indianapolis, Ind., on the 8th of September, age 72 years, after a protracted illness. He lived in Chicago for a number of years, removing to Indianapolis in 1878 to reside with a daughter. He was born in Orange county, N. Y., and graduated at Columbia College and Alleghany Presbyterian Theological Seminary. His first two years were spent in missionary labor at the West; and in 1839 he accepted a call to the Reformed Church of Williamsburg, Long Island, and was its pastor for nine years. He afterwards served the Church of Piermont, and the Livingston Church in New York. He then returned to the Presbyterian Church, and was pastor at St. Louis. In 1865 he removed to Chicago, and in 1878 to Indianapolis. He received the degree of D. D. from Rutgers College in 1869. He was, says the Christian Intelligencer, a genial Christian gentleman, of warm philanthropic impulses. He founded the Van Doren prize for the best essay on Foreign Missions by the students of the College and Seminary at New Brunswick. He was a scholar of wide reading, and a writer of great point and suggestiveness. His later years have been devoted to authorship. In preparing for this work he traveled extensively in the Holy Land and other countries of the East.

Some years ago he furnished to the Chicago Tribune the statement of the dying wife of the lawyer who defended the Morgan abductors and cleared them, recieving an immense sum for managing the case, though convinced of its injustice. In answer to a note respecting this statement Mr. Van Doren wrote us Aug. 1st, 1881, respecting Masonry and the Morgan murder: "Regretting that I cannot shed further light on that most malignant deed we will have to writ for the revelations of the last day. How many substitutes for Christ's holy religion has Satan invented."

—The editor of the Cynosure is attending the Indiana State convention at Carthage this week. He expects at its close to visit Gibson county in the south-western part of the State and speak at several points. Bro. E. Mathews is also expecting to attend the Indiana convention and Secretary Stoddard hopes to return from the East in time to look in upon the same meeting.

—The City Hall of Washington was engaged last week for an address from Secretary Stoddard on Tuesday evening.

—The pastors and other laborers in the employ of the American Missionary Association in the South have, we learn, received word from headquarters in New York asking them to have the subject of the secret orders brought before their congregations. This is significant and glorious.

—Bro. Hinman has been visiting all the ministers of Washington and distributing tracts to them and others. He finds great ignorance on the subject and is putting a copy of President Finney's book in the hand of every minister who will carefully read it. Some are awaking to the importance and necessity of our reform. The people of Washington City are as intelligent and conscientious as elsewhere, and free discussion is assured, which cannot be said of all of our Northern cities.

—The Band of Hope meeting with Mrs. E. A. Cook in this city are preparing a box to send to Mrs. Tapley of Columbus, Miss. This may be a useful example to other bands of little folks whose surplus vitality is usually spent in self-gratification.

—In a postscript to a late letter Bro. Wm. Fenton of St. Paul says that his mail is sometimes mislaid in the post office, and if his correspondents are sometimes unanswered it is because their letters do not reach their destination. Bro. Fenton wishes to correct his letter in the Cynosure of Oct. 12th, where he speaks of Royal Arch Masons as sworn to be murderers. "I meant," he says, "to write what was literally and exactly true, namely, that they have sworn to be murdered if they fail to conceal the crimes of assasins."

—Thomas Guard of Baltimore, the Methodist Episcopal divine celebrated throughout the country for eloquence and abasement in Masonry, has lately passed to his final account before the Judge whom he has so often denied in the council chambers of secrecy.

—A gentleman visiting the Exposition stand told Bro. Phillips that he had a document against secretism of great value and afterward wrote that it was upon the Church as opposed to Secret Societies; was written by Bishop M. Wright, D. D. and published by Beecroft in Reading. In answer to a note of inquiry Bishop Wright informs us that the work spoken of was his address before the Illinois Convention meeting in Wheaton in 1878, and printed in the Cynosure and Telescope. He gave a copy to a wealthy English Wesleyan who probably had it reprinted in pamphlet form in Reading, England. This winged seed of truth flew far before it struck and rooted. The harvest now preparing will doubtless be glorious, and in this hope our brother must feel doubly compensated for his effort at that meeting.

The Illinois State Meeting.

One week only remains before the Tonica meeting. Let it be a season of special prayer at every household altar for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and as prayers ascend let nothing be left undone by which the success of the meeting can be gained. See that every reform church has an opportunity to appoint a delegate; and especially let every auxiliary society be represented. The meeting will be an important one for a section of country where the old anti-slavery spirit prevailed. Reform principles have been taught in the households, and the young men and women need to be roused to emulate the virtues of their parents. Some of our ablest speakers, D. S. Faris, N. E. Gardner, L. N. Stratton, C. A. Blanchard, J. P. Stoddard, and others will be present. Come, expecting a blessing and to bless others.

THE SOUTHERN FIELD.

Washington Notes.

FREE SPEECH.

The Capitol building is daily visited by many people. It is a magnificent structure, and containes many fine works of art. I have frequently visited it and distributed tracts which have generally been kindly received. Yesterday I was giving out "what great men say about Masonry," when an official told me that what I was doing was in violation of law. I told him I would like to see his authority, for I was a law-abiding man. He showed me a notice that said that all selling of goods, distributing of advertisements, or soliciting of patronage, was forbidden in the goverment buildings. I told him I had done none of those things, and that I should not desist. He said, "we so interpret it," and that I must stop. I told him I knew my rights and should not stop, and asked him to bring me before a magistrate and let us see what is the law.

Moral: The Masons do not want to hear the testimony of Seward, Webster, Wirt and others circulated in the Capital; but they will have to try twice to prevent it.

A REFORMED MASON.

Last night I visited an old lawyer, who has been a judge in East Tennessee, and was a Colonel in the Federal army during the "late unpleasantness." He told me that in East Tennessee there used to be many lodges of "Pine Knot Masons," who held their lodges in the woods, by the light of pine knots. They always had a copy of Morgan's Expose to post on. They could always be depended on in any emergency to help a brother Mason. He said that when as a young lawyer, if he had a hard case to defend, he always managed to get some of these men on the jury, and it was sure not to agree. He said that during the war he had known many prisoners to escape by giving the grand hailing sign of distress, and that his command was once saved by Masonic information. As a judge he had endeavored to execute law impartially; but, though he had been for many years a R. A. Mason, he was satisfied that it was a pernicious institution, and that he fully sympathised with Mr. Finney in his views. He wished me much success in my work.

To day I called on a Baptist minister to whom I had loaned a copy of Finney. He told me that he is a Mason, but never expected to enter a lodge again, and that what Mr. Finney said about Masonry is true. He had known Dr. Colver and had heard from him his experience in Masonry.

WASHINGTON CURIOSITIES.

I had time to-day to look through the Patent office Department. There was much of great interest that I have no time to describe; but a few things I put down in my note book. There was in a case a specimen of hair from the heads of each of the Presidents down to Frank Pierce; the coat of arms of the Washington family; household furniture of Gen. Washington, including the dishes and plates used by Martha Washington; two suits of Washington's clothes, including the suit he wore when he resigned his commission. His camp chest, with knives and few plates; Gen. Jackson's coat worn at the battle of New Orleans; a fine coat worn by Gen. Santa Anna in Mexico; the identical printing press on which Benjamin Franklin worked in London in 1725 and 1726; and a cane owned by Major Powell, of Greenville, Tenn., marked "No." Major Powell was the only one in a large convention held in Greenville, Tenn., in 1861 who voted against secession, and said that he would sooner see slavery abolished than the Union destroyed. For this vote and speech he was denounced and barely saved his life. He put his "No," on the cane and sent it here. What power in a single vote! What a marked example of the retribution of Providence that this town of Greenville, Tenn., has been withering and dying ever since.

ADVERTISING THEIR MASONRY.

It would seem that a minister who has become a Mason for worldly advantage, would draw a veil over his lodge connection, or at least not flaunt his Masonry in the face of decent people; but alas, some men glory in their shame. Not long since the pastor of one of the large M. E. churches in this city repeated, as a part of his discourse, the penalties of the Entered Apprentice and Master Mason's obligations. He thereby tickled the ears of Masons and greatly pained the true friends of Christ. Last Sabbath another M. E. minister, "holiness" leader, took special pains to advertise his Masonry by introducing expressions that were purely Masonic, such as the "Trestleboard" and the "Shiboleth;" but, fortunately, instead of eliciting praise, it called out a sharp rebuke from a brother in the church who has learned to abhor the wickedness of the lodge. He has also written a strong letter to his pastor about his connection with Masonry. H. H. Hinman.

NOTICES.

Illinois.

The Illinois State Convention will be held November 1st and 2nd next in the Independent church, Tonica, La Salle county, on invitation from brethren in that church. Entertainment will be free and all who desire it will please send their names as soon as possible to N. Richey, Tonica, Ill. Let there be a grand meeting at this central point. Rev. D. S. Faris of Sparta, Elder N. E. Gardner of Haldane, and other able speakers will be present, The Convention will open on Wednesday afternoon, Nov, 1st.

HOME CIRCLE.

Let us go Forth.--Heb. 13:13.

HORATIUS BONAR.

Silent, like men in solemn haste,
Girded wayfarers of the waste,
We pass out at the world's wide gate,
Turning our back on all its state;
We press along the narrow road
That leads to life, to bliss, to God.

We cannot, and we would not stay;
We dread the snares that throng the way,
We fling aside the weight and sin,
Resolved the victory to win:
We know the peril, but our eyes
Rest on the splendor of the prize.

No idling now, no wasteful sleep,
From Christian toil our limbs to keep;
No shrinking from the desperate fight,
No thought of yielding or of flight;
No love of present gain or ease;
No seeking man or self to please.

No sorrow for the loss of fame;
No dread of scandal on our name;
No terror for the world's sharp scorn:
No wish that taunting to return;
No hatred can our hatred move,
And enmity but kindles love.

No sigh for laughter left behind.
Or pleasures scattered to the wind;
No looking back on Sodom's plains;
No listening still to Babel's strains;
No tears for Egypt's song and smile;
No thirsting for its flowing Nile;

No vanity nor folly now;
No fading garland round our brow;
No moody musings in the grove;
No pang of disappointed love;
With the brave heart and steady eye,
We onward march to victory.

What, though with weariness oppress—
'Tis but a little, and we rest.
This throbbing heart and burning brain
Will soon be calm and cool again.
Night is far spent, and morn is near—
Morn of the cloudless and the clear.

'Tis but a little, and we come
To our reward, our crown, our home;
A little space—yet more or less,
And we have crossed the wilderness,
Finished the toil, the rest begun,
The battle fought, the triumph won!

Pray with your Children.

The friend of a young mother was talking with her about her maternal responsibilities, and urged the duty of constant and believing prayer for the early conversion of her children. She assured him that it was her daily practice to carry her little ones to the throne of grace, yet complained of a want of faith and definiteness in asking for them the special influences of the Holy Spirit.

"Do you pray for each child separately, and by name?" inquired the friend.

"No; that has never been my habit," was the reply.

"I think it is of much importance, Mrs. H., especially as a help to our faith and to the clearness and intensity of our desires on their behalf. You pray with them, I trust, as well as for them?"

"Sometimes I do, but not often. They seem a little restless and inclined to whisper together while my eyes are closed, and so I have felt less embarrassment and more freedom in supplication by being alone at such seasons."

"Let me persuade you, dear Mrs. H., to try a different plan. Take your little son and daughter each separately to the place of prayer, and kneeling with them before the Lord, tell him the name, the daily history, the special want of each, and see if your heart is not opened to plead for them as you have never done before."

Tears were in the eyes of the young mother as she said with trembling lips, "I'll try."

As evening came she had not forgotten her promise, but as she saw that Sarah, her daughter, was unusually peevish, she thought best to take her little son first to the chamber. Willie was a bright and pleasant boy of five years, and when his mother whispered her wish to pray with him, he gladly put his hand in hers and knelt by her side. As he heard his name mentioned before the Lord, a tender hush fell upon his young spirit, and he clasped his mother's fingers more tightly as each petition for his special need was breathed into the ear of his Father in heaven. And did not the clinging of that little hand warm her heart to new and more fervant desire as she poured forth her supplication to the Hearer and Answerer of prayer?

When the mother and child rose from their knees, Willie's face was like a rain-bow smiling through tears.

"Mamma, mamma," said he, "I am glad you told Jesus my name. Now he'll know me when I get to heaven; and when the kind angels that carry little children to the Saviour take me and lay me in his arms, Jesus will look at me so pleasant and say, 'Why, this is Willie H. His mother told me about him. How happy I am to see you, Willie!' Won't that be nice, mamma?"

Mrs. H. never forgot that scene, and when she was permitted to see not only her dear Willie and Sarah, but the children afterwards added to her family circle, each successsively consecrting the dew of their youth to God, she did indeed feel that her friend's plan was "the more excellent way." So she resolved to recommend it to the praying mothers by telling them this touching incident. When they meet their children at the last great day, may Jesus own as his those whom they have told him about on earth!—Zion's Herald.

The Orphans' Protection.

I recently heard of a beautiful incident of three little German girls, whose friends were in America, and who wanted to go thither. They were somewhere from eight to twelve years old, and the question was how to get them across the great ocean, and away into the interior of America. There was no one to go with them, they must go alone; and no one could tell what troubles might assail them, or what dangers might surround them. But their friends had faith in God, and before they sent them out, they got a book, and on the fly-leaf of it they wrote a sentence in German, in French, and in English, and they told the little children when they started:

"If you get into any trouble, or need any help, you just stand still and open this book and hold it right up before you."

Then they started the children off on their long journey, by railway and by steamship, from place to place, and from port to port; and wherever they went, if any trouble occurred or any difficulty arose, the children would stop and open the book, and hold it before them, and they always found some one who could read German or English or French, and who was ready to help them on their way.

And so in due time they reached their friends far off in the interior of America.

And what were those words which proved such a talisman and protection to these children, among strangers, and in a strange land? What were the words that made the careless civil and thoughtful, and the rough and reckless kind? They were the words of One who lived on the earth long years ago, and who, though he has passed away from human vision, yet holds his grasp upon the minds of men. These were his words:

"And the king shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Matt. xxv. 40.

These words, written upon the fly-leaf of a New Testament, made them friends among strangers, gave them protection and help in every hour of need, opened doors before them, and made rough places plain and crooked places straight. And the safety of these children who travelled thousands of miles under the protection of these words, is an illustration of the immortal power and energy that yet resides in the words of him who spake as never man spake, and who, though unseen by mortal eye, yet hath "all power in heaven and in earth" given into his hands.—Common People.

"It will Light you Home."

Going two miles into a neighborhood where very few could read, to spend an evening in reading to a company who were assembled to listen, and about to return by a narrow path through the woods, where paths diverged, I was provided with a torch of light wood, or "pitch pine." I objected; it was too small, weighing not over half a pound. "It will light you home," answered my host. I said, "The wind may blow it out." He said, "It will light you home." "But if it should rain?" I again objected. "It will light you home," he insisted.

Contrary to my fears, it gave abundant light to my path all the way home, furnishing an apt illustration, I often think, to the way in which doubting hearts would be led safely along the "narrow way." If they would take the Bible as their guide, it would be a lamp to their feet, leading to the heavenly home. One man had five objections to the Bible. If he would take it as a lamp to his feet, it would "light him home." Another told me he had two faults to find with the Bible. I answered him in the words of my good friend who furnished the torch, "It will light you home."—The American Messenger.

THE LION SERMON.—Every year in a certain church in London a sermon is preached which is called by this name. It is designed to commemorate the deliverance of Sir John Gray in the deserts of Arabia 250 years ago. Alone and unarmed he was approached by a lion, and fell upon his knees and prayed to God. The beast looked at him a few minutes and turned away. In observance of this event this annual sermon is preached under this name. An exchange well remarks that every sermon should be a "lion sermon." We should never attempt to tell others the way of salvation without realizing that we ourselves have been saved from the jaws of the lion by an omnipotent, yet gracious Saviour.—Bible Teacher.

—Although Wesley found that his preaching did not greatly affect the mighty or the noble, still he numbered some families of good position among his followers. It was at the house of one of these that the incident here recorded took place. Wesley had been preaching and a daughter of a neighboring gentleman, a girl remarkable for her beauty, had been impressed by his exhortations. After the sermon Wesley was invited to this gentleman's house to luncheon, and with himself one of his preachers was entertained. This preacher, like many of the class at that time, was a man of plain manners, and not conscious of the restraints of good society. The fair young Methodist sat beside him at the table, and he noticed that she wore a number of rings. During a pause in the meal the preacher took hold of the young lady's hand, and, raising it in the air, called Wesley's attention to the sparkling jewels. "What do you think of this sir," he said, "for a Methodist's hand?" The girl turned crimson. For Wesley, with his known and expressed aversion to finery, the question was a peculiarly awkward one. But the aged evangelist showed a tact which Chesterfield might have envied. He looked up with a quiet, benevolent smile, and simply said, "The hand is very beautiful." The blushing beauty had expected something far different from a reproof wrapped up with such felicity is a compliment. She had the good sense to say nothing; but when, a few hours later, she again appeared in Wesley's presence, the beautiful hand was stripped of every ornament except those which nature had given.—Selected.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

The Comet.

How many of the boys and girls who read the Cynosure have seen the great comet of 1882? Most of them, we hope, for you are bright, wide-awake and looking for the signs of the times, and such comets were considered, in days gone by when people were more troubled with superstitious fears than now. You happily look to other things as signs of coming events. This great comet can only be seen by people who wake early in the morning, and if any of our young readers have a bad habit of morning naps, let them use the comet to help break it up. This morning (Oct. 19) the wonderful visitor among the stars began to appear, tail first, about three o'clock just to the south of the sunrise point. From 4:30 to 5 o'clock its appearance was most magnificent, though hardly so bright as a week ago. So grand and sublime a sight seldom appears in the heavens, perhaps two or three times in a century.

This is the fifth comet astronomers have seen this year. In the clear atmosphere of Colorado it was first noticed about Sept. 18 very close to the sun. It is thought by men who have watched it, that it was so close as to pass through the sun's atmosphere without being burned up. The "coma," or tail, was first very short, and seen through a telescope, seemed to spread out on each side of the "nucleus," or head, like the wings of a bird. The tail is now of great length, covering nearly or quite one-fifth of the arc between the horizon and the zenith. The comet is rapidly passing into the southern sky and will soon be out of our sight, but will be a grand sight for people in Africa and South America.

As we look upon this mysterious wanderer among the stars we are filled with wonder and admiration at the power of God which guides this flaming mass on its way through a thousand whirling worlds without coming so near as to strike them, or turn them from their own paths.

Midsummer in Norway.—In Norway and some other countries the sun shines at midnight for a week or two in the summer, but such light is purchased too dearly by the long months of the dark winter in which the genial face of the king of day is never seen at all. Very odd you would find it to spend midsummer with the Esquimaux of Greenland. At first, the sun only shows himself for a few minutes daily, but they are all very glad to see him; and at last he stays all day and all night. Still his rays do not melt the snowdrifts on the hills, and for this the boys are not very sorry, for, as they have no village greens or commons to play on, the snow-field does duty as a play ground, and bat and ball is played, with a little round bone for a ball, and long sticks for bats. The Esquimaux bat and ball club is no less popular in Greenland than the base-ball or foot-ball clubs which your brothers delight in. When the lads grow tired of running about, they perch upon the black rocks by the sea shore, and watch for the white sea-birds, which they catch in nets with long handles—something like butterfly nets. The Esquimaux, who do not mind the fishy taste, think these birds make a capital supper. Every one in Greenland makes the best of the short midsummer holidays.

Our Great Inventions.—The fifteen great American inventions of world-wide adoption are:

1. The cotton gin.
2. The planing machine.
3. The grass reaper and mower.
4. The rotary printing press.
5. Navigation by steam.
6. The hot-air engine.
7. The sewing machine.
8. The India rubber industry.
9. The machine manufacture of horse-shoes.
10. The sand blast for carving.
11. The gauge lathe.
12. The grain elevator.
13. Artificial ice-making on a large scale.
14. The electric magnet and its practical application.
15. The telephone.

LESSON 6, November 5.—Jesus Before the Council.—Mark 14, 55-72.

(55) And the chief priests and all the council sought for witness against Jesus to put him to death; and found none. (56) For many bare false witness against him, but their witness agreed not together. (57) And there arose certain, and bare false witness against him, saying, (58) We heard him say, I will destroy this temple that is made with hands, and in three days I will build another made without hands. (59) But neither so did their witness agree together. (60) And the high priest stood up in the midst, and asked Jesus, saying, Answerest thou nothing? what is it which these witness against thee? (61) But he held his peace, and answered nothing. Again the high priest asked him, and said unto him, Art thou the Christ the Son of the Blessed? (62) And Jesus said, I am: and ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven. (63) Then the high priest rent his clothes, and saith, What need we any further witnesses? (64) Ye have heard the blasphemy, what think ye? And they all condemned him to be guilty of death. (65) And some began to spit on him, and to cover his face and to buffet him, and to say unto him, Prophesy: and the servants did strike him with the palms of their hands. (66) And as Peter was beneath in the palace, there cometh one of the maids of the high priest: (67) And when she saw Peter warming himself, she looked upon him, and said, And thou also wast with Jesus of Nazareth. (68) But he denied, saying, I know not, neither understand I what thou sayest. And he went out into the porch; and the cock crew. (69) And a maid saw him again, and began to say to them that stood by, This is one of them. (70) And he denied it again. And a little after, they that stood by said again to Peter, Surely thou art one of them: for thou art a Galilean, and thy speech agreeth thereto. (71) But he began to curse and to swear, saying, I know not this man of whom ye speak. (72) And the second time the cock crew. And Peter called to mind the word that Jesus said unto him, Before the cock crow twice thou shalt deny me thrice. And when he thought thereon, he wept.

What was the penalty laid down in the law of Moses for bearing false witness? Out of what saying of Jesus was the false testimony, which Mark relates, manufactured? To what disciple did Jesus send word by name, after his resurrection, to meet him in Galilee? Where in the New Testament is the prophecy of verse 62 repeated? When had Jesus made the same prophecy before?—Scholars' Quarterly.

NOTES.

The Trial. The court convened to try Jesus Christ was the Sanhedrim, or Sanhedrin. It consisted of chief priests, that is, the heads of the twenty-four priestly classes; scribes, that is, rabbis learned in the literature of the church; and elders, who were chosen from amongst the most influential of the laity. Jewish tradition puts the number of members at seventy-one. The high priest usually presided: the vice-president sat at his right hand. The other councillors were ranged in front of these two in the form of a semicircle. Two scribes or clerks attended, who on criminal trials registered the votes, one for acquittal, the other for condemnation.—Abbott. The priests were there, whose greed and selfishness he had reproved; the elders, whose hypocrisy he had branded; the scribes, whose ignorance he had exposed; and worse than all, the worldly, sceptical Sadducees, the most cruel and dangerous of opponents, whose empty sapience he had confuted.—Farrar.

Throughout the whole course of the trial, the rules of the Jewish law of procedure were grossly violated, and the accused was deprived of rights belonging even to the meanest citizen. He was arrested in the night, bound as a malefactor, beaten before his arraignment, and struck in open court during the trial. He was tried on a feast-day, and before sunrise. He was compelled to criminate himself, and this under an oath of solemn judicial adjuration; and he was sentenced on the same day of the conviction. In all these particulars the law was wholly disregarded.—Prof. Greenleaf's Trial of Jesus, in the Testimony of the Evangelists.

"I will destroy this Temple." The utterance of words tending to bring the temple into contempt was regarded as so grave an offense that it afterwards formed a capital charge against the first martyr, Stephen (Acts 6:13).—Maclear.

"Answered nothing." With the sublime calm of one who is conscious of his own superior worth, Jesus meekly abstains from uttering a single word before this contemptible tribunal, in the way of self-vindication.—Meyer. It was no part of his duty, as a defendant, to unravel the contradictions of his unprincipled accusers.—Morison. Our Lord was silent; for in answering he must have opened to them the meaning of his words, which was not the work of this his hour, nor fitting for that audience.—Alford. Truth is never mute for want of arguments of defence, but sometimes silent, out of holy wisdom.—Lake.

"Art thou the Christ?" Caiaphas became desperate, and adopted a resource which our own rules of evidence would declare most infamous, and which was also wholly adverse to the first principles of Mosaic jurisprudence, and the like of which occurs in no circumstance of Hebrew history. It was that of putting the prisoner upon his oath to answer questions framed for his own crimination.—Kitto.

The difficulty on this question consisted in this: If he confessed that he was the Son of God, they stood ready to condemn him for blasphemy; if he denied it, they were prepared to condemn him for being an imposter, and for deluding the people under pretence of being the Messiah.—Barnes.

"Son of Man." Jesus, wishing to hasten a decision which he knew to be already taken, boldly and spontaneously passes in his answer beyond the strict contents of the question, and declares himself to be not only the Messiah, but at the same time the Son of man, sharing the divine glory (see Dan. 7:13).—Godet. No words in the whole Gospel records are more decisive against the views of those who would fain see in our Lord only a great moral teacher, like Socrates or Cakya Mouni. At the very crisis of his history, when denial would have saved his life, he asserts his claim to be all that the most devout Christians have ever believed him to be.—Plumptre.

"Rent his clothes." The act was as much a formal sign of condemnation as the putting-on of the black cap by an English judge.—Plumptre. The practice of rending the clothes on occasions of supposed blasphemy was based on 2 Kings 18:37. Originally it was a natural outburst of intense grief, and was involuntary; but at a later period it became a mere form regulated by special rules. The rent made in the garment was from the neck downward, and about a span in length. The body-dress and outer garment were left untouched.—Lange.

"Condemned him." This formal condemnation was, as they imagined, according to law (Lev. 24:16). Compare Deut. 18:20. The Sanhedrim was forbidden to investigate any capital crime during the night, and according to the Roman law a sentence pronounced before dawn was not valid. This test vote, however, they considered as settling the question.—Schaff.

The council now adjourned, to meet at daybreak, when they could legally pronounce the sentence. In the meantime occurred the maltreatment by his lawless enemies described in the next verse.—Peloubet.

"Did strike him with the palms of their hands." The hands they bound had healed the sick, and raised the dead; the lips they smote had calmed the winds and waves. One word, and his smiters might have been laid low in death. But as he had begun, he would end—as self-restrained in the use of his awful powers on his own behalf as if he had been the most helpless of men.—Geikie. Behold affronts and indignities which the world thinks it right never to pardon, which the Son of God endures with a divine meekness! Let us cast at the feet of Jesus that false honor, that quick sense of affronts, which exaggerates every thing and pardons nothing, and, above all, thal devilish determination in resenting injuries. —Quesnel. Such treatment of our Lord shocks us; but so do we strike the Son of man when we scoff at his word; so do we buffet him when we show his cause contempt; so do we spit upon him when we take his name in vain.—Anon. Why does he not avenge these insults? Because his hands, though no longer bound with cord, are restrained by love.—Tyng.

(68) "I know not, neither understand." This was the grossest and most unblushing falsehood. —Jacobus. It appears that his first denial embraced also all knowledge of his Master. Thus his denials, from beginning to end, went beyond what was necessary for his exculpation; for he was only charged with being a follower of Jesus, whereas he denied that he ever knew him.—Owen. Note the steps leading to this denial: (1) Peter's self-confidence (Matt. 26:33); (2) his indolence (Mark. 14:37); (3) his cowardly compromise (Mark 14:54); (4) needless venturing into evil company (ver. 66). Startling as it appears, his heart had been preparing for it. It was the fruit of seeds that he himself had sown. Men fall in private long before they fall in public. The tree falls with a great crash, but the decay which accounts for it is often not discovered till it is down on the ground.—Ryle.

(71) "When he thought thereon," then he went out (Matt. 26:75) and wept bitterly. He went out, not as Judas into the night of despair, but, as has been beautifully said, "to meet the morning dawn." If the angel of innocence had left him, the angel of repentance took him gently by the hand.—Farrar. Contrast his repentance with that of Judas. His repentance he attested, (1) by the bitterness of his tears; (2) by his humble submission to his Lord's subsequent rebuke (John 21:15–17); (3) by his subsequent courage in confessing Christ in the face of threatened danger (Acts 4:8–12, 19); (4) by the thoroughness with which he learned the lesson of humility, as illustrated by his own subsequent epistles (see particularly 1 Pet. 1:5, 17; 3:15; 4:12).—Abbott.

THE AMERICAN PARTY.

Nominations for 1884.

For President,
JONATHAN BLANCHARD,
of Illinois.

For Vice-President.
JOHN A. CONANT.
of Connecticut.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

A Political Meeting will be held in connection with the Illinois State Convention, on Thursday forenoon Nov. 2 during a recess of the Convention. Tonica is in the center of a section of country full of old line Abolitionists. Benjamin Lundy's paper, the first Abolition sheet in the West, if not in the country, was published near by. This should be a grand rallying point for reform politics. American voters, come to the meeting.

—The people of the United States ought to pray the Lord to raise up some statesmen worthy the name. The genuine article has well-nigh disappeared from American politics.

> "O God, for a man with head, heart, hand
> Like one of the simple great ones gone
> Forever and ever by;
> One still, strong man in a blatant land—
> Aristocrat, Democrat, autocrat—one > ho can rule and dare not lie.

Iowa Voters who wish to obtain tickets to be voted Tuesday, November 7th, will please write at once to J. N. Norris, of Birmingham, Van Buren county, member of the State committee. Remember, friends, that Anti-masonic ballots are a long time getting through the hands of some post-masters, so let there be not an moment's delay. Iowa ought to poll 30,000 votes this fall, which is only the majority for prohibition in the State.

—The campaign has been pushed earnestly in DuPage county, Ill., where a full ticket, State, Legislative and county, has been nominated. Meetings were held last week at Wheaton, Bloomingdale, and Pleasant Hill and Christie's school-houses. This week appointments are made for Wayne, Warrenville, York Center, Lisle, Downer's Grove, and Bensonville. The speakers engaged for these points are W. I. Phillips, O. C. Bedford, C. A. Blanchard, O. F. Lumry, L. N. Stratton, Prest. J. Blanchard, W. H. Fischer and H. L. Kellogg. We shall see what a good ticket and a good platform can do among thinking voters on the 7th of November.

The Bible in Schools.

The following grand argument is taken from an address before the State Association of editors, met in Hudson, Wis., by Col. Charles Seymour of La Cross:—

In the treatment of educational interests of this country, a cowardly and ill-advised limitation of what constitutes "popular education," has marked the action of the press, and public school boards and managers.

The chief difficulty has been that those citizens who claimed to be most liberal in sentiment were the least tolerant in the application of the popular system of education.

While boasting of free and popular education, we have excluded from our public schools forty centuries of authentic history; and barred out the youth of the land from access to sources of knowledge which have never debased, but have always elevated mankind, when applied to intellectual development, social happiness, physical soundness, moral welfare, personal security, public tranquillity, material progress, and the general welfare and prosperity.

Whether this aversion to sacred history as an element of popular education is based on doubts as to its authenticity, or distrust in its big "fish-stories," or disbelief in miracles, it inculcates principles that embarras hide-bound skeptics, who, in vain attempts to account for a creation without a Creator, prefer the theory that elephants were evolved from clams and oysters, and that our ancesters were apes, evolved from atoms, or mullusks, or vegetable mush, and ignore, repudiate, and cast aside the Mosaic cosmogony and the established truths of physical science, because their finite powers cannot fathom the depths or comprehend the fullness of that unseen but Infinite Power that "meeteth out the heavens with a span," and maintains the harmonious operations of the universe by superhman wisdom.

We are living in an age whose discoveries and developments, if recorded by any historian of former times without palpable evidence to corroborate them, would tax public or personal credulity more than any miracle recorded in Holy Writ.

If it had been therein recorded that, upon escaping from the whale, Jonah had announced his safety by telegram across the continent, or by cablegram across the sea, to friends who had given him up as "lost," or if it had been chronicled that the braying of Balaam's ass was heard at a distance of 200 miles by the telephone; or that conflicting armies threw destructive missiles into each other's camps a league apart; or that iron ships laden with cargoes of iron had crossed the ocean between the continents; or that when David exclaimed, "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork" he had announced, with the astronomical precision of modern times, to all nations of the globe, years in advance, the day, hour and minute in which the transit of Venus and the cometic and ecliptic visitations would occur; or if the "foolish virgins" had been informed that their empty lamps could be replenished with oil flowing out of the bowels of the earth, which contains all of the elements for its own destruction by fire, the exacting school of critics would have filled the world with unbelief for many centuries. We must credit science, which assumes new phases at every step of its progress, with many valuable confirmations and discoveries. The need of a higher philosophy is imperative throughout the land.

The prevalence of lawlessness and crime in our country and the growing insecurity to life and property are largely attributable to the absence from our public schools of those precepts of wisdom, justice, and righteousness which should enter into the very foundations of society and of human character, and to the wanton desecration of a wisely appointed day of hallowed rest, whose beneficence, when duly observed and respected, is fully attested in the physical economy of mankind.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

—A series of union Gospel meetings were begun on Sabbath afternoon in Wheaton in the charge of Rev. John Todd of DesMoines, Iowa, an evangelist who has proven the excellence of his work by years spent in gathering souls into the Kingdom. The meetings will be continued through this week in the college chapel.

—The annual meeting of the American Missionary Association takes place this week in Cleveland, O. It promises to be of unusual interest, not only on account of the speakers who will be there, but because of the important questions to be considered.

—The Chicago West Side Woman's Christian Temperance Union Mission, at 98 South Halsted street is under the charge of Mrs. Ben Hogan, and accomplishing a good work. Over thirty persons have been converted lately. The hall is crowded every evening, and on a recent Sunday night more than 100 had to be turned away.

—The first annual meeting of the Presbyterian consolidated Synod of Illinois was held in Springfield last week. The Rev. Dr. Robert W. Patterson was elected Moderator. It was agreed that the representation in the synod hereafter should be one minister and one lay delegate for each eight Presbyterian ministers in the State.

—The Chinese Sunday Schools of New York have 610 on their rolls, with average attendance of 331. Forty are professors of religion, and twenty more give evidence of being Christians.

—Joseph Cook says he has been informed by the missionaries in Japan that a large proportion of the Japanese students sent to America had returned Christians, while not one such case had occurred among those sent to Germany, France, or England.

—The Peking missionaries, in memorializing the House of Commons on the opium traffic, says it takes $65,000 in bullion out of China, and impoverishes the people to that extent to purchase British manufactures. The import has increased from 12,000 chests in 1834 to 97,000 in 1880, while the native growth now equals, if it does not exceed the importation.

—In India within the last few years, native women have been able to travel on the cars in comparative seclusion, in what are styled, "zenana cars," and frequently our missionary women ride in them and have rare opportunities for conversation and mission work.

—The Presbyterians have eleven churches with over a thousand communicants each; Dr. Talmage's with 2,747 comunicants; Chicago, (Dr. A. E. Kittredge,) 1,894; Dr. John Hall's, 1,807; Brooklyn (Dr. T. L. Cuyler's,) 1,792: Dr. Crosby's, 1,896; Rochester (Dr. J. B. Shaw,) 1,321; University Place, New York, (Dr. Booth,) 1,208; Bethany, Philadelphia, 1,180; New York, Dr. J. R. Paxton's 1,032; San Francisco (Rev. John Hemphill,) 1,024; Brick, New York, 1,001.

The Missions Among Romanists.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10, 1882.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—It affords me pleasure to-day to say that at present we are entertaining the Rev. Father Quinn., formerly a Roman Catholic priest, and to-day a fearless champion of the truth as we find it in Christian Protestantism. He came last week from Boston to give me a helping hand in my Canadian and Irish movement of Harlem, N. Y. Last Sunday evening he addressed a large and respectable audience in the hall which we use for our Canadian mission. He gave some of the chief reasons why many of the Roman Catholics are losing their faith and revolting against their church. He very opportunely alluded to the long appeal which the Roman Catholics of Cincinnati have been obliged to make in their behalf to Pope Leo XIII., as published in the New York Herald of last Sunday. This reveals the frightful injustice which prevails among arch biships, bishops and priests in their dealings with their deluded people, who, as a matter of course, almost worship them as gods, considering them incapable of the perfidy, deceit and dishonesty disclosed by the statement of this appeal.

Where is the evidence of godliness or God's grace in these and numberless other instances now scandalizing the Christian public. Is it right to allow this church to gain control of the people, treasury and the government of the United States, as these men are laboring to do? The time has come when all people of this country who appreciate life, liberty, prosperity, justice and the principles of Christianity, should unite and resist by every possible means, the influence and despotic power of Romanism. The best leaders for this work are men who have served in the priesthood, and who are willing to labor fearlessly, with sincerity and honesty. The want of proper support for many of these men, who are most worthy, prevents them from going forward in this noble cause.

Father Quinn, though most deserving in all respects, has suffered much, owing to the lack of assistance, which might be so easily given him, by those who are blessed with abundant means and who profess to be Christians. He desires to labor for the emancipation of people from the wicked control of the Romish priesthood. Should any persons wish to assist him, they may send their contributions to me.

P. A. SEGUIN, Pastor,
148 East 123d St., New York.

A Rebuke to the Baptist Ministry.

ST. PAUL, MINN., Oct. 14, 1882.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Having made a few observations in the Baptist State convention, held this week in Minneapolis; and these observations being unwelcome in Baptist newspapers, I seek a place for them in the columns of the Cynosure. I gave the delegates nearly all the tracts and papers you sent me. It was observed in one of the devotional meetings that there seemed to be a settled determination to have the joys of salvation without accepting Nathan's rebuke, or the putting away of sin. Like the Prodigal asking for the best robe, the ring, the slaughter of the fatted calf, the dancing and the merry making without leaving the swine herd or his bad companions. That it was a fact, well known to nearly all, and easily accessible to all, that some, members of that convention, members of Baptist churches, had sworn in Masonic lodges to be murdered in many different ways by assassins if they failed to conceal the crimes of lodge members; that, in defiance of God's commands, they continued the Aaronic priesthood, and that, in connection with the rites and ceremonies of the mythology of the ancient mysteries of Egypt; while they proclaimed the salvation of the soul with Christ rejected.

Some Masonic-Baptist preachers were present while the above remarks were made. But why should they care for such remarks as that? Surely they were sustained by the great Baptist denomination; and if they remain true to Masonic principles the denomination will tell them they are going to heaven, and even if they die without a ripple on a conscience stupified by Masonic hymns, Masonic prayers and Masonic oaths, that denomination will stand ready to avenge all who alone question their heavenly state. Recent facts justify the above assertion. A young pastor of twelve degrees by my side would be confidential with me until I told him that I had not taken the Masonic obligation, and then he said, "Masons under a sense of honor as gentlemen are conservative. When a man knocks at the door of Masonry he is at liberty to enter or stay out. And so at the end of every degree, he may stop when he pleases. If you see any of our leading Christian(?) men in the Masonic ranks you see them there under no compulsion. And if you wish to know the names or the number you can obtain them from public reports of Grand Lodges, commanderies, or councils instead of asking me or any private individual."

In regard to the sentiment of liberty we could in the days of slavery have some respect for the black man who was a slave against his will, but none for the man who freely sold himself into slavery. And as to stopping at the end of every degree the Mason finds himself in a worse condition than the tobacco sot who can stop when he overcomes his perverted appetite: for, when the Mason exclaims, "What have I any more to do with idols," the Grand Master taps him on the shoulder, and whispers, "Your obligation." "Once a Mason always a Mason." And he sees the head of an "Akirop" dripping with gore in the hand of "Joabert," and Joabert receiving "the highest honors King Solomon could bestow." (see Lexicon of Freemasonry, article Joabert.) Or he sees a Morgan monument, and he remarks that "the cable tow has a use, not figurative, well known to Freemasons," (see Lex., art. "cable tow.") So much for any consolation that he took that horrid obligation of his own free will and accord. The highwayman and the pirate may turn from his evil way, but the Mason needs more than his own free will and accord to turn from his idolatry; he needs the will of God, who, through Christ, said, "He that findeth his life shall lose it; and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it." If Masons are deluded with the idea that it is a rank of honor as gentlemen that makes them true to their Masonic obligations that delusion will be dispelled when they find that it is nothing but a sense of that "fear of man that brings a snare." Many discover, when too late, that they ought to have feared "Him who is able to destroy soul and body in hell."

A lady in the convention, with a light happy face, remarked privately that she was very glad the subject of Freemasonry had been mentioned in the convention; for her children were attending a Baptist institution of learning where the leaders were Freemasons, and she was very much afraid her sons would be enticed into the secret lodges. Another lady said that her husband had been driven from the pastorate of a Baptist church by Masonic members of that church. An Odd-fellow member of a Baptist church tells me that their church is without a pastor. The Anti-masons of the church would not go to hear their old pastor preach, because that pastor was a Mason. A grey-headed Baptist minister would lead me to think that he was quite in sympathy with me, until I am amazed to find that he has all his life been a thorough-going secret society man, has contested the question with President Jonathan Blanchard, and is a Freemason! But, here is the evidence that the Anti-masonic movement is feared by the churches, he would have me understand that he has entirely abandoned Masonry, and I attempt to swing him on his obligation, when lo, I find him fast bound to the fraternity by that "tie stronger than human hands can impose," and his indignation is aroused at the thought of breaking that "tie,"—like Dr. Lorimer, of Chicago, who felt himself grossly insulted when I asked him if he regarded his Masonic obligation binding upon him.

There is a strong undercurrent of sympathy between the Baptist denomination and the Masonic fraternity. This is manifested by the manner in which Freemasons are treated by the denomination; they are placed in all positions of trust and honor. The denomination is united in determining that no public issue shall be made against secret societies. Non-Masons, who acknowledge the truth of Masonic expositions, regard a sacred silence upon this subject as paramount. And they, by their actions, and words too, if necesssary, do all they can to put down and silence all opposition to Masonry. Many who call themselves Anti-masons, consciously, or unconsciously, sympathize with the fraternity. This may be seen in the pathos manifested in obituary notices of great leaders of the Masonic fraternity who have served the denomination. The Baptist denomination has done a noble thing in contending for a faithful translation of God's word and an ignoble thing in upholding Freemasonry by patronizing the great leaders of the fraternity in the highest offices of sacred trust from God.

Yours truly, WILLIAM FENTON.

HOME AND FARM.

How an Iowa Man Keeps Warm.

A correspondent of the Chicago Tribune gives an account of an interview with a farmer near Fort Dodge, Iowa, named Ruggles, who has a 400 acre farm, and a splendid dairy, a coal mine under his farm, and a fine belt of hard timber within sight of his house.

"When I went into Mr. Ruggles's large sitting-room," says the Tribune's correspondent, "I noticed a very large stove. It was about four feet long, three feet high, and the same broad. It heated the sitting-room and hall nicely.

"'I see you burn wood, Mr. Ruggles,' I remarked, as I held up my hands to warm them.

"'No, sir, I can't afford to burn wood. It's too much work to cut it.'

"'Then coal, I suppose,' I continued.

"'No, sir; too much work to dig coal. I'm burning something that beats coal or wood—cheaper than either of them, though I have both coal and wood on the farm.'

"'Well, what can you burn cheaper than wood or coal?' I asked, desiring to solve the puzzle.

"'Why, I burn cornstalks, sir. Corn stalks are the cheapest and best fuel on earth. It is ten times as easy to gather corn stalks and tie them into bundles as it is to cut down those trees. Why, I can go into the cornfield with two men, and in a day bundle up corn stalks enough to warm my house all winter."

"'Let me see you put some corn stalks into the stove,' I said.

"Mr. Ruggles stepped to the door and brought in a bundle of corn stalks about three feet through. The bundle weighed about forty pounds. Then, lifting the top of the stove, he laid them in upon the embers, and closed up the front damper.

"'How long do they burn?' I asked.

"'Three hours. I don't let them burn with a flame. My stove closes air-tight. I let them burn slowly without a flame. I get all the heat there is in them. The stove is large, with an immense radiating surface. It dosen't have to be very hot. Now,' said Mr. Ruggles, 'five such bundles a day keep my sitting-room warm—or 600 bundles for the winter. I can bind up 600 bundles of corn stalks in two days alone. I couldn't chop the wood to warm this room in a week. Then, in the spring, I have a load of strong ashes for my wheat field, while my neighbors have to cut up the same corn stalks in the Spring to get them away from the harrow. It makes me smile when I hear about the idiots up in Minnesota, who have forty-acre corn fields, and still go cold or buy coal. Why, I'd rather burn corn stalks than cut maple wood within sight of the house.'

"'How would wheat straw do?' I asked.

"'Just as well, only the stove would have to be twice as large. I'd have it made of sixteenth-of-an inch boiler iron, four feet long and four feet high, with one little damper which could be closed air-tight.'"

USE OF RAWHIDE.—The skin of an animal, whether cow, calf, colt, or horse, that dies on the farm, is worth more at home than at the tanner's. Cut it into narrow strips, and shave off the hair with a sharp knife before the kitchen fire, or in the workshop, of stormy days. You may make them soft by rubbing. A rawhide strap an inch wide, will hold a horse better, and last longer, than an inch rope. It is stronger than hoop iron, and may be used to hoop dry casks and boxes, and for hinges.

Try it on a broken thill, or any woodwork that has been split. Put it on wet, and nail fast. Thin skins make the best bag strings. A rawhide rope is a good substitute for a chain. It is valuable to a broken link in a trace chain. For some purposes it is best to use it in its natural state. For other purposes it may be dressed soft.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 60 cents; per dozen, $5.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.00. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degrees of Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. This confession of Henry L. Valance, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan in the Niagara River, was taken from the lips of the dying man by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine County, Wisconsin, in 1848. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense preacnted by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry 15 cents each: per dozen $1.25

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. Each of these able writers in clear, forcible language treats the subject in one or more of its varied phases. Rev. David McDill in six chapters treats of 1. "Their Antiquity; 2 Their Secrecy; 3. "Oaths and Promises;" 4. "Profaneness" 5. "Their Exclusiveness;" 6. "False Claims." Prest. Blanchard handles the topic: "Shall Christians join Secret Societies?" in a masterly way, showing clearly that they are all opposed to the genius of Christianity; and Dr. Beecher closes with his Report on Secret Societies, which was adopted by the Congregational Association of Illinois at Ottawa in 1866. In cloth, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.25. Paper cover, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association, condition of the Carpenter donation, with engraving of building donated by Mr. Carpenter; tables showing the number of pastors and communicants in churches that exclude members of secret societies, tabular view of local, county, state and national conventions, and list of organizations auxiliary to the National Christian Association; brief opinions of eminent men on secret societies, and testimonies of religious bodies against them. 25 cents each; per dozen, $1.50.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Greene, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. Unpublished Reminiscences of the Morgan Times, by Elder David Bernard; Recollections of the Morgan Trials, as related by Victory Birdseye, Esq., and presented by his daughter, Mrs. C. B. Miller; Secretary's Report; Roll of Delegates; Songs of Mr. G. W. Clark; Paper by Enoch Honeywell; Constitution N. C. A.; Reports of Committees and a Report of the Political Meeting. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D. D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquillette; also Report of the Political Mass Convention, with Platform and Candidates for the Presidential Campaign of 1876. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 31 Cynosure tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies; and the dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized secrecy are shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public. Those who wish to circulate anti-Masonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. W. P. M'Nary, pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind. This is a very clear, thorough, candid and remarkably concise Scriptural argument on the character of Freemasonry. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

No. 7 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

In the Coils; or the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of every-day life, and showing how individual, domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. Parents who wish, not only to keep their children out of these night-schools of Satan, but to give them arguments against them in the most attractive dress, will do well to purchase this book. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses. In this scathing review the lying pretensions of the order are clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Letters on Masonry. Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian religion. Paper cover, 30 cents each; per dozen, $2.50.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship (old work), by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen, $7.50.

Freemasonry and the M. E. Church. Let every lover of truth and justice read this report of the trial of Rev. J. T. Michael, showing how he was driven out of the M. E. church for opposing Masonry and loving Methodism. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocate, and afterward in pamphlet form. The Evangelical Repository, reviewing it, says: "This pamphlet consists of a series of articles originally published in the Church Advocate, Lancaster, Pa. Elder M. S. Newcomer opposes secret societies, and especially Freemasonry and Elder G. W. Wilson defends the system. We are free to say that Mr. Newcomer has thoroughly routed his opponent at every point. Mr. Wilson speaks by the book, as he is a Royal Arch Mason." 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

NEWS ITEMS.

—The United States Rolling Stock Company are about to build immense shops just south of Chicago for the construction of cars and engines.

—Two new railroads are about entering this city to connect with New York. One is an extension of the Erie railroad. The other a new line to Buffalo parallel with the Michigan Southern road, connecting at Buffalo with a new road parallel with the New York Central.

—George Scoville, the counsel of Guitteau, and his wife are having a disgraceful time in the Chicago courts. It is charged that Mrs. Scoville is insane; but the evidence so far fails to prove the fact.

—Some captures have just been made in Chicago by R. W. McAfee, general agent for the Western Society for the Suppression of Vice. The chief leper is J. M. House, wholesale dealer and manufacturer of the vile cards, and three retailers were also taken.

—The Michigan Crop Report for October states the average yield of wheat in the State to be 18 41-100 bushels per acre, and the aggregate product is estimated at 31,683,445 bushels.

—A car-load of sixty Mormon missionaries passed through Cheyenne on the Union Pacific Road, bound for Europe. The men are mostly ignorant, and apparently low characters.

—A car of new corn was received at St. Louis from Parsons, Kansas, Wednesday, and sold at auction for 75 cents per bushel. It is in fine condition, grading No. 2 readily.

—Five negroes, including one woman, were hanged at Eastman, Ga., Friday, for complicity in a terrible riot which occurred at a camp-meeting at that place in August last. A negro gambler, upon resisting an officer and attempting to escape was shot and killed. This inflamed the negroes to a furious pitch, and they wreaked their vengeance in the most horrible manner upon a young man named Harvard, whom they killed and mutilated. In an encounter which followed between the white citizens and the riotous negroes three of the latter were killed. Six of the negroes were condemned to death and five others sentenced to life imprisonment—all on account of the death of one white man.

—As the result of an old family feud which had already been the cause of numerous fatal affrays a remarkable tragedy took place Thursday at Knoxville, Tenn. All the parties to the affair were men of marked prominence in that part of the State, one of them being the possessor of a fortune estimated at $10,000,000. Gen. Joseph A. Mabry and Maj. O'Connor were both shot dead.

— George Otto Trevelyan, Chief Secretary for Ireland, in a speech at Selkirk, Scotland, last evening, said the resident magistrates in Ireland in their last reports were singularly unanimous in stating that the relations between landlord and tenant were improving; that rents were being fairly paid, and intimidation decreasing.

—The indictment against Arabi Pasha embraces numerous counts of a serious character. It is charged that in violation of the rights of nations he displayed a white flag in Alexandria as a cover under which to retire his forces and give the city over to fire and pillage; that he incited the Egyptians to engage in armed rebellion against the Khedive; that he continued the war after peace had been declared; and, in a general way, that he incited civil war, massacre, devastation, and pillage in Egyptian territory.

This Fund is designed to aid in getting subscribers from among those who do not take the Cynosure, and who may be induced to read it by paying themselves $1.00 per year. The Fund pays 50 cents, making up the club rate. It will now aid 336 new subscribers to get the paper for $1.00.

PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT.

NINETY-EIGHT CLUBS OF TEN WANTED IN THE NEXT SIXTEEN DAYS.

The second $15.00 is received from W. H. Layton, who expects to secure and forward the names of subscribers. We are ready for the next.

W. I. Phillips promises to be one of the hundred. B. Tunnicliffe also writes: If others in sufficient numbers respond to your recent proposition I will advance the $15.00, etc.

"H. Woodsmall, Selma, Ala., sends the names of seven colored ministers who are earnest in their opposition to the secret orders, to receive the Cynosure from the colored ministers aid fund. There was more than enough money in that fund to pay for them at $1.50 each which is all that is charged in such cases. J. Stratton sends four for four months each. Mrs. E. D. Bailey, J. T. Brennan and Wm. Oburn each send two for a year each. N. E. Jennings.—"Bro. Smith Kindley sent for the Christian Cynosure for me which I have read with great profit. Some have promised to subscribe for it soon."

J. Stratton: "We will do our best to get subscribers for the Cynosure."

H. E. Dull, "I will try to get you some subscribers." J. F. Brennan, "I am going to make an effort to get subscribers for Christian Cynosure, as I firmly believe it is a work that the children of God should engage in."

Two have paid and four others have pledged on the proposition made in the Cynosure of Oct. 12th. It is republished on page eighth this week.

Do you not want the Cynosure after Jan. 1st. 1883, one day earlier, pasted nicely instead of being stitched. Join the one hundred. The first company that is enlisting for this season's canvas for subscriptions. Begin in time! Do not sing next April:

"Late I found a barren field,
The harvest past my search revealed
Others golden sheaves had gained
Only the stubble for me remained."

MASONIC BOOKS

FOR SALE BY

EZRA A. COOK,

7 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

Books sent post-paid on receipt of retail price, but books by mail are at risk of person ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express are sold at 10 per cent. discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority because they tell too much.

General Ahiman Rezon and Freemasons' Guide. By Daniel Sickels, 33d degree. The most perfect Masonic monitor published in the United States. Embellished with many engravings and containing monitorial instructions in the degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow-Craft and Master Masons, with explanatory lectures, the ceremonies of consecration and dedication of new lodges, installation of officers, laying foundation stones, dedication of Masonic halls, burial services, Masonic calendar, ritual for a Lodge of Sorrow, Masonic trials, etc. Bound in fine cloth, extra large 12mo, $2.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the entire ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Scores of Masons have privately admitted that this is a standard text-book in the lodge and is strictly correct; but publicly it is not acknowledged as authority, though many officers of the lodge make use of it. Price, in cloth, $2.50.

Female Masonry. Manual of the Order of the Eastern Star. Containing the ritual, symbols, lectures, etc., of the five degrees of "Adoptive Masonry," Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound. Price, $1.50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. A practical guide to the ceremonies in the degrees conferred in Masonic Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated edition. In cloth, $1.25; in paper, 75 cents.

Although this Monitor is extensively used by the lodge, especially in conferring the higher degrees, it is publicly called an exposition, and not allowed as authority.

Sickels' Freemasons' Monitor. Containing the degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic illustrations, together with tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also forms of Masonic documents, notes, songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels; 32mo. In tuck, $1.50; cloth, $1.00.

Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry. Containing a Definition of Terms, Notes on its History, Traditions and Antiquities, and an Account of all the Rites and Mysteries of the Ancient World. 12 mo., 526 pages, $3.00.

Mackey's Manual of the Lodge, or Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow-Craft and Master Mason, with Ceremonies relating to Installations, dedications, consecrations, laying of corner-stones, etc. Price, $2.00.

Mackey's Masonic Ritualist, or Monitorial Instruction Book. By Albert G. Mackey, Past General High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of the United States, Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prince of Mercy, etc. Price, cloth, $1.25; tuck, $1.75.

Mackey's Text-Book of Masonic Jurisprudence. Illustrating the laws of Freemasonry, both written and unwritten. This is the great law book of Freemasonry. 570 pages. Price, $2.50.

Allyn's Ritual of Masonry. Illustrated by a large number of engravings, and containing a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, Orange and Odd-fellows' Societies Price, $5.00.

We want to mail the Cynosure a day earlier than we now do, without putting it onthe press any sooner. We want to mail it nicely pasted and intend to if you will help us. Please read the proposition on this subject which is republished this week on the sixteenth page of the Cynosure. The money should be sent in before November 11th, as it takes we understand about two months to build the machine and our readers would be glad to have it ready to commence the new year with.

If it will help you to secure subscribers, send us the names and addresses of those whose subscriptions you intend soon to solicit and we will send them each a sample copy of the paper free before you call. This will give them an opportunity to examine the paper fully before making up their minds.

NEXT WEEK.—In the next Cynosure we expect to print a fine cut of the Morgan Monument. There will be also several valuable papers: one from Rev. Wm. Johnson, of College Springs, Iowa; another a historical review of the Chaldean Mysteries and their relation to the lodge system. Canvassers will find this a good number to take with them.

TOPICS OF THE TIME.

The great meetings of the Christian Convention in Farwell Hall during the middle of October, addressed by McKay, Rainsford, Spurgeon, Pierson, Whittle and Brooks, have been continued in St. Louis, Indianapolis, Cleveland and Buffalo by Dr. Brooks, Mr. Spurgeon of London, Mr. Smithson and Major Whittle of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan conducting the singing. These meetings have been widely instrumental in promoting a revival spirit among the churches through a renewed and deeper consecration of the membership. We cannot understand how he could be a Christian who could listen unmoved and unblessed by the eloquence of these brethren as they unfolded the Scriptures. The pulse of Christian zeal has been stronger in a thousand pulpits and ten thousand homes as a result of these meetings.

A hero died on Thursday last in Jersey City, August Sieg, a railway engineer. Five days before, while his engine was drawing a crowded passenger train between New York and Newark, the cab took fire and he was driven with his fireman back to the cars for safety. But that safety might be only for a moment, and the whole train was exposed to imminent danger. The brave engineer crawled back over the tender into the flames and stopped his engine, but was taken off fatally burned. There has been a great deal of sentimental eulogy of engineers who stood at their posts, when by doing so they could by no means save the train, but only sacrifice themselves. But the heroism required in this case is deserving the highest praise, and the railway company will not be excusable if their sympathy does not substantially assist any persons dependent upon the dead man.

The haters of temperance in Kansas are acting as if there remained some hope of turning back the page of progress in morality and righteousness, reversing the action of the people against the drink system, and submitting the constitutional amendment to a new vote. But the stars in their courses fight against the Sisera of rum. They will not turn back and sink amazed at their rising place, for from no saloon can be heard a voice like Joshua's to bid them stand, much less to turn back the chariot wheels of truth and right principle, which roll but one way. But to accomplish so dark and hellish a design, if it were possible, to what agency of all do they resort first and with most confidence? To the secret lodge. A secret political organization is being extended through the State. It is known as the "Liberal League." It is said that this order has 600 members in the single county of Sedgwick. This number is improbable, but if it were true it proves that members of other lodges are very ready to combine secretly to effect so dark an end. In Kansas as in Iowa, whatever reverse or check the cause of temperance may sustain, the lodge can furnish the reason for it.

The Republican campaign in New York has the unusual assistance of the President of the United States in person, together with backing to the amount of a million dollars from the railway magnates and monopolists, which will be increased to five millions if necessary. It was reported that Jay Gould sent one of his best henchmen to the Saratoga convention with instructions to defeat the nomination of Cornell if money could do it; since railway monopolies found that they had everything to fear from him. But the administration politicians were more base in their frauds than Gould even; and the disposition of thousands of the better class of Republicans to repudiate the ticket, though personally esteeming Mr. Folger, has alarmed President Arthur, who sees the greatest humiliation in the defeat of his candidate. He is expecting to be in New York until after the election. He has had large experience in managing the ward strikers of that city and his personal presence may turn the battle at its crisis. As for the contempt which he brings upon his great office by this management, he is past feeling it. When Garfield was smitten, he, the Vice-President, was away in Albany making every effort to secure the return of Conkling to the Senate where he might make open and haughty war upon the President. A good Providence ordered the humiliation at that time of a clique who had no higher aim than to misuse the public offices for wicked and private ends. Next Tuesday may reveal another like lesson.

Secret societyism in Europe has broken out again. Lyons, France, perhaps from its proximity to Geneva, the headquarters of the whole family of political secretism, is chosen as the point of attack on established systems of government and society. The French Minister of Justice says that the government has knowledge of a vast revolutionary organization which has local branches, managed from Geneva. In one of the anarchists meetings near Lyons the speaker openly threatened the life of President Grevy. Placards recommending the assassination of leading politicians have been posted on the walls of Marsailles and other cities in the south of France. Attempts have been made to blow up recruiting offices, and numerous threats are made to visit newspapers with the same fate. At Lyons the mobs of revolutionists were augmented by 20,000 strikers and vigorous measures were taken by the authorities. Troops fill every point of advantage in the city, and forts commanding the city are prepared, at a word, to lay any portion in ashes. Some of the Parisian journals see in these periodical outbreaks of secret communism one result of the evil of standing armies, and openly discuss the disarmament of France as an example to Europe. Beside taking away from productive pursuits 3,200,000 men these armies cost $595,600,000 in taxes upon the people, a very considerable proportion of the whole tax. In France every inhabitant bears an average tax burden of 109 francs, or $22. It is no wonder there is revolution in the air.

The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania and Our Government.

BY H. H. HINMAN.

"Freemasonry is an institution subject to no other laws than that which it makes itself. To stop for a moment to consider if profane governments can exercise control, over Freemasonry recognizes a question that would imperil the very foundations of the craft. * * * The exercise of any power, either protective, adverse, or hostile, is an assault on the organic structure alike formidable and fatal. * * * If the permission of the government of any nation is asked to sanction, or that government is permitted to prescribe, the manner of organization, or assumes or usurps authority over the administration of a body of Freemasons, it is not a Grand Lodge." (Adopted by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, 1876, as published in the Voice of Masonry, June, 1877, p. 459.)

Here we have the true spirit of the order. It reminds me of another evil power "Who opposeth and exalteth himself against all that is called God or is worshipful, so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God" (2 Thess., ii: 4). If these two powers are not the same, they are at least remarkably alike. No other institution speaks thus. No other dare be so arrogant. All others ask, at least, the protection of the government, and acknowledge a subjection to its laws. No other assumes entire independence of our nation. Mormonism is a possible exception, but then Mormonism is but a modification of Masonry. When the members of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, some years ago, were summoned by the legislature, and required to tell what was true of Masonic obligations, and what they knew of the Morgan murder, they refused to obey, and the fraternity sustained them. When the United States courts have required Mormon "saints" to tell about the mysteries of the Endowment House, they have disobeyed and the Mormons gloried in their contumacy. Surely these orders are much alike, and surely such institutions have no right to be. Their very existence in a free government imperils it. In the language of Seward, "They trample on every government they cannot control."

Readings from the "Milky Way."

Though Masonry is as old as Nature herself, and our mystic brethren have even striven to establish its great antiquity, they have utterly failed to get one record back of A. D. 1717. Dr. Dalcho and other standard authors concede that the proofs of an earlier existence are wanting. When Lieut. Gorringe, of the U. S. Navy, made known his discovery of Masonic emblems under "Cleopatra's Needle," we were made to rejoice till the evidence was exploded by our own authors and the assumptions of Lieut. Gorringe were scouted by the well-informed public. Long have we puzzled our heads to decipher Egyptian hieroglyphics to prove our antiquity; but all in vain, because we did not look up instead of down for our record. Masonry should not look to earth for the readings that are found in the heavens. Why should we be so stupid as to look for the records of our celestial institution down here? Come with us and see readings from the "Milky Way" which no cowan can call in question.

Many times in our boyhood have we wondered at that luminous highway in the starry heavens, and in our ignorance conjectured that the "Grand Architect" had put it there for ornament or variety, or, perhaps, to compensate for the absence of the full moon. But after becoming a Mason and thus arriving at "the center of truth," I applied my telescope of unequalled magnifying powers to that mysterious handwriting of Nature's God, and lo! all was plain. What a wonder that none of our lodges ever dreamed of this before! Here is our celestial record as plainly written as the child's A. B. C. With the unassisted eye we see only the blendings of thousands upon thousands of emblems and inscriptions written with the golden light of heaven. With our telescope we behold immense volumes of Masonic readings to the glory of our divine order and the warning of our Anti-masonic foes. Let our waning cause revive and the enemy beware. In the back-ground as if written by the light of ten thousand suns, is the sentence: "Masonry is and ever was." Before this blazing sentence stand in awful reverence twenty-four angelic forms bowing in a circle around. Just above this scene is the Grand Master of a lodge with mitred head, and regalia more gaudy than language can depict, while above all, in letters outshining the sun, in semicircle, is printed "Mystery, Babylon the great, behold thy King."

Next we are attracted by ten thousands of lodge titles, such as "All Puisant," "Grand King," etc. These seem to be spread out in infinite variety and profusion. It is rumored that a certain angelic dignitary often mentioned in a certain ancient book, who "lost" his first estate, (being unfortunate,) is the general superintendent of these endless titles, and that his opinion is, that the Milky Way is too limited to accommodate all the high names of lodge dignitaries, and that he is about to dictate an extension of billions of leagues to this highway to Masonic glory. Our telescope does not settle this question.

One other thing may here be mentioned which must greatly interest our fraternity. Looking into the infinite expanse beyond, which seems to border on the Milky Way, on the south, there seems to be a shoreless sea of slime, sparkling in the light and showing signs of life. This is the lodge laboratory. From this sea spring up annually vast quantities of lodge bioplasts, which culminate with supernatural facility into new lodge formations of all names and types. There are rumors that this sea of celestial slime overflows its banks about twice a year and sends its embrionic lodge progeny clean over our little earth. Who with such facts before his eyes can fail to see both the antiquity and the divinity of the lodge? In conclusion let us sing the doxology of our sublime order:

"Hail! Masonry divine," etc.

Let all the lodges join in the chorus, as all owe their origin to one father.

Behold! new scenes burst upon my bewildered sight! The universe is tributary to Masonry, and the celestial canopy is but one ponderous book of Masonic, symbolic lore. Our next reading will come from Aurora Borealis.

PIKESPEAK.

"Don't Know and Don't Care."

BY GEORGE H. WILLIAMS.

"I don't know anything about it, but I don't approve of it," say some church members, speaking of Freemasonry, as an excuse for not giving their testimony against it; and in some cases they add, "And I don't care anything about it," when often the truth is, that they think that to oppose Freemasonry and other secret societies will expose them to the displeasure and opposition of members of these orders, and perhaps to loss of pleasant social intercourse with their families, and perhaps to loss of popularity, and of pecuniary gain. Therefore it is that some of these do not wish to read or hear reliable information of the anti-Christian and immoral character of these societies, and of their utter antagonism to all righteous human governments, and, above all, to the government of Jehovah. Either for lack of this information, or because, perhaps without thinking of or seeing it, they are more anxious to please the members of these orders than to please Jehovah. They "don't know" and "don't care" to know that many faithful ministers of the gospel of Christ, and many other faithful believers in Christ, have been grievously persecuted by members of these secret orders, especially by Freemasons, because in their conscientious obedience to the will of God, and according to his word, they have renounced their obligations to these orders, and exposed their wickedness. For this they have been slandered, mobbed, stoned, beaten, knocked down and stamped upon, shot, killed, their property destroyed, their business broken up, and all this has been done to them in accordance with the letter, or the spirit, or both, of the oaths which the members of these orders have secretly sworn; which oaths have been published often and fully; so that who will may know what they are, and see their wickedness. Some of these who "don't know" and "don't care" will impudently rebuke those who do know and do care, because they charge upon members of these orders the sin and danger of adhering to them; and they will sooner believe men of their acquaintance, members of these orders, who have secretly sworn to conceal these oaths, than they will believe those godly men, who, having been ensnared into these secret orders, do, in the faithful discharge of their duties to God and man, and at the risk of almost certain persecution of some kind, and often at risk of life, renounce these oaths and expose them, that others may see the wickedness to which these men obligate themselves by these oaths.

The man, or the woman, who so treats these servants of God; who either persecutes them, or who is willingly ignorant that they are persecuted, and hence "don't know" or "don't care" that they are persecuted, will do well to consider the words of Christ in Matt. xxv: 41, "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, my brethren, ye did it not to me"; and also to consider the word of God in Prov. xxiv: 11, 12, "If thou forbear to deliver them that are drawn unto death, and those that are ready to be slain; if thou say, Behold, we know it not; doth not he that pondereth the heart consider it? and he that keepeth thy soul doth not he know it? and shall not he render to every man according to his works?"

REFORM STORY.

Holden with Cords.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "LITTLE PEOPLE," "A SUNNY LIFE," ETC.

Chapter XXVI—Freemasonry vs. Justice.

I will now drop the thread of my narrative to give a brief statement of the general situation a few months after the murder of Morgan, lest some reader finding history so silent on the events of those thrilling times should accuse me of a tendency to romance. Hitherto Masonry had held her own unchallenged by church or state, but now she was undergoing a metamorphosis similar to that of the fair maiden in the witch story who suddenly turned into a loathsome, wriggling serpent. But her power was nowise abated. Though she could no longer captivate good men by her harlot beauty she could intimidate and appal. Under her basilisk eye the press quailed and was silent, or sounded false notes to baffle public inquiry; and even the majestic Muse of History succumbed to the same withering spell, and expunged alike from the ponderous tome of the student and the text-book of the school-boy all record of those exciting years with their far-reaching political effects, their strange thwarting of justice, their vivid lights and shadows of personal experience; for it is a fact that many a Mason who chose to obey the voice of conscience rather than the mandates of the lodge, trembled under a fear of its secret vengeance, and rumor told of more than one who dared not stir out at nightfall for dread of the assassins knife at his throat.

For as these things were talked over in store and tavern, and round the kitchen fire, and the conviction gathered force that Morgan had met his death at the hands of Masonic executioners, ugly tales began to start up. Men remembered Smith of Vermont, who undertook to re-publish Jachin and Boaz in this country, and was believed to have shared the fate of its original author; as well as Murdock of Rensselaerville, New York, who likewise rendered himself obnoxious to the lodge by an attempt to betray the secrets and was found mysteriously murdered soon after. It was therefore no wonder that my fears had been seriously excited for Mark's safety before they were so disagreeably confirmed by Sam Toller's tidings of the plot against him; no wonder that I passed a sleepless night thinking of his peril, and vainly trying to answer Sam's inquiry, "What is to be done about it?" But a strong brave soul that has cast out of its calculations every factor of self-interest, fully resolved to follow truth wherever she may lead, even to martyrdom if so be, has a wonderfully direct way of settling all such difficulties.

"My duty is plain, Leander;" was Mark's answer, when I communicated to him his danger, the next morning. "I must tell what I know, but I shall certainly give good heed to Sam's warning. I shall take one of the farm horses, and by making a detour from the direct road both in going and coming foil as I trust all their plans. But I must go alone. Nobody shall be involved in any risk that I may run."

But my resolution was unshaken to accompany Mark. I could not let my chosen friend from boyhood, Rachel's brother and mine, take the perilous trip alone. And we accordingly set out under circumstances that recalled with curious vividness to my mind the memory of another journey,—a vision of dim silent woods with the same unseen foe lurking in my track—the same that betrayed me at the Stovers' cabin, that struck me down without warning and left me for dead under the covering veil of solitude and night.

"I never thought it was going to turn out such a lucky thing for you, Mark, when I learned Sam the grips and signs," said Joe slyly as we were about to ride off. For he alone of all the family had been told the latter's real errand to Brownsville.

"So you initiated Sam Toller;" said Mark with a quiet smile. "I have always rather suspected that was the way of it. But don't you ever intend to let us into your secret."

"Well, that depends," answered Joe coolly, "on how a certain individual who shall be nameless at present minds his ps and qs."

And with one glance backward at Rachel as she stood smiling her farewells in the open door-way, and a furtive look at my pistols to see that they were in order I rode on after Mark. And thus like two palladins of old, with this notable exception that they met their giants and fire-breathing dragons in fair open fight, while our enemy was a snake lurking in ambush whose deadly presence could only be known when we felt its fangs, we set forth for Ontario court house.

"It is my belief that the lodge in Brownsville has something to do with this plot against you, Mark;" said I, during one of the brief intervals when we allowed our horses to indulge in a walk.

"Very likely," was Mark's quiet reply. "And a lodge fifty miles away may feel just as much interest to suppress my testimony. Masonry is not only a complete despotism, but it is a perfectly organized system, and under it men are like figures on a checker-board with neither will nor volition of their own except as the lodge may choose to handle them. Nothing shows so much the terrible power of the institution as the fact that men who had never seen each other's faces, or heard each other's names, who were separated by long distances and could not possibly have held any personal communication with each other acted in perfect concert in this matter of the murder of Morgan."

"I wonder who that man could have been who mistook me for one of his fellow plotters when I was coming down on the canal boat last fall. I shall always think he was the one who made the attempt to burn Miller's printing office that Sunday night when I was stopping at the Park Tavern."

"You are right, Leander," said Mark. "That man lurking in the shadow of the stairway was Richard Howard, a Knight Templar, one of the chief conspirators against Morgan, and one that drew the lot to murder him. He was then acting in concert with Daniel Johns, the spy from Canada, who wormed himself into the confidence of Morgan and Miller, and by absconding with the Chapter degrees a few nights before his abduction, made, as the fraternity then supposed a fatal break in the publishing of the work. But I understand that Morgan kept duplicate copies of the three first degrees, which were taken from him under cover of a civil process in August last and that they are now in the hands of Colonel Miller all ready for issue from the press. If these things are so Blue Lodge Masonry will soon be published to the world."

"Mark," said I, solemnly, "I believe this cursed institution killed my grandfather. That long inward struggle wore his life away. I am glad Colonel Miller is brave and patriotic enough to go on and publish, and may it prove a final death-blow to the lodge."

"The end is not yet, Leander," said Mark significantly. The institution whose secret plottings made the streets of Paris run red with blood in 1789, whose subtle schemings undermined the power of the Puritan party in England, and placed Charles II. on the throne, will not down without a fierce struggle. And it will be a struggle between light and darkness; between the liberty our fathers crossed the seas to win and old world despotisms; between Christ and anti-Christ. I think I see it dimly shadowed forth in Revelation where John says,—'And I saw the beast and the kings of the earth and their armies gathered together to make war against him that sat on the horse and against his army.' It may not come in this generation. Other issues may rise and stave it off for awhile but come some time it surely will."

"But what do you think the beast represents? Papal Rome?"

"Papal Rome, you remember, is the woman who sits on the beast. How can the two be identical? To my mind the beast rising out of the sea is the old Roman Empire, savage, cruel, despotic, so that 'the image of the beast' must refer to some organization of modern times which reproduces its spirit and character. And what is more like it than Freemasonry, with her aim at universal empire, her despotic government and savage laws, her Baal worship, her hatred and contempt of Christ's name. No parallel could be plainer."

I always liked to hear Mark talk even when I did not understand him, or was disposed to think him mystical. For his mind had that rare balance of faculties—on the one side the logical and on the other the poetical—which seems necessary to the full enjoyment and understanding of that strange book of Revelation. In pondering over its wonderous imagery, its panorama of ceaseless conflict with the dragon forces of evil, Mark felt his own earnest, intense nature kindle into a new zeal and fervor; while for the outward poverty and bareness of his life, the Apocalyptic splendors of the New Jerusalem with its glorified inhabitants, its endless chants of victory, its perfect freedom from all that can vex and annoy, was the same that it has been to God's sorely tried ones in all ages, a glorious "recompence of reward."

It was expected that bills of indictment would be found at this sitting of the court against some of the chief actors in the terrible tragedy, as a number of witnesses were to be examined, some of whom were supposed to have important testimony, and thus a more than ordinary interest had been excited. But several curious circumstances attended the sitting of this court of law.

"They may question and cross question till they're gray; they won't get the truth out of witnesses that are bound not to tell," remarked one of those obligingly communicative individuals who are as ready to dispense information as a spring to send forth its waters. "Now that last chap that was on the witness stand, he knew all about their taking off Morgan, and he perjured himself when he swore he didn't. In my opinion there's been an agreement beforehand among a good many of the witnesses not to know anything worth telling. Things look suspicious when a man comes into court and swears to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, and has his counsel all the while by his side to advise him when to answer and when not."

"That's a fact," pronounced another in the group; for this conversation took place during an adjournment of the court, when tongues wagged in busy and not over favorable comment on these palpable obstructions thus laid in the way of justice.

"Well now," went on the first speaker, "my brother was witness once in a trial for murder, and he's told me that he see Masonic signs pass between the prisoner and his counsel and members of the jury. And the upshot of the matter was the man was never convicted, hain't been to this day, though nobody had the least doubt of his guilt. Talk of Morgan's being alive! They'd better tell that to the marines. If Morgan is alive why don't they produce him and stop all this fuss?"

"That's hitting the nail on the head square," assented another with an approving nod. "But some of the come-outers are going to testify this afternoon. Them are the ones I want to hear, especially that young Stedman. They say he's going to be a hard witness agin 'em."

And a hard witness Mark Stedman proved himself, but no harder than one or two others, among whom was Mr. Samuel D. Greene, our old friend of the Park Tavern. His part in the dark and terrible drama was now fully revealed, for the unknown divulger of Masonry's murderous plottings, the man who nobly dared to stand in the breach and warn its defenseless victims of their danger, who would have saved Morgan if the public apathy had not refused to believe such things possible, and who did save Miller by finally rousing a band of citizens to start in pursuit of his abductors, was one with that grave, silent inn-keeper, who had moved so quietly about among his guests during those memorable days in Batavia.

I remember how he looked standing there in the old court room in the prime of his manhood, his strong, squarely built frame telling of generations of sturdy yeoman ancestry, as well as I remember him half a century later when the waves of Masonic hate in every conceivable shape and form had dashed over him and left him—grand, heroic old man that he was, unmoved at his post, and penning such words as these:—

"I am an old man and I shall soon be gone; But I leave it as my last injunction to my countrymen that they watch this institution with a jealous eye. It is an enemy to their liberties. It has no thought of the general good. It is not founded and worked upon any such idea. It is built upon the principle of tyranny in all ages, the good of the many at the expense of the few."

As he unfolded the whole history, the secret plans of the lodge and his own efforts to baffle them; as in clear, unvarnished language his scathing testimony branded names before unimpeached for respectability with the murderer's stigma, a shiver went through the court room. Men looked in each other's eyes questioning if it were possible that under all our free institutions lay a quaking Vesuvius ready to overwhelm and destroy the right purchased so dearly for every American citizen to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

The Sermon.

PREACHED BY E. D. BAILEY AT THE UNION SERVICES, SOUTH WORCESTER, SEPT. 24TH, 1882.

"Take these things hence; make not my Father's house an house of merchandise."—John 2:16.

The circumstances under which these words were uttered are familiar. The Saviour visited the temple and found men there selling sheep, oxen and doves, and carrying on a banking business. The custom began as an innocent matter of convenience and increased so gradually that the people had become familiar with it and had probably ceased to regard it as an evil. The probable origin of the custom may be given about as follows:

People gathered to the Passover yearly from remote parts of Palestine to make their customary offerings. It was not convenient to bring doves or drive live-stock so far and hence traders in Jerusalem exchanged stock for money. These transactions were not regarded out of place in the temple. Men from remote parts could only bring Roman coin, and because Jewish coin only was received in the temple men made a business of exchanging, and this was the origin of the money-changers. Both these customs grew to mammoth proportions, and when the Saviour came he found them strongly intrenched, with no disposition on the part of the dealers to forego their occupation. Our Lord acted with promptness. The scourge of small cords did its work, and the cowardly hypocrites fled from the temple.

No oxen or sheep or doves are used for offerings in Christian churches, and hence no places for selling them have been opened. Roman coin does not need to be changed into Jewish, and hence there are no banks in our churches. But the things made use of in modern worship are subject to commercial value and liable to the same sordid traffic. It seems to me not inappropriate to employ the analogy of the text to censure some marked abuses of modern days. Let me say then first that we have made merchandise of our MINISTERS.

The church committee takes the sum of money at its command, one, two, three or five thousand dollars, as the case may be, and enters the market. The minister inquires what is expected of him and what the price is, and then decides whether he can be had or not. Now let us not misunderstand this transaction. If there is any wrong in the process, it is not in the fact that the church seeks a minister. Just as surely as our Lord ordained churches he ordained also ministers, and the church does perfectly right in seeking one suited to the circumstances. Neither is the wrong, if any there be, in the fact that a minister accepts a call to the church. Under any circumstances, if the church has a minister, some man must have a call and accept it. Neither is there any wrong in the fact that the church tenders a given salary and the minister acquiesces. Each of these transactions, so far described, may occur and involve nothing out of place; each of them may occur and involve an important wrong. The worshiper might have gone to Jerusalem with his money and he might have bought his offering without involving any party to the transaction in sin, but what might have been done without sin became a most grievous wrong.

The commercial value of a minister is not to be regarded, nor should the minister be governed by the commercial value of the church. There are more important considerations that should weigh and deeper motives that should govern. Here precisely is the point complained of—they make merchandise of the minister. When a man is called to preach the gospel his call comes from the Lord. It is not enough for a man to look over the various professions and callings of life and decide which, all things considered, will be most advantageous to him. If his call is only the voice of an unconsecrated inclination he has no business in the ministry.

When a man is genuinely called of God to preach he is not in the market to be bought and sold with a paltry price. He becomes an ambassador with a solemn message and he must beware that he does not degenerate to the position of an hireling. With prayer he inquires of the Lord whither he shall go, and in the name of God he goes. Men, as they look upon the true servant and the hireling may not discern the difference, but God knows the difference, and eternity will reveal it.

But the church may also grievously err. The transaction on their part may often be analyzed about in this way: We have this sum of money with which to obtain our man. We want as smart a man as the money will buy. The first point to weigh is whether the man is an attractive orator, whose silvery words will draw the crowd. The second point is whether he is urbane in manner and pleasing in society. In the third place we want a man thoroughly orthodox at heart but wise enough not to wear the unpopular points of orthodoxy on the outside—prudent in the selection of themes and careful in their treatment. We wish it were possible to give the congregation strong meat, but under the circumstances only diluted milk will be acceptable. These considerations are put before the candidate in language that means more than it says.

Now good men are being repelled by the ministry by just such facts as these. They look upon these transactions and say the ministry is an article of merchandise and not the sacred thing it ought to be, and we will not make a solemn mockery of life. The reform needed is evident. On the part of the ministers a deeper consecration is required—a consecration that leads them to ask counsel of God and not of men, a consecration that brings with it a deep personal experience and calls down the power of God upon the ministration, a consecration that fears not self-sacrifice, that dreads nothing but the disfavor of the Master.

On the part of the churches there should be less of the feeling that we pay a man to do our work and we expect him to do it in our way. They should look for the man whom God has called and then pray for his enduement to proclaim the whole counsel of God. Nothing curses our churches to-day so much as the bondage of the pulpit, nothing would prove so great a blessing as the unsealing of closed lips in the proclamation of unadulterated truth.

It is the custom to make merchandise of the PEWS.

This custom has become so universal in the cities and is defended by so many good men that I should doubt my own judgment in the matter did not observation furnish many serious objections. The gospel was evidently intended to be free. Above all things it was never intended that money should buy special favors in the sanctuary. To illustrate the working of this custom let me suppose two cases—and the supposition shall conform to facts known to me: Here is a man, now sixty years of age, whose entire life has been spent in the church. So long as I can remember he has held the office of deacon—has been deacon since he was a young man. With meekness and devotion he has served his Master faithfully, and now, though stooped in form through hard labor, though wrinkled in brow by reason of old age and many cares, he still attends to his duties at prayer meeting and Sabbath-school.

Here is another man whose life and character are wholly unlike this: In the prime of life he is the steward of wealth and with wealth has come pride and the love of ease. When the pews are being selected his money brings him the best the church affords. In broad-cloth, followed by rustling silks, he is ushered with great attention into the place of honor. We look for our good deacon. He has modestly dropped into a back pew, yonder, under the gallery, unattended, unnoticed, unhonored. His hearing is a little impaired, so that a seat in front of the minister would gratify him, but the aristocracy of the church is there, and uncomplainingly he takes what is left. Am I mistaken or is this transaction described by the apostle James, 2d chapter, 2d verse: "If there come unto your assembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, and then come in also a poor man in vile raiment; and ye have respect to him that weareth the gay clothing and say unto him 'Sit thou here in a good place; and say to the poor, Stand thou there or sit here under my foot-stool: are ye not then partial in yourselves and become judges of evil thoughts." It seems to me if anything will build up an aristocracy in our churches this will, and hence we may say "Take these things hence." There is much trafficking in MUSIC.

The legitimate uses of music in the church are two, (1) for worship and (2) for instruction. When we come into the house of God, full of reverence, we long to give expression to our feeling of devotion. Prayer and music are the two accepted modes of worship. In the prayer one leads, but in theory the whole congregation join him, the soul the while pouring itself out in praise and adoration. Then we "make a joyful noise unto the Lord" in which all the congregation to which God has given voices should join.

Mr. Sankey has employed music for the second legitimate purpose. He preaches the Gospel in verse and harmony. The vital doctrines of the Gospel are set to music, and in sweet strains he pours them into the ears of the people. The modern screeching style of singing has no such purpose in it.

A third purpose is now recognized for the use of music—entertainment. Choirs are employed, not to worship God, not to preach the Gospel, but to entertain the people. You may sometimes go into churches where a choir is hired to furnish entertainment and notice the whole congregation silently watching the performers, not to be instructed by the words of the hymn for they hear no words; nor yet for the purposes of worship, for God is not in all their thoughts; but simply to be entertained as at an opera. The minister announces the hymn

"All hail the power of Jesus' name."

The choir commences to render it, but if the spirit of the rendering were put into language we should have to paraphrase the first verse about in this fashion:

"All hail the power of my sweet voice,
"Let singers prostrate fall,
"Bring forth the choirs latest choice
"And crown me Star of all."

When the churches commence to arrange their services with a view to entertainment, they have given place to an evil far-reaching in its results. The necessary limit to the amount of entertainment a church can furnish without becoming ridiculous in the eyes of the world makes it impossible to rival other classes of entertainments. The danger is that the church shall cultivate a taste for mere entertainment which after a while becomes so pronounced in the congregation that it is unable to gratify it. In time we begin to hear murmurs that the churches are dull. Things which once entertained have become insipid. The young people need other amusement, and since the church has gone to its full length the young people must be allowed to attend the theatre, the circus and the new garden. If we once concede that entertainment is the end sought we have opened the way for demands we cannot gratify, for we cannot with safety introduce devils, clowns and circus performers into the pulpit, however much the people may clamour for it.

Already the churches have gone to too great length in this direction; they have cultivated a taste which they cannot gratify. The Gospel appeals to more substantial motives and we make a mistake when we base our appeals upon other and more trifling grounds.

There seems to be no more suggestive title to the next article of merchandise than to call it the traffic in

NECKTIES.

This business is something the apostles knew nothing about but it is a very important article of commerce in the modern church. When the apostles needed money they appealed to the hearts of the people; they reminded them how much they owed the Saviour but always insisted that only cheerful offerings were acceptable. Now when we need money we get our women to make some three-cent calico neckties which shallow-pated selfish men will give half a dollar for, and thus the coffers are filled again, and we all feel funny over the nonsense.

If such things are calculated to give dignity to our worship and death to our characters, then all reason fails and things are not what they seem. Money that does not come from consecrated hearts and hands is of no value to the kingdom of heaven. He who owns the cattle on a thousand hills, and to whom belongs the gold and the silver, has never yet stooped to such transactions for pelf, and it is certain he has never authorized his children to do so. Put this illustration for those thousands of devices resorted to for money and you have the idea which is in my mind. When the church needs money it should call for the cheerful offerings of loving hearts and cease from the practice of tricks fit only for State prison subjects.

But there is yet another article of merchandise before which all others are as the dust in the balance. We have made merchandise of vital

PRINCIPLES AND DOCTRINES.

Of the Saviour it was said, on the occasion when he drove out the money-changers, "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up," meaning that his devotion to the kingdom of heaven had absorbed his entire being to that extent that he became wholly oblivious to every other consideration save the purifying of the worship. Such a conception of the vital importance of abating sin and establishing righteousness had taken possession of him that he became, as it were, forgetful of all things except the one thing, and with unwavering zeal he rushed into the temple of God, holding the scourge of small cords, to drive from the sacred place the hypocrites, the covetous dealers, the corrupters of truth, the deceivers of men. When the church of God becomes corrupt, society has no guarantee of safety from the violence of error and the rot of decay. No one understands the value of pure and undefiled religion as God does, no one has shown the zeal for its promotion that he has.

The method by which our worship is to be preserved in purity is chiefly the preaching of the Gospel. Men, from being students of the Bible, become its expounders to teach the people vital godliness. It is safe to say that in the eyes of God no office entails upon man greater responsibilities than the office of a Gospel minister. The past history of our race is one long chapter of disasters to humanity by reason of the ravages of error, taught by false prophets and sustained by selfish monarchs, while the bright spots of history bring to light bold prophets of God, whose souls abhorred evil, whose lips declared truth, and whose martyrdom attested their sincerity.

It does no violence to fact if we say that the evil days, so frequently and so plainly foretold by the apostles, when men should 'heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears,' are upon us, and truth has fallen in the street. A visit with the pastors of the land reveals the alarming fact that their congregations have become sensitive concerning the things to be said from the pulpit and that the pastors feel themselves compelled to proceed very slowly in their instructions, taking great care not to offend the notions of their people, knowing that speedy dismission would follow the grave offence. It is said that in New England many pastors for prudential reasons have ceased to say anything about the future condition of the wicked; they have ceased to speak of the unregenerate as lost, they have ceased to characterize sin as exceeding sinful, they have ceased to specify by name various sins and misdemeanors practiced by members of their congregation, they have suffered discipline to run down, they dare not warn the young against some pernicious habits popular in the community because by so doing they would also rebuke influential members of church or congregation, they have diluted unpopular doctrines and mollified popular sins—all these things are currently reported, and as Paul said, "I partly believe it." Some of the things which make me partly believe it are the following: Many ministers in New England have confessed to me that it was so in their cases; some have written private notes affirming the same thing; members of churches have said so, also, and have given specifications, which bore the marks of truth; it is a matter of common report both by friends and enemies of Christ. With such evidence and the witness of my own eyes there is scarcely room to doubt the fact.

Will it seem too severe to say that we have made merchandise of our principles? Because the men who have the money and the men who have the power refuse to countenance the preaching of the whole truth we have hired out to preach so much as they want, vainly excusing ourselves with the plea that it is better to hold a position in which we can preach a little truth than to be cut off from all opportunity. Is the arm of our God shortened that he cannot help in time of need? Must the servant of God ask his enemies how much of God's truth may be preached on this earth? Such doctrine "I cannot away with." If ever there is a time when a man should be a Christian hero, when he should "walk worthy the vocation wherewith he is called," that time is when iniquity comes in like a flood, when the enemies of truth wax bold and defy the armies of the Lord. "Take these things hence; make not my Father's house a house of merchandise."

Let me say a few things briefly in

CONCLUSION:

(1) The two phrases, "My Father's house," and "house of prayer," mark the veneration which the Saviour felt and which we ought to feel for the sacred things of God. (2) The zeal which our Lord manifested, even using the "scourge of small cords," furnishes a striking example of the power and determination which we should use in driving these evils from the church. We may use gentleness toward the timid, love toward the erring, patience toward the blind, but only severity and firmness toward the wrongs themselves and toward the heartless defenders of wrong.

NEW ENGLAND.

THE NEW ENGLAND BOARD of the National Christian Association has it headquarters at No. 8 Portland St., Worcester, Mass. A full supply of books and tracts constantly on hand. Orders promptly filled. Correspondence solicited. E. D. BAILEY, N. E. Sec.

—Abner Tuttle, in making his subscription for the coming year says: "I feel the importance of your making a stand in New England." Should this effort to make a stand in New England fail it must inevitably have a very depressing effect on the whole movement. It is to be hoped there are many men of Mr. Tuttle's mind.

—Two Connecticut correspondents allude to the sermon preached by Rev. W. P. Corbit in the George street Methodist Episcopal church, New Haven, as a most blasphemous production. If any one has a copy he will confer a favor by forwarding us one. The sermon is evidently one of the upheavals caused by the Batavia Convention and is an evidence of the rage of the lodge. The Rev. gentleman has been roughly handled by one able to do him justice.

—Bro. I. J. Gilbert says: "What a curse to the church is the Masonic Methodist minister! By the infidelity of the lodge they have robbed the church of its vitality and where are the revivals of religion? The fact is the lodge has superceded the church, as they occupy every evening in the week except Saturday."

—A Worcester pastor called on a delinquent member of his church to exhort him to return to his duty; but, said he, in telling of it, "I found him wholly absorbed in the grange and a perfect enthusiast in secret orders. It is just another instance where secret societies have spiritually ruined a man." This is the pastor of one of the largest churches in the city. It would seem as if such an experience would induce him to devote at least the sixteenth part of a sermon to warning his members, but it has not thus affected him.

—"I have read the doings of the Batavia Convention with much delight," says a correspondent, "and think it has brought about a new era in the Anti-masonic cause. Nothing has stirred up the craft so much, and their leading ones say the monument should be blown down. We need not be disappointed if it is done, their wickedness is so great."

—Elder I. C. Welcome sends us substantial assurances of interest and these words of encouragement: "There are but two points to be kept constantly in mind in order to maintain an unflinching, indomitable position as a reformer. Is the work the Lord's? If so, he is the bottom rock, the guide, the shield, the buckler, the strong tower, and while we work with his wisdom we have nothing to fear from the hosts of wicked men, whether in masses as mobs or gathered into lodges."

—A Connecticut brother, who has never yet failed to respond promptly to every appeal made for help, although possessing only limited means, writes: "I am doing what I can for the cause by distributing tracts, sermons, etc. Am wonderfully helped by the Lord in conversation with secretists. Am thoroughly disgusted with the practice of professing Christians here, many of whom are governed by the god of this world, with whom I have no fellowship. Glory to God, amen."

—A correspondent from Vermont gives us a number of very interesting incidents and facts of recent occurrence, among them the following: "Mr. ——— has a brother, an M. E. preacher, living in New York. Another brother living in Michigan, also a preacher of the same denomination, went to a town in Iowa to preach. He went to the place a perfect stranger. He met one of the leading members of the church in the place, introduced himself, and the man asked him if he was a Mason. Mr. —— replied, 'I am not a member of any secret society.' The M. E. brother said, 'You may pass right along. We want no minister that is not a Mason!'"

—What becomes of the reform papers lost in the mails? Does the lodge interfere with the postoffice department? Every reader may judge for himself if he will carefully notice the following remarkable coincidences. When Mr. Tanner started for Tennessee he ordered the New England American sent to him there. The paper was securely folded in a wrapper and mailed to him in Tennessee the day before he left Boston on his Southern trip, having probably one day the start of him. The rest of the story Mr. Tanner shall tell for himself: "We came from London, Tenn., here (a distance of 25 miles) on a boat. On that boat the following incident occurred, which will explain itself. My wife and I took seats on the forward end of the boat in order to enjoy the beautiful scenery, and were soon joined by two gentlemen and the mail agent that runs on the boats. These three began to discuss political questions and parties. The mail agent (whose name is Turner) spoke of the American party that was 'down on Masonry and all secret societies.' One of the gentlemen (who as the Captain told us at breakfast was an 'old Reb') said, 'I am not a Mason.' The mail agent replied, 'I am.' The third gentleman said, 'So am I.' The mail agent then went inside where he keeps the mail and came out with two copies of the paper of which you are editor, viz: The New England American. [One copy was probably the supplement.] He handed one copy to his brother Mason who read aloud an article that I judged was an editorial and then read the platform, each of them commending or condemning the different planks. The 'old reb' endorsed all by telling them he thought they would come around to it in a few years. * * * Now if I am right in my supposition I am the only subscriber for your paper in this county, if not in the State, and if so those papers were mine and they are being withheld from me either at the postoffice or by the above mentioned mail agent." Mr. Tanner is unquestionably right in his conclusions and there is not the least doubt but the man Turner has robbed the mail. What safety have we when Masons thus tamper with our rights?

A Duty yet Undone.

WORCESTER, MASS., Oct. 23, 1882.

We are waking up none too soon to the importance of circulating our reform tracts, periodicals and books. No part of our work yields such quick returns for so little expenditure as this. Men who cannot lecture can spend their money to pay for Cynosures or other printed matter for their neighbors, and they will aid the reform more than in almost any other way. This is a kind of work in which all of us may bear a part.

It has seemed to me as if one important duty remained undone by us and we shall suffer loss until we give attention to it. In the promotion of every new feature of our work the Cynosure has been an indispensable agent. Without its help every effort would have been paralyzed. Its stated publication has been a standing menace to the lodge, and the fifteen years in which it has moved steadily forward have been and are a guarantee that it is rooted where the lodge cannot destroy it. Every Anti-mason takes pride in being able to answer the jeers of over-confident Masons by pointing to the steady growth in influence of this paper. It has been the pole-star of the reform. Hated by its enemies, envied by its rivals, and neglected by its friends, it has made its weekly appearance in our homes with the regularity of clock-work and has been to the nation like a piece of leaven in the measure of meal. Can any one tell us why, with the rapid progress of the reform, the circulation has not yet reached ten thousand? If the publisher is to blame let us "speak out in meeting" and tell him wherein; if the editors are to blame let us not spare them; but if we are to blame let us "confess our fault one to another" and forsake our neglect.

We have passed several mile posts in the progress of the reform, why not make the next objective point the success and triumph of the Cynosure? When that proposition to improve the paper came, even before we had given it any marked token of interest by increasing its circulation, it seemed to me as if we ought to respond with joy and thanksgiving. Such an offer from the publisher is a guarantee of fidelity in making the paper all that its income will warrant and more too. If the Cynosure readers do not show their appreciation of these efforts we cannot help but suffer for our neglect. For one I shall do what I can, not only in response to this new proposition but in other ways also, to make the paper a great success.

E. D. BAILEY.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Secretism in Coldwater, Michigan.

For over a year past our city has been more or less moved by certain demonstrations from certain quarters. The summer and fall of 1881 will be remembered by our citizens, as a year of fire. Week after week the alarm would sound, and upon investigation the fires proved to be the work of incendiaries. Until December last, no clue seemed to be found to the perpetrators of these outrages. At the time above mentioned, certain members of the fire company of Coldwater, came forward, and confessed themselves as parties to these crimes, claiming to have been urged forward and assisted by the chief of the department. At the time of these confessions, the confessors made statements substantially agreeing one with the other. Of course the city was stirred from center to circumference, by these confessions. And certain circumstances seemed to corroborate these statements, circumstances and occurrences in themselves very mysterious, until these confessions were made, when matters began to grow light which had hitherto been dark. Loyal citizens were beginning to congratulate themselves on being able to bring the rascals to justice. When lo! the startling announcement was made that all but one of the confessors had filed a new information. That is, they had appeared a second time, with altogether a different tale to tell. Only one of the confessors held to his first statement, and he holds to that statement still. Our best information is, that he is a member of none of the many secret orders of this city. In the second appearing of these changable confessors, they plead "not guilty" to charges they had made against themselves only a few hours before. What power had been brought to bear, to change those statements, we leave the reader to decide. It is known that prominent citizens conferred with them, but what was said, or arranged to be said, is not so clearly known. Sometimes members of these devilish orders, becoming conscience-smitten, feel as though it would be a relief to their burdened souls to make a clean breast of the whole, and take the consequences, rather than bear about a secret the keeping of which may be satisfactory to the few, but is extremely dangerous to the many. So doubtless it was with these poor men. Was there whispered in their ear a repetition of the penalty which they pronounced upon themselves with their oath? Perhaps. We cannot tell. Enough, however, had been confessed, so that the arrest of all parties implicated immediately followed. (We forbear calling any names, since "discretion is the latter part of valor.") And now began an examination, which lasted for months, until the people were tired and disgusted. Such a conglomeration of silly questions and evasive answers, were given as was a disgrace to bearded manhood. Meanwhile all parties implicated were allowed their liberty, on small bail, save that lone confessor, who languished in jail for nearly six months, the only support of his mother, and she a widow. There was no bail for him. When some fair-dealing citizen proposed to go bail for him, and give him a chance with the rest, he was denounced and threatened in strong terms by leading citizens. At last the lengthy and expensive examination came to a close, and the supposed leader in the firing business was bound over to the circuit court, for trial. The case was decided last Saturday forenoon, Oct. 4th, the jury bringing in a verdict of "not guilty," much to the satisfaction of the few, and to the consternation of the many. The few cheered when the verdict was given, the many hung their heads. The few brought out the band, and paraded the streets with music and cheers, the many went home doubting in themselves whereunto this will grow. And now, the leading organ of the city, publishes that many will doubtless yet believe the acquitted party guilty, but "let the verdict put the whole matter at rest forever." This is the outcome of nearly a year's tedious and expensive suspense. In nine cases out of ten, (setting secrecy aside,) with such a preponderance of evidence against the accused, the verdict would have been otherwise. In every step of both examination and trial, clear eyes have seen the power "behind the scenes." Some see it now, who did not at the time, others will, who do not now. Oh Michigan awake! or sleep on till thy doom! More anon. X.

Notes from the Letters to the Batavia Convention.

George Clark, Oberlin, Ohio—"The memorial stones placed by divine command in Sheehem, told the story of Egyptian bondage and deliverance from it—that story was the reason God gave for the monument. The shaft on "Bunker's Hill" ever more repeats the history of foreign invasion, its repulse and the birth of the American Nation. In like manner this monument of Wm. Morgan will tell the history of the "Secret Empire"—its conspiracy against free speech,the mariage covenant, equal rights of all citizens before the law—and its unlawful oath and deeds. If sacriligious hands shall mar it—the scars that malice leaves will but prove the truth of its indictment of the evil spirit of the lodge.

Absent in body we will be present in spirit with the convention, and daily pray especially for all who take part in it that they may be endued with power from on high and the people see their peril and duty and have the courage of their convictions."

S. Wright, Glens Falls, N. Y.—"I was glad to read of your visit to the venerable Thurlow Weed, and the kind reception he gave you, as recorded in the Cynosure of the 10th of August. I do hope he may be able to be at Batavia with you, or to write something worthy to be read on the occasion. His presence alone would be an inspiration. I remember when he came to my father's house in Cambridge, Washington Co., N. Y., in the summer of 1830. I think he took the name of Ebenezer Wright, as a subscriber to the "Albany Evening Journal," just started as an Anti-masonic paper, which I read for years, in the formative period of my character.

And there is another name I would mention for you to invite earnestly and kindly to be there if possible, or to send you a letter for the occasion. I allude to the Hon. Erastus Dean Colver of Greenwich, Washington Co., N. Y., though for years judge of the County Court in Brooklyn, N. Y. His father, Rev. Phineas Colver, was an older brother of the late Nathaniel Colver, D. D., of Chicago.

"Judge Colver, graduated at U. V. M. in 1826, and was a successful lawyer for years at Fort Ann, and Greenwich, member of Congress from the Washington county district in 1846-7, afterwards minister to Venezuela, &c. He is a Baptist, and at the age of about 78, lives in retirement among his old Greenwich friends, is a man of property and worth, morally and religiously,and could aid our monument fund if he understood its needs, I presume. In our "Washington Union Association," formed in 1835, which was then Anti-masonic by its constitution, he bore a part and still hates the 'Beast' of Masonry."

Ex Bishop Milton Wright, Richmond, Ind.—"I am glad to know that a monument has been erected to the memory of Captain William Morgan, that noble, brave martyr of truth and reform. Well has this martyr of free speech earned an abiding place in the hearts and memories of the children of light. Great honor to this Sampson, who in his death struggle shook the pillars of the Masonic temple. I hope your Batavia Anniversary may be a most enjoyable and profitable occasion, and that its deliberations may hasten the defeat and overthrow of organized secrecy. For this end, it shall have my best wishes, my prayers, and my earnest labors. God reigns, and the defeat and overthrow of organized darkness can be only a question of time. The Lord hasten the hour of complete victory."

C. Reynolds, Hillsdale, Mich.—"I lived in that town [Batavia] when Morgan was murdered and was there for some years before and two years after. Worked in different places, a part of the time in the village. Worked the summer of 1828 for Deacon Benj. Porter in the village at the carpenter's trade. He was a son of old Deacon Porter, the man whom you mentioned as being buried near Frank Miller's grave. I knew them all. Indeed, a majority of the inhabitants in the whole town. I made the acquaintance of my wife there.

"I am now seventy-seven years of age, or shall be the 20th of the present month, and there are a great many who will be there who are identified with this reform work, which I look upon as emphatically the cause of Christ, whom I would like to meet once on earth. And I also want to see that monument. The event which that is to commemorate is what under God saved me from being drawn into the most wicked and prolific source of evil (as I look upon it) of all the devices of his Satanic majesty of the infernal regions."

Notes from the Chicago Exposition.

As is not unfrequently the case, we were encouraged to day by a Christian Anti-mason, who resides near Rochelle, Ill., on his way as a delegate to the Presbyterian convention at Springfield. After being shown the puerile and unchristian ceremonies of the lodge he took the writer by the hand, saying: "Go on with your good work." "What is to be deplored and regretted is the fact that Christians and especially ministers belong to these secret societies." After speaking of the excellencies of the Cynosure, I gave to him a copy and urged upon him to become a regular subscriber, thereby having a better understanding as to the work which is being done.

A lady called at the stand, and on looking over our books remarked, "My husband is a Mason." After being shown some of the puerile ceremonies she said, "If I should show these to my husband he would deny them;" adding that she has had these expositions and has shown them to him. To shake her confidence in the truth of the expositions and their authorized publication, he would flatly deny them. It was a pitiful sight, a helpless wife calmly submitting to the wrongs heaped upon her by this perpetuating system of paganism.

On looking over our books, a lady remarked, "my husband is a Mason, but I do not take much stock in it." On further inquiring, it was ascertained that her husband has been a Mason for some twenty years. Though knowing it to be wrong, she preferred keeping quiet, and if possible have peace.

We can safely say that if wives were as insensible as their husbands, the divorce mill would be by no means less active. Hence we maintain that if the social reformers were to turn their attention toward this branch of the subject, the difficulty might be more easily solved, instead of writing volume after volume as to the cause of marital infidelity.

While controverting with a pantheistic phrenologist, there came along a man who resides at Joliet, who has been taking the Cynosure for some ten years, and was much pleased to see our book-stand in the Exposition, stating that this is the way to do the work. When interrogated as to the pulse of Anti-masonry, remarked that if each adhering Mason would disclose to the other his real sentiments, that lodge would not be longer wanted.

As a refutation of the assertion that our expositions of secret societies are a pack of lies, we were convinced in several particulars of the three links order on examining our books, seemed very much pleased to be permitted to see their constitution in print. "Why, how did you get this?" I did not know it was allowed to be published. Then he had quite a soliloquy, very much pleased, so much so as to be unable to contain himself.

Infidels think it their privilege to assail our motto,which reads,National Christian Association opposed to secret societies, at once championing the lodge through thick and thin.

When we maintained that lodgery tends to the extinction and annihilation of the Christian church, they say, "Well that is just what we are working for. That is just what we are aiming at; and if lodgery will be the means to that end, we glory in lodgery."

If any one doubts these statements as to lodgery being antagonistic to the Christian religion, also that it is a school for infidelity and atheism, let him attend the N. C. A. book-stand at the Exposition, we are very certain, he will not ask additional proof. JOHN SCHOENBERGER.

The True Idea of Christian Union.

MARYVILLE, Mo.

DEAR EDITOR:—In your paper of Oct. 19, referring to sectarianism, you have given us, your readers, your idea of true Christian union. I feel deeply impressed to say to you, and to all who read the Cynosure, that I am sure you have the true idea of the all-important subject now before the church and the world, which has but just commenced to awaken in a more general sense the best, the most devoted men of the church to make the solemn enquiry, Where are we? In our wrecked and floating condition, with a fragment here and one there, and many on beyond—in our confused and dangerous state—you have told us just what to do. And I bless the name of our dear Master. It is just what I have been doing for sixteen years. 1st. You say, "Let all swim for the Rock." Amen. 2nd. "When on this Rock we are united." O, how true. 3rd. You say, "If thousands are in a tangle on a plain, and each one start for the same point of compass, they will all move in harmony." The Lord Almighty must have put that argument in your heart, my brother, for it is a divine truth. We must practice this blessed truth to know its importance. 4th. Truly, as you say, "We each one must put off our own sectism;" "Oppose all that opposes Christ;" "and hail as brothers all who manifest a living faith in him."

Beloved in the Lord, editors and readers of the Cynosure, all we need to do is simply to practice as above stated. Then the world will know "our Rock is not as theirs." The secret powers will tremble and soon fall. The Lord help all to see the true idea of becoming one in Christ. Yours ever, R. SMITH.

Our Mail.

Jesse Hunter, Beman, Kansas:

"My heart has been warmed and my hands strengthened in the cause of reform while reading the account of the National Convention at Batavia, at the unveiling of the Morgan monument, and the able, eloquent addresses delivered on that occasion, I believe that God's presence was with you upon that occasion and that his Spirit did enlighten the hearts of true reformers at that long to be remembered meeting. Oh, how I longed to be there, but not having that blessed privilege I did pray for the presence of him who has said, Fear not little flock for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

Geo. D. Reigel, Adelphi, Ohio, whose health is very poor, writes:

"Thanks be to God that I lived to see the day that Capt. Morgan should have a granite shaft placed over his grave."

Russell Park, Denmark, Iowa:

"Thank you for printing Rob. Morris' letter. Hope you will print all such replies. Let Masons show for themselves how weak is their cause."

Sanford Ward, Adams, N. Y., writes:

"I attended the Convention and was exceedingly interested in the exercises. It seems to me that the Convention must awaken conviction in the hearts of every opposer. The ranks of the fearless and brave are being filled up and the Lord is leading them on to victory. The battle is strong but victory must and will come in answer to prayer."

N. E. Jennings, Avon, Dakota:

"The reform movement has some friends even in this remote corner of civilization. Our awakening on this subject was brought about in a providential way. We had been wishing and praying that some one would come among us capable of exposing the evil of secretism. Bro. Smith of Iowa (though infirm with age) came and gave a series of lectures exposing the blasphemy and false worship of the Masonic order. It was a satisfaction to us to meet and converse with one who was with Bro. D. P. Rathbun at the time of his being mobbed at Kellerton, Iowa."

Obituary.

Died, of cancer, at her home in Atlas, Genessee county, Michigan, Oct. 2d, after a long and painful illness, MRS. CATHERINE KIPP, consort of Hon. Geo. Kipp, aged sixty-eight years. She was born Feb. 14, 1814, in Clarence, Erie county, N. Y. She was the daughter of Mathias and Catherine Cantine, and the ninth of a family of eleven children, six sons and five daughters, who have all gone before her except two brothers, one of whom resides in Corunna, Mich., and the other on the old home farm in New York. Her parents removed to Clarence when that country was but a howling wilderness, and having but limited means, their children were early taught to rely mainly upon their own exertions for support. She early imbibed habits of industry and economy, which virtues she practiced faithfully through life. She was married at the age of twenty-three, in the town of her nativity, to Mr. Geo. Kipp, of the same place, where she resided until the fall of 1846, when she removed with her family to their present residence. Her parents were Presbyterians, but she with her husband united with the Congregational church, after coming to Michigan, since which time it was her great desire to live to the honor of her dear Redeemer. She was the mother of three sons, who have all grown up to manhood, and who are deeply indebted to her for her moral and religious precepts and example. She died as she had lived, without an enemy in the world, beloved and respected by all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance. She was devoted to the reading of the Scripture and the Cynosure, to which paper she had become very much attached. She passed quietly away in the bosom of her family, apparently in the full enjoyment of the Christian faith. She leaves a husband and three sons to mourn the loss of a dearly beloved companion and an affectionate mother. K.

SANCTIFY THEM THROUGH THY TRUTH; THY WORD IS TRUTH.

Thursday, Nov. 2.—Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice. Eph. 4:31.

Friday, Nov. 3.—Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints. Eph. 6:18.

Saturday, Nov. 4.—Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Eph. 6:10.

Sabbath, Nov. 5.—He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearer is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth. Isa. 53:7.

Monday, Nov. 6.—And grieve not the holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption: Eph. 4:30.

Tuesday, Nov. 7.—Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not so to be. Who is a wise man and endued with knowledge among you? Let him shew out of a good conversation his works with meekness of wisdom. Jas. 3:10, 13.

Wednesday, Nov. 8.—But the tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison. Therewith bless we God, even the Father; and therewith curse we men, which are made after the similitude of God.—Jas. 3:8–9.

—It is related that Secretary Evarts was once one of a party who were visiting the Natural Bridge in Virginia. As is usual, after tarrying at the top they descended and viewed the wonder from below. While there the story was told that George Washington had once stood there and thrown a silver dollar completely over the bridge. Some of the party pooh-hoohed this assertion, but Mr. Evarts gravely rebuked them, saying: "You forget how much farther a dollar went in those days."—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

—The Appeal, published in Carson, Nev., records the birth of a male baby in that bailiwick, of poor but honest parents, which weighed but eight ounces. Its face is about the size of a horse-chestnut, and the size of the baby's limbs can be judged from the fact that a ring worn upon the little finger of the mother was easily slipped over the foot and up to the knee. The account states that the father weighs 190 pounds and the mother 160. The babe is well formed and likely to live.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1882.

Again the auspicious time for securing Cynosure subscribers is here. We think never before was it so easy a work as now. The erection of the fine monument to the memory of Capt. Wm. Morgan; Thurlow Weed's recent contribution in regard to the secret orders; Wendell Phillips attitude and that of the public generally, show that the people want just such reading as the Cynosure supplies. Will you give it to them? So far as possible will you not see that every reader within five miles of your home is invited to subscribe for the Cynosure? The Topics of the Times, Editorials, Religious and Secular News, Home Circle, Children's Department, Home and Farm, Correspondence, and last but not least our thrilling story, "Holden with Cords," adapt it to almost every class of readers, while many, who seek the purity of the church and improvement of politics consider it an aid that they must have.

All who will accept the one hundredth part of the proposition made in the Cynosure of Oct. 12th, 1882, republished Oct. 26th, will receive a cloth bound copy of "Holden with Cords," as a slight token of our appreciation of their interest in the present Cynosure canvass.

Editorial Correspondence.

THE INDIANA CONVENTION.

CARTHAGE, IND. Oct. 25th, 1882.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The Indiana State Christian Association met here last night in the large, new and beautiful Friends Meeting-house, which was well filled with an intelligent congregation, beyond our hopes even. Dr. S. L. Cook, State agent, had stirred up the people in this neighborhood, and he conducts the meeting ably. He and Dr. J. M. Clark (the "Quaker Boy" of the Cynosure) met us at Charlottesville on the rail road, five miles away, and the people open their houses to receive all that come. Rev. S. T. Miller of Union county, and Elder Lowman, President of the Association, spoke to the people. Dr. Cook and I added some words and the audience were apparently deeply interested. I am put down for a set speech to night. I hope we shall do something for the Cynosure and start an Indiana American before the meeting closes. We shall meet for consultation this morning.

As the people came out last night they seemed delighted and I heard one man say with an emphasis, "I shall bring my children tomorrow night." If the weather keeps fair as it is the house will be full to-day and to-night crowded.

OCT. 26th,—Yesterday Rev. Edward Matthews came and has spoken very effectively, adding much to the interest of the meeting.

The Friends had a funeral in the afternoon which we adjourned to attend and several of us spoke. It was of a little boy who looked beautiful in the coffin. The large house was filled, all the school children attended, and a finer looking, better behaved set of boys and girls I never saw together. The Quakers surely excel in the training of children, and in the neatness and good taste of their houses and house-keeping. The people here, so far as I have heard them, are in favor of woman suffrage, and with such a set of women as they have here they may well be so.

The State Executive Committee voted yesterday in favor of starting an Indiana American, and appointed Elder Lowman the State editor of it.

The meeting last night was very interesting. All the seats in the large house were filled with an attentive and interesting audience. Elder Lowman and Mr. Matthews spoke. I also spoke much better than I have spoken before since my illness. In Indianapolis I called on U. S. Senator Ben Harrison, but he was gone to speak for the Republicans. The old parties are shivering under the batteries of Prohibition.

SPICELAND, HENRY CO. IND. OCT. 28.—The State Christian Association closed its sessions on Thursday night, and the last day was the "great day of the feast." We joined with the Friends in their meeting in the forenoon and it was as good or better against the lodge than our own. Mr. Marshall and Mrs. Eustis, both ministers in the Friends church, spoke calmly, clearly, and distinctly against the lodge and the meeting was filled with the Spirit of God. Rev. Mr. Wilmore, Dr. Cook, and myself also spoke and we were all Friends. At night the large meeting house was full and many chairs were set in the aisles. Dr. S. L. Cook, State agent, made a very effective speech against the Odd-fellows especially, which he backed up by their documents. Elder Lowman took up a fair collection, and Edward Matthews then made the closing speech which was long and well received by the entire crowd. His closing story of Alvan Jones produced a profound impression. I am out twelve miles and have conversed with many who say the convention has produced a strong impression on the entire community. Dr. J. M. Clark told the friends to collect what they could for expenses and send the deficit to him and he would cover it with his check. There are more wealthy and able business men in Carthage than in other towns around and they were all out for the first time and deeply interested.

At the request of Dr. Cochran and Mr. Lewis Wood, I came down here to Spiceland to spend the Sabbath. Tonight Gen. Tom. Brown, member of Congress (Rep.) speaks here, and there is also a Greenback orator to speak in a hall at the same time. A Greenbacker has just called and asked me to divide the time with his speaker, and represent the American party, which I have consented to do. I have told them that we are so far Greenbackers that we want only Government money; and we also agree with them in the opinion that the people have no more use for the Republican and Democratic parties. They think we shall have a good crowd out tonight. Tomorrow (Sunday) the Friend's minister, Mr. Pennington has invited me to share the Friends meeting with him. He seems a pleasant, sincere man; says all the Penningtons, himself among them, had been drawn into the lodge. But, like President Finney, when he was converted to Christ, he quit it. Tomorrow (Sunday) night I am to speak at large on the reform.

Since I came to this place I have visited and addressed the schools under the principalship of Mr. Thomas Newlin, an interesting and able young man and teacher. There are some three hundred or more pupils in attendance. I am more than pleased, delighted, with these schools. No children are excluded by reason of "color, race, or the previous condition of servitude" of their parents. And there are thirty children of poor parents supported by the county, among the little pupils. There is a building in the grounds, owned by the county, with an extemporized mother, to watch over this extemporized home, for children deprived of parentage and home by liquor and other causes. These parents, excluded from the lodge, because they have no visible means of support, are supported by an American county, and their children educated by the people's taxes; but Freemasons have no objection to hold the offices and handle the taxes which support them. Thus in these Indiana counties Christ's constitution and that of Christianity prevail every where except in the secret lodges, which exclude from their privileges on account of poverty, color, etc., while in Christ there is neither nationality or color line. I hope to speak on politics tonight and on the Christian religion tomorrow.

Yours in Christ. J.B.

—Another result of the management of the secret orders is said by the London Athenæum to be the defeat of a successful negotiation between England and the United States for a copyright convention. The printers' union prevented it.

Our Platform.--Art. 6.

"That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating permanent peace."

Such an "Arbitration" was the Amphictyonic Council, which for centuries held together twelve turbulent, restless Grecian tribes, from their early existence down to the second century after Christ. Their leading object was "to determine questions of international law." It centralized and unified all Greece, excepting twelve little towns in the north of Peleponesus which were called Achaia. These little States were held together by the "Achæan League," as the rest of Greece was by the Amphictyonic Council. The Achæan League fell, B. C. 140, along with Grecian liberty, by the power of Rome.

Now that the telegraph and telephone have made every man on the globe next door neighbor to every other, it is amazing that arbitration as a substitute for and preventive of national wars, has not been adopted by Christian nations long since. The peace societies and philanthropists of Europe and America have earnestly plead for the abolition of war by arbitration these many years, and with a measure of success. But the governing politics of nations are the politics found in party platforms; and the parties of the United States have omitted religion and morals which Washington and Jefferson both declared to be fundamental to our Republic, and they have left out national arbitration along with the rest. The American party has adopted it as above, thus making it a part of the living politics of the United States.

National debts are war debts. Of these, the statistics would break down the minds of ordinary readers. War taxes, as I have seen, have closed the front windows of thousands of houses in London to avoid Robt. Peel's "window-light tax." They construct Nileometers along the Nile, which gauge taxation by the annual rise of the river, by which the tax-harpies can tell just how much money can be wrung from the hovel abodes of Egyptian peasants. War robs every able bodied young German of the best three years of his life, and sends his peasant sister in heavy wooden shoes to cultivate the fields till her brother comes home, too often by war habits to spend the family savings on drink and tobacco.

Our domestic war-tax is a mere bagatelle; but is thus footed up by a Boston paper, the Christian:

"It is estimated that the United States, in fourteen years, from 1865 to 1879, expended $22,680,000, in fighting a few poor Indian savages; in nearly or quite every instance the wars being caused by the rascality of United States officials, the violation of solemn treaties made by the United States government, and the evil conduct of the whites who came in contact with the Indian tribes. These influences, combined with white men's whiskey, roused all the devilishness in the Indian nature, and brought upon the helpless and unfortunate frontiersmen all the horrors and savagery of Indian wars. This system of oppression and treachery, with its consequent indiscriminate slaughter and revenge, has gone on for more than half a century, and untold millions have been expended in the prosecution of Indian wars.

In 1870, two millions of dollars were appropriated for the civilization of the Indians, and for ten years this fund has been drawn upon to assist in civilizing the Indian tribes and teaching them the arts of peace. Many of them have thus become peaceable and industrious citizens, and not a few of them have learned the way of salvation as revealed in the gospel.

Statistics show that it probably costs more to kill an Indian on the frontier, than it would to civilize him, clothe him, educate him, and board him all his days in a first-class hotel in New York. So much for the gunpowder policy."

The American party proposes to look war facts and all other facts in the face which bear on the nation's destiny, and the welfare of the American people: and we shall soon force every other party which dares to ask the suffrages of Americans to do the same. Parties without principles "are dead while they live." On last Sabbath, October 22d, the Methodist pulpit of Chicago opened powerfully for a new political party. Four leading Methodist churches heard discourses in which the merits and demerits of existing parties were handled without gloves. They all spoke the same things, summed up by the Rev. Wm. Fawcett, thus:

"Many have thought for years, and think today, that the old parties have become so corrupt and are so fully under the control of unprincipled leaders that the only way to bring the desired purity is to destroy the old parties and build one new and clean."

When the Methodist pulpit came ont for the Republican party against the slave power, the nation soon followed them and slavery fell. This sun-burst of prohibition was Shrove Sunday for the Methodists of Chicago. Bnt the lodge stands behind the dram-shop and comes next.

Let us hail this sixth article of our platform. Let us study it as people rise from their beds to gaze on a new and beautiful comet in the heavens. Let Americans wear it as a frontlet between their eyes; for war is the prolific mother of secrecy, liquor, taxes, and every political corruption and vice. The American party being the first National party to put an anti-war article into the living, moving, voting politics of the nation, will yet be hailed as the harbinger of "Peace on earth and good will to men."

—A neat bill containing opinions from Sumner, Phillips, Seward, Adams and Crosby was circulated abont Washington city last week announcing an "Illustrated Lecture" on the first and third Masonic degrees by brethren Stoddard and Hinman, to be held in the City Hall on Friday evening.

—Bro. W. H. McChesney, corresponding Secretary of the Minnesota Christian Association, is now absent from his home visiting friends in New York. As his absence from Minnesota will continue for some weeks he desires all friends wishing to correspond with him in his official relation to write to Rnfus Johnson, Blue Earth City, Minn., who will act in his absence.

—Archbishop Feehan and his Vicar General and other priests laid the corner stone of a new Romish church in Chicago the other day. They were assisted by several Romanist societies among which was the secret lodge of Ancient Order of Hibernians 500 strong.

—The Knights of Pythias of Chicago are abont to begin their annual ronnd of dances. It is of some interest to know by what authority the armory of Battery D., Illinois State Militia, is given up to this lodge for its immoral amusements.

—The Odd-fellow statistics for Ohio are thus reported: Number of lodges, 699; initiated during the year, 3,214; admitted by card, 794; contributing members, 44,557; total revenue, $323,435.50; amonnt paid for relief of brothers, $85,675.59; for widows and orphans, $8,491.71; for education of orphans, $261.13; charity and special relief, $4,801.91; total relief $99,229 34, or less than one-third of the revenue. There remained: Cash on hand of the general fund, $146,392.50. Amonnt invested, $1,171,666.67; widows and orphans' fund, $192,701.65. Total cash on hand in Ohio, $1,510,780.82. If any one says this order is accumulating such a vast fund for the sake of charity it is safe to say he is lying or is too ignorant to judge of affairs. Bnt what is it for?

—The colored Grand Lodge of "Ancient Free and Accepted Masons" for Missonri and its jurisdiction, embracing the States of Missouri, Nebraska and Iowa, lately met at Keoknk. A Past Grand Master boasted that he was recognized Masonically by English, French, German Irish and Scotch Masons.

—Here is a suggestion worthy the attention of the tract committee: "I think there ought to be a tract written especially for the Y. M. C. Associations of the country, for the Masons are locating their halls in or near as possible to the Y. M. C. A. buildings. Here in Manchester and in Lynn, Mass., they are in the same building and the first thing that greets the young man on entering is "Masonic Hall," and a lot of their emblems; then, when they parade they are just in the right place to entice the best young men in the community."

REFORM NEWS.

Minnesota.

By request of the friends in the southwestern part of the State, the fifth annual convention of the Minnesota Christian Association will be held in the court house in Blue Earth City, Farribault county, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, December 6th, 7th and 8th, 1882. Blue Earth City is the terminus of the Blue Earth City branch of the C. St. Paul, M. & O. railroad. The friends offer free entertainment and invite a full attendance. Those intending to come will please send their names to Rufus Johnson, Blue Earth City, Minn. Reduced railroad fare returning, on all roads, to those who pay full fare coming. Opening lecture, Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock, by Rev. J. P. Stoddard. President C. A. Blanchard is expected to deliver a series of lectures.

From the General Secretary.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23d, 1882.

I reached this city on Friday morning last, and am becoming slightly acquainted with its geography, its national buildings, and a few of its many citizens. Every thing here is on a grand scale, and gives the impression of effort to spend rather than to save money. I attended four church services yesterday and took part in three. Bro. Hinman preached an able discourse last evening to an African Congregationalist church, under the pastorate of Rev. Mr. Smith, and I am advertised to speak in City Hall tomorrow evening.

"A brief call on Senator S. C. Pomeroy was very satisfactory. His counsels and those of Mr. Gibson and a few other practical business men, whom I have met, have been of great service to me. They enter heartily into our plans and I hope to report matters of interest before the week ends."

Bro. Hinman has done a faithful work and won, as he deserves, the love of reformers and advanced Christians here. It may be God's will that he should remain for a time to follow up the good begun openings. If so this will be shown in his own time and way.

Dr. Gross, at whose house we are stopping, was called away on Saturday and has not returned. The Dr. is a reformer of much experience and I am anticipating much assistance from him when we can have a good sit-down talk over matters. "My own conviction and that of Bro. Hinman and all the friends I have met here is, that we should take a permanent stand and maintain it. Much care is required in laying foundations, but it will pay in the end."

Kansas is not Ready.

No doubt the readers of the Cynosure are perplexed about the condition of Kansas. My memory is that brother Curtis's "proposition" as it appeared in the Cynosure, some time ago was, that he would be one of ten to pay $5.00 each for a State lecturer, and that the remainder could be raised at the meeting of the State Association this fall.

I thought at the time that brother Curtis had very limited ideas of what would be needed, or was quite sanguine of large results from the State meeting. I wrote to the Cynosure, stating that brother Curtis's proposition was more than met already, and to show that fact gave a statement of what had been pledged, corrected up to that date. The types played truant with me as they had before with brother Curtis, and failed to correct the reported pledges. It appeared, therefore, from the printed statement that no progress whatever had been made since my previous report, and that brother Curtis's proposition, even as published, was not met.

And next brother Curtis comes ont, as well he might, with an article of inquiry stating that his proposition was to raise, not only $50.00, as reported, but $500.00, and asking if his proposition had been met. I answer no. The amount pledged up to date is $155.00, if I may include Johnson Co., at $50.00. The pledges are as follows: Riley, Rice, Jefferson, Bourbon, Meade, Sedgwick, Brown, McPherson and Douglas, $5.00 each; Washington, $10.00; Nemaha, $50.00 and Johnson, $50.00. Total, $155.00.

I take this opportunity to say that I am exceedingly pleased with brother Curtis's proposition. Surely there are nine men beside him in the State of Kansas, both able and willing to pledge $50.00 each for this purpose. In the meantime let the $5.00 pledges, and $10.00, and $15.00 go on. Let us not wait one for another, and thus fail to be ready at the coming State meeting.

Report of the Iowa State Lecturer.

Clarence, Iowa, Oct. 26, 1882.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—Since the Iowa State meeting I have preached and lectured thirty-nine times, forcing my appointments on the people, with seemingly good results. My first work was in Crawford county, near Vail Station. From there to Paradise where I lectured and worked the degrees to full houses; this was something new in this place.

My next work was in Soldier where I lectured to a congregation that received the truth gladly; from here I went to Dow City and lectured two evenings in the Mormon church. My next work was in Guthrie county, over fifty miles from Dow City, bnt Bro. Baleh's little mules took us there in time for my appointment, and God gave us his royal presence and the work seemed to tell. To God be all the glory. From here I went to Sac City and lectured in the Martin settlement for two evenings; then to Marengo, the seat of the Iowa Conference. Preached twice during the Conference. The Conference was one of the best I ever attended.

My next work was in Quasqueton in the M. E. church. The church was crowded each evening. The last evening I had a debate with Prof. Parker, of Independence, Superintendent of schools of Buchanan county. He was sent for by the Masons, I was told, to defend their institution. The Professor did his best bnt failed to carry the audience. It was evident that he was on the wrong side of the question. I was to speak in the church again, but it was closed against me. Hiram did not look well to the Masons when brought to public gaze.

My next appointment was in the Congregational church at Winthrop, Rev. Brintnall, pastor, a graduate of Oberlin College. He spoke quite earnestly against the lodge the first evening of my lecture. The lectures seemed to have an excellent effect and fair congregations were in attendance. My next appointment was at Masonville; here Masonry goes begging for a place to lay its head. The Rev. T. F. Blair, a fearless Anti-mason is their pastor, who aided me much in my work, and is the only one who has invited me to lecture since the State meeting except Bro. Balch. My next place of work was at Hoover's Settlement. Had a short debate with an Odd-fellow the first evening, then all went quietly until my work closed in that place. I next went to Walker, where I met Mrs. Rathbun, and staid over Sabbath, and on Monday returned to onr home in Clarence to rest a little.

I expect to start on another trip on Saturday, Oct. 28th. I have had no invitations, but have sent on my appointments, and expect God will open the way. There has been but little call for degree work as yet. The good Lord never gave me more help with his constant presence than he has since the Iowa State meeting.

Dear brethren, arrange for work, I desire to put in a year's work in Iowa that will tell here and in eternity. You may ask, Who pays for the lecture? I have taken collections, the same being more or less, and went on my way; and I intend to do the same in the future. If there are any who would love to help on the work by sending my family means it will be thankfully received and prudently applied. Any wishing to aid me in my work can send to Mrs. A. A. Rathbun, Clarence, Cedar county, Iowa, and it will be acknowledged through the Cynosure, and reported to onr State Treasurer. It will be remembered that I am not working on a stipulated salary; when my year closes whatever is received will be my salary, and the Association will not be in debt to me. Now, friends of reform, do as the Lord directs you, and I trust I shall be able to spend all my time in the work.

D. P. Rathbun.

HOME CIRCLE.

William Penn.

Poem written by John G. Whittier for the bi-centennial of his founding the colony at Philadelphia.

The tyrant on his gilded throne,
The warrior in his battle dress,
The holier triumph ne'er have known
Of justice and of righteousness.

Founder of Pennsylvania! thou
Dldst feel it, when thy words of peace
Smoothed the stern chieftain's swarthy brow
And bade the dreadful war-dance cease.

On Schuylkill's banks no fortress frowned,
The peaceful cot alone was there;
No beacon fires the hill-tops crowned,
No death-shot swept the Delaware.

In manners meek, in precepts mild,
Thou and thy friends serenely taught
The savage huntsman, fierce and wild,
To raise to heaven his erring thought.

How all unlike the bloody band
That unrelenting Cortez led
To princely Montęznma's land,
And ruin round his pathway shed.

With hearts that knew not how to spare—
Disdaining milder means to try
The crimson sword, alone was there
The Indian's choice to yield or die.

But thou, meek Pennsylvania sire,
Unarmed, alone, from terror free,
Tanght by the heathen council-fire
The lesson of Christianity.

Founder of Pennsylvania's state,
Not on the blood-wet rolls of fame,
But with the wise, the good, the great,
The world shall place thy sainted name.

What Shall Christians Wear?

BY MRS. D. DE WOLF.

These are days of gaiety. Fashion rules the world. This is felt painfully by many and acknowledged as true by all. The sick and poor alike are its votaries, and are enslaved by its ever varying styles. It is true that we have the power to dress accordingly and well on a little if we possess the skill and taste to do so, for every fabric, no matter how ancient, can be made to do duty at the present day, though it may need a little help to complete the garment, for woman's dress-making of to-day is one of the fine arts. But what if some butterfly stands before us in richer or tastier attire. Shall we envy her, or spend our precious time in following this will-o'-the wisp fashion? "Is it right to follow her at all?" asks one who remembers the day when certain church members doffed the plain close bonnet that had been becoming to one. I answer, "Yes, as far as convenience and good taste dictates." For of all people Christians should recommend their religion by their beautiful and attractive appearance. I do not wish to be understood to say they should go into all the frivolities of the present, far from it. Let me illustrate this: While a teacher in a city public school, many years since, I overheard two little misses talking of their teachers, "I perfectly long," said one, "to go into Miss S's room, she always looks so neat and sweet, but my teacher never looks well, if she has got a gold watch and lots of jewelry." "Why, your teacher is pretty enough, I'm sure," was the quieting reply. I often met these teachers in the lower rooms and contrasted their dress and work. The one beautifully neat and consistant in everything, though very plain; the other always dashey and pretentious, yet lacking in moral and intellectual power. The first one was was a lady of Christian principle, and carried it out in her daily duties, the other's work and life were a failure.

"How shall I dress," asked a young Christian girl of her devoted father. "Dress, my daughter, so that you will not be noticed either for your extravagance or plainness." "Dress," said a friend, "so that no one can tell what you have on." "Dress neatly and becomingly," said a Catholic gentleman to his Christian cousin, "neatly and becomingly as you wish to gain all the influence possible over others." These wise words of the thoughtful are worth more than a passing thought. They embody sentiments to be regarded by every lover of true influence. God has endowed his creatures with the love of beauty, this is a strong element in the young, and grows into our very characters as the months and years of life go on. We learn correct taste—unconsciously it may be—from the flowers of God's own creating; we tend and watch them carefully, analyze, classify, and even try to copy them for our own adornment. With the microscope we find hidden and untold loveliness in their frost-work, their fringes, their flutings and satin edges and their wonderful shadings, showing that the master mind has been occupied with these minutiæ. It makes the question arise at once to the lover of nature, does God care also how his children are clothed? Would he care if we were not becomingly clad? Would he, who has taken such infinite pains with the flowers, love us less or more for what we wear? Let us see what he has already spoken: Consider the lilies of the field how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin, and yet I say unto you that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. He here shows us in his own work the perfection of beauty, and how vain it is to attempt to rival him. And adds that we should take no thought, or rather, not the first thought, for outward show, since the clothes he offers us, and that are the most prized by him, are the Christian graces which he somewhere commemorates in his Word. Over these we should "be clad with zeal as a cloak," and above all that the world may see and understand us aright, we should have the "garment of salvation" ornamented with a meek and quiet spirit, "which is in the sight of God of great price."

A Peacemaking Power.

When Miss Martineau visited America she was introduced to Mr. Clay, and during the conversation she is reported as sneering at practical religion. To which Mr. Clay replied:

"Miss Martineau, I do not know practically about what the churches call religion. I wish I did. But I do know of its effects. In the neighborhood of my home were two very estimable families who in years past fell into what is known as a 'Kentucky feud,' which means that as often as any of the embittered parties met at a fair or public meeting there was a probability that the fray would begin: and it was as likely to kill the innocent, as those in the strife. The neighbors did everything in their power of reconciliation. I did all in my power with the rest; but all in vain. The killing went on until one of the denominations known here as the Baptists, held what they called a 'basket meeting,' and had what they call a 'revival,' and these belligerent families were converted, as they say, and they have lived on the best terms ever since, a blessing to the whole community. I tell you Miss Martineau, that whatever will change a Kentucky feud into loving fellowship so soon and effectively is of God. No power short of his could do it."—Presbyterian.

A Good Mother's Plan.

A lady gave us a rule, not long since, by which she had succeeded in interesting her lively, fun-loving boys, so that they preferred to remain at home evenings, instead of seeking amusement elsewhere. She said:

"I must remember that children are children, and must have amusements. I fear that the abhorence with which some good parents regard any play for children, is the reason why children go away for pleasure.

"Husband and I used to read history, and at the end of each chapter ask questions, requiring the answer to be looked up if not given correctly. We follow a similar plan with the children; sometimes we play one game, and sometimes another, always planning with books, stories, plays, or treats of some kind, to make evenings at home more attractive than they can be made abroad. I should dislike to think that any one could make my children happier than I can, so I always try to be at leisure in the evening, and to arrange something entertaining.

"When there is a concert, lecture, or entertainment, we all go together to enjoy it; for whatever is worth the price of admission to us older people, is equally valuable to the children; and we let them see that we spare no expense, where it is to their advantage to be out of an evening.

"But the greater number of our evenings are spent quietly at home. Sometimes it requires quite an effort to sit quietly talking and playing with them, when my work-basket is filled with unfinished work, and books and papers lie unread on the table; but as the years go by, and I see my boys and girls growing into home-loving, modest young men and maidens, I am glad that I made it my rule to give the best of myself to my family.—Sel.

Religious Machinery.

There are some people who have an undue amount of faith in religious organizations. They suppose that when they have endowed an institution, or organized a society, they have laid the foundation for permanent and continuous working. But machinery creates no power. An engine will not act unless it is acted upon; a society will not work unless it is worked. There must be force, energy and intelligence behind all machinery or else it is useless.

We are not to worship organizations or machinery, nor are we to suppose that when an organization has been accomplished our work is done. If anything desirable is to be effected, there must be the constant pressure of the firm, strong hand, and the constant guidance of the wise and prudent mind, in order that the facilities provided may not be abused or suffered to drop into idleness and uselessness. The engine must be supplied with fuel and water, and, moreover, must have an engineer who knows how to guide it, or else it will soon become a mere mass of dead matter, useless and cumbrous. In like manner institutions, unless managed by living men, full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, will soon become comfortable resting places for salaried idlers, if not cages of unclean birds and foul and hateful things. God only knows the falsities and hypocrisies that are covered up under eminent names and respectable organizations, where light and ventilation never is allowed to come. And such institutions frequently hinder the causes which they were designed to serve by crushing competition and preventing competent and faithful men from performing the labor to which God has evidently called them, and also hindering them from receiving the encouragement and assistance which their work demands.

A live man will often accomplish more than a dead society, and the wisdom requisite to win souls is quite as likely to be found in the single-handed worker whom God has endowed for his work and thrust forth into his vineyard, as in the religious politician who has succeeded in getting elected and re-elected to an office for which he has no special talent, but which affords him an easier living than the same amount of effort in any other direction would be likely to secure for him.—The Safeguard.

Interest and Labor.

Interest is a tax gatherer.

It enters into every workshop, field and mine, and gathers labor's profit.

Labor has a wife and family to support.

Labor needs food, clothing and rest.

Labor works six days out of every seven, and ten hours out of every twenty-four.

Labor gets sick and has doctor bills to pay.

Labor gets old and wears out and cannot be repaired.

Interest works seven days in a week and twenty-four hours each day.

Interest needs no clothing or food.

Interest never gets sick or tired.

Interest has no family to support or doctor bills to pay.

Interest produces nothing but consumes every thing.

Interest gathers where labor reaps, and reaps where labor sows.

Labor erects itself a house, and pays interest's rent on it.

Labor produces bread and interest eats it.

Interest is master and labor is a slave.

Moral.—Keep out of debt.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

Boys Wanted.

Boys of spirit, boys of will,
Boys of muscle, brain and power,
Fit to cope with anything—
These are wanted, every hour.

Not the weak and whining drones
That all trouble magnify;
Not the watchword of "I can't,"
But the nobler one "I'll try."

Do whate'er you have to do
With a true and earnest zeal;
Bend your sinews to the task,
Put your shoulder to the wheel.

Though your duty may be hard,
Look not on it as an ill;
If it be an honest task,
Do it with an honest will.

At the anvil or the farm,
Wheresoever you may be,
From your future efforts, boys,
Comes a nation's destiny.

Down Hill.

Down it goes! When first it was set a-going it went slowly, rolling over and over gently, for the slope was not steep at first; but as it rolled it got going faster and faster, and now look at it! It is tearing down the hill, bounding off the rocks, and crashing through the bushes, nothing can stop it now; another minute—and now you can see it no more. It has gone right over the edge. But hark! now you hear the splash! It's in the torrent, the river, and that's no less than a thousand feet below where we stand. The boys little thought what they were doing when they set that big stone rolling. They had hard work to turn it over. They did it in fun and without thought; but it would have been no fun to anybody on the hillside. Let us hope it hurt nobody before it got to the stream.

Are you going down hill, too? Have you begun? Have you taken the first roll—the first step?

You did it without much thought. The slope was not steep. What they persuaded you to do did not seem any thing very bad. They had some difficulty, perhaps, at first, for you could not forget what you had been taught at home; but they tried again—and over you went! It was your first step downward. You thought you could stop when you liked. You would just go that once to see what it was like; but you did not mean to go again.

But you will find it harder and harder to stop. It is harder already than if you had never given way. And unless you stop now it will become harder and harder and harder still. The slope will be steeper, and there will be many ways to precipitate you downwards.

You are doing harm as you go; you are hurting some, for your example is evil. And there is a precipice below. You cannot see it from here. You cannot see what you will fall into if you go on down hill. Such a terrible fall! Such destruction! You cannot see it, but the slope leads to it—the steep slope of a sinful life—and the downward course, doing harm all along, will get faster and faster till the bottom is reached.

Oh, what can stop you? Nothing but grace; nothing but God's almighty hand stretched out. He can do it.

But will he? How can I expect him to do it now? He would have stopped me, no doubt, at first, when I was just beginning to go wrong, if I had prayed to him then. But I never did. I knew I was doing wrong, and yet I went on. I went from bad to worse with my eyes open. I was not like the stone. The stone had no sense, but I had sense, I know. I felt I was going down hill, but I hardly ever tried to stop, and I never asked God to help me. Now, when I have gone so far will he help me now?

Yes! He will. You may have done much harm, you may be going down faster and faster, you may be nearer the precipice, yet cry to God, and beg him even now for Jesus Christ's sake to forgive you, save you, stop you and turn you. Only a miracle could have stopped the stone as it dashed down the precipice, and it would be nothing short of a miracle that would stop you—a miracle of grace. But such miracles as this God works still. Cry to him. Cry mightily to him. While yet you may, while the short time lasts, cry to him to stop and save you.—Selected.

To the Chicago Christian Association Band of Hope.

FROM MRS. E. TAPLEY, COLUMBUS, MISS.

DEAR CHILDREN:—I am glad to hear of your Band of Hope. I wonder how many of you are Christians and love to pray. How sweet it is to think that Jesus loves every one who loves him. * * The colored people ask for a great many things, but they are willing to work and pay for them. One little girl came to ask me for a sunbonnet. She said she had none and the sun made her sick, and she could sweep the yards for it. A little boy wanted a slate to go to school, but failed to get it.

A colored preacher's wife said to me this week: "I do not mind holes in the clothes if I have anything to patch them with, but I have got out of patches. She had three pair of pants that needed mending, and she wanted a piece of cloth to put in the front of her little girl's striped cotton dress, to wear to school. I did not have it, but I tried to encourage her. * *

I am not teaching day school, but I am teaching the word of God as I have opportunity.

SABBATH SCHOOL.

LESSON 7, November 12.—JESUS BEFORE PILATE.—Mark 15, 1-15.

(1) And straightway in the morning the chief priests held a consultation with the elders and scribes and the whole council, and bound Jesus, and carried him away, and delivered him to Pilate. (2) And Pilate asked him, Art thou the King of the Jews? And he answering, said unto him, Thou sayest it. (3) And the chief priests accused him of many things; but he answered nothing. (4) And Pilate asked him again, saying, Answerest thou nothing? behold how many things they witness against thee. (5) But Jesus yet answered nothing; so that Pilate marvelled. (6) Now at that feast he released unto them one prisoner, whomsoever they desired. (7) And there was one named Barabbas, which lay bound with them that had made insurrection with him, who had committed murder in the insurrection. (8) And the multitude, crying aloud, began to desire him to do as he had ever done unto them. (9) But Pilate answered them, saying, Will ye that I release unto you the King of the Jews? (10) For he knew that the chief priests had delivered him for envy. (11) But the chief priests moved the people, that he should rather release Barabbas unto them. (12) And Pilate answered and said again unto them, What will ye then that I shall do unto him whom ye call the King of the Jews? (13) And they cried out again, Crucify him. (14) Then Pilate said unto them, Why, what evil hath he done? And they cried out the more exceedingly, Crucify him. (15) And so Pilate, willing to content the people, released Barabbas unto them, and delivered Jesus, when he had scourged him, to be crucified.

The following are a few of the important teachings which our lesson clearly illustrates.

1. The deadly hatred of the natural heart against Jesus. The Jews were determined to put Jesus to death. They would let nothing frustrate their purpose. They had declared him guilty of blasphemy. But now they know that another charge must be preferred if Pilate could be induced to pronounce sentence. But they hesitate not to change their indictment after they have proceeded thus far in the mock trial, unjust as such a course plainly was. The deadly character of their envy and hatred is evident at every step. But we are disposed to call them monsters of iniquity, and conclude that such evil does not now reside in the heart. But how much better would unbelievers of to-day treat Jesus if he were with us in the same manner? They refuse him a place in their hearts. They refuse to accept him as their king. Would they be willing to see him gaining great power over the multitudes about them? The human heart has not changed with the centuries. Once an orator concluded an oration with these words: "O Virtue, if thou wert embodied, all men would love thee." That same day a minister of the Gospel stood on the same stand and said, "My friend has said that if Virtue was embodied all men would love her. But she has been embodied, and how was she treated? She was despised and rejected of men, who after defaming, insulting, and scourging her, led her to the cross where they crucified her."

2. Jesus is worthy of our fullest confidence. When asked by Pilate if he was a king, he replied that he was. He is a King, too, whom we need never fear to trust and obey. Never was man put to such a test as was Jesus when before the council and Pilate, yet he preserved his holiness undimmed. It shone out then in its brightest splendor. We love to hear of Jesus as the merciful, compassionte High Priest. But it is just as cheering to hear that he was "yet without sin." A little boy once fell into a well. His screams soon brought his mother to its edge. He was trying to cling to the slippery stones of its walls, but his mother said, "Let go and stand on your feet." "But I will be drowned, mother," was the answer. "No," said his mother, "the water is only about four feet deep." "But I will sink in the mire." "No, there is a rock at the bottom." He obeyed and found it as she said. Years afterwards, when heavy sorrows threatened to crush her, he asked if she remembered what she said to him when at the bottom of the well. Then she saw that she was clinging to slippery human props, that she needed to stand firm on the bottom rock. We all need a Saviour who may be called "the Rock;" mere compassion would not save us if he had no strength and firmness. But he is mighty to save.

3. The weakness of indecision. Pilate wished to shield Jesus, yet he was not brave enough to firmly refuse to grant the clamor of the Jews. He resorted to different devices to evade the responsibility of a decision. He sent him to Herod, he proposed to scourge him as a compromise measure, he then gave them the choice of Jesus or Barabbas, but all these devices failed to secure his end. Nothing but a bold, positive stand for the right could have availed anything. So it is always with those who try to compromise good and evil. The agents of evil are quick to detect the slightest tokens of yielding to them, and take courage to press their demands afresh. The old story of Parley the Porter might well be retold here. The only safe way is not to yield to Satan one inch.

4. By Christ's sufferings Barabbas was allowed to escape the cross. In a far higher sense all who trust in him will escape a more terrible sentence. On the night of the arrest, Jesus said to his captors, "If ye seek me let these go their way," referring to his disciples. He says to the sword of justice which is drawn against every sinner, "Let your strokes fall on me, but let every one who takes shelter in me escape."

5. We cannot avoid deciding either for or against Jesus. After Pilate had employed every device he could think of without effect, he cried out, "What then shall I do with Jesus which is called the Christ?" He could not shake off the responsibility of a decision. Jesus is offered to us as our Prophet, Priest and King. The responsibility of deciding what we shall do with him cannot be evaded. We may flatter ourselves that we have done so, by taking what we call neutral ground, but at the last great day the question which will confront us will be, "What have you done with Jesus who is called Christ?"

6. Lack of firmness as well as a malicious intent often leads to great crimes and evil consequences. Pilate tried to wash his hands from the blood of Jesus. But such washing could not reach his heart. Without his consent Jesus could not have been put to death under the Roman law. He gave that consent, and though he gave it reluctantly, the responsibility rested upon him. Tradition says that he afterward committed suicide—if so, doubtless in the spirit of remorse, as did Judas. Every boy and girl should learn from this lesson that much of their prospect for living a happy and upright life depends on their ability to say "No," and stick to it to the end.—*U. P. THE AMERICAN PARTY.

Nominations for 1884.

For President,
JONATHAN BLANCHARD,
of Illinois.

For Vice-President.
JOHN A. CONANT.
of Connecticut.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

Michigan Fifth District.

For Representative in Congress: HENRY D. INMAN.

ILLINOIS VOTERS can be supplied with tickets from this office.

IOWA VOTERS who wish to obtain tickets to be voted Tuesday, November 7th, will please write at once to J. N. Norris, of Birmingham, Van Buren county, member of the State committee. Don't delay.

MICHIGAN VOTERS, send to H. A. Day, Coldwater, Mich., for your ballots; also for copies of the Michigan American. Send on also a contribution to help pay for the extra edition of 20,000 copies of the paper, which is being sent all over the State. Take your pen and write as soon as you read this and then the duty will not be forgotten.

EIGHTH ILLINOIS CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT.—Through misinformation the Cynosure has not published the name of the American candidate for Congress in this district. T. W. BAIRD, of LaSalle county, was nominated at the same time with Messrs. Howe and Fischer. His name will appear on all the tickets. He is a worthy and true-hearted gentleman who, if elected, will introduce into our House of Representatives something of that integrity of character which is of late years sadly lacking in that body. See that every vote is polled for him possible.

—J. P. Bartlett, Esq., of Blackberry, Kane county, is the American candidate for the State Legislature for Kane and DuPage counties. He is a life-long temperance man and prohibitionist, and an original Anti-mason in politics, since he voted for Wirt and Ellmaker in 1832. Let every foe of the secret lodge see that their three votes are counted for him. As he is the only pronounced prohibitionist nominated for the Legislature, temperance voters should stand by their convictions and put in three votes for him.

Questions for Voters.

Do you believe that legal suppression of liquor-selling in the saloon and secrecy-selling in the lodges is right?

Do you remember that John Quincy Adams, one of our greatest Presidents and ablest statesmen, and Daniel Webster, the great expounder of the Constitution, said that lodge oaths should be suppressed by law?

What principles, more vital, can you vote for?

What vital principles are you willing to vote for?

Do you reckon on accounting to God for your ballot?

Do you think more of your party than of your political principles? If so, why?

Is it not always right to vote right?

If you do your duty by your country at the ballot box, will you be to blame if it goes to destruction?

Is it not the duty of every man to vote for what he feels is right and to trust the country to that Providence which has hitherto taken care of it?

Is not a fear to vote right an evidence of lack of faith in the superintending providence of God?

Is a vote ever lost that is cast for the right?

Does reason or revelation warrant a voter to defer to vote right to a more convenient season?

Do you hope for the suppression of these two enormous evils of intemperance and lodgery?

Do you pray that this may be done?

WILL YOU VOTE, NOV. 7TH, TO HELP PUT THEM DOWN?

A Lost Vote.

The master stroke of the politician is to cry out, "You are losing your vote." John Quincy Adams said, "Young man always vote your principles, and then you will have the sweet consciousness that you didn't lose your vote." The patriots vote should be an expression of his best thought, purpose and sympathy for his country. Is the sincere man expressing the best in him, when he sustains drunkards in office? When he sustains men who, though as men, are temperate, yet are indifferent concerning the advocacy of the principles which he holds dear? when he sustains at the polls temperance men, who fear to tell the world they are temperance men? If I avow prohibition as a principle, do I not lose my vote when I vote for men who fear to advocate what I, in a private way advocate? Do I not trifle with my own best self, practically use my ballot power to repress the cause I profess to have at heart, instead of using that weapon of power to advance it? My vote is lost—or rather my ballot power is lost—whenever I do not use it to give honor, prominence and strength to the principles which I wish to become effective, even though it be some time in the future before that can be realized. My life work, my influence, my ballot, has a reach into the future—yes upon generations to come. A vote is lost, when it does not advance and promote professed principles.—PROF. H. D. PATTON.

A New American Party.

We call special attention to four sermons on Sabbath, October 22d, in the leading Methodist pulpits of Chicago, and printed in the Chicago Times of Monday following. The burden of the sermons is prohibition, but it is plain that some of the speakers had the American platform in mind. Rev. Mr. Fawcett says:

"No temple is large enough to hold the ark of the Lord and Dagon at the same time. If the ark remains, adjust Dagon as you will, his head and hands will be broken and God will be supreme. Mount Carmel voices the Elijah call to choice and decision, assuring us that there is not room enough in the hearts of the people or in the wide nation for Jehovah and Baal at the same time. 'There is no middleground,' said Jesus. 'He who is not for me is against me; he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad.'"

Some of this eloquent clergyman's people are heart and soul with the Cynosure; and the above paragraph seems inspired by it. How long before he will see that while liquor is but a figurative "Dagon," the lodge ritual is actual, literal Baal worship, which was the mother worship of all the old idolatries.

But we come now to the crown. In closing this remarkable sermon, Mr. Fawcett proposes a new party with a platform containing prohibition, civil service reform, five years' residence for foreigners to vote, the voter must be able to read his ballot, compulsory education, and profits of criminal labor go to those suffering by crimes. And then names his new party thus:

"I would name this 'The American party.' The name is not new to you. You will remember that there was a party by that name organized in 1852, and but for its sympathy with the slave power it would have swept the nation. As Democrats are Republicans and as Republicans are Democratic, I consider such a name more expressive of American thought."

Here we have an eloquent prohibitionist, in a popular Chicago church, proposing a new party and naming it

THE AMERICAN PARTY

This is significant. The "National Prohibition and Home Protection Party," is the name adopted by the great Chicago Convention in August. We then told our readers that the party would never succeed with such a name. so long, so special, and so unstatesman-like. We told them also that the American party not only has a popular name, but it is the natural and sure landing-place of all true political reforms. When this gentleman's new American party is launched, if it ever is, as its principles are included in ours, the two parties with one name and the same principles, must of course be one party. We think the intelligent gentleman contemplated this when he omitted the name of his own party and took ours. He may not have wished to alarm his people by advising them to join our American party in a body; but only wished to put them on a road which would lead them into it. At any rate it is a glorious tribute to the wisdom, propriety and popularity of the name, AMERICAN PARTY.

—The Michigan American distributes 20,000 copies among the voters of that State this month.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

—The Presbyterian Church of Canada is raising $100,000 to build churches for the immigrants who are pouring into Manitoba.

—The Presbyterian Board has opened a mission in Guatemala, under care of Rev. John C. Hill.

—Archbishop Wood (Catholic) of Philadelphia recently forbade his people to take part in a Sunday excursion, because he "regarded it as a violation of the Lord's day, and of the religious quiet and repose appropriate to that holiest of the holy days of the year." The excursion did not take place.

—Y. M. Christian Associations are now established in Cairo, Beyront, Smyrna, Damascus, Jerusalem, Nazareth, Calcutta, Hong Kong, Yokohama, etc.

—A brewer in London confesses that the "Salvation Army" has diminished his receipts over $15,000 in one year, through their work among the lower classes.

—A recent traveler in Bible lands says. "Of all 'the seven churches in Asia,' Smyrna alone is living still. It was with considerable interest I worshiped at the 'English church, and saw written over the communion-table the message. 'To the angel of the church in Smyrna,' closing with the thrilling promise, 'Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.'"

—If is reported that during the three years in which Mr. Henry M. Stanley has been conducting his exploring expedition on the Congo, in Africa, he has never had a quarrel with the natives, and has established four trading stations. This affords additional evidences that intercourse with savage nations can be conducted on Christian principles.

—The Paris Register has this to say of the meetings of the American evangelists in that city: "Messrs. Moody and Sankey began their conferences in the American chapel, 21 rue de Berri, Sunday afternoon last. The church was crowded in every part, as was that of Pasteur Bersier in the evening. Doubtless many came from curiosity to see and hear the men whose power to attract the multitudes and vivify and impress religious truth has made them famous throughout the Christian world. But in the audiences were many personal friends who had been associated with them in Christian work in the United States and Great Britain, or who had heard them with delight elsewhere, and wished to hear them again. During the week the meetings have been well attended and religious interest has been deepening day by day. Thursday evening between thirty and forty declared their determination to begin a religious life, and asked for the prayers of Christians."

—The Free Methodist General Conference lately met at Burlington, Iowa. A re-organization of some conference limits, the alteration of the rule against tobacco, making it more stringent, and the election of an editor for the Free Methodist of this city, were among the important transactions. The election of an editor was made at the request of Rev. D. P. Baker, publisher of the paper and its able conductor heretofore. The conference chose Rev. Joseph Travis, of Philadelphia, to fill the position. His accession will be of great value to the paper, but we do not wish to hear of Bro. Baker's retiring.

—The committee appointed to select the international Sunday-school lessons for the next course met last week in Philadelphia. The importance of their work, and the interest manifested in the result of their deliberations, makes this meeting one of the most eventful in the religious world. They legislate for 84,000 schools in this country, with a membership of 7,000,000, and 900,000 teachers, while a total of nearly 15,000,000 persons throughout the world use their lessons.

—The issues of the American Bible Society during sixty-six years amount to 40,407,584. The work of the society last year shows that there were manufactured at the Bible House 1,174,893 copies of the Bible. Imported from abroad, 5,801. Printed abroad, 449,136. Purchased abroad, 93,868. Total, 1,723,698. Copies issued at home, 1,094,108; abroad, 430,665. Total, 1,524,773. Of the volumes issued from the Bible House, 45,887 were sent to foreign lands. The foreign work of the Society was last year as follows: Printed during the year 2,500 copies of the Gospels, Acts, and Joshua in Ponape; 2,000 Mark Luke and Acts in Mortlock; 2,000 Genesis, several of the Epistles and a few Psalms in Ebon; 300 of John in Kusaien; 1,000 of Romans in Muskokee; 600 of Luke in Japanese raised letter for the blind; 1,000 of Psalms and Proverbs in Zulu.

—The Wisconsin United Brethren conference, held Oct. 4th, at Rutland, Dane county, resolved thus on the secrecy question:

"Whereas, We highly prize the clause of our Discipline treating on secrecy; and, Whereas, We disapprove of all pretense to worship God without recognizing the name of Christ; therefore.

"Resolved, That we, the members of Wisconsin Conference, do hereby pledge our utmost endeavors for the defense of the law against all opposition."

—The Friends Mexican mission was begun in 1872 by Samuel A. Purdie and his wife in Matamoras. This work was begun independently, and it was not until 1875 put in charge of the Foreign Mission committee. In 1880 a meeting house was built and this year there are 189 members reported to 14 seven years ago.

A Marvelous Faith Cure.

The following is the testimony of one who has recently been healed by faith:

"Jesus Christ is the great physician and friend of sinners, and as I have lain a suffering invalid for seven years and seven months, I thought it my duty to recommend him. I have been under the care of a dozen different physicians, and tried almost every remedy I could think of, but everything failed and I grew worse all the time. This summer I grew more helpless and nervous than ever. My little boy, who had been such a comfort to me all through my sickness, became so annoying to me by his playfulness. I prayed for grace all through my sickness, and the Lord always did grant me grace, but it seemed as though I could bear my sufferings no longer. One day I asked the Lord to take my life away that I might not be a burden to my friends. I had no hope of recovery, for my last medicine seemed to hurt me more than any I had taken. I think the last physician tried as far as he knew to cure me. Some say he claims he did, but it is a mistake, for I was worse after taking his medicine than before, and I had not taken any medicine of any kind for over a month when I was healed.

For six years and a half I have not been able to walk across the house, nor sit up for more than ten minutes at a time. This summer something seemed to say, 'There is a balm in Gilead.' But it was hard for me to believe the Lord was going to heal me. Early this spring a kind minister came to see me and he spoke about Jesus healing me, and read some of the promises. Through his prayer my faith grew stronger, and I tried to plead his promises. But I grew worse. I discontinued taking medicine in June.

After I quit it seemed as though I must do something. I asked my husband to read the passage of Scripture in James, 'Is any one sick,' etc. While he read I felt the Lord had directed me to it. We sent for the minister I spoke of, and others, and had a prayer meeting. When one of the ministers read, 'The prayer of faith shall heal the sick,' my faith increased, and I believed God would heal me. About a week after this first prayer meeting, while having family worship, Jesus came and rebuked the disease and I became so strong I could lie in bed no longer. I commenced praising the Lord. I got up from the bed and walked to my husband. I felt strong enough to carry him in my arms. My little boy, who had never seen me walk before, was afraid, he thought I had gone crazy. I told him Jesus had healed me. I have been gaining steadily in strength. I can ride in a carriage or wagon, and do almost all my housework. I will praise Jesus while I live."

—There are said to be 110,000 members of the United Workmen lodges in this country. They pay an initiation fee of $10, and the aggregate insurance they expect to get at death is $226,000,000. But if they should stop taking in members, how much would they get?

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

—Hon. Thurlow Weed's condition did not improve last week. There were on the contrary indications of another chill, which would seriously retard his recovery.

—Mrs. Scoville, sister of the assassin Guiteau, has been on trial for insanity in one of the Chicago courts, her husband having inaugurated the suit. Although the evidence was very favorable for her case the jury gave a verdict of insanity and that she had been in this condition six months.

—A reception was tendered the widow of John Brown at the residence of Dr. Talbot, Boston, last Thursday to which were invited a few old anti-slavery people, including Wendell Phillips and the poet Whittier. It is proposed to raise a fund, from the income of which, Mrs. Brown may receive a pension.

—A mob at Grand Forks, Dakota, made a most determined assault upon the jail in which was confined a negro who had ravished two women, and although the jail was stoutly defended the doors were at length battered down and the wretch taken out and hanged from the railroad bridge.

—At the reassembling of Parliament Wednesday, the Tories attacked Gladstone fiercely for violating historical precedents by calling an autumn session. Lord Randolph Churchill moving an immediate adjournment as a protest. The motion was defeated by a vote of 142 to 209.

—Gladstone announces that the government had under consideration the important questions of the freedom of navigation of the Suez Canal in time of War; the best method of securing to the people of Egypt control of matters of legislation and expenditure in their nation, and the extinction of slavery.

—England proposes to the Egyptian Government that an international indemnity commission be established; that England and France have only one representative, the same as the other powers; that America and Greece each send a representative, and that the minor States have a collective representation.

—The private correspondence of Arabi Pasha for the last two years was seized at Cairo. It is said to contain voluminous correspondence with Constantinople seriously compromising the Sultan.

—Arabi Pasha says he desires to quit Egypt as soon as possible, and will accept a sentence of exile to any part of the British dominions. He does not wish to see Egypt again. He thinks Egypt will shortly lose the Soudan, unless the English army stops the False Prophet. The Perfecture of Police has obtained 400 depositions, the greater part of which are from European residents, sustaining the accusation of Arabi Pasha, that Toulba was alone responsible for the burning, pillage and massacres in the city last summer. This fact increases English and European sympathy for the chief rebel, which has been steadily on the increase since his capture was effected.

—A widow whose husband was executed in May, 1878, by order of King Milan of Bulgaria, fired twice at the Servian ruler in the cathedral at Belgrade, but did not succeed in hitting him.

—The police have made a discovery that torpedoes have been placed in the river Danube, and that they were intended to blow up the steamer upon which King Milan was to come to Belgrade from Rustchuk.

—The largest lumber yards of Europe, those of Gromoff in St. Petersburg, have been destroyed by fire, the loss being 2,500,000 rubles, or about $1,750,000, with insurance for one-half that sum in Russian and English companies.

—Further reports tend to confirm the news of the massacre of Egyptians in the Soudan by a Musselman uprising. According to the latest private advices from Khartoum the Egyptians are preparing for its defense, throwing up forts, digging ditches, etc. The prospects are desperate the garrison being composed of only 1,000 men, while the new prophet is leading the assault at the head of 6,000 men. The whole of Egypt south of Khartoum is in possession of the False Prophet.

—It is reported in New Bedford that a letter from the captain of the lost schooner Surprise, which was wrecked at Basket Island, in the Straits of Magellan, says the boat's crew that he left at the Island were subsequently massacred by the natives, with the exception of a Portuguese boy. He also says a boat's crew belonging to the British bark Rosencath, which foundered at sea, containing the mate and four men, were also murdered by the natives excepting the mate.

HOME AND FARM.

Laws of Digestion.

1. Food for the supply of the daily wants of the system is most rapidly and thoroughly digested when taken early in the day, ere the nervous and secretive forces are exhausted by toil.

2. Rapid digestion in the early part of the day contributes to the immediate demands of motion and enervation.

3. Food for the repair of the continuous wear and tear of the tissues is in less immediate request; the completeness of its solution is of more importance than the rapidity, and it is best taken toward the evening, when an opportunity is afforded for its leisurely absorption during sleep.

4. The duration of digestion bears a proportion to the quantity of food eaten.

5. In youth the digestion is quicker, and the stomach sooner emptied than in grown-up persons.

6. Rest before meals makes digestion more complete. Exertion immediately before meals retards digestion,and exertion immediately afterward deranges it.

7. Sleep retards digestion, but makes it more complete.

8. Alcohol retards digestion, and renders it also incomplete.

9. Earnest preoccupation of mind retards digestion, and may even quite annul it.

10. Water weakens digestion and encourages the absorption of fatty and saccharine matter; but its effect on the complete solution of albumen is doubtful.—Housekeeper.

How to Get Well.

A lady has just left my rooms whose case illustrated an important idea. Ten years ago she was an invalid. Her malady was obstinate, and at the end of a year's treatment, a consultation resulted in the opinion that her case was cerebro-spinal iritation, from which she would probably never recover. Six years ago her husband died. His state proved insolvent. The wife engaged in an occupation to support her three children. In a year she was well, and has remained so ever since.

There are two million dyspeptics in America. Nine in ten of them could be cured by work.—Dio Lewis.

—We rise every morning with a certain store of strength, which should be expended on the most important work of the day, whether of body or brain, by riding to business and walking from it. Both brutes and birds rest after eating.

Hints for Poor Sleepers.—Poor sleepers will find it advantageous often to raise the head of the bed a foot higher than the foot, and then to sleep on a tolerably thick hair pillow, so as to bring the head a little higher than the shoulders. The object is to make the work of the heart in throwing the blood to the brain harder, so it will not throw so much. A level bed, with the head almost as low as the feet causes an easy flow of blood to the brain and prevents sleep. Persons who find themselves restless and unable to sleep at night would do well to place the head toward the north, as it is undoubtedly greatly conductive to health. A hot mustard foot bath, taken at bedtime, is beneficial in drawing the blood from the head, and thus inducing sleep. Sponge the entire length of the spine with hot water for ten or fifteen minutes before resting. This will often insure a good night's sleep. A hearty meal and a seat near a warm fire after a long walk in the cold wind will induce sleep in the majority of persons, no matter how lightly they ordinarily slumber. Active outdoor exercise and avoidance of excessive and long-continued mental exertion are necessary in all cases of sleeplessness. When these means fail, such remedies as are known to diminish the amount of blood in the head should be resorted to—of course under the direction of a competent physician. Opium, chloral, etc., increase the quantity of blood in the head, and are highly injurious. Their use should never be resorted to.—L. H. Washington, M. D.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 60 cents; per dozen, $5.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.00. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degrees of Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Valance'e Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. This confession of Henry L. Valance, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan in the Niagara River, was taken from the lips of the dying man by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine County, Wisconsin, in 1848. 10 cents each; per dozen. $1.00.

Hietory of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers. 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Reminiecences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oathe and Penaltiee of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen. $3.50.

Ex-Preeident John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

The Myetic Tie, or Freemaeonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each: per dozen, $1.25

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Revieed Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Knighte of Pythiae Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societiee Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Oddfellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen

MISCELLANEOUS.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each: per dozen $2 00

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on one Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. Each of these able writers in clear, forcible language treats the subject in one or more of its varied phases. Rev. David McDill in six chapters treats of 1. "Their Antiquity; 2 Their Secrecy; 3. "Oaths and Promises;" 4 "Profaneness" 5. "Their Exclusiveness;" 6. "False Claims." Prest. Blanchard handles the topic: "Shall Christians join Secret Societies?" in a masterly way, showing clearly that they are all opposed to the genius of Christianity; and Dr. Beecher closes with his Report on Secret Societies, which was adopted by the Congregational Association of Illinois at Ottawa in 1866. In cloth, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.25. Paper cover, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25

Narratives and Argumente, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

History Nat'l Christian Aseociation. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association, condition of the Carpenter donation, with engraving of building donated by Mr. Carpenter; tables showing the number of pastors and communicants in churches that exclude members of secret societies, tabular view of local, county, state and national conventions, and list of organizations auxiliary to the National Christian Association; brief opinions of eminent men on secret societies, and testimonies of religious bodies against them. 25 cents each; per dozen, $1.50.

Minutee of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Greene, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. Unpublished Reminiscences of the Morgan Times, by Elder David Bernard; Recollections of the Morgan Trials, as related by Victory Birdseye, Esq., and presented by his daughter, Mrs. C. B. Miller; Secretary's Report; Roll of Delegates; Songs of Mr. G. W. Clark; Paper by Enoch Honeywell; Constitution N. C. A.; Reports of Committees and a Report of the Political Meeting. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Proceedinge of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing Official Reports; Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, T. D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D. D., Prest. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D. D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquilette; also Report of the Political Mass Convention, with Platform and Candidates for the Presidential Campaign of 1876. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Anti-Maeon'e Scrap-Book, consisting of 31 Cynosure tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies; and the dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized secrecy are shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public. Those who wish to circulate anti-Masonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District, Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Maeonry, by Rev. W. P. M'Nary, pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind. This is a very clear, thorough, candid and remarkably concise Scriptural argument on the character of Freemasonry. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasone why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

FOR SALE BY

EZRA A. COOK,

No. 7 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

In the Coils; or the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historial sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of every-day life, and showing how individual, domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. Parents who wish, not only to keep their children out of these night-schools of Satan, but to give them arguments against them in the most attractive dress, will do well to purchase this book. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Stearns' Review of Two Maeonic Addresses. In this scathing review the lying pretensions of the order are clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Letters on Masonry. Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian religion. Paper cover, 30 cents each; per dozen, $2.50.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Light on Freemaeonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship (old work), by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen, $7.50

Freemasonry and the M. E. Church. Let every lover of truth and justice read this report of the trial of Rev. J. T. Michael, showing how he was driven out of the M. E. church for opposing Masonry and loving Methodism. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Bernard'e Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Discussion on Secret Societiee. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocate, and afterward in pamphlet form. The Evangelical Repository, reviewing it, says: "This pamphlet consists of a series of articles originally published in the Church Advocate, Lancaster, Pa. Elder M. S. Newcomer opposes secret societies, and especially Freemasonry and Elder G. W. Wilson defends the system. We are free to say that Mr. Newcomer has thoroughly routed his opponent at every point. Mr. Wilson speaks by the book, as he is a Royal Arch Mason." 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

A PROPOSITION TO ONE HUNDRED READERS OF THE CYNOSURE.

If one hundred persons will each send in the money for a club of ten subscribers for the Christian Cynosure, ($15.00) fifteen dollars cash, (send the names of subscribers at pleasure within thirty days from date (Oct. 12th, 1882) the publisher will order a folding, trimming and pasting machine for the Cynosure, so that the paper can be well pasted and mailed a day earlier than it is at present. For some time we have been wishing to make the above mentioned improvement, but as receipts have not justified the expense it has been hitherto postponed. Will you not accept this proposition and forward the money promptly?

Each week we will report the clubs received and promised and also the money sent on in advance for clubs.

Do you accept the proposition? By so doing you will thus confer a favor on all readers of the paper by affording them a well pasted paper mailed one day earlier than it is at present. Whatever increases the value of the weekly organ of the National Christian Association augments the power and hastens the triumph of our great reform.

ONE HUNDRED CLUBS OF TEN

subscriptions paid for within the next thirty days would be an appropriate introduction to our annual campaign for Cynosure subscribers which we hope will this season be enthusiastic, through, prolonged and successful.

PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT.

F. M. Mitchell and C. C. Foote each pledge themselves for one of the hundred clubs called for.

F. M. M. writes:—"You want a paper folder. You will get it I have not a doubt. Our Cynosure seldom gets down here in Maine before Monday. We would like it very much Saturday. I will be one to send ten subscribers. God bless the Cynosure."

Cynosure Extension Fund.

Statement for the week ending Oct. 28, 1882:

"The Lord's Steward," $5; Irene Stoddard, $2; B. F. Searles, $1; Mrs. M. Carnes, $2.

Total cash received,	- -	$510 02
Total cash used,	- -	337 72
Cash available,	- -	$172 30

This Fund is designed to aid in getting subscribers from among those who do not take the Cynosure, and who may be induced to read it by paying themselves $1.00 per year. The Fund pays 50 cents, making up the club rate. It will now aid 344 new subscribers to get the paper for $1.00.

MASONIC BOOKS

FOR SALE BY

EZRA A. COOK,

7 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

Books sent post-paid on receipt of retail price, but books by mail are at risk of person ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express are sold at 10 per cent. discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority because they tell too much.

General Ahiman Rezon and Freemasons' Guide. By Daniel Sickels, 33d degree. The most perfect Masonic monitor published in the United States. Embellished with many engravings and containing monitorial instructions in the degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow-Craft and Master Masons, with explanatory lectures, the ceremonies of consecration and dedication of new lodges, installation of officers, laying foundation stones, dedication of Masonic halls, burial services, Masonic calendar, ritual for a Lodge of Sorrow, Masonic trials, etc. Bound in fine cloth, extra large 12mo. $2.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the entire ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Scores of Masons have privately admitted that this is a standard text-book in the lodge and is strictly correct; but publicly it is not acknowledged as authority, though many officers of the lodge make use of it. Price, in cloth, $2.50.

Female Masonry. Manual of the Order of the Eastern Star. Containing the ritual, symbols, lectures, etc., of the five degrees of "Adoptive Masonry," Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound. Price, $1.50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. A practical guide to the ceremonies in the degrees conferred in Masonic Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated edition. In cloth, $1.25; in paper, 75 cents.

Although this Monitor is extensively used by the lodge, especially in conferring the higher degrees, it is publicly called an exposition, and not allowed as authority.

Sickels' Freemasons' Monitor. Containing the degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic illustrations, together with tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also forms of Masonic documents, notes, songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels; 32mo. In tuck, $1.50; cloth, $1.00.

Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry. Containing a Definition of Terms, Notes on its History, Traditions and Antiquities, and an Account of all the Rites and Mysteries of the Ancient World. 12 mo., 526 pages, $3.00.

Mackey's Manual of the Lodge, or Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow-Craft and Master Mason, with Ceremonies relating to installations, dedications, consecrations, laying of corner-stones, etc. Price, $2.00.

Mackey's Masonic Ritualist, or Monitorial Instruction Book. By Albert G. Mackey, Past General High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of the United States, Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prince of Mercy, etc. Price, cloth, $1.25; tuck, $1.75.

Mackey's Text-Book of Masonic Jurisprudence. Illustrating the laws of Freemasonry, both written and unwritten. This is the great law book of Freemasonry. 570 pages. Price, $2.50.

Allyn's Ritual of Masonry. Illustrated by a large number of engravings, and containing a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, Orange and Odd-fellows' Societies Price, $5.00.

TOPICS OF THE TIME.

The kind of politics in vogue in Chicago is thus represented by Mayor Harrison, who is undeniably a leader and representative of the Democratic party. In a mass meeting speech the other evening he expressed himself thus: "I think the best plan is, since you are going to let men drink, to let them have good stuff. [Applause.] Kentucky, where I was raised, is a great State for making whisky. Up to the time I was twenty-three years of age I never saw a man who had the delirium tremens. I knew a great many men who drank too much, and a good many of them were not often sober. They were a nuisance, but they were not poisoning themselves, for good old Bourbon don't give one the delirium tremens. A fellow would drink it, go to bed, sweat it out, get up in the morning, do his work, go to drinking again, drink all the evening and sleep well at night, and yet he was a tolerable good sort of a fellow after all. [Applause.] You can go into a brewery and drink, and it will do you no harm unless you make beer barrels of yourselves. Then it is no good. I don't like to see a fellow drink until he rounds out so." (Increasing the size of his stomach with his hands.) Kentucky whisky may have all these excellent qualities, but its effect upon ordinary men as seen in the notorious Kentucky feuds, brands the stuff with the devil's mark; and no less must be said of the slops that "round men out."

The above proceeds from the head of our Masonic city government. Chicago was probably never so lodge-ridden in its municipal affairs. Harrison is a Mason of many degrees, and next under him are T. T. Gurney and D. C. Cregier, both "Past Grand Masters," one a reprobate church member, the other simply a "Hiramite" in religion, or, in respect to Christianity, an infidel. This judgment is based on statements of business associates and in the Voice of Masonry. Now, with such men at the head of her affairs, whither is Chicago drifting? In the election which will be over before this comes to our readers the issue, the question that interests our business men is, whether Mike McDonald, the dictator of the Chicago gamblers, shall also be dictator supreme in the next City Council and the Board of County Commissioners. The great daily papers represent this rich villain as having already a controlling voice, and that the whole force of the Mayor's influence is given to secure him more power. This, then, appears to be the outcome of a few years of Masonic rule in Chicago—it has been a preparation for the rule of gamblers and cutthroats; and the step from one to the other is easy to take.

The Morgan Monument.

The above cut forms the frontispiece of the pamphlet containing Hon. Thurlow Weed's letter to the Batavia Convention just issued by the National Christian Association. Price 10c.

The examination in the Star-route bribery cases in a Washington police court compels the comment that "there has either been some very desperate swearing in the case, or the government has rascally agents in its employ." A government detective swore that he had obtained a great deal of information which he had given Dorsey "because he was his friend" and had not informed the government. Mr. Wells, government counsel in these cases, reports upon the affidavits he has taken, that these attempts at bribery were not undertaken with the knowledge of, or in the interest of the prosecution, but were "a deliberate and carefully prepared conspiracy against the administration of justice." Dickson, the foreman of the jury, who first started the bribery scare in Judge Wylie's court, held highly improper conversations with an alleged briber, but he had no proof that bribery was made or attempted, only that somebody wanted to know whether the jury could be bought. He, however, exaggerated this into a bribery scare, and supported it by his oath, just at the time when court and jury could be most influenced in favor of the thieves. The further the light of day penetrates this mass of official corruption the more do the secret tricks of the lodge unfold themselves. If the government will appoint an investigation of the Washington lodges we believe the whole plot would be laid bare.

The Friends of Rush and Henry counties, Ind., will be deeply interested in the letters addressed to them in this number of the Cynosure and the next. Will not some of their number in Carthage and Spiceland see that these letters are well circulated?

Masonry and Babylon.

Hislop, in his work "Two Babylons," tells us that "the Chaldean mysteries can be traced up to the time of Semiramis, who lived only a few centuries after the flood, and who is known to have impressed upon them the image of her own depraved and polluted mind." He assures us also (p. 36, note) that "the mysteries of Isis" were but "a branch" of the Chaldean, and (p. 13) that "in character," and "in all essential respects," the mysteries of all the Pagan nations were the same. Of that character, of the design of those mysteries, and of the instrumentality by which that design was to be accomplished, he says (p. 7, 8) "The grand, distinguishing feature of the Babylonian system, was the Chaldean mysteries. Their primary objectwas to introduce, by little and little, under the seal of secrecy and the sanction of an oath, what it would not have been safe, all at once, and openly, to propound."

He says their ultimate object was, "to bind all mankind in blind and absolute submission to a hierarchy, entirely dependent on the sovereigns of Babylon. It was therefore a matter a vital necessity, if idolatry was to be brought in, and especially such foul idolatry as that of the Babylonian system, that it should be done stealthily and in secret." Otherwise, "though it were done by the hand of power," its hideousness would have disgusted and alarmed the uncorrupted among mankind, and provoked not only disapproval, but determined and even violent effort to put it down, and so have defeated the very object for which that "power" was used (p. 8, 11).

Thus, the grand instrumentality by which the mysteries were to operate, and did operate upon the minds, and even the destinies of mankind, was the introduction and propagation of the great Babylonian system of paganism, which was inaugurated chiefly by that "paragon of unbridled lust and licentiousness," the Babylonian queen, Semiramis, the wife of Nimrod, or Ninus, the founder of Nineveh and the first king of Babylon.

This was several centuries before even a word of the sacred oracles had been written, yet the great truths of the evangelical faith were, even then, well-known and acknowledged by the mass of mankind—particulars even, concerning Christ, his birth, his character as a Saviour, Mediator, Priest and King, his atonement, including his death, resurrection and ascension; man's character and condition as a sinner, condemned, lost, wholly destitute of that holiness without which no man can see the Lord, and who, therefore, "must be born again—in short, the whole system of truth as it is now revealed in the written Word. This, no doubt, was the result of the preaching of "holy men of God, who spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." Of those men, the Scriptures tell us of "Noah, a preacher of righteousness;" of "Melchisedec, a priest of the Most High God;" of Abraham also, and Lot, both just men and faithful witnesses for God.

Such universal knowledge of "the things of the kingdom" must be certain evidence, that, besides those "holy men" there were many competent and faithful embassadors for Christ, men who taught the people knowledge and the fear of God. This accounts too, for that strange medly of incongruities and even antagonisms which ran through and through the whole Babylonian, pagan system. The leaders in that great apostacy from the true faith, and their successors, admitted those great truths, and, in their mysteries incorporated them, in a distorted and perverted form, as part and parcel of their pagan abominations. These facts will hold a conspicuous place in the history of the "mysteries we are now considering.

We will now turn again to Semiramis. She was called by many other names, both in Babylon and other nations, where, after her death, she was deified and worshiped—Astarte, or Ashtoreth (in the Bible, Ashtaroth), Rhea, Ops, Cybele, Venus, and many others. The last four of these, were names by which she was worshiped in pagan Rome and in many parts of the Roman Empire. In Egypt she was called Isis. By this name she was also worshiped in Greece and Rome. She was the Diana of Ephesus, and the Aphrodite of Greece. In all these and other nations, almost every attribute by which absolute divinity could be described, was ascribed to her.

The other great feature in the Babylonian system, thus clandestinely propagated by the mysteries, was her assumption that the birth of her illegitimate son, whom she called Tammuz, one of the many names of her husband—was miraculous, and that, therefore, he was the son of God, the long and oft promised Messiah! (p. 113). This was but the logical outcome of the claim set up by or for her, that she was the "Bride of the Supreme Father," "The Mother of the gods and the Being who was to bruise the serpent's head!" (p. 128, 131-2).

During the lifetime of the great harlot queen and her son, none dared openly to espouse or even defend, any of her blasphemous assumptions, either for herself or him. All advocacy of them was sedulously confined within the sacred precincts of the mysteries. But after their death, when nearly all the adult males in Babylon had been initiated in the mysteries, and time had somewhat obscured the history of the great "mother of abominations," her son's birth was boldly declared to be miraculous. (p. 123). Both mother and son were now worshiped with an enthusiasm that was incredible, and their images were everywhere set up and adored. (p. 112.)

Here we find the origin, the very beginning of the worship of the "Virgin Mother and Son," in the Roman church. The titles and attributes by which Rhea and Nin (Ninus), the Babylonian "Goddess-mother and Son" were worshiped, in Babylon, are precisely those now bestowed upon Mary and her Son by the Roman church! The "Madonna" and Son of that church, then, is not Mary and Jesus, but the old Babylonian "Madonna" Astarte, and her son Tammuz, the false Messiah of Babylon and the ancient pagan nations. (p. 122, 135, 433, 435).

The Son, thus worshiped, was looked upon as invested (in the mysteries) with all the attributes and called by almost all the names of the promised Messiah. In Babylon he was worshiped as "God the Son, as "Mediator," and as "Lord of the Covenant." Among "the nations," as Egypt, Greece, Rome, India, Japan and many others, he was worshiped as the predestined heir of all things, as King of kings and Lord of lords, "the Sin Bearer," the "Great Victim Man," "the Saviour of men." Many other kindred titles were also bestowed upon him. In India, Thibet and Japan, he is thus worshiped to this day. (p. 113-14-17-18-19.

IDOLATRY OF THE "MYSTERIES."

"It was an essential principle of the Babylonian system, that the sun, or Baal, as he was called, was the one only God. When therefore Tammuz was worshiped as God incarnate, that implied that he was an incarnation of the sun. (p. 156). Devil worship, also serpent worship and the worship of images, are traced to the same vile fountain and source,—the Chaldean mysteries. (pp. 159, 370, 112). Thus, by her vile queen, and through the agency of the mysteries, which she had a chief hand in forming, Babylon became the mother of all the paganism which has since overspread and cursed the world. There is not a spot upon God's green earth where their blighting, withering influence has not been felt. However rude or even barbarous the paganism of any people or nation, the principal agent in the propagation and working of that paganism, is some secret organization, of the stamp, more or less, of the ancient mysteries, around which hangs a pall of mystery dark and impenetrable!

The Egyptian, Grecian, and Roman mysteries took up the same system, as they were all "essentially the same," and all, essentially, branches of the Chaldean, (p. 36, note) each adopting its own separate and particular, yet substantially the same, names for the Babylonian divinities, maintaining in every case the same Babylonian paganism. Says Hislop (p. 365) "It can be proved that the idolatry of the whole earth is one; that the great gods of every country and clime, are called by Babylonian names!"

The above facts illustrate and confirm that Divine verdict, by the ancient prophet (Jer. 51: 7): "Babylon hath been a golden cup in the Lord's hand, which made all the earth drunken. The nations have drunk of her wine, therefore the nations are mad!"

No doubt it was the pagan mysteries that suggested that fearfully significant saying of the Master, "Men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil." (John 3:19.)

No words could declare more plainly or more explicitly, that the secrecy which always shrouds "the Mystic Tie," either ancient or modern, openly pagan, or professedly Christian, is a sure declaration, by those interested therein, that "their deeds are evil!"

MASONRY.

Says Hislop (p. 69), "It is admitted that the secret system of Freemasonry was originally founded on the mysteries of the Egyptian Isis." This, in connection with that other fact, that those Egyptian mysteries were but a branch of the Chaldean, that noisome fountain of all the abominations of the earth, identifies Masonry as one of that fountain's polluted streams! From the very nature of the case, therefore, Masonry must derive its inspiration, and its character as well, from that same abominable source!

We have Divine authority for saying that "no fountain can send forth, from the same place, sweet water and bitter." (Jas. 3:11.) And again, "Either make the tree good and his fruit good, or else make the tree corrupt and his fruit corrupt." (Matt. 12:33). This rule, made by God himself, admits of no exception, no evasion, no compromise. It shows that any system, built upon a corrupt foundation, must be itself corrupt; and therefore, no system, founded upon pagan principles, and for the propagation and extension of paganism, can at the same time, that is, from itself, send forth institutions or principles of any other character than its own. As therefore "Masonry was founded upon the mysteries of the Egyptian Isis," its true character, despite its pretended affiliations with Christianity, must be, in every essential feature of it, the same as that of those mysteries—anti-Christian, simply and only pagan! This, of course, places Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship, and the whole fraternity of secret, oath-bound "lodgery" under the ban of the severest Divine condemnation.

SENEX.

Report on Secret Societies.

To the United Presbyterian Synod of Iowa.

BY REV. WM. JOHNSTON.

Secret oath-bound societies are contrary to the profession of the United Presbyterian church, as they are declared in our Testimony to be contrary to the Word of God. The law of the church on this subject has been re-affirmed more than once by her General Assembly, and at times under considerable pressure, she has steadfastly refused to lower her Testimony. At the last meeting of the Synod, our trumpet gave no uncertain sound. The attention of our people was called to the aggressive movement of secret orders, the Synod declared its attachment to the position of our standards on this subject, and exhorted ministers and elders and people to testify against and expose the evils of said associations by word and by deed.

In view of these things, it is certainly not necessary that I argue the unscriptural and Christless character of these associations, their abuse of the oath, and their use of oaths that might chill the blood of a savage, or the unholy and unlawful associations into which they tend to bring the disciples of the Lord Jesus. By the ministers and people in our church these things are generally known and admitted, and I presume no one would wish to re-open the discussion of our position as a church. The question of the hour, as I apprehend it, is rather what should be the attitude of the church toward these man-made institutions, with their barbarous oaths or unlawful vows, their false pretentions and their Christless worship; and how shall the church most effectively counteract their influence.

Now the position of our church on this question is of long standing. It is commensurate with her existence. The two churches which twenty-four years ago flowed together and formed the United Presbyterian church, had alike unfurled the banner of opposition to secret societies. They stood by their colors when there were few to stand by their side. Many of their sons, who were valiant for the truth, longed for the time when other churches would come to their help against the growing power and the corrupting influence of secrecy. As years rolled by ever and anon an angel has been troubling the waters, which has resulted in giving health to some poor soul, and light to some who were truly seeking light. The United Presbyterian church has largely increased in numbers and in capabilities for effective work. Some other branches of the church have come prominently to the front, and are bending their energies to counteract the influence of the lodge, while some in almost all the churches have become convinced that secret orders are antagonistic to pure Christianity and are praying for their overthrow. A vast amount of information has been disseminated during these years. The principles of the leading secret orders have been thoroughly discussed, and their anti-Christian and anti-republican character made manifest. The things that are done of them in secret, have been dragged to the light, and published to the world. The old hush cry, "You don't know anything about secret societies," can no longer be raised, and the expositions of Masonry and Odd-fellowship can no longer be pronounced a farce. If a farce they be, the farce is in the original, the travesty of things sacred and holy, and not in the expositions. A National Christian Association has been organized with eighteen subordinate State associations, and local associations, running through all parts of the country. The publishing house of the National Association is sending out streams of anti-secret literature, and agents supported by the Association are carrying to all parts of the country a gospel uncorrupted by the traditions of the lodge. Still it must be confessed that the number who take an open stand against these orders are few in comparison with the multitudes who are either allured by their gorgeous display, or in dread of their power to crush an antagonist, or who, like Gallio of old, care for none of these things. Furthermore, we may rest assured that the lodges of the country will not surrender their charters at the bidding of a few, whom they regard as cranks, and fanatics. If they go down, it will be before a tide of public sentiment, such as promises to crush out the blasting influence of the brewery and the still. That tide of public sentiment will only be put in motion by earnest agitation, and there is need for all who are in sympathy with the anti-secret reform to come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. The lodge is strongly intrenched in the ignorance of some, in the selfishness of others, in the ambition of others and in the irreligion of others; and worst of all has encouragement and moral support from some of the churches and many ministers of the gospel. Now what shall we do? What is our duty as a church? Some say just let it alone. But it won't let us alone. It will oppose us so long as we keep that stripe on our banner. If no other way, it would worm itself into our congregations; it would exalt its rites to a level with our God-appointed forms of worship. It would eat out the spirituality of some of our members. We can't let it alone without striking our colors, and making a surrender. But do you say, Let it alone and it will die of itself? I answer I don't believe it is one of the things that will die that way. There are some things so inherently silly that they will eventually fall for want of something to give them coherency. But the lodge is not of that nature. There is silliness in it, it is true; but there is much more. There is a glamour in its heraldry as fascinating to many as dress parade to the small boy. There is evil in it; the spirit of anti-Christ is there. Now sin is self-perpetuating. Darkness will never scatter by any inherent law or principle. Light must come to dispel it. Satan does not propose to cast out Satan. His kingdom will stand forever if a stronger power is not brought in antagonism to it. And so it seems to me, the lodge is likely to go down, only before a rising tide of enlightened Christian public sentiment.

The United Presbyterian church then, as one of the respectable and influential bodies which testify against secrecy, has a mission to fulfill in creating this public sentiment and swelling the tide of active opposition. A silent testimony will accomplish but little; there must be consistent action to make our testimony effective.

Allow me then to call attention to a few things, which seem to me to be demanded of us, by virtue of our position as a church:

1. Faithfulness to our standards in the admission of members. It is charged that members of secret orders are to be found in some congregations of the United Presbyterian church. We hope there are none within the bounds of the Synod of Iowa. We would incline to think that this Synod stands solid on this question. And surely the present is no time to lower our colors. The tide is rising. The forces are mustering for the coming conflict. Out of Ephraim, Benjamin, Zebulum, from different tribes of Israel they gather under the banner of the cross to oppose the powers of anti-Christ and the unfruitful works of darkness. Even some, who like Reuben abode for a time among the sheepfolds to hear the bleating of the flocks have at length heard the trumpet call of Messiah the Prince and are girding on their armor. It is no time then for us to waver. All the indications of God's providence seem to me to call upon us to be loyal to our principles.

2. Let our pulpits proclaim the truth of God in all its bearings on this subject. We would be sorry to see our ministers make their pulpits a platform for dealing in low billingsgate and coarse vituperation. We have no sympathy with the cry of "cut throats" and "bowel burners" which seems to be the martial shout of some who have espoused the anti-secret cause. But we deprecate moral cowardice as well. We would have our ministers proclaim the truth in love in opposition to this, in common with every other evil with which we come in contact. If I may be allowed to express an opinion, it would be, that as ministers we do not give that prominence to this principle of our profession, in our public ministrations to which it is entitled. Some perhaps make an occasional reference to it, some perhaps have preached for several years and never named the subject from the pulpit, while only the few have made it the subject of thorough discussion. Prohibition would never have carried in Iowa under such treatment as this. The whiskey and the beer power would have held the State beneath their iron heel and continued to spread their blasting influence without let or hindrance. Now without riding a hobby, the pulpit may frequently bring the truth of the Gospel to bear against the evils of the lodge, and thus enable our people to give a satisfactory reason of the faith that is in them.

3. We should contribute our influence as we can in the circulation of anti-secret literature. We all recognize the press as wielding a tremendous power, and that power can no longer be monopolized in the interests of secrecy. Books are published in opposition to the lodge that may be put into the houses of our people at much cheaper rates than those which are generally circulated by the peripatetic agent. Tracts are published which if put into our Sabbath-schools may give the right bent to the minds of the young and save them from being bound in the coils of secrecy; and papers also are published in the interests of the anti-secret reform which are worthy of a place in the Christian home. On ministers and elders largely devolves the duty of making these agencies effective in our congregations and communities.

4. There is a National Association and a State Association that have claims upon our sympathies and our active co-operation. We recognize the church, indeed, as the great human agency God has ordained to reform the world, and know that God will not give his glory to another. But in the present divided state of the church these associations afford an opportunity for Christians of like feelings and sympathies on any given subject uniting together and presenting a solid front against what may be regarded as a common foe. However some men may fly in eccentric orbits, these associations as a body do not propose to rob the church of the glory God would put upon her. It is the spirit of the church breathing in them and through them that clothes them with moral power and makes them mighty through God in pulling down strongholds. Let us recognize this truth, and they will neither dishonor God, nor make us less loyal to the church. But some say, I don't like the spirit of some of these conventions, nor the animus of some who are prominent in them. Very well, let us go in and breathe a little more United Presbyterianism into them and perhaps they will come more to your likings. They will not utterly resist assimilation. They will give United Presbyterians as prominent a position and as candid a hearing as they will give to others. They will be glad of your company and your co-operation. They will enjoy your counsels and your prayers. In their devotional meetings they will sing your psalms with a gusto, as they did at the National Convention at Galesburg last winter, if you are as familiar with your Psalter, as some others are with their hymns, and if you have enough of music in your soul to start the tune. They are evidently going to do something, and if they are not just as good as some would like them to be, let them go in and help make them better. True, our church had a higher representation than any other in the National Convention at Galesburg, also in the State Convention lately held in Winterset. Yet the attendance at the State Convention has been largely local and it has not yet received that general attention from the people of our church, to which it is justly entitled. Our position as a church demands of us active, effective work. Let us not be deceived by the cry that is sometimes raised, that by agitation you only make Masons and Oddfellows. There is no doubt but agitation has made members of some persons, but it has unmade others, and prevented a still larger number from being ensnared by these false systems and led away after these false lights. If the anti-secret principle is right, agitation must be a help rather than a hindrance. No reform ever yet has been carried forward without agitation, nor ever can be. If we deprecate agitation, we may as well take in our bunting, and bid secrecy hold the earth beneath the sweep of her dragon wing. But let us rather awake to a higher sense of duty, and make our influence more widely felt against a system that refuses the crown to our Divine Redeemer.

REFORM STORY.

Holden with Cords.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "LITTLE PEOPLE," "A SUNNY LIFE," ETC.

Chapter XXVI—Freemasonry vs. Justice.

Mark's testimony; in spite of the efforts made by the counsel on the other side to shake it, was full, clear, and convincing. Legal cunning with all its artifices was no match for simple truth. And when as the last weapon in a closing fight he sneeringly asked if all the information Mark had been detailing was communicated to him Masonically, the venomed point of the inquiry which was plainly to prejudice the minds of the jury by holding him up as a foresworn witness revealing secrets he had been solemnly pledged to keep, was so palpably evident that it met with a prompt over-ruling from the court as irrelevant to the case. But he was a wily lawyer; as people said of him, a "deep fellow," and as after developments showed had been given an immense fee by the lodge to clear Morgan's murderers. And in his closing address to the jury he made free use of those weapons of falsehood and inuendo so popular with the institution which had chosen him to defend her from the serious charges of kidnapping and murder.

He cautioned them not to be influenced by the excitement then prevailing;—an excitement he assured them "got up by ambitious demagogues to serve their own political ends." Language that received its proper rebuke from the Judge in his address from the bench. In grave and dignified words he portrayed the aggravated nature of the outrage committed, and then alluded to the spirit of indignation which it had excited in the breast of every patriotic citizen "as a blessed spirit which he hoped would not subside but be accompanied by a ceaseless vigilance and untiring activity until every actor in the conspiracy had been hunted from his hiding place, and received the punishment due to his crime."

Well, it is all over now. Judge, jury and counsel have gone to their final reward. That same judge afterwards Governor of New York, sullied his bright record, and from the Governor's chair bowed to the Masonic power which he had battled with from the bench. As for the lawyer, who Judas-like, betrayed the truth for gold an avenging Nemesis followed in his track. God hath requited him.

"I believe things are in train now for a speedy ferreting out of Morgan's murderers," said Mark, hopefully, as we turned our heads homeward. If so terrible a crime goes unpunished after so many of its details have been laid bare, and so great an excitement has been created it will be something new in the annals of justice.

Could we have foreseen that four long years would drag away while case after case was tried before Masonic grand juries which failed to convict on the clearest evidence; that witnesses would be secreted, bribed, threatened; that even the Chief Executive of the State would be corrupted, and confidential communications exposed to the gaze of the lodge thus thwarting every design to arrest the murderers; that in short the shield of a vast secret irresponsible power would always interpose at the most critical moment between them and the sword of justice; and furthermore, could we have known as lodge after lodge surrendered its charter, and the whole dark system seemed to be in its last death throes, it was only feigning to die, that the popular attention turned to another question it might recuperate its strength, and under a hundred protean disguises secretly and silently seize the places of public trust, muzzle press and pulpit, and cause even the watchmen of Zion to be dumb dogs;—what should we have thought?

what should we have said?

But it was well that we did not foresee the future, that as we rode homeward, urging our horses to a swifter gallop as the shadows of night fell darkling around us, we believed that the end was near, or our hearts might have sunk within us at the seeming hopeless nature of such a struggle with such a foe.

Mark Stedman had escaped for this time the trap laid for his feet, and the only resource for his baffled enemies of the lodge was to plan some other and subtler scheme—if they dared.

But would they dare? We shall see.

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE SWORD OF DAMOCLES.

Among my private papers is one yellow time-stained document which reads as follows:

November 30th, 1826.

BROWNSVILLE LODGE, No. ——

BROTHER LEANDER SEVERNS: — Whereas sundry charges have been preferred against you, of unmasonic conduct in falsely accusing brother members, aiding and abetting the enemies of the order, and otherwise deporting yourself to the general injury of the fraternity, you are hereby summoned to appear at the next regular meeting of Brownsville lodge to answer said charges, and show good and sufficient reason why you should not be expelled for the same. By order of the lodge.

BAXTER STEBBINS,
Secretary of Brownsville Lodge.

I put the summons in my pocket to show to Rachel. It may as well be stated in passing that I had just received a certain wifely reproof, which on looking the matter over seriously with the golden rule for a measure and guide—which same old-fashioned rule by the way is just as admirably adapted to married people as any one else—I came to the conclusion was deserved.

"Leander;" she said, laying down her sewing, and walking up to me with the flush on her cheek decidedly deepening, "I thought there were to be no secrets between us any more. Do you think I would have said a word to keep you back from sharing Mark's danger? Don't you know yet what kind of a woman you have married?"

"A woman as fair as her name-sake and brave as Deborah, and—" but here Rachel put her hand over my mouth and stopped me.

"Don't be silly, Leander. I don't want compliments. I want you to promise when you or Mark are in any danger again not to keep it from me."

"I thought it would save you from worrying, Rachel."

"If that isn't just like a man!" replied Rachel, the laughter coming back into her eyes. "Don't you think all this mystery about Sam Toller's coming worried me any? As soon as I saw your face I felt it all through me that he wasn't here for nothing. You see we women shut up at home grow to have a kind of sixth sense, and it isn't quite so easy keeping things from us as you men seem to imagine. Now don't you ever do so again, Leander." And with a little imperative shake of her finger Rachel went back to her sewing. But her words bore fruit as was evidenced by my showing her the lodge summons, and asking her advice what to do about it.

"Do nothing, of course. Pretty business to suppose they have any control over you, a free man under a free government!" And Rachel's eyes glowed with an indignant fire.

"Well, shall I burn it up?"

"Yes. No; give it to me."

And as Rachel dropped it into her work-box I think there was a subtle sense of triumph in the action. And who can blame her if she did take a certain fine revenge on the institution that had wronged and insulted her womanhood just as it wrongs and insults womanhood everywhere, by consigning its most dreaded weapon to ignominious imprisonment among needle-books, hooks and eyes, and skeins of sewing cotton!

Though not so shining a mark for Masonic obloquy and persecution as though I had been a Mason of higher degree, I did not escape a series of petty insults and vexations from members of the craft, which is not to be wondered at when it is considered that Masonry solemnly swears its devotees to "take vengeance on all traitors." And as this lovely creed had no stronger supporter in Brownsville than Darius Fox, it followed naturally that he should be chief among my persecutors. Like many another man of small moral caliber he loved the lodge for the very things that would make honest-minded men shrink from joining it. The obligation to keep all secrets of a companion, the vows to a negative morality that is absolute license;—all these he rolled as a sweet morsel under his tongue. What wonder then, when he saw the imminent danger that threatened his beloved craft, he was filled with rage and fury.

Ways of annoyance are easy enough to find when all one's powers are set in that direction. Bars were mysteriously let down, giving my cattle the freedom of the neighboring cornfield with the result in a heavy bill for damages; an old debt of my grandfather's, paid long before his death, was hunted up and made the basis for a claim on the estate that could only be settled by submitting to the wrong, or by wearisome and costly litigation. And finally an action for trespass was brought against me for laying a new stone wall a trifle outside of what was alleged to be the true boundary line between my own farm and the one adjoining.

"The hand of Joab is in this thing," said Luke Thatcher, significantly to me. "They say Fox threatens to drive you out of Brownsville."

Joe happened to be standing by and heard him.

"I've got a small account to settle with Joab first," he remarked coolly. "I think of going over to-night to see him about it, and taking Sam with me."

"Wall, I reckon ye've let him go about to the end of his tether," Sam put in with a grin, as he whipped the dust from the knees of his trousers with one hand, and give a satisfied thump to the crown of his hat with the other. "It won't hurt him nor nobody else if ye tie him up a grain closer."

For Sam was once more installed as general factotum in and about the house, the same queer shiftless, good-for-naught, whose shortcomings had so often roused the ire of the much-enduring Miss Loker. He always alluded to my grandfather with a kind of tender, touching reverence.

"I tell ye the Captain was a Christian. Some folks never care how they treat a hired man, but yer grand'ther now was one of the kind that allus wanted his men to hev as good victuals and drink as he had himself. And when I think about him I like to remember that verse in Revelations about their all sitting down together to the Marriage Supper up above. He'll hev good fare there, no mistake."

O, it is a blessed thing when the poor and lowly keep our memories green after the places that knew us once know us no more forever; when their kindly thoughts follow us like attending angels as we pass into the eternal mysteries of the life beyond.

"If the churches would do their duty there would be no need of secret societies." This is a pet assertion of secret society men. Others have taken up the remark, assumed its truthfulness, repeated it and thus offered an apology for these societies. Let us see what the remark implies: (1) It implies that the churches have ceased to fulfill their mission, that they have become neglectful of duty and good men have been compelled (reluctantly, of course) to resort to other institutions. (2) It implies that Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship are supplying the lack of the churches, that there is a necessity for their existence, that therefore men are justifiable in neglecting the churches and patronizing the lodges. What is the effect of such talk? (1) It brings reproach upon the church. It teaches young men that the churches have ceased to do their duty and therefore have no claim upon them. (2) It teaches that the lodges are doing the most practical good in the community and therefore it is a religious duty to support them. If the remark is true let us abandon our churches and go where we can do the most good. But the remark is false, misleading and deceptive.

NEW ENGLAND.

THE NEW ENGLAND BOARD of the National Christian Association has it headquarters at No. 8 Portland St., Worcester, Mass. A full supply of books and tracts constantly on hand. Orders promptly filled. Correspondence solicited. E. D. BAILEY, N. E. Sec.

At the late Conference of churches held in Paxton the divorce question was ably discussed and awakened much interest. Now why not discuss the secret society question at the next session? Such a discussion, properly conducted, could not fail to produce good results. Will not the programme committee make provision for a paper on the subject at the next meeting?

There was never more interest in the discussion of secret societies. The erection of the Morgan Monument, the growth of the American party, the multiplying of the number of agents at work, the scattering of tracts and the circulation of reform papers are all awakening a deep interest in the public mind and causing unusual activity.

It is a very significant fact that the Masonic lodge, while making every possible endeavor to parry the blows of Anti-masons, has scarcely in fifteen years, made the semblance of an answer to our arguments. They have called the army of seceders "perjured villains," they have sworn at our editors, rotten-egged our lecturers, cursed the monument, insulted our canvassers, threatened the ministers and closed the churches; they have boasted of the great, who patronize them, of their antiquity and strength; they have spun five yarns about charity, morality and Masonic science; but the indictment drawn against the lodge is in every particular sustained and wholly unanswered.

A young M. E. minister, who has become interested in this movement, recently inquired what we were aiming to accomplish. What is the practical end to be reached? First, we wish to inform the people of the true character of the secret orders. There is a popular ignorance on this subject which can only be accounted for by remembering that the lodges have all along forbidden a public discussion of their profession and claims. We wish the people to know that secret orders are by their nature pagan in religion, schismatic in society, partial in the business of the country, dangerous in politics and therefore to be condemned by all good citizens. Second, we wish to make it as disreputable for a man to be a church member and a Mason, as to be a church member and a Mormon or a Mahommedan. We wish to make it as unorthodox for a man to be a minister of the Gospel and a Mason, as to be a minister and a Catholic or Buddhist. This will be a legitimate conclusion when the people understand the true character of these orders. Third, for the safety of our government we wish to pass laws forbidding the existence of secret oath-bound societies. They are a dangerous element in the country and unless suppressed will ruin our government.

What a practical theme it would be for a minister to demonstrate to his congregation that in the matter of benevolence the churches far outstrip the most benevolent of the so-called benevolent orders. Why do not the ministers see that when the lodges boast superiority to the churches they are producing more infidelity than all the infidel lecturers combined. Let a man take the figures of church benevolence and compare them with the treasurer's reports of these secret orders and see how far the latter fall behind the former. It is a shame for the ministers supinely to submit to the false claims of secret orders and leave the charges against the churches unanswered. To clear up this one point alone in the presence of an audience on Sunday morning would save many a young man from being beguiled away from the church into the lodge.

Let the comparison of lodge benevolence and church benevolence proceed as follows: The items of church benevolence are, church buildings, hospitals, colleges, academies, maintaining preaching, Sunday-school expenses, caring for the poor of the church, caring for the poor outside of the church, for foreign missions, for frontier missions, for southern missions, endowments of colleges, support of hospitals, homes for old women, for orphans, etc., etc. The items of Masonic and Odd-fellowship benevolence are, building lodges, for the accommodation of their own members only, buying regalia for foolish displays, expenses of banquets and dances, paying limited amounts to sick members whose dues to the lodge are paid—and here it ends. If we consider the single item of caring for its own members the church can make a better showing than the lodge, while this is positively the smallest item of the benevolence of the churches. In all its other vast benevolent enterprises, the lodge has nothing whatever to compare with it. It is a shame for the churches to rest under this perpetual charge, when the publication of a few figures would show the absolute absurdity of this Masonic boast.

"No institution was ever raised on a better principle or more solid foundation; nor were ever more excellent rules and useful maxims laid down than are inculcated in the several Masonic lectures." (The True Masonic chart, p. 70.) Masonic books abound in such panegyric as this. Not even the church of Christ is excepted, nor his doctrines—Freemasonry excels them both. Suppose a young man reads books containing such statements, and suppose (as is the case with the book from which we quote) the names of distinguished men are referred to in endorsement of the claim, what is going to be the effect on his mind? When he chooses the institution to which he wishes to ally himself it is likely to be the lodge instead of the church.

A Baptist and a Congregational pastor have each contributed towards our funds for supporting colporteurs in the reform. They thus show an appreciation of the work beyond that of most ministers. Other ministers wish well to the reform, but they neither advocate it in their churches, nor support it with their means. We hope and believe that they will soon take a more favorable attitude. Meanwhile we must continue to scatter tracts, secure subscriptions for the paper, furnish means for the expenses of the agents and otherwise show our faith by our works.

Would it seem proper for a minister of the Gospel to divide a funeral service with a Mohammedan priest? Snppose the family of the deceased desired a Chinese funeral ceremony would it be proper to mix a Christian burial service with it? If not, what more propriety would there be in mixing a Masonic and Christian service? The former ceremony excludes Christ and is dishonorable to him. Why should Christian ministers submit to such indignity? The time will come when ministers will scorn to do so. They will insist that those who love paganism shall be buried with its rites and those who wish Christian burial shall be entitled to it.

Odd-fellowship Benevolence.

The Odd-fellows plume themselves much on the advantages to be obtained by members in being watched with in sickness, paid a stipend when disabled for work, and buried at the expense of the order when dead (not before). These three points constitute the staple inducement to join them. To read their arguments on these points one would conclude that the majority of the world sicken and die without having watchers at their bedside or friends to soothe them, that they go unburied because too poor to buy a coffin or hire a grave digger and that neighbors are generally too hard-hearted to get dinner for the widow and children when they return from the grave. The number of unburied corpses of men who were not Odd-fellows is not shown by the census bureau, but it is presumed to be very large. The thousands of poor benighted human beings who die for want of somebody to watch with them and give them medicine, all because they were not Odd-fellows, is simply alarming. The earth is being rapidly depopulated by this one pest alone. While the number of children who have wasted away to skin and bones for want of the $50 promised to widows on the death of their Odd-fellow husbands is beyond all computation.

And the worst of all is, this untold indescribable suffering is all unnecessary. If every husband would only blindfold himself, put a chain about his neck, kneel over a human skeleton in a mahogany coffin, learn to twist his fingers and arms into peculiar shapes, play Jonathan and David, pay the Odd-fellows $40 for it, keep up their annual dues regularly, wear a collar and be a fool generally, they would have the pleasure of a weekly call from a tobacco-chewing "Noble Grand," they could have a few dollars a week while sick (if they do not take too long a time to die in) and their widow might have a small sum of money, if no flaw should be found in the title.

The strange thing is that the human race got along so many years without the Odd-fellows. It is a wonder the race had not become extinct before. If a young man joins the Odd-fellows, pays his initiation fee, keeps up his dues and never tells what a fool they made of him, when he is old and has paid hundreds of dollars into the order he may possibly receive back one-third as much as he has paid. The chances are, however, that he will receive back a much less ratio. The case with which men may be beguiled into such foolish investments of time and money is simply wonderful.

A Year's Experience in Utah.

One of the teachers of the New West Educational Commission is giving in the New England churches an interesting account of the planting of Christian schools among the Mormons. The recital of her own work is thrilling in the extreme, and it is inspiring to see how the grace of God can lift a timid woman, alone and unprotected, into a state of faith and courage that is truly sublime. Though she trembled inwardly at the obstacles, persecution and trials she encountered, yet she set herself like an adamant to maintain her position, relying only upon God for help. And she triumphed. Her school was a success and the problem of Mormonism helped to a solution.

Some of her incidents were amusing, others pathetic. A prominent man in town was a Mormon bishop who had five wives with sixteen children apiece. A bright young grand-daughter was among the first to enroll her name as a pupil. The bishop met her soon after and asked her, "Are you going to that Gentile school?"

"Yes," was the answer.

"Well, you leave that or I'll disinherit you."

"Well, grandpa," she replied, "you've got a hundred and sixty-seven grand-children, and I'd rather have an education than my share of the old adobe house."

There was a lad of sixteen who was greatly interested in the school and did chores for the teacher. To reward him she would sing one of the Gospel hymns. At one time it was "Who's on the Lord's side?" When she finished, she turned and said, "N., are you on the Lord's side?" He was confused but interested, and she proceeded to instruct him, urging him to give himself to the Lord. He went away promising to decide soon. The next Sunday morning the young people gathered to sing as usual, and the same hymn was called for. She looked at the boy to see if he had thought of his promise. He was watching her intently and nodded his head. She wondered if he meant it, and seeing the look in her face he smiled and nodded again. At the close he lingered till all were gone, then he said, "I believe I'm on the Lord's side, only it seems like bragging to say anything about it."

"Why," said the teacher, "if you and I were the children of the same father and way off here together wouldn't we like to talk to each other about him?"

He burst out with a laugh, "Why that sounds as though I were your little brother."

Then she explained to him that those who love our Heavenly Father are his children and are brothers and sisters. Through the months after that she watched his life and it showed an appreciation of what it meant to be a child of God. The teacher came East and two letters had came bearing the same piece of news, one from his mother, the other from the teacher who took her place. It was this: "N. is dead. He died of typhoid fever. He left a message for you, but he seemed to be delirious, for we didn't know what he meant by all he said. The message was, 'Tell Miss ——— good-bye. Tell her I'm so glad she came here.' Then after awhile he said, 'Tell her I'm on the Lord's side and I'm her little brother.'"

The teacher knew well the meaning of the message and it glorified that long year of toil and pain and thrilled her heart with a joy she never felt before. Does it not give us all a glad key note for future work? How many more such brothers and sisters might be won to the Lord's side had we the courage and devotion to win them?

Mr. Bishop's "Anti-Masonry."

Robert E. Bishop was nominated for Governor of Massachusetts by the Republican party, after a heated campaign in which Mr. Cross, a Congressman and (we believe) a Mason, was his competitor. The Democrats again nominated Ben. Butler, a 33° Mason, who has several times before been nominated against Gov. Long, himself a Mason. Heretofore Butler has stood no chance for election, but immediately after the nomination of Mr. Bishop word went forth that he was an Anti-mason and his defeat was quite generally predicted. The Republican leaders, most of whom are Masons, manifested no enthusiasm over Mr. Bishop, but talked sadly over his probable defeat. The Boston Journal and other papers published the fact that Mr. Bishop was an orthodox Christian and an Anti-mason and the announcement had a very depressing effect on the political "blowers." Things have continued after this manner till within ten days of election, when Mr. Bishop succumbed to political pressure and published the following card under the title, "Mr. Bishop's Anti-masonry," with an explanatory paragraph by the Worcester Gazette editor:

"Among the campaign thunder which has been circulated as a part of the still-hunt against Hon. R. R. Bishop's candidature for Governor is a story that he is a rabid Anti-mason, a supporter of the anti-secret society movement, a contributor to the Morgan monument fund, etc. This story has been industriously circulated among secret society men, and has had some effect. It has also found its way into print, to a limited extent. What of truth there is in the story appears by the following letter by Mr. Bishop to a personal friend in this city, under date of Oct. 23, '82.

"My Dear Sir,—Soon after the nomination I heard of an absurd story going round with reference to myself, and have heard the same eight or ten times since from various sources, and now I hear that it has reached you.

"It is all pure invention from beginning to end. There is absolutely nothing in it. The story is, as it has been reported to me, that I belong to an anti-secret-society league, that I have given money to it, and have refused to attend Masonic celebrations on principle. The fact is that I never contributed one cent towards any such society; I never refused to attend a Masonic celebration or any other secret society celebration, and have attended plenty of them.

"The whole story is an absolute falsehood, without a particle of foundation for it in any manner whatever.

"Yours very truly,

"Robert R. Bishop."

It will be noticed that Mr. Bishop does not claim to be a member of any secret order and this fact confirms us in the belief that he is at heart an Anti-mason, as he is also said to be a consistent Christian. But like Peter of old, who feared arrest, Mr. Bishop is unwilling to become a political martyr and he therefore denies his principles. Just as Sumner found in Washington the Masonic power predominant; just as poor Garfield discovered that he could not rise till he had bowed to the Masonic Dagon, so Mr. Bishop finds the lodge hedging his way to that political preferment which he so nobly earned in his manly course in the legislature last winter and he is now compelled to make obeisance to the Secret Empire, which governs the commonwealth or sink into his political grave.

Thurlow Weed told us at Batavia that the Anti-masons did not "go into politics" in 1830 till the Masons defeated a popular candidate, even after he had been endorsed by both political parties, and actually elected a Mason to the office by a secret conspiracy without a public nomination. For similar reasons the American party now is compelled to take the field against a secret conspiracy which governs all our elections and for the most part dictates our nominations.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Among the Ruins of Romanism.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—To show you the superstition which exists in the minds of Roman Catholics I will make a statement of facts which transpired in a city in New Jersey, nearly three years ago. A physician showed me a small scrap of paper and asked me what it was. I told him it was the first fourteen verses of the first chapter of St. John in Latin.

Laughing at the ridiculous imposition of Rome, he said, "A lady handed that to me, asking me what it was; and told me a young lady, a member of the Roman Catholic church, had mislaid it, and she was anxious to have some one tell her what it was, for the priest had told this unwary female she must wear it constantly, and if she should at any time lose it some great calamity might befall her; and she was anxious to return it to the place where it had been mislaid, to avoid any extended expectation of woe on the part of the owner."

We may think, Mr. Editor, of the African savages wearing ornaments made of some part of an animal or bird, which they had killed, that they might in the future be more successful in hunting, and by being thus reminded of their former bravery and accomplishments they truly might be stimulated to more courage and activity. But when a person of intelligence advocates the wearing of a paper, on one side of which is something printed, and the person wearing it not knowing whether it is the Sioux or the Telegu language, that the said person might be spiritually benefitted thereby, there is a gross deception.

It might be said that this wearing of paper on which is printed an unknown language, is according to one of the rules of the Romish church. But that does not change the case one particle; it is of human origin. And this final cause is the guilty party. Again, if this were the commencement of the imperfections of Roman theology, where would be the end? "Teaching for doctrines, the commandments of men."

C. W. HIGGINS.

A U. P. Preacher's Dilemma.

ADDRESSED TO THE "CHRISTIAN INSTRUCTOR."

GALT, ONT.

Can you instruct a preacher of your church how he can live by the altar, and not wander from the fold of the U. P. church? During the last six months the writer of this got six dollars from a wealthy congregation for preaching one-half day in their pastor's absence. But they mean to secure the patronage of the lodge. He did not show much favor for that institution of the "god of this world." So they would rather be vacant than offend Baalites.

A preacher of another denomination asked the writer to be his substitute for one day. Believing that it is his duty to "preach the Gospel to every creature," he did so. Was he right? The writer does not believe in the logic of Dr. Harper and the extreme anti-organists. They prove too much by their logic against us:

1. "All that was Jewish passed away at the death of Christ;" say they.

2. But the moral law, the Sabbath, the judicial law of Moses, the forbidding of marriage to your deceased wife's sister, or to your deceased husband's brother, the psalms of David, instruments of music in the worship of God, dancing to the praise of God, supporting the ministry of the church by the voluntary tithing of the people, the death penalty for murder, etc., etc., were all Jewish, and passed away at the death of Christ.

3. Therefore it is sinful to use any of the above sinful practices in the New Testament church.

Besides, see page 30th of the Doctor's "Counter-blast to the Organ." He will not, if I am not greatly mistaken, have any of his "sons of the prophets" use instruments in the worship of God. Yet they may get others to carry them before them, get extraordinary illapses of the spirit through them, use them only offering the sacrifices that remain in the Christian church-offerings of praise at the sacrifice of thank-offering, hang the instrument up in the church or on the willows, etc. Is this the way he would have them act extraordinary "illapses" of the spirit? Perhaps. If so, why not worship them? Why not praise God by proxy? Why not get the Philistines to give us music, since they hold the "hill of God," and give us place. But since I do not believe in such logic I must starve, or go somewhere else, amid the jeers of mockers.

It is lawful for me to use instruments in the worship of God, if able to use them, if not able, it is not expedient. Therefore let me preach the Gospel to every creature. If Christians can use the organ—good. If they have none—better. If they praise God with the heart, and understanding, with the voice only and the help of the Spirit—best. Let this be my place.

If there is any church vacant, which shall not be ashamed to have its pastor tell the lodge men who may come in to spy out our liberty in Christ Jesus, of their sin, my humble services are at their command. But no U. P. church that has opened its doors wide for the lodge and that has made up its mind that Rob. Morris and not Jesus Christ shall reign there, need apply.

JAMES DONALDSON.

How Anti-Slavery Overcame.

GILROY, Santa Clara Co., Cal., Oct. 2, 1882.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—In a conversation with a person here, I said I believed every secret society was wrong. The reply was: "How can you help it? What are you going to do about it?"

I did not answer the questions then, but if I were to answer the questions I would say, "I will tell you what I am going to do about it. I am going to do just as I did in anti-slavery times when I took up against that sum of all villainies, negro slavery. I talked against it; I read against it; I wrote against it; I prayed against it without ceasing; and every time I had an opportunity I voted against it. What can any of us do more? We know that we are battling for the right on the side where God always is, and by his help we must succeed; and may the Lord hasten the day.

In anti-slavery times the Whig party and Democratic party sold themselves to the slave power. The Whig party died and the Democratic party got whipped. The Democratic and Republican parties here, in not putting a temperance plank in their platforms have sold themselves to the whisky power, and must die. So may it be. Yours respectfully,

ROBERT W. CHAPMAN.

Planting Anti-masonry in Dakota.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—With two sons and a son-in-law and some twenty others, I started for Dakota, Oct. 2d, to see the country and take some of the land that Uncle Sam offers to the boys. Arriving at Highmore, on the C. N. W. R. R., fifty-seven miles east of Pierre, at 5 P. M., we found a few buildings, consisting of a hardware store, postoffice, two hotels, land office, and some dwelling houses. There was a livery barn, and one well 160 feet deep not yet curbed, and one dug sixty feet and no water in it.

In due time fifteen of our party retired for the night on the hay loft of the livery barn, the hotels not being able to accommodate all of us. Next day the same number went to find homesteads; several of them were suited. My party of four concluded that water was too far below the surface, and granite and gravel too abundant on and near the surface; so we went back to St. Lawrence where we were much better suited in these respects. We went twenty-two miles and found plenty of good land and we think plenty of water in Wolf creek, and only a few stone, which are not objected to. We took claims, went to Huron on the 7th; stopped over till the 9th, when the land office for that district opened for the first time, and O, such a rush and determination to get in first! Could such an interest be awakened in the minds of men to press their claims to a heavenly homestead, there would be a revolution in this world that would make it unnecessary to put forth so much effort to obtain a homestead here, as none would want to take advantage of his brother.

Well, we put in our papers; but the crowd being so great we could not know what we got as there was not time to compare the papers with the entry books. After making the selections and putting some marks on them by digging some pits and piling up the sod and placing a stone on top, I put a Cynosure in place and a stone on it to keep it there. Some one may see it and get light.

I made the acquaintance of a young M. E. minister at Huron; heard him preach twice; inquired of him whether many of the ministers of his conference were Masons; he thought there were none. He said he knew but little about the order, and would be glad to learn something concerning it. I gave him some tracts, two or three Cynosures and an American Freeman; gave him my address and took his; thus I planted a little seed of this reform in Dakota which I pray may become fruitful and multiply to the honor and glory of God.

It is my present intention to go to Dakota next spring and take a homestead and undergo some privations by which to secure means to be more able to further the cause and kingdom of Christ as well as to help shape the growing population of at least one locality. I trust the friends of this reform will pray for the blessing of God upon me and mine, and upon the effort, if it is to be for his glory. There are some difficulties in the way of this enterprise. I hope and pray they may be made insurmountable if it is not to be for the honor of Christ and the promotion of his kingdom. Should God favor my going to that land of homesteads for a shorter or longer stay I shall take my principles with me and trust in God that this reform shall lose nothing by the change. JOHN DORCAS.

Our Mail.

Mrs. Irene Stoddard, Galva, Ill., sends $2 for the Cynosure Extension Fund and writes:

"I cannot expect to need earthly treasures much longer myself, being already far advanced in my eighty-eighth year."

G. N. A. F. T. Dickson, Tilsonburg, Ont.:

"My venerable grandfather was a Freemason. He was a good man, noted for his honesty, integrity and the fear of the Lord. For many years before his death he would not meet with them, receive or return their signs. He warned all his grandchildren never to join the fraternity. They have all faithfully complied with his wishes. A few days ago I prevented the eldest son of one of the most prominent men in our county from becoming a Mason. I read him the oath he would have to take and he was literally horrified. I spoke to a Christian friend of mine from New York about two weeks ago on the subject. He is a Mason. Stoutly denied the murder of Morgan. * * * He said Masonry was purely a religious institution. When I reminded him that all men were eligible to enter the lodge room, atheists excepted; that Turks, Jews, infidels, etc., were active members, he felt ashamed and replied, 'I do not meet with them any more. I joined when a young man, being entirely ignorant of Masonic oaths and obligations, and for years I have had no fellowship with any lodge.'"

Jas. Donaldson, Galt, Ont.:

"I am glad that the Morgan monument is an historic fact. It is an eloquent appeal to the eye of a nation's wrongs and her sense of outraged justice."

J. L. Barlow, Willimantic, Conn.:

"J. E. Wolf, the Evangelist Hinman spoke of in his letter in last Cynosure, is doing a fine work here, for God and souls. My heart rejoices in the prospect of salvation for this wicked people."

ON duty always a true Christian must be. He cannot sort his actions into sacred and secular, and so avoid the charge of inconsistency. The late bishop Blanchard when once called to reprove one of his clergy for immorality of of conduct, received as an excuse the reply, "My Lord, I never do it when on duty." "On duty?" replied the bishop. "When is a clergyman ever off duty?"

DOVES and serpents breathe the same air and flourish in the same climate, and bask in the same sunshine; and still the serpent is unchanged. Its healthful surroundings do do not eliminate its poison. So sinners in the church, are not made good by church privileges.

LESSON 8, November 12.—JESUS MOCKED AND CRUCIFIED.—Mark 15, 16-26.

(16) And the soldiers led him away into the hall called Praetorium; and they call together the whole band. (17) And clothed him with purple, and platted a crown of thorns, and put it about his head. (18) And began to salute him, Hail, King of the Jews! (19) And they smote him on the head with a reed, and did spit upon him, and bowing their knees, worshiped him. (20) And when they had mocked him, they took off the purple from him, and put his own clothes on him, and led him out to crucify him. (21) And they compelled one Simon, a Cyrenian, who passed by, coming out of the country, the father of Alexander and Rufus, to bear his cross. (22) And they bring him unto the place Golgotha, which is, being interpreted, The place of a skull. (23) And they gave him to drink wine mingled with myrrh: but he received it not. (24) And when they had crucified him, they parted his garments, casting lots upon them, what every man should take. (25) And it was the third hour, and they crucified him. (26) And the superscription of his accusation was written over, THE KING OF THE JEWS.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS.

1-5. Pilate's perplexity. cf. Matt 27: 1, 2, 11-14; Luke 23: 1-15; John 18: 28 38. Who composed the Jewish council? Luke 22: 66. What was the object of their consultation? Why did they send Jesus to Pilate? Luke 22: 2; Jno. 18: 31, 32. Did this release them from the responsibility for His death? Acts 2: 22, 23, 36, 37. What was the Jewish mode of punishment by death? What charges were brought against our Lord? Luke 23: 25; Jno. 19: 7. Which one did the Jewish rulers urge before Pilate? Jno. 19: 12. What answer did Jesus make to Pilate? Jno. 18: 33-36. What does "My kingdom is not of this world" mean? (That neither its origin or authority would be derived from human institutions.) The expression "not of this world" is the same as in Jno. 17: 16. Is Christ's kingdom to be a real, literal kingdom, or merely what is called a "spiritual" one? See Dan. 2: 44; 7: 13, 14; Ps. 72; Luke 1: 32, 33; Acts 1: 6, 7; 15: 16; Rev. 3: 21; 20: 6. Why did not Jesus reply to the accusation of the Jews? What prophecy did His silence fulfil? Isa. 53: 7. What other things astonished and perplexed Pilate?

6-11. The Dreadful Choice. cf. Matt. 27: 15-21; Luke 23: 16-20; Jno. 18: 39, 40. What custom prevailed at the Passover? Did the multitude come on purpose to ask for Barabbas? Who proposed the choice between Barabbas and Jesus? Did Pilate gain anything by his cowardly policy? Who stirred up the people to choose Barabbas instead of Jesus, and so defeated Pilate's well-intentioned but cowardly effort? What prophecy did this fulfill? Isa. 53: 12; Luke 22; 37 (Mark 15: 28 is rejected by the Revision.) How would you account for this fearful wickedness of the Jews? Is it not always the sinner's choice to prefer Barabbas to Christ? Is the sin any less when any one deliberately chooses the world, or business, or pleasure, or anything, in preference to Christ?

12-15. Messiah Rejected. cf. Matt. 27: 22-26; Luke 23: 21-25. In what did the sin of the Jews culminate? Did they insist on Christ's death? What was Roman scourging? Do the Jews as a people still reject Christ as their Messiah? Will they ever come to see their guilt and repent? Acts 2: 37-41; Zech. 12: 20; Rom. 11: 25-27. For whom and why did Jesus suffer all this? Isa. 53: 4-8. Has the thought of Christ and His claims ever troubled you? What is your choice? What will you do with Jesus?—Notes for Bible Study.

LESSONS.

It is no uncommon thing for people to make sport of better people than themselves (v. 17.)

Jesus accepted injury and insult for our sake; what do we endure for his (v. 19)?

Jesus was maltreated by his generation; should we think strange if we suffer at the hands of ours by faithfully following him (v. 19)?

Every Christian ought to be like Simon, bearing his cross after Jesus (v. 21).

"Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ" (v. 21).

The most unwelcome service sometimes bears the most precious fruit. We go with reluctance on some unpromising mission and return refreshed ourselves or rejoicing in the good we have accomplished (v. 21).

The very place of crucifixion implied reproach. "Let us go forth unto him without the camp bearing his reproach." Heb. xiii, 13 (v. 22).

Till life ends our work is unfinished, and we ought not to unfit ourselves for it (v. 23).

The cross of Christ is the great theme of the Gospel. "We preach Christ crucified," etc. 1 Cor. i, 23 (v. 25).

Fellow sinner, Jesus alone can atone for your sin and reconcile you to God; will you not receive and rest on him for salvation (v. 25).

Jesus is your rightful King. Do not say, "I will not have this man to reign over me" (v. 26).

Thanksgiving.

President Arthur has issued his first Thanksgiving proclamation, which is certainly devout in expression and full in its enumeration of the blessings for which we should be grateful. It reads:

In conformity with a custom the annual observance of which is justly held in honor by this people, I, Chester A. Arthur, President of the United States, do hereby set apart Thursday, the 30th day of November next, as a day of public thanksgiving. The blessings demanding our gratitude are numerous and varied: For the peace and amity which subsists between this Republic and all nations of the world; freedom from internal discord and violence; for increasing friendship between different sections of a land of liberty, justice, and constitutional government; for the devotion of the people to our free institutions and their cheerful obedience to mild laws; for the constantly increasing strength of the Republic, while extending its privileges to the fellow-men who come to us; for improved means of internal communication and increased facilities of intercourse with other nations; for the general prevailing health of the year; for the prosperity of all our industries, a liberal return for the mechanic's toil, affording a market for the abundant harvests of the husbandmen; for the preservation of the National faith and credit; for a wise and generous provision to effect the intellectual and moral education of our youth; for the influence upon the conscience of a restraining and transforming religion; and for the joys of home. For these, and for many other blessings, we should give thanks.

Wherefore I do recommend that the day above designated be observed throughout the country as a day of National thanksgiving and prayer, and that the people, ceasing from their daily labors, and meeting in accordance with their several forms of worship, draw near to the Throne of Almighty God, offering to Him praise and gratitude for the manifold good which He has vouchsafed to us, and praying that His blessings and mercies may continue.

And I do further recommend that the day thus appointed may be made a special occasion for deeds of kindness and charity to the suffering and needy, so that all who dwell within the land may rejoice and be glad in this season of National thanksgiving.

Words of Life for every Day.

SANCTIFY THEM THROUGH THY TRUTH; THY WORD IS TRUTH.

Thursday, November 9.—Hatred stirreth up strifes; but love covereth all sins. Prov. 10:12.

Friday, November 10.—Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a stalled ox and hatred therewith. Prov. 15:17.

Saturday, November 11.—He that covereth a transgression seeketh love; but he that repeateth a matter separateth very friends. Prov. 17:9.

Sabbath, November 12.—He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief; and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised and we esteemed him not. Isa. 53:3.

Monday, November 13.—Open rebuke is better than secret love. Faithful are the wounds of a friend; but the kisses of an enemy are deceitful. Prov. 27:6-7.

Tuesday, November 14.—In all their affliction he was afflicted, and the angel of his presence saved them; in his love and in his pity he redeemed them; and he bare them and carried them all the days of old. Isa. 63:9.

Wednesday, November 15.—The Lord hath appeared of old unto me, saying, Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love; therefore with loving kindness have I drawn thee. Jer. 31: 3.

—The vote in the Ohio State election stood. Republican, 297,759; Democrat, 316,874; Prohibition, 12,402. Last year the prohibition vote was 16,597, and in 1880 the three votes were respectively: 375,048; 340,821 and 2,642. The vote this year was nearly 100,000 less than in 1880.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1882.

PERSONAL.—To those friends who are able to respond to our call for one hundred clubs of ten, who have not already done so:—

As soon as you have read Secretary Stoddard's Washington letter on the 9th page of this paper, will you not send us immediately fifteen dollars for a club of ten under our proposition of October 12th?

TWO MORE DAYS

remain of the thirty for the collection of the one hundred names, and your remittance may be the very one needed to make the plan a grand success. If not it will help towards securing the rest of the ten thousand which is needed in order to provide a "home" for our work in the capital city of our great Republic.

We call special attention to Secretary Stoddard's Washington letter, and the reference to a Washington headquarters by Mr. Peter Howe. Next week we hope to give a carefully considered paper, the result of much consultation and prayer, on the subject of nationalizing the Cynosure.

The American party is this year merely getting its guns in battery. We have another whole year, 1883, to marshal our troops and get them into line before the campaign opens in 1884.

A beloved brother of the Reformed Presbyterian church (Covenanter,) attended our political meeting at Tonica, and warmly commented our American platform as the only one recognizing God. He invites the State Association to Sparta next year, and promises a large house and well filled, with hospitality for all who come.

The Tonica Convention.

Tonica is a little village of a few hundred people on the Illinois Central in LaSalle county. Satan has rent the Congregational church and "hardly departed" from it as he did from the boy whom he rent and left. The "stedfast" brethren and sisters who stood firmly for reform, have given us a truly glorious meeting. The lodge, and the Baptist and Methodist pastors who fear the lodge in their flocks, staid away, and our meetings were small, in consequence, till the last night when there was a good house out. Brethren Gurnea, Morrison, Baird and others drove in several miles, back and forth, to keep things up at home. The women of the village came out, and the men increased to the last. But, as the dying Wesley said: "The best of all is God with us." I have seldom heard better speaking. Messrs. Stratton, Phillips, Gardner, Faris of Sparta, and others, all seemed to "speak with other tongues as the spirit gave them utterance. The hearts of the people were open to large and noble hospitality. The only trouble was, there were not as many guests as they wanted.

The political American Party meeting was excellent. I have often heard of Prof. Stratton, but his exposition of our platform excelled all his former efforts. A Prohibition and a Republican candidate were present before our opening and spoke earnestly for reform. We endorsed the nomination of Peter Howe for State Treasurer, Herman A. Fischer for State Superintendent, and T. W. Baird for Congress. Some of our Wheaton girls acted as enrolling Committee; and, in short, we were an active and joyous company. Mr. Howe came up from Wenona and left ten dollars toward expenses; and, being told that in Washington, D. C., they were trying to buy a $20,000 headquarters he said, "tell them to raise $100,000 for Washington and I will give one thousand or more! Mr. Stoddard, please mark this.

An Open Letter.

TO THE SOCIETIES OF FRIENDS IN CARTHAGE, RUSH CO., AND IN SPICELAND, HENRY CO., INDIANA.

TONICA, ILL., Oct. 31, 1883.

BELOVED IN THE LORD:—While your courtesy and kindness are fresh in my mind, in allowing me to address you several times last week, to-wit: at a funeral, at your fifth day meeting in the schools, and on the Lord's day, I wish to write you a letter and give to you, perhaps, some little encouragement in serving Christ, and some useful counsel.

You welcomed us to your meeting houses, and our best meetings, opposing the secret lodge, were when we united in Friends meetings. The serene and well-considered remarks of brother Marshall and sister Eustis, at Carthage, gave us much joy and strength; and these, with your schools, Sabbath-school, and meetings for worship, in, perhaps, the largest particular Friends meeting in the world at Spiceland, filled me with thronging memories of an acquaintance pleasant in past years; when, the guest of Levi Coffin, I attended large meetings at New Garden, Ind., during the grapple of the country with the slave power. And, beloved, now I am to meet you, perhaps, no more on earth. "Though I be absent in the flesh," yet am I with you in the spirit, joying and beholding your order, and the steadfastness of your faith in Christ. Col. 2:5.

But, beloved, there were errors crept into the seven churches of Asia, which John, the beloved disciple, reproved; and we are to "follow those who through faith and patience have inherited the promises." Some of your ministers and members, both men and women, have joined in secret brotherhoods, which are not the brotherhoods of Christ, based on regeneration and love; but on oaths, imprecation and terror. They are Freemasons, Odd-fellows, and yoked in lesser orders, all of the same dark character, and fashioned alike. Those secret orders are an organized deism, which omit Christ to take in his enemies, who neither love nor worship him. Some of your ministers who sat by my side in meeting last Sabbath, were members of these orders. Now "I wot that through ignorance they did it," but, being conscious of the oaths and blasphemies they have taken, they must repent of them, and "repentence includes renunciation."

Think of your beloved ministers, now in fellowship with "the unfruitful works of darkness," which the Word forbids. Think of Friends swearing twenty-eight oaths to become Master Masons. And these oaths all begin with, "Furthermore I promise and swear," and end with, "so help me God!" I do not think any of the brethren, caught in these "man-traps of Satan," will deny that they have taken these oaths. If they should, or, if they should even prevaricate, and thus "make a lie," by prevarication, quibbling, or even by silence, they will exclude themselves from heaven, which shuts out "Whatsoever loveth and maketh a lie."

What then are you to do? "I beseech you suffer the word of exhortation," and I give you this counsel in the name of Christ:

1. Pray earnestly in the Holy Ghost for the brethren who have erred in this thing, considering yourselves lest you also be tempted.

2. "Thou shalt in anywise rebuke thy brother and not suffer sin upon him." See Lev. 19:17. If you feel unable yourself, do it by another. Get some minister or elder to do it.

3. Do not "do the work of the Lord deceitfully." Be satisfied with nothing but repentance and renunciation.

4. Inform yourselves. Get the little book of the sainted Finney, who was himself a Mason. Or get Morgan's revelation, and ask your beloved minister, Pennington, who has been in the lodge. He will tell you that Morgan's revelation is true. You will

(5) See that your erring brethren have not only sworn oath after oath, in the face of the Saviour who said, "Swear not at all," (Matt. 5:34,) but they have sworn to conceal Mason's crimes; sworn to "obey" Masons who may be wicked men; and sworn consent to have their throats cut, which involves the guilt of snicide!

Now if you do these things in the fear of God, and love of your brethren, God will deliver your souls from the sin of suffering sin in your holy communion. And he will deliver your church from these dark and dreadful abominations, as your societies were delivered from the guilt of the slave system, when Anthony Benozet and Benjamin Lay plead successfully with your fathers to cease from holding, as property, the bodies and souls of men.

In another letter, God willing, I will advise you concerning your political duties, as citizens. Last winter about two hundred good men met in a national capacity and nominated me to be voted for as President of the United States. I replied, that the utmost they could expect, without the special providence of God, was, to make me a stone for others to step over, into that high office; and that I would undertake to be that stepping stone; and I am now consecrating my life to that work. For a country can no more live with conflicting oaths in its courthouse than it can live "part slave and part free."

Very respectfully, your brother in Christ,

J. BLANCHARD.

"The Two Babylons."

A word of explanation will make more clear the article on onr first page this week and show that the statements of the writer are of profound interest. Babylon real was the head of the Assyrian monarchy, built upon the site of the Babel tower and by the descendants of the Babel builders. The latter set up on the plain of Shiuar the first human "confederacy," against the command of the Most High to scatter abroad and people the earth. Nimrod, "a mighty hunter before (margin, against) the Lord" was the first ruler of this great kingdom, which was ever the great enemy of the church of God. Jerusalem was destroyed and her people taken captive, and the ten tribes were wiped out of national existence by the triumph of this Babylonish world monarchy. This is historical. Babylon mystical, begun in the confederacy of the plains of Shiuar, was formed into a system of false worship in the Chaldean mysteries mentioned in the article referred to, and will finally be destroyed as prophesied in Revelations 16th, 17th and 18th chapters. The relation of Freemasonry with both the historical and the mystical Babylon is proven by every investigation; to nothing do lodge writers of every class give more explicit testimony; and there is no subject more nearly affecting the existence of the churches of Christ in America.

—Bro. H. H. Hinman's Washington address, is now 1413 Eighth St., N. W. He is still at work in that city, and reports a good meeting on Friday evening with another appointed in a week. Secretary Stoddard returned on Friday to Chicago.

—In announcing a change of editors in the Free Methodist of this city, the extent of the change was not fully known. The last issue of the paper informs us that Bro. Baker, whose hand has been at the helm for some years, retires altogether from it on account of overtaxed health. He has divided the business of the office with his partner, T. B. Arnold, retaining the job department, leaving Bro. A. sole publisher of the Free Methodist and the Sabbath-school publications associated with it. Our prayers and sympathies go with Bro. Baker in his retirement. The Free Methodist has grown both in size and excellence under his hand, and has become an agency for the truth far outside denominational lines. He has also been an able counsellor on the N. C. A. Board, and has rendered every assistance his other duties would allow in maintaining our reform. We hope he may be able to continue this valuable aid in the future. Bro. Travis comes to his new duties after long and varied experience as a preacher of the Gospel, a clear and forcible writer and a sincere devotion to Christian reforms.

REFORM NEWS.

Shall We Take Washington?

THE WAY MAPPED OUT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 31st, 1882.

I have now been in this city eleven days, and am becoming somewhat familiar with its geography and public buildings. Every thing is national in dimensions and unlike any other city I have visited. Commerce seems to be only an incident in the minds of the people and the one absorbing thought is the Treasury and how to draw from its coveted contents. The population is transient in large measure, and values of real-estate fickle, and depend on "lighting on" the man who want to sell or buy. Desirable locations are in demand, but I have been offered property a little back from the center at prices which in Chicago would be mere nominal figures, less than cost of erecting buildings. The Masonic Temple at the corner of F and 9th streets is the "hub" of business, and is really a fine structure, built in good taste. The first floor is for business and, unlike any other superb structure of the craft with which I am acquainted. Be it said to the credit of the fraternity, there is neither saloon, liquor store, or billiard hall advertised. The second floor is a public hall and one of the finest and most tastefully furnished and neatly kept I have even entered. It was well filled Sabbath evening in the intrest of temperance, and a reformed drunkard, son of Senator Nye, made a grand plea for total abstinence, and eloquently plead with the unfortunate victims of drink to trust in the Lord Jesus who only could save them. Above this are two stories where the feet of the "profane" are not permitted to tread, or unhoodwinked eyes to behold the "things that are done of them in secret," in the chambers of their "imagery."

I have held three parlor conferences, two Sabbath services, two public meetings in City Hall, and am to give a third lecture this evening. Bro. Hinman has worked quietly, faithfully and successfully, and his influence increases with each day's efforts. A few men of means here are willing to co-operate with the National Christian Association in establishing permanent quarters and they, with others who will be found, would contribute quite a sum in support of any judicious plan based on "rock bottom," that gives reasonable promise of healthy growth, however slow. In my judgment there is not another point in the whole land at which so many can be reached from all parts of our own and other countries. If a tithe of what I hear of the mysterious doings in courts, and the strange escape from prisons and officers of the law is true, there is great need of vigilance on the part of every good citizen, and a discreetly conducted department in the Cynosure by a Washington correspondent would add greatly to the value of our organ.

Here as elsewhere we shall be disappointed if we expect from pastors more at the first than a private admonition to move cautiously and not involve their names in so unpopular a movement; many express sympathy and really wish the lodges were abolished, but are too "prudent" to antagonize so formidable an opponent. One or two thousand dollars, added to what could be raised here, would buy and equip a tract and book depository with rooms adjoining suitable for a small family and furnish a nucleous around which to gather. I do not know that this would be the wisest expenditure of means, but it is worth considering. The friends have completed the Morgan Monument, and the Cynosure, which was a most efficient agent in consummating this work, and which, under God is the right arm of power with the people, is restricted in its circulation far beyond what it ought to be; and I, with many others, feel that our effort should be to carry the list of subscribers up to at least ten thousand before embarking in other enterprises that will tax the thoughts and draw upon the resources of our friends. If we could each take hold with a will as we did with the monument enterprise and run the list up to ten thousand paying subscribers before Congress meets, it would be an act of justice to the publisher and a noble work for the cause and country. I think we could then see the way clear to enter Washington with both safety to our finances and profit to the cause. With ten thousand families in weekly expectancy of news from Congress, the White House, the Cabinet, the departments, the courts and the interests of our whole nation centered here, that was not "strained through a Masonic sieve," a correspondent would feel an inspiration in gathering and reporting facts that would make a deep impression on the whole country. My thoughts are led out in this direction, and I submit the case for your consideration and, if you approve, for your action. The time is short but the cause is pressing.

As I write Long Bridge across the Potomac is before me. When pressed by the enemy our forces were not long in traversing the entire length of that structure. It was an emergency in which every man did his best. Is there not an emergency in our cause requiring quick and decisive action, in which every man shall do his best, not in retreating but in advancing to plant the banner of victory over 10,000 happy homes emancipated from the galling servitude of the lodge, made possible in most instances by a want of that knowledge which the organ of the National Christian Association contains? The shadows thicken and I must soon go to my appointment, in the building and in a room adjacent to that in which Guiteau was tried and sentenced. Think of this matter, brethren and sisters, fellow workers, and pray for divine guidance and help to do your whole duty. J. P. STODDARD.

The Struggle in Kansas.

Bro. Feemster at Sabetha.

Bro. Feemster lectured in Sabetha, at Slosson's Hall, Thursday evening, Oct. 19. Although the lecture had been well advertised, the audience was not as large as was expected, about 150 being present. The secret societies were well represented. The subject of the lecture was, "The Educating power of the Lodge on its own Members."

Bro. Feemster is a clear, logical speaker, at times truly eloquent, with now and then a flash of wit, which brings down the house. For example, in describing and partly working the Entered Apprentice's degree, where the candidate, kneeling at the altar, after having taken the oath, the Worshipful Master says, "In your present blind condition what do you most desire?" Candidate.—"Light in Masonry?" Bro. F. turned to the audience and said, "Do you suppose that is so? If he really told what he most desired wouldn't he say, Give me my pantaloons and let me go home?"

The lodge men behaved themselves very well while Bro. F. was speaking, except that they cheered rather more than gentlemen would have done, which, however, did not seem to embarrass him. After the audience was dismissed one of the Masons lost his jewel. He is mayor of the city, also justice of the peace. He walked up to Bro. F., followed by a crowd of Masons. For a short time he undid his long back, and by sheer force of his bean-pole majesty tried to awe into subjection all opposition to secret societies in Sabetha. It didn't awe worth a cent. He accused Bro. F. of making a hundred statements which he knew were false. Bro. F. asked him to specify. He fixed on one, and when asked for others he told him to call at his office to-morrow and he would point them out. The next night Bro. F. proved by Masonic authority that he was correct. "Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad."

The second evening Bro. Feemster delivered his lecture on "The Power of the Lodge in Church and State." About three hundred were present.

The city mayor, etc., did not come to the front this time, but took a back seat with a crowd of small boys, his own and other Masons' boys among the number. It soon became evident that they came with the express purpose of breaking up the meeting. They kept up an almost constant stamping, whistling and talking out loud, the mayor taking part himself and encouraging them. This, remember, was a man who has twice sworn to enforce the laws of the land, which he now openly violates and encourages others so to do. No perjury about that? Does it not look well for Masons to call men perjured villains?

Bro. F. was often obliged to stop because they drowned his voice; but made good use of time between, though he was not able to do as well as he did the evening before; indeed, not one man in a hundred could have spoken at all. The Masonic mob argument was after all the best; we gave them rope and they hung themselves.

One of the Masons finding that the mob business did not "pan out" as was expected, thought he would propound a "masher." He asked Bro. F. "if he was talking for money, and if he did not receive pay?"

Bro. F. said, "Of course I do, I could not live if I did not. Do your ministers receive pay?"

Cries of "Yes!"

Do the officers of your lodge receive pay?"

Cries of "Yes," and "No!"

"Does your secretary receive pay?"

Cries of "No!"

"Strange! Does your tyler receive pay?"

Cries of "No!"

"Well, what do you do with all this money?"

A voice.—"Pocket it." No disturbance was made after this meeting.

On Sunday afternoon Bro. Feemster delivered his lecture, or sermon "On the Religion of the Lodge," at 3 P. M., Oct. 22d. About two hundred were present. Good order was maintained throughout. Those who came to scoff were silent, daylight and the light of God's truth was too much for them. This lecture was Bro. Feemster's best effort, and much good was done.

Whether or no the lodge power is weaker, one thing is sure, the opposition is stronger. Kansas people are not slow to take hold of reforms, but when they do get hold they are like the back-woodsman's dog, heaven and yarth can't make them let go." H.

The Illinois Convention.

The cordial invitation of the brethren at Tonica to the State Christian Association met with a very inadequate response from the friends of our reform throughout the State. Instead of twenty or thirty, a hundred delegates from abroad would hardly have taxed the large-hearted liberality of the good friends of Tonica. Their devotion to the cause, well proved in years past, must be esteemed one of the features of the State meeting.

On Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock the convention was begun with a devotional meeting led by Pres. J. Blanchard. The convention then organized by electing N. E. Gardner and C. W. Hiatt temporary chairman and secretary. The records were read, and the following committees were constituted: On Business: C. W. Hiatt, L. N. Stratton and T. W. Baird. Enrollment: Misses Eaton and Swan. Nominations: W. I. Phillips, O. Sholes, Geo. Gurnea. Resolutions: L. N. Stratton, A. Osgood and J. Blanchard.

A portion of the afternoon was now given to reports from the different parts of the State represented, while committees were preparing to report.

President Blanchard spoke of the Indiana Convention which he had just attended. The interest manifested by the Friends at Carthage and Spiceland in reform questions, the hospitality of their homes, the multitudes attending the meetings were very hopeful indications. Dr. Hawkins and Bro. O. C. McCord reported from Granville, Ill., considerable local interest. The Congregational church, now without a pastor wishes to secure the labors of a man who stands true for Christ against all evil without compromise. Bro. W. I. Phillips, N. C. A. Treasurer and assistant Secretary, spoke of the hopeful word just recieved from the labors of brethren Stoddard and Hinman in Washington City; also of the Chicago tract work and of some interesting experiences in College Springs, Iowa. H. L. Kellogg of the Cynosure referred to interesting cases of self-sacrifice for truth

HOME CIRCLE.

A Marriage Hymn.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "CHRONICLES OF THE SCHOENBERG-COTTA FAMILY.

"From henceforth no more twain, but one,"
Yet ever one through being twain,
As self is ever lost and won
Through loves own ceaseless loss and gain;
And both their full perfection reach.
Each growing their full self through each.

Two in all worship, glad and high,
All promises to praise and prayer.
"Where two are gathered, there am I";
Gone half the weight from all ye bear,
Gained twice the force for all ye do –
The ceaseless, sacred Church of two.

One in all lowly ministry,
One in all priestly sacrifice,
Through love which makes all service free,
And finds or makes all gifts of price,
All love which made life rich before,
Through this great central love grown more.

And so, together journeying on
To the Great Bridal of the Christ,
When all the life his love has won
To perfect love is sacrificed.
And the New Song beyond the Sun
Peals, "Henceforth no more twain, but One."

And in that perfect Marriage Day
All earth's lost love shall live once more:
All lack and loss shall pass away,
And all find all not found before;
Till all the worlds shall live and glow
In that great love's great overflow."

Help to Read the English Bible.

REV. W. J. ERDMAN.

It is not generally known that in the Bibles of the American and British Bible Societies, and also in those of some publishing houses, at least three different names of God in the old Testament are indicted by a difference of type.

Let any one read the Bible with a knowledge of the meaning of these names, and of the hint given in the kind of type, and many passages will shed forth more light. Especially will this be found true of many psalms and prophecies wherein different persons are heard either as speaking or as spoken to, as in Ps. ii, and cx, and in Is. vi. The full force of certain quotations or allusions in the New Testament will then be felt; and the identity of Christ with the God of the Old Testament will be clearly proven.

Elohim is the general name of God as God. By it He is related to Creation and Providence. It is the plural of El which radically signifies force or strength. El as a name of God is often used in poetry, and elsewhere usually with an adjective or epithet. The plural form suggests a fullness of powers, though scholars differ as to its origin and import. Kindred to these two names are two more Eloah and Elah, the latter being Chaldee, and all these are translated by the one name God.

The name Jehovah is explained in Ex. iii, 13-15; vi, 1-8; Rev. 1, 4. Jehovah is God as the eternal unchanging One. His special relations under this name are to grace and redemption. He is the God who promises the covenants. Being the everlasting God He will keep the everlasting covenant, no matter how many centuries of seeming forgetfulness and delay, or apparent impossibilities come between the promise and the fulfillment.

As Jehovah He is the God of Israel.

"Jehovah is thy Elohim."—

Jah is a contraction of Jehovah.—

The name Adonai or Adon signifies Lord, Master, Owner. Adon is rarely used for God and is applied generally to men. Under the name Adonai, God is related to His people as one who owns and disposes, judges and delivers, rebukes and helps, and all, it might be said, because they are His possession through redemption.

This name is peculiarly illustrated by what Jesus has done for and is to the church as His Body, His Bride, His Servants, His House, His Own. He has all power and is Head over all things to the church, and He is the Savior of the body. In brief, He is "our Lord Jesus Christ." On comparing Psalm cx, 1 with Rev, iii, 21; and Isa. vi, 1 with John xii, 41, and on reading what follows in that psalm and in that prophecy, it is evident that Jesus is the Adonai, and as the Adonai He is addressed by the name Jehovah, and Jehovah is the Elohim. Exod. xxxiv, 23. Amos v, 16.

The following is the help to recognize each name:

LORD—Jehovah. Lord—Adonai or Adon.
God—Jehovah. God—Elohim, Eloah, El, etc.
Lord GOD—Adonai Jehovah.
Lord GOD the God of Israel—
The Adon, Jehovah Elohim of Israel. Ex. xxxiv, 23.

"Trust ye in Jehovah forever, for in Jah Jehovah is a rock of ages." Is. xxvi, 4.—The Watchman.

Wisdom of two Centuries Old.

Let us not flatter ourselves; we can never be the better for our religion, if our neighbor be the worse for it. Our fault is, we are apt to be mighty hot upon speculative errors, and break all bounds in our resentments; but we let practical ones pass without remark, if not without repentance; as if a mistake about an obscure proposition of faith were a greater evil than the breach of an undoubted precept. Such a religion the devils themselves are not without; they have both faith and knowledge; but their faith doth not work by love, nor their knowledge by their obedience. And if this be their judgment, can it be our blessing? Let us not then think religion a litigious thing, nor that Christ came only to make us good disputants, but that he came also to make us good livers; sincerity goes further than capacity. It is charity that deservedly excels in the Christian religion; and happy would it be if, where unity ends, charity did begin, instead of envy and railing, that almost ever follow. It appears to me to be the way that God has found out and appointed to moderate our differences, and make them at least harmless to society; and, therefore, I confess I dare not aggravate them to wrath and blood. Our disagreement lies in our apprehension or belief of things, and if the common enemy of mankind had not the governing of our affections and passions, that disagreement would not prove such a canker as it is, to love and peace in civil societies.—William Penn.

The Romish Aggression.

The Illustrated Christian Weekly calls attention to the fact as "a sign for the times worthy of note that a great Roman Catholic society has taken a step in advance in the line of sectarian and proscriptive political action. The German Roman Catholic Central Society, numbering three hundred and forty branches, with thirty thousand members, in twenty-three States, held its annual meeting last week in Milwaukee, Wis. It passed strong resolutions denouncing the prohibitory temperance movement 'as contrary to the interests and principles of the Catholic church,' declaring that all its members are in duty bound to send their children to Catholic parochial schools only, and favoring an organization of Catholics for the purpose of electing candidates to political offices 'who will protect Catholics in their constitutional right of unimpaired religious worship.' To say nothing of the fact that this 'constitutional right' is nowhere impaired, this action gives evidence that the hirearchy of that church intends to use its monstrous power for the advancement of its political designs. Forewarned is to be forearmed."—Christian Statesman.

QUESTIONS FOR QUIET MOMENTS.—Have you invited any one directly to come to Christ this week?

Do you love the Lord with all your heart, strength and soul, and your neighbor as yourself?

WHEN God would educate a man, he compels him to learn bitter lessons. He sends him to school to the necessities rather than to the graces that, by knowing all sufferings, he may know also the eternal consolation.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

Our Wonderful House.

A wonderful house have I,
That God has made for me,
With windows to the sky,
And keepers strong and free.

The door has a tuneful harp,
A mill to grind my bread,
And there is a golden bowl,
A beautiful silver thread.

A fountain is in the house;
A pitcher lies at hand,
And strong men God has given
To bear me o'er the land.

The keepers must work for God;
The harp must sing his praise;
The windows look to heaven;
The strong men walk his ways.

And when this house shall fall,
And death at last shall come,
The good have a better house
Above in Jesus' home.

ANSWER: Ecclesiastes 12:1-7.

How Totty Boiled the Egg.

Mamma was sick. Every one said so from the doctor way down to Bridget, the cook. Totty knew it must be so, because Katie, the nurse, wouldn't let her go upstairs—not even when she promised to walk on the very tip of her toes. Oh dear, oh dear, it really seemed as if the world were coming to an end. Mamma sick! Why, the sun itself might just as well not shine at all.

Totty went into the kitchen, but Bridget was busy, and didn't want her there.

"I'll go out the back yard and look at the chicks, I guess," said Totty to herself. So she took down her sun-bonnet from the hook in the entry and went out. Just then the old speckled hen jumped on the edge of a barrel and cackled with all her might.

"I declare," said Totty, "she's laid an egg; I wonder where it is? I hope it isn't in the shoe-box nest, way up high." But it was, and Toddy almost tumbled off the ladder trying to reach it.

"Why! There are two; I can feel 'em. I tell you what, I'll boil one for my sick mamma."

Putting one carefully in her apron pocket, she crept down the ladder, and then went across the yard to the kitchen. Bridget wasn't there, so Totty looked around. There was the tea-kettle puffing away, with boiling water all ready. What could she want better than that? She reached the holder and took off the cover, and dropped her egg in. Now, I'm sorry to say, Totty couldn't tell time by the clock. She knew perfectly well that the egg must boil for three minutes, but although the clock was a very large one, she couldn't make anything out of the long hands and straight figures.

"I'll run around the kitchen seven times, and I guess that'll take about three minutes," she said. Of course she had to do it very softly, so that no one up stairs should hear.

"There! It must be done now, because I'm so tired."

She had counted one every time she went by the clock for seven times. There was the egg dancing up and down in the kettle. How to get it out was a question. Totty tried the poker and the tongs, but the egg tumbled back every time. The shovel! Of course, why didn't she think of that before? Now she has the egg, safe and sound on a little saucer. It was Totty's own saucer, because it had A B C's in blue letters all round the edge. "I'll carry my spoon too," she said, "and then mamma will know who fixed it." Carefully up the back stairs she went, and through the long entry to mamma's room. The door was shut. She could just reach the key-hole, and she whispered through it, "Please can I come in; it's burning my fingers." Some one said "hush," but some one also said, "That's my baby-girl; of course she can come in."

The door was opened and Totty walked up to the bed.

"It's an egg for mamma, and I fixed it all alone."

"But she can't eat it," said the doctor, "because she's sick."

"But I can see how nicely it's done, baby," and mamma took the spoon and struck the egg. But it didn't break; then she struck it again very hard, but no, it wouldn't crack a bit; and all the time the doctor was laughing as if he never would stop.

"What's the matter, doctor?" said mamma.

"Just look at your egg," said the doctor. So mamma took up the egg, and then she laughed too, so very hard that the egg rolled off the bed and clear across the floor, but it wasn't hurt a bit.

For (what do you think?) it was nothing but the glass nest egg that Totty took from the nest! But even if mamma didn't eat it, the doctor said it made her well, for she laughed so that she was ever so much better the next day; and as for the egg, why, mamma thinks it the very best in the world, and you couldn't buy it—no, not for all the money in your savings bank.—N. Y. Tribune.

Zero.

Few of our readers, it may be, are familiar with the origin, or hardly with the definition, of the term, "zero," which is in constant use upon the Fahrenheit thermometer. Coming into our speech from the Arabic through the Spanish, it perpetuates its original force, which is "nothing" or "empty." There is a manifest solecism in the use of the word force as thus applied, though, in another sense, our readers have need only to appeal to their very recent experience to realize that there is a decided fitness in its practical significance. The inventor of the zero scale upon which the zero point is marked, was a Prussian merchant, who lived upon the borders of the Baltic Sea, and whose name was Gabriel Daniel Fahrenheit. A hundred and eighty years ago he availed himself of a bitterly cold day, of a memorably cold winter, to experiment with mingled salt and snow to produce artificial cold. He supposed he had thus found the very lowest point of cold, and constructed a rude thermometer with "zero" at the lowest point, and graduated from that to the boiling point, 212 degrees above zero, while he fixed the freezing point at 180 degrees below the boiling point, both these degrees being estimated by the supposed contraction of quicksilver, the thirty-second part of its bulk in sinking from the freezing point to zero, and by its expansion the one hundred and eightieth part in being heated from the freezing to the boiling point. Of course, this was unscientific and entirely arbitrary; and as soon as this became apparent, other scales were devised upon true principles. These are Reaumer's and the centigrade, which are accommodated to Fahrenheit's by agreement. The latter is used in Holland, in England and in our own country, and its continued use is in proof of the power of habit, which in early days gave this cumbrous system of the Dutch philosopher a hold upon the public mind.—The Standard.

Some ingenious lovers of puzzles have made a lot of sentences, in each one of which all the letters of the alphabet are to be found. Nine of these sentences are presented this week as follows:

J. Gray, pack with my box five dozen quills.
Pert fellows vex Jack by quizzing him.
Quickly draw fat Jumbo's vexing phiz.
John was quickly vexed by Fritz's magpie.
Five big Jews whacked six queer lazy potmen.
How quickly John got a box of prizes moved.
Prim Quaker Job exchanged vows with lazy Flo.
Joseph, bring my adze, quick; I want Levy to fix it.
Be careful of extremes; love knowledge; prize quiet more than joy.

WITHOUT the way, there is no going; without the truth, there is no knowing; without the life, there is no living. Christ is the way which thou oughtest to follow; the truth which thou oughtest to trust; the life which thou oughtest to hope for.

TEMPERANCE.

—A young Virginian has invented a machine called the "lung destroyer." It turns out 150 cigarettes a minute.—New York Sun.

—The natural result of Henry Ward Beecher's declaration that he does not believe in prohibition was the ejectment of a drunken man from his church, by the ushers, last Sunday.

—The legislatures of New York, New Jersey and Missouri now have bills pending before them to establish the whipping-post for the punishment of wife-beaters. Kansas covered the entire ground by banishing liquor saloons. It is the use of bad whisky that makes wife-beaters. Wife-beating, children beating, and penitentiary-filling are all the legitimate fruits of whisky drinking.

—A man returned to his home one day drunk. His little girl toddled to meet him with childish welcome. Had the father been sober, he would have clasped the little child to his breast. As it was, he took hold of the little thing by the shoulders and threw it through the window. There lay the little head among stones and dirt and broken glass covered with blood, and both thighs broken.—Gough.

—"The State Committee of Massachusetts Prohibitionists" have lately said, "the London Economist estimates the cost of all the great wars of the world for twenty-five years, from 1852 to 1877, including the Franco-German war and our own civil war at something over $12,000,000,000. The cost of intoxicants in the United States for the same period is more than $15,000,000,000, or $3,000,000,000 more than all the wars of the world." And political parties ignore this tremendous iniquity. Of the masses before the Deluge Christ says, "They drank." And Noah's case shows one of their great sins to have been drunkenness. Gen. 9: 21. The last days of this age were to be like Noah's days, (Matt. 24: 37, 33,) and such days are now swftly passing. Surely God will punish this vast people for their awful vices.

—SIR GARNET WOLSELEY leaves his glass untouched at dinner. For many years he has been a teetotaler, and he long ago gave the soldiers of Great Britain this very sound bit of teaching: "The old superstition that grog is a good thing for men before, during, or after a march, has been proved by the scientific men of all nations to be a fallacy, and is only still maintained by men who mistake the cravings arising solely from habit for the promptings of nature.

—QUEEN MAKEA of the South Pacific, one day called her officials together and said: "You constables were directed to put down drink. You have winked at it. In truth, you are of no use whatever, except to eat on feast days and share fines! I am a woman. Let the staid, middle-aged women of this village be enrolled as a policce force; perhaps they will have some regard for my word." This novel plan, so says William Wyatt in Sunday at Home, has been tried for some months, and so far succeeds remarkably well. Nothing escapes the eyes of these women constables. The drunkards are in great consternation; several of them have turned over a new leaf. One day a drunken man on horseback was surrounded, but succeeded in beating off the women with a long whip. Next day, now perfectly sober, he unwisely showed his face, and of course was heavily fined. A striking outward reformation has been effected. A day or two ago a good old man said in his prayer, "Lord, we have been told that such a plan was never before hit upon in any part of the world. Are we in this matter sinning against the? Any way, let the strong drink that occasioned the murder of my only son be put down effectually. May Ngaunu's prayer be answered!"

CONTEMPT of God and indifference to the toil and pains of fellow-men have a common root. Both are products of selfishness. They go often together.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

—The Free Methodist Susquehanna Conference at its late meeting adopted the following strong paper on secret societies:

It is a startling fact that all secret organizations are at war with the best interests of our common humanity and dangerous to the well-being of both church and state.

That they infringe upon the honors and prerogatives of Almighty God, in assuming titles which belong to him only. They administer solemn oaths which none but civil functionaries have the right to administer, and claim the forfeiture of human life of such as fail to meet their requirements and observe the regulations of their selfish clan.

They interpose their combined agency to protect the guilty and thwart the ends of justice in the enforcement of civil law. Unlike the compassionate Saviour, they pass by the helpless poor and bestow their benefactions on such as have contributed to fill their coffers and adorn their gorgeous temples. By their teaching and practice they slight the Son of God and turn men away from trust in him to a dependence upon an arm of flesh. They bring in the temples of the Most High which have been consecrated to his worship, their pagan rights and forms, thereby desecrating all that is sacred and divine in our holy Christianity. Therefore

RESOLVED, 1. We, as a conference, will strictly enforce the apostolic injunction: "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them."

RESOLVED, 2. That we believe that all men's intelligence, industry and virtue should be their passport to success in the activities of life.

—The Wesleyan conference this fall have spoken in decided terms against the lodge. Thus the Kansas conference, and the Illinois conference, at the close of an able paper.

"Resolved, That we are satisfied with the stand we have taken as a connection of churches, that we will not tolerate our ministers or members in joining or holding fellowship with secret societies.

Resolved, 2d. That we will not cease to cry aloud, and spare not, until the branches of the visible church, that indorse the christian character of those who are yoked with unbelievers in the carnal brotherhoods and who wickedly refuse to come out and be separate, as God commands, are shown their sin in justifying the ungodly and perverting the doctrine of Christ."

—The Christian Advocate has looked up the status of the wine question, as related to Christian communion in the Protestant churches of Chicago, and gives the following as the result: "The Methodist churches everywhere in the city have discarded fermented wine, and use in the sacramental services only unfermented grape juice. The Baptist churches have almost unanimously abandoned the use of fermented wine. All the Congregational churches except two have gone in the same direction. The Presbyterian churches, however, still stick to the old ways, and alcoholic wine is dispensed in all of them with two or three exceptions."

—Mrs. Booth, wife and active coadjutor of the Generalissimo of the Salvation Army, is the daughter of a lady of rank who was banished from friends and home in early life because she resolutely chose to marry a Methodist lay preacher in preference to a man of wealth and position who was a suitor for her hand. The story of this painful epoch in her mother's life, and the years of devotion that followed, appears, more than anything else, to have inspired Mrs. Booth to enter upon the remarkable career she is now pursuing. Accordingly at the age of 16 she dedicated herself wholly to religious work, and since then, for nearly twenty-five years, she has been speaking in public three or four times weekly, and doing a large share of the general executive business of the army. On being asked how she could do so much public work consistently with her duties as the mother of a large family, Mrs. Booth replied: "I did no visiting, and had no parties. I never left my children for any other purpose than to preach, and I therefore spent more time with them, after all, than mothers usually do." The training of the family had unquestionably been a success, the eldest five children being already among their father's most prominent and valuable helpers, and the younger ones being as thoroughly imbued with the one idea of the household—devotion to God and mankind.

—Bro. John Todd of Des Moines, Iowa, is beginning a series of Gospel meetings at the N. C. A. building in this City. He is visiting families in that part of the city and hopes that a good work may be done. Pray, reader that such may be the result.

—The United Presbyterian congregation of Northfield and Stowe, Ohio., Rev. J. W. Logue, pastor, are the first to contribute to the half million Quarter Centennial Fund of the denomination. The former gives $791, and the latter $130; or a total of $931. Westminister College Pa., is named as the object to which their gifts shall be applied.

—Darwin, in a letter written three years ago, says: "Christ and science have nothing to do with each other. I do not believe that any revelation has ever been made as to the future life. Every one must draw his own conclusions from vague and contradictory probabilities." This ought to settle the question of his theological opinions.

—There are 1,000 charitable institutions in London, with an aggregate income of no less than $20,650,000. Eighty-two are hospitals and forty-seven dispensaries..

—The Freemasons can now have a Bible, so-called, which can be used in all their lodges, and is only good for "a piece of furniture." An enterprising publisher has gone through all the so-called sacred writings of the world and collected the good things from all into one volume, which is named the Eclectic Bible. No religion has been left out, and ancient Paganism, the Christian faiths, and the different beliefs of the Indians and Mound-builders are all mixed up together.

The laymen of the Worcester churches are asking why the "Congregational club" holds its meetings regularly and takes its supper at the Bay State House, a notorious saloon? Surely this cannot be considered a very good example to set before the public. We preach temperance Sunday, and during the week patronize the most noted saloon keeper in the city! It may be said that there is no immediate connection between the parlors and the bar-room, but homely common sense cannot fail to detect the unsavory character of the whole establishment. Let us hope for a change—or better yet, for the abandonment of the banquet itself.

Holy Ground.--Take off Your Shoes.

MARYVILLE, Mo.

To Bros. Lyman and Fee:

I see at your meeting at Batavia, N. Y., Sept. 15th, that I with you constitute a committee to call a Union Convention, and to organize a missionary society. Beloved, I want the church and the world to understand that this is Holy Ground. That we who claim to be the Lord's alone, must take off, even down to our shoes, every thing that has the appearance of sect or party, and remain firm in God's mode, or order in saving a lost world as well as to follow our Leader in his own blessed way of reclaiming a fallen and divided church. God's ways are far above our's. We must look to him only.

1. As to a union convention, as soon as the Lord shall raise up 120, who have one mind and want to meet in one place for the outpouring of the Holy Ghost and the salvation of sinners, I think the time and place will be revealed to his church.

2. As to forming a missionary society, I think Jesus organized this society himself (see Acts 8. 1-4) to continue till time is no more. Hence let every one called by him go everywhere he may direct, and preach his word only.

As we go preaching the pure gospel we must set aside all secret and sect powers, as not only being in the way of the gospel, but directly opposed to the spirit and object of the true gospel of Christ. We must always remember as we oppose sects and parties, to watch close that we do not run in to some mild form of human bondage. I am one with all the church, even as the Father and Son are one. I can not join a union party, however pure and holy, for that is not God's order. RUFUS SMITH.

THE AMERICAN PARTY.

Nominations for 1884.

For President,
JONATHAN BLANCHARD,
of Illinois.

For Vice-President.
JOHN A. CONANT.
of Connecticut.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

REPORTS from last Tuesday's work will now be in order. The Cynosure will endeavor to give early and honest returns.

THE TONICA political meeting was one of the best. N. E. Gardner was chosen chairman and W. I. Phillips secretary. The ratification of the nominations for State officers and Congressman made at Wheaton was the first business. Speeches were made by W. I. Phillips, J. P. Porter, C. W. Hiatt, J. Blanchard, H. L. Kellogg, Henry Hawkins and L. N. Stratton. The speakers seemed at their best, and if party rewards were to follow them Bro. Stratton should be nominated for governor or senator at least. His exposition of the platform was a most able effort.

—It has never been substantiated, to our knowledge, that President Arthur is a Freemason. But the Intelligencer says that he retains a lively interest in his college secret society, the Psi Upsilon, and lately gave to Union chapter $100 toward the erection of a lodge hall.

—T. K. Beecher in a letter to the New York Independent gives this advice to voters:

"If counsel might avail in these unsatisfactory days, I would advise every patriot to forsake the two old parties and join the prohibition army, or the Anti-monopoly League, or the Greenback party. Join anything, anywhere, that entertains and proclaims principles of which you can make yourself an enthusiastic advocate, year after year, no matter how the election goes, nor which Senator controls the Penn Yan post office. There is a pure and bright political enthusiasm which, next after the inspirations of home and the hope of Heaven, is the noblest stir possible to man."

Talmage on the New Party.

Extract from a sermon preached by Dr. Talmage in Brooklyn Tabernacle Sunday Oct. 8th, 1882. Subject. "Degradation of modern politics."

"Oh! we want in this land—and I shall live to see the day if God spares my life a few years longer—we want a party in this country that shall first of all recognize, as its dominant principle, the presence of the eternal God in the affairs of men and governments. The trouble is, we have no God in American politics. We have a devil, a cohort of bad spirits: the devil of office seeking, the devil of fraud, the devil of injustice, the devil of wastefulness, but no God. We have plenty of gin, and plenty of old rye and plenty of schnapps, and plenty of Congressional infamy, and plenty of Congressional outrage, but no God. I am far from wanting to see a union of church and state in this country, but I would like to see a party that would recognize openly and above-board, and without disguise and without cant the God in whose name Columbus took possession of this country, and in whose name Washington achieved our independence, and in whose name so many blessings have come to us. * * * * There is overwhelming victory to that party which shall come up and have courage enough, and enough worshipfulness to say in a preamble: 'Whereas: This nation has been blessed of God as no other nation has—blessed in its harvests, blessed in its health, blessed in its civilization, blessed in its protection against foreign enemies; therefore we in convention assembled, acknowledge his goodness and pray for a continuance of his mercy, and in the name of our God we now set up our banners.' A party that has the strength to say that establishing such a preamble, followed by commonsensical and righteous resolutions as to what you will do for the agricultural, the commercial, the manufacturing, the mining, the literary, the artistic, and moral interests of the country, will sweep this whole land with an overmastering triumph. * * * I wait for the foundation of such a party, I wait for the coming of such a man. Where is the Moses? Where is the Joshua?"

A Few Samples.

Despite all assertions to the contrary, secret societies are meddling with our politics. Every secret order is a political machine which is secretly conspiring to attain political control. The proof of this assertion is ample if we seek for it. We have repeatedly asserted that the Grand Army of the Republic was kept up by the leaders for political purposes. Repeatedly the members of that order have denied the charge and declared that its existence had nothing whatever to do with politics. The following despatch shows who told the truth:

THE G. A. R. IN POLITICS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—A meeting of the Representatives of the State Posts of the Grand Army was held here last night, and resolutions were adopted urging that soldiers should have preference in government appointments.

Designing men make use of such secret orders to control the votes of the soldier element of our country and by this means keep themselves in power. Such scheming in a republic cannot be healthy but begets clannishness and consequent strife.

It is well-known that

is constantly plotting for the political preferment of its members. In Massachusetts, the nomination of Mr. Bishop, a supposed Anti-mason, has for the first time given Ben. Butler, a 33° Mason, a fair show for election. So long as Gov. Long was candidate his Masonic brethren rallied to the Republican standard and defeated Butler, but now, when an Anti-mason is before the people, the indifference of politicians (or positive hostility) threatens to curse the commonwealth with a Butler administration. Occasionally a Mason, who is not familiar with all the uses of the craft, displays his disgust. Here is an instance:

EDITOR CAMBRIDGE TRIBUNE:—When I look at the candidacy of Mr. Bowman for Congress my heart grows sick. To see a man professing to be a Mason, visiting lodges, as he has done, and delivering political speeches to influence "the brethren," it is time an exposure of such conduct was made public. The Masonic institution is not a political one and when a candidate stoops to such measures it is time a protest was entered. Out upon such unmanly and unmasonic conduct. A MASON.

WALTHAM, MASS., Oct. 11, 1882.

Mrs. Livermore calls attention to the fact that women don't go marching around in torchlight processions, and she says has never seen them parading by daylight, clad in abbreviated aprons, ornamented as to the shoulders in what seemed exaggerated horse-collars, their heads supporting an immense amount of "fuss and feathers," and their padded coats over their swelling bosoms nearly bursting with ecstatic delight. If there is any pie left in the cupboard, Mrs. Livermore is entitled to a slice.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

among young men and their eager desire to learn the facts respecting the dark principles of the secret lodge system. Prof. L. N. Stratton of Wheaton called attention to the secret temperance lodges and their decline before the increase of genuine temperance sentiment. The Good Templars of New York State, who numbered once 100,000 members, were only 23,000 at the last report he had seen. In other places he had heard of the decline of the lodge before the growing light of Christ's Gospel of freedom.

The committee on nominations presented their report which was thus adopted:

President, N. E. Gardner.

Vice-presidents: D. S. Faris, Henry Hawkins, Moses Pettengill, Joseph Travis.

Secretary, C. W. Hiatt.

Treasurer, J. C. Schoenberger.

Executive Committee: H. L. Kellogg, Jos. Travis, W. I. Phillips, J. P. Stoddard, Mrs. E. A. Cook, Mrs. D. P. Baker, Mrs. L. N. Stratton.

The Treasurer made a verbal report, that although the amount in the treasury was small during the year, it was enough to pay for one month's work of Rev. E. Mathews, and leave a small balance. The verbal report was accepted and the Treasurer was instructed to present his written report to the Executive Committee.

In the evening Bro. Orin Sholes of Morrison led the devotional meeting, and Dr. Hawkins occupied the chair. The addresses of the evening were made by Rev. N. E. Gardner and Prof. L. N. Stratton. Their arraignment of Freemasonry and other orders was able and convincing, and the good effect was remarked on the subsequent day.

On Thursday forenoon the brethren and sisters enjoyed a season of prayer for a half hour, this being succeeded by a political meeting, the convention having adjourned until afternoon.

At 2 o'clock on reassembling after prayer by Bro. D. S. Faris the questions of the location of next convention and of the State agency were brought up. Bro. Faris, in response to the suggestion that the meeting be in the south of the State, said that a cordial welcome would be extended at Sparta or Coulterville, and great audiences could be gathered at either point if good speakers from the north would attend. It was voted to recommend that the Executive Committee provide for the next meeting to be held in one of these places. The matter of State agent was referred to the same committee. It was suggested that instead of employing a man who should work only within State boundaries that there might be a co-operative arrangement made through the N. C. A. whereby an able man might pass through a section of country tributary to each great railway line.

Space was also given for presenting the Cynosure by brethren Kellogg and Stratton. The result was another evidence of the devotion of the friends of our cause in LaSalle county. Several subscriptions were raised for the 100 club fund, others gave smaller amounts to the extension fund; a number of subscriptions were taken and more promised. When it is remembered that the whole county was canvassed by Bro. Worrell only two or three months ago, the result was greater than could have been expected.

The report of the committee on resolutions was presented, discussed and adopted as follows:

Resolved, 1. That we hail with joy and gratitude the multiplying tokens of the prevalence of Christian principles against the secret lodge system in this country.

2. That the platform of the American party, recognizing the supremacy of God and the equality of man and excluding the haughty despotism and titles of the secret orders, is the only platform entitled to the name American and worthy the support of the American people.

3. That ministers of the Gospel who belong to secret lodges are unworthy of the confidence and support of Christian people, until they repent of their departure from the example of Christ; and repentance includes renunciation of the lodge.

4. That membership in a Masonic lodge is incompatible with a credible profession of Christian religion.

5. That we will do our best to inceease the circulation of the Christian Cynosure and the Illinois American.

6. That we thank the Christian people of Tonica who have so cheerfully entertained this State Association.

7. That we hail with joy the spread of temperance and prohibition, and will support none but temperance men as candidates.

8. That we are in favor of giving the ballot only to such citizens as read it; and we believe that women are citizens and are entitled to impartial suffrage.

On the last evening Bro. Stratton in leading the devotional exercises read the 8th of Ezekiel and commented with marked effect. The addresses of Rev. D. S. Faris of Sparta, Ill., and President Blanchard followed, and it is safe to say that neither speaker has been lately more happy in pleasing and instructing an audience.

The convention closed amid the best of feeling. Though not the largest it was one of the best in the history of the State Association. It was well remarked of some of the speakers that they were never known to speak more effectively and eloquently, and this is no light commendation. On the part of the Tonica friends as much may be said in honest praise. Whole families attended day and night, driving in from their farms three, four and six miles away, and making little account of difficulties which in most communities would be thought great enough to excuse their attendance. We pray that their zeal may have a well deserved effect upon the other churches of the village, which are not so much indifferent as scared upon the question of the lodge. These may learn that the sincerity of their neighbors is not misplaced, but the evil against which they testify must be overcome if our country and our homes will be preserved to us happy and free.

The Iowa Convention.

[The president of the Iowa State Association sends the following communication written for a local paper by one of the delegates present:]

As the court room, which had been engaged for the convention some weeks before, was undergoing a renovation at this time, the convenwaa held in the United Presbyterian church. The exercises were introduced with praise, reading the Scriptures and prayer. After these devotional services, an impromptu welcome was extended to the delegates, in which the desire was expressed that they would enjoy themselves while among us, and do good to our community by their visit. The opinion was also expressed that the people of Winterset and Madison county, though they might not all be convinced by the arguments which would be presented in the convention against secret societies, were still so far up with the spirit of the age and country in which they live, as cheerfully to accord to the members of the convention the same privilege which they claim for themselves of holding and propagating, in all proper ways, their own opinions.

The President, Rev. C. D. Trumbull, then made some introductory remarks, stating that the Association had been organized seven years before, for the purpose of discuesing the evils and dangerous tendencies os secret societies, espacially such as are oath-bound, with the view, eventually, of the entire overthrow of all such institutions in the land. He did not deny that they were numerous and powerful, yet he firmly believed, that by the use of proper means, the God of truth would bring about the desired end. Great and apparently immoveable systems of evil have often been overthrown in the past, and truth is still mighty and destined to prevail.

During the progress of the convention in addition to interesting conferences, able addresses were delivered by Rev. C. A. Blanchard, President of Wheaton College, D. P. Rathbun and R. C. Wylie. These addresses showed that whatever a superficial observer might think of secret societies, they are really opposed to the best interests of the church, the state and the family.

Rev. Rathbnn spoke particularly of the religion of Freemasonry, showing that while it has a religion, it is no more the Christian, than it is the Jewish, the Mohammedan, the Mormon, the Buddhist, or any other system of heathenism. It makes no acknowledgement of our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom alone sinners can be saved. And in this resp ct it is closely copied by Odd-fellowship. Neither admit into their religious services anything which would be offensive to Jew, Mohammedan, Mormon or any other false religionist.

Rev. Wylie spoke of the relations of secret societies to civil government, showing that their influence is often contrary to the principles and spirit of republican institutions.

President Blanchard spoke both evenings, showing the erroneous claims of secret societies to be charitable institutions, and pointing out many of their evil tendencies. His eloqndnce, logic, and suavity of manner, made his addresses intensely interesting. During the afternoon of Wednesday the association took a recess in order that a convention might be held of the Americrn Reform political party for the nomination of State officers. This party has an excellent platform, the principles of which are destined to prevail, either by the continued growth of the new party, or by their advocacy by one of the old political parties, as was recently done on the snbject of prohibition. Let the attention of our people be properly directed to any subject by a free and open discussion of it, and they will seldom fail to come to right conclusions.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

—The reduction of the public debt goes on at the rate of half a million dollars per day. For the month of October the reduction was $15,629,180.

—It is expected that the new trial of Brady, Dorsey, Vail, Miner and Rerdell, the star route defendants, will begin Dec. 1, and that no delay will occur on account of the prosccution of the jury-bribing cases.

—There were in operation on the 30th of June 1882, 46,231 post-offices in the United States—an increase of 1,719 during the year. Free delivery is carried on in 112 cities, employing 3,115 men at an expense of $2,625,000 the average cost per carrier being $835.75.

—Mrs. Scoville and her child Bertha fled to London, Canada, in anticipation of a verdict by the jury pronouncing her insane, and where she evidently intends to remain so as to be beyond the reach of attempts to take from her the custody of the child.

—A loaded coal car, on which there were a number of workmen, dashed down an incline from McIntire's mine, twenty-five miles from Williamsport, Pa., Thursday evening, resulting in the instant death of three persons, the mortal wounding of two, and the severe injuring of many others.

—Neal and Craft, two men supposed to have been accomplices in the murder of two young women and a boy at Ashland, Ky., Wednesday were transferred from Catlettsberg, Ky., to the scene of their new trial in Carter county. The prisoners were under the escort of a company of State militia as it was believed an effort would be made to lynch the two prisoners. As the steamboat was passing Ashland a party of boys, who had seized a steam ferryboat, made a silly attempt to intercept the other boat and was fired on by the militia, and three of the boys wounded. The river bank was densely crowded with Ashland people, and for some unaccountable reason the militia turned their rifles upon the populace, killing five, seriously wounding seven, and slightly wounding thirteen.

—Turkey is in a bad way financially. Next year's budget will show a deficit of fifty millions. Things are shaping toward the possibility of another foreign control for a a part of the Sultan's domain.

—The anarchist organ in Paris states that out-casts will soon be placed in the houses of the bourgeoise, where they will find food and clothing, and destroy important documents, particularly deeds, bills, and titles to property so that the owners can make no claim for compensation, and will besides lose trace of papers connected with their estates.

—Fires in Russia have been so disastrous and plentiful recently that the insurance companies have raised their premium rates 40 per cent.

—In the Bundesrath, at Burlin, there has been introduced the draft of a law prohibiting the importation of American swine, pork, and sausage-meat.

—A riotous demonstration of a serious character occurred recently in Vienna. Three hundred members of the Shoemakers' Union, which the authorities dissolved a few days ago, gathered in the high street, shouting, "We must have blood!" "We must have a blaze!" The police were badly used and several wounded. Troops dispersed the mob.

—The devastation by floods in the Tyrol and in Corinthia has been very disastrious. In upper Italy the terrific floods are abating, but in the Tyrol roads, railways and bridges are submerged, and in many instances have been swept away. Dikes have also been destroyed at Dollschack, and thirty men are reported as having been killed. At Salsburg whole houses were swept away, and at Nickerdorf the station of the Southern Railway has been destroyed. The damage will reach twenty million florins, while the destitution among the inhabitants is very great.

HOME AND FARM.

The Potato Rot.

Fortunately the potato disease, (Perinosnora infestans,) is not one of the afflictions of this country; if it were, the fight with that and the potato bug would probably be an unequal war. But it has visited us at times, and perhaps, if we ever finish the bug, we may be called upon then, if not sooner, to devote some of our skillful care to that predaceous visitor. In Great Britain it has never wholly disappeared since it was first known there. Last year was a particularly favorable season, the blight doing but little damage compared with its usual ravages. The large potato crop of that country last year was a great boon; and a new trade sprang up with this country, supplying us with potatoes which we were lacking on account of the very general drouth. For years the British agriculturist has been trying with little avail almost numberless methods to prevent or mitigate the attacks of the deadly potato fungus.

It has long been an accepted theory that the spores of this fungus effect an entrance into the potato plant through the leaves. In fact, this position is not controverted. That this is true there may be undeniable proof; but it has also been held that the spores did not and could not enter the tuber directly through the skin. Mr. J. L. Jensen of Copenhagen, claims that the spores do enter the tuber through the skin, and, by a great number of careful tests made for the protection of the tubers from the spores brings weighty evidence to the support of his position. The fungus first effects the leaves of the potato plants, causing brown and black spots on them, and if the attack is severe enough finally destroys them altogether. The spores fall from the leaves to the ground and Mr. Jensen states that they are carried by the rains down to the tubers, germinate on the skin and penetrate to the interior. In this manner he claims that the injury to the tuber is mostly affected. If the spores from the diseased leaves could be prevented from falling where they would reach the tubers the disease would be controlled to a great extent. This Mr. J. has succeeded in doing, so that his success is indeed very marked. The process is a simple one, and consists in earthing up the potatoes, which are planted in drills, so that a sharp ridge is formed over them; and this is done before the disease manifests itself on the leaves, or at its commencement. The following is Mr. J's. account of the process:

"The usual moulding hitherto practiced in all countries is a flat moulding, by which the uttermost tubers are only covered by a layer of one or two inches of earth, but my protective system requires—after a preceding flat moulding—a high and sharp moulding, by which the upper surface of the uppermost tubers is covered with about five inches of earth. To effect this it is necessary that the ridge be so high that the top of it is from ten to twelve inches above the surface of the adjoining furrow, or ditch, whilst the ridge must be very broad at the bottom. My system also requires that the tops of the potatoes shall be moderately bent to one side, with a view to prevent the rain water from running down the stems and thus carrying the spores to the tubers. By this contrivance also more spores will fall between than upon the ridges."

In five places in Denmark last year eight experiments were made with the common flat moulding, and eight others with the high or protective moulding, and the result was that there was an average of twenty-three and a half per cent of diseased tubers in each of the former, and one and a half average per cent of diseased tubers in each of the latter experiments. In eight other similar experiments tried at Antvorskov there was an average of nearly forty-one per cent. of diseased tubers in the flat moulded rows, and only a small fraction of one per cent. in those high-moulded with the tops bent down. This is an exceedingly interesting statement and the difference in the two practices is sufficiently appreciable.

Care is necessary in digging the potatoes to preserve them from the spores. After the leaves are withered the tops are cut off and carried away out of the field, and this is done a number of days before lifting the tubers.

So many experiments carefully carried out as these were, and the details of which our space does not admit to give in full, all without exception, showing results of the same kind, almost establish with certainty the theory that the spores enter the tubers through the skin. — Vicks.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 60 cents; per dozen, $5.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.00. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞ The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degrees of Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. This confession of Henry L. Valance, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan in the Niagara River, was taken from the lips of the dying man, by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine County, Wisconsin, in 1848. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen. $3.50.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen

MISCELLANEOUS.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen. $2.00.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. Each of these able writers in clear, forcible language treats the subject in one or more of its varied phases. Rev. David McDill in six chapters treats of 1. "Their Antiquity; 2. Their Secrecy; 3. "Oaths and Promises;" 4. "Profaneness" 5. "Their Exclusiveness;" 6. "False Claims." Prest. Blanchard handles the topic: "Shall Christians join Secret Societies?" in a masterly way, showing clearly that they are all opposed to the genius of Christianity; and Dr. Beecher closes with his Report on Secret Societies, which was adopted by the Congregational Association of Illinois at Ottawa in 1866. In cloth, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.25. Paper cover, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association, condition of the Carpenter donation, with engraving of building donated by Mr. Carpenter; tables showing the number of pastors and communicants in churches that exclude members of secret societies, tabular view of local, county, state and national conventions, and list of organizations auxiliary to the National Christian Association; brief opinions of eminent men on secret societies, and testimonies of religious bodies against them. 25 cents each; per dozen, $1.50.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Greene, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. Unpublished Reminiscences of the Morgan Times, by Elder David Bernard; Recollections of the Morgan Trials, as related by Victory Birdseye, Esq., and presented by his daughter, Mrs. C. B. Miller; Secretary's Report; Roll of Delegates; Songs of Mr. G. W. Clark; Paper by Enoch Honeywell; Constitution N. C. A.; Reports of Committees and a Report of the Political Meeting. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D. D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquilette; also Report of the Political Mass Convention, with Platform and Candidates for the Presidential Campaign of 1876. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 31 Cynosure tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies; and the dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized secrecy are shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public. Those who wish to circulate anti-Masonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. W. P. M'Nary, pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind. This is a very clear, thorough, candid and remarkably concise Scriptural argument on the character of Freemasonry. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

ANTI-MASONIC BOOKS,

NOT OUR OWN PUBLICATIONS,

FOR SALE BY

EZRA A. COOK,

No. 7 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

In the Coils; or the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historial sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of every-day life, and showing how individual, domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. Parents who wish, not only to keep their children out of these night-schools of Satan, but to give them arguments against them in the most attractive dress, will do well to purchase this book. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses. In this scathing review the lying pretensions of the order are clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Letters on Masonry. Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian religion. Paper cover, 30 cents each; per dozen, $2.50.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship (old work), by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen, $7.50

Freemasonry and the M. E. Church. Let every lover of truth and justice read this report of the trial of Rev. J. T. Michael, showing how he was driven out of the M. E. church for opposing Masonry and loving Methodism. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocate, and afterward in pamphlet form. The Evangelical Repository, reviewing it, says: "This pamphlet consists of a series of articles originally published in the Church Advocate, Lancaster, Pa. Elder M. S. Newcomer opposes secret societies, and especially Freemasonry and Elder G. W. Wilson defends the system. We are free to say that Mr. Newcomer has thoroughly routed his opponent at every point. Mr. Wilson speaks by the book, as he is a Royal Arch Mason." 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT.

Nov. 6th, 1882.

Five days remain at this writing in which to secure the remaining seventy-seven and a half clubs of ten needed to complete the one hundred in thirty days. This first twenty-two who have already responded so promptly have our thanks. Fourteen of these pledges came within the last week.

Dr. J. Cochran, we understand, promises to be one of the one hundred.

C. C. Foote sends the $15.00 pledged last week and writes: "I prize the Cynosure above gold."

P. S. Feemster sends $15. Geo. B. Hopkins, N. E. Gardiner, J. C. Heywood, John Morrison and A Friend, enroll themselves among the one hundred from the state meeting at Tonica.

John Hepburn; I have been very busy this last few months, but will have time soon to work for the Christian Cynosure. I am satisfied I can get up a club. We regard the Cynosure as a necessity. N. P. Eddy, Sheffield, Bureau Co., Ill:—With aid pledges himself as one of the hundred men: "I am anxious" he says "that thousands more should take the Cynosure. I have gotten up clubs every year since I knew about the paper, and I expect to get subscribers as long as I am able. I am now most seventy-eight years old." Later M. Eddy remits the cash for his pledge and encloses five dollars towards another. Dr. J. A. Bingham, sends $15.00 enrolling his name among the one hundred. His wife writes. Wish we could do more. We shall be very glad to have the Reform Story.

Geo. Brokaw, sends $15.00 and is duly entered on the "one hundred" list.

W. R. Morley, Brush Creek, Iowa, pledges $15.00 to help secure the folder.

Mrs. R. Schnellbocher; "Am trying to get subscribers."

David Nelson, Remington, Ind., sends six for a year each on a club of ten which he expects to get soon. Later: Mr. Nelson has completed his club forwarding $15.00 with the names and is duly enrolled. E. G. Paine, will try and send in a few new subscribers."

C. W. Allen, will try and see what he can do toward getting a club of ten.

Mrs. D. R. Keir, "will try and get some more subscriptions."

By actual count the Cynosure mail list including exchanges numbered 4,153 names.

Be sure to read Secretary Stoddard's letter.

MASONIC BOOKS

FOR SALE BY

EZRA A. COOK,

7 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

Books sent post-paid on receipt of retail price, but books by mail are at risk of person ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express are sold at 10 per cent. discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority because they tell too much.

General Ahiman Rezon and Freemasons' Guide. By Daniel Sickels, 33d degree. The most perfect Masonic monitor published in the United States. Embellished with many engravings and containing monitorial instructions in the degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow-Craft and Master Masons, with explanatory lectures, the ceremonies of consecration and dedication of new lodges, installation of officers, laying foundation stones, dedication of Masonic halls, burial services, Masonic calendar, ritual for a Lodge of Sorrow, Masonic trials, etc. Bound in fine cloth, extra large 12mo, $2.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the entire ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Scores of Masons have privately admitted that this is a standard text-book in the lodge and is strictly correct; but publicly it is not acknowledged as authority, though many officers of the lodge make use of it. Price, in cloth, $2.50.

Female Masonry. Manual of the Order of the Eastern Star. Containing the ritual, symbols, lectures, etc., of the five degrees of "Adoptive Masonry," Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound. Price, $1.50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. A practical guide to the ceremonies in the degrees conferred in Masonic Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated edition. In cloth, $1.25; in paper, 75 cents.

Although this Monitor is extensively used by the lodge, especially in conferring the higher degrees, it is publicly called an exposition, and not allowed as authority.

Sickels' Freemasons' Monitor. Containing the degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic illustrations, together with tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also forms of Masonic documents, notes, songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels; 32mo. In tuck, $1.50; cloth, $1.00.

Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry. Containing a Definition of Terms, Notes on its History, Traditions and Antiquities, and an Account of all the Rites and Mysteries of the Ancient World. 12 mo., 526 pages, $3.00.

Mackey's Manual of the Lodge, or Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow-Craft and Master Mason, with Ceremonies relating to installations, dedications, consecrations, laying of corner-stones, etc. Price, $2.00.

Mackey's Masonic Ritualist, or Monitorial Instruction Book. By Albert G. Mackey, Past General High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of the United States, Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prince of Mercy, etc. Price, cloth, $1.25; tuck, $1.75.

Mackey's Text-Book of Masonic Jurisprudence. Illustrating the laws of Freemasonry, both written and unwritten. This is the great law book of Freemasonry. 570 pages. Price, $2.50.

Allyn's Ritual of Masonry. Illustrated by a large number of engravings, and containing a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, Orange and Odd-fellows' Societies Price, $5.00.

The Supplement,

Which we give to our readers this week, may be accepted by our many readers as a token of the good will of the Cynosure, and of the gratitude of editors and publisher for the honest effort of many of the friends of the paper to increase its circulation. We cannot promise a supplement often unless, with the abundance of matter sent in for publication, there is a corresponding interest in having it widelyread. Suppose that now we have 20,000 readers, every one can see that the value of their writing would be much more than five times multiplied if the readers were 100,000 and the list 20,000. So when we say that a press of matter demands an extra sheet, we mean not that there should be less writing but more readers. Let us all work on and pray on for this end. In our added pages may be found interesting reports from Indiana and from the National Reform Convention in Clarinda, Iowa; and some political reading which will be looked for with some anxiety.

TOPICS OF THE TIME.

Occasional "off-year" successes had prepared the Democratic party to expect a few victories in the elections of last week, but to find their candidates receiving majorities of 200,000 in New York; 35,000 in Pennsylvannia; 13,000 in Massachusetts, 10,000 in Kansas, etc; while the next House of Representatives will have a large Democratic majority and possibly also the Senate—these facts permit their condition to be described as the intoxication of success. Probably no man feels more keenly the defeat than President Arthur. He has so unwisely staked his political fortune on this election, by personal interference in favor of Conkling and other friends in New York, that no future excellence in his management of his great office can restore him to the favor with which he entered it. To the party which supported his administration also belongs the River and Harbor bill steal, the infamous political assessments, managed by Hubbell of Michigan with the greed of a Jeffries, and the "spoils" system and "boss" rule. Some of these abuses are common to all parties, and only sunk the Republican ship because she was under the necessity of carrying the load. But the emphatic voice of the people to the President, is a demand that he shall cease trying to be a President and a ward politician at the same time. He made a fatal blunder by attempting to thrust Conkling into the Senate while Garfield lay between life and death; he insulted the intelligence of the people by nominating him to the Supreme Bench; and he aroused their indignation by opposing the renomination of Cornell. If he did all this in haste, he may repent at his leisure. An opposition Congress will occupy henceforth all his attention, and the ward politicians of New York may mourn that he no longer leads them to victory.

Our New England editor provides some reading which should be of gloomy interest to the voters of Massachusetts, and to all, since who may say that the same dark and powerful agency of the secret lodge is not everywhere working for the same result, only more secretly. The press attributes Mr. Bishop's defeat to his want of "personal popularity"—a very convenient term to disguise the absence of a lodge oath from his conscience. Butler's sportive audacity, which has brought him to the front of the losing party for three or four successive elections, and has popularized him with the unthinking multitude, had his private millions of money and thirty-three degrees of blasphemy, outlandish titles and gew-gaws, and ten million oaths to back it. Perhaps the Old Commenwealth thinks herself happy that her ruler is a Sovereign Grand Inspector-General, and has been also a Sovereign Prince, a Grand Pontiff, a Prince of Jerusalem, a Prince of the Tabernacle, a Prince of Mercy, a Knight of the Sun, a Grand Inspector-Inquisitor Commander, and a Sublime Prince. It may also be a matter of compliment, if the New York papers say truly, that all the leading liquor firms of Boston contributed $300 each to elect this mighty governor. But when the lodge and liquor interest combine we have yet to learn that it was with any intention of promoting the happiness, peace and prosperity of a community or a State. Let Americans mark this election and see in it a fretting leprosy, that will spread through all our national structure, unless men anointed of God shall stand up to stay and cleanse the plague.

Hon. Thurlow Weed has a letter in the New York Tribune of Nov. 4th, dictated to a stenographer, in which he comments upon the political prospects with a caustic humor. "Spoils," "bosses," Hubbell committees, and Presidential junketing are shaken together in the bag which hung about the neck of the Republican party while it buffetted vainly with the tides of election. The force of his criticisms are widely appreciated, and his letter is everywhere reprinted and noticed by the editors. We want to tie fast one fact—the proof of Mr. Weed's vigor of mind which this letter supplies. In a few years after he is gone to his rest, we shall hear the author of the powerful letter on the Morgan abduction and murder decried as unfitted by reason of decrepitude and age to prepare such a document, or to testify to its truth. But the Thurlow Weed who can write so ably on politics a few days later is not regarded as an imbecile by the ablest political editors of the nation, by any means.

The report of the Post-office Department this year will interest the public generally more by its small figures than its great ones. To explain: The revenue of the Department has doubled since since 1871, in which year on June 30, it was $20,037,045. On the same date, 1882, the annual revenue was $41,876,410, or $10,000,000 more than the receipts of the United Kingdom, and greater than the receipts of the mail service of any other country in the world. While the receipts have been increasing at the rate of 14 per cent per annum, the expenses increase at the rate of less than 2 per cent. The net surplus of receipts this year were over $1,500,000. These are the great figures. They show so promising an increase in the revenue of this Department that it is believed a reduction of letter postage to 2 cents may now be made. A deficit might result for two or three years, but the revenue would soon again exceed expenses. Let Congress give us the 2 cent stamp.

The "closure" resolution now before the British Parliament is the next reform to mark the record of the great English statesman. This is a measure to guard the body from vicious obstruction by a minority, and answers to the "previous question" of our Congress. That such a measure has been so long delayed is a grand testimony to the patience of English majorities or to the obedience of minorities. But Parliament once had the "previous question." Macauley speaks of its use definitely in the time of James II. The Tory opposition has been considerable, and appeared strongest in the effort to amend by making a two-thirds vote necessary to close debate. That party could always muster more than one-third the members and prevent the action of the rule. They were defeated, and the measure is as good as passed which will prevent Parnell from stopping the transaction of Parliamentary business for weeks together.

Condemned Out of their Own Mouth.

A Further Reply to the Assumptions of Rob. Morris and Others.

BY WARREN TAYLOR.

When Anderson and Desaguilliers, in 1717 got together the laborers in brick and mortar in the city of London, and proposed to them to form a grand lodge and receive from them a new, philosophical and speculative masonry, they certainly dug up the buried Mysteries; modified the ceremonies of the old sun worship so as to retain the square, compass, trowel and apron; and to make the whole thing more imposing, more captivating and more acceptable to Christian people, they ascribed to it great antiquity and connected it with Solomon and the temple; and gave these mysteries to those simple and superstitious men as the new fashioned Masonry. As Masonry is the practice of sun worship in the Mysteries "it is more ancient than the Christian era. But, as speculative Masonry, it is just one hundred and sixty-five years old, and so the more candid of learned Masons are free to confess. Thus Albert Pike is quoted in the Catholic Review as saying, "All attempts to prove that it (Masonry) existed at an earlier date than the 17th century are nonsense." We have also been told in the Masonic Trowel that a reliable author "assigns the origin of the Freemasonry of the present day to the year 1717." The Cyclopedia of Freemasonry, as quoted, and the British or London Cyclopedia, both affirm that. "Speculative Freemasonry originated in 1717." In the minutes of the Grand Lodge of Ohio for the year 1877 there is a long article read by one of their most learned members, on the question, "Whence came we?" And the writer affirms that having resided in London, "and made all the research which it was possible for him to make, he could find no evidence of any degrees in Masonry prior to 1722." And that before that time apprentice masons and craft masons were made such not by any ceremony whatever, but were simply recognized, the one as a learner and the other as a workman; and that the masons who formed the first grand lodge at the Appletree tavern, were craft masons and had not a Master Mason among them.

All this testimony is found on the minutes of the Grand Lodge aforesaid without objection or demur.

Plain Preaching.

BY PROF. E. D. BAILEY.

What is plain preaching? It is not a wholesale denunciation of everybody and everything except the preacher. It is not necessarily loud preaching. It is not always "smart" preaching. It is never "dull" preaching. It is preaching which so plainly portrays the way of salvation that all who are in it recognize the description and all who are out of it become aware of the fact. It is preaching which so plainly describes sin that every sinner feels the truthfulness of the description and recognizes his own errors. Plain preaching makes the way of holiness seem most desirable and the way of transgression most hateful.

In order to preach plainly the preacher must be filled with the Word and the Spirit—he must feel the power of a divine inspiration. In describing the kingdom of heaven he must not be filled with constant fear lest the skeptical, the scientific, the philosophic portion of his audience shall dissent; and in portraying sin and calling it by name he must not fear lest sinners present will take exception to his remarks. Indeed he cannot preach plainly until he has risen above all care or anxiety for the reception of his preaching, until he has a sublime confidence in the truth and an unswerving faith in its triumph.

The man who cannot tell, with plainness and without fear, what he knows about intemperance, dancing, card-playing, covetousness, secret societies, and every other prevailing wrong, has not yet got beyond trimming his preaching to suit "itching ears." It was said at the late Board meeting in Portland that it was under the powerful preaching of Edwards, Payson, Finney and others of that class that the greatest missionary enterprises had their origin. Dr. Gould, at the late Paxton conference exclaimed, "O for an hour of Finney! O for an hour of Payson!" Such men were fearless in denouncing sin and determined in upholding truth. But preachers now apologize for trimming their denunciations and excluding some themes by arguing that they are not doing it through fear, but only because it is best to be wise! Away with such wisdom! It is the curse of the church. The people do not need soft sermons. They need to see boldness in their ministers. Courage is catching. Let us have more of it.

The Symptoms and the Disease.

BY H. H. HINMAN.

The whole head is sick, the whole heart is faint, from the sole of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness in it, but wounds and bruises and putrefying sores. They have not been closed up, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment.—Isa. 1:56.

History continually repeats itself. Isaiah lived in a time of spiritual declension. So do we. Then they "drew near the Lord with their mouths, and with their lips did honor him, but removed their hearts far from him, and the fear of the Lord was taught by the precepts of men." —Isa. 29:13.

So it is to-day. Then it was said, "Yet ye seek me early, and delight to know my ways, as a nation that did righteousness, and forsook not the ordinances of their God. They delight in approaching to God."—Isa. 58:2. Surely this is more than could be said of the church now, yet it was to this people that the Spirit said, "Cry aloud. Spare not. Lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show my people their transgressions and the house of Jacob their sins.—Isa. 58:1.

To-day God says this to his ministers, but some of them are blind watchmen. They do not see the sword coming. Some are dumb dogs that cannot bark; sleeping, lying down, loving to slumber."—Isa. 56:10, 11. Some seek to build up the walls of Jerusalem, but they continually say, "Peace, peace, when there is no peace: and one hath built a wall and others daubed it with untempered mortar."—Ezek. 10:13. "They have strengthened the hands of the wicked that he should not return from his wicked way by promising him life."—Ezek. 13:22.

Why do we write thus of the church? Because she thinks herself "rich and increased in goods, and hath need of nothing, and knoweth not that she is wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked.—Rev. 3:17. Symptoms are not the disease, but they indicate it. Notice one of the symptoms:

A large share of the ministers here in Washington are Freemasons. They are in sworn fellowship with some of the worst of men. They have taken blasphemous oaths. They practice rites that, if done openly, would cause their arrest for indecency or lunacy. They practice a religion that denies the Lord that bought them. They have sworn conformity to a system that perverts justice, corrupts morals, and destroys true piety. "Were they ashamed when they had committed abominations? Nay, they were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush." —Jer. 6:15. They glory in their shame. "They rebuke him that reproveth in the gate. They abhor him that speaketh uprightly."

I see ministers here flaunt their Masonic jewelry, and advertise their Masonry in their prayers and exhortations, while they denounce those who in Christian fidelity expose the evil. What is the matter with these false prophets? Freemasonry? Nay, verily. That is but one of the symptoms. It only indicates the disease. There are other symptoms, unseemly ulcers, constantly coming to the surface. The disease is in the heart. "The whole heart is sick." Nevertheless there is balm in Gilead. There are true prophets who will not hold their peace day nor night till he establish, till he make Jerusalem a praise in the earth.—Isa. 62:6, 7.

REFORM STORY.

Holden with Cords.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "LITTLE PEOPLE," "A SUNNY LIFE," ETC.

Chapter XXVII—The Sword of Damocles.

I have previously mentioned the fact that Darius Fox kept a distillery. It was to this place that Sam and Joe when the evening shadows began to gather and the farm chores over for the day, directed their steps;—an ancient, smoke-stained building much frequented by the men and boys of Brownsville, either because they liked the odor of the still, the chance of imbibing stray drops of the sweet liquor through a straw, or for some social charm inherent in the general atmosphere of the place.

Joe sat down nonchalantly on one of the big casks beside old Ezekiel Trull, who was partially deaf; and drawing a small volume from out his pocket inquired in the loud tones rendered necessary by the old gentleman's infirmity,

"Have you seen one of Morgan's books yet, Mr. Trull? I heard Miller had got it out so I sent for one the other day."

"Morgan's book out! the one they murdered him for trying to get up. Dew tell. I'd give a sight to see it;" answered the old man eagerly, fumbling for his spectacles, and speaking himself in that high key natural to the deaf, so that the general attention was attracted precisely as Joe meant it should be.

They crowded round to see the book, some scornful, but all curious. Even Darius Fox drew near with the rest. The thing to prevent which he and so many others had united to murder Morgan had not been prevented after all. Here was the work for which he gave his life, rising phoenix like from his martyr's grave under the cold waters of Niagara, ten fold more potent through his death. And this was what they in their mad rage against him had accomplished.

He took the book, shuffled the leaves over; then threw it from him with an oath.

"It's just a pack of lies, but they'll do to fool Anti-masons with."

"If that is the case it ain't worth swearing about, seems to me," said Joe, coolly, as he stooped to pick up the book, a trifle the worse for the rough treatment it had received. His retort was followed by a laugh from one or two who saw the point. It angered Darius, who fiercely repeated,

"I say it again. The book is a vile imposition. I don't want to see no more of it than I have." And Darius turned away, but not so quickly that he failed to hear Sam Toller drawl out,

"Say Joe, ain't it a good deal like that book ye borrowed once. Or I dunno as ye 'zactly borrowed it. Kinder fell in yer way, didn't it? Maybe Morgan copied from that."

"If he did he has altered one or two things. That was J. B. This is B. J.," replied Joe.

"B. J.? That ain't the title of the book, is it?" asked one of the company not posted in lodge lore, while Mr. Fox, trembling at the idea that Joe might be on the brink of revealing what would certainly make him the laughing stock of the whole neighborhood if it should ever get out, was for once in the unpleasant predicament of not knowing what to do or say. But to make peace with his dangerous adversary, in the words of Scripture "while he was in the way with him," seemed the only discreet thing to do under the circumstances.

"Sam," he said, "I wish you would help me a minute out here. And you too Joe, if you will. It's only a hand's turn I want." And Sam and Joe accordingly followed Mr. Fox who led them into a small unfinished room in the rear of the building, and pouring out two glasses of his own liquor he presented one to each, saying in an injured tone as he did so,

"This is confounded mean business to go and blow on a fellow after you've given your solemn promise to keep mum."

"Now look here, Mister," answered Joe, scornfully refusing the proffered peace-offering to which Sam, on the contrary, had due respect. "When I heard that you were throwing out hints to the lodge that Leander had been letting out the secrets, I went to you and I warned you pretty plain that the real traitor would be exposed if that talk wasn't all taken back. When Jachin and Boaz tumbled out of your pocket and I picked it up one night when you were going home from the lodge too drunk to know your right hand from your left, I had no thought of making you ridiculous and hurting you in the lodge by telling the story round how I come by the secrets. I only wanted a little fun and I had it, by teaching them to Sam, so that he could pass himself off for a Mason. But now the secrets are all out my little game is up, but I see yours isn't. Because Leander knows that Masons murdered Morgan, and ain't afraid to say so; because he left the lodge like an honest man when he found out what Masonry really is, you've persecuted him every way you could think of. You've used tools and tried to keep your hand hidden, but what is the use when everybody in Brownsville knows as well as I do that you are at the bottom of all this mischief. Now, Mr. Fox, unless you give me your solemn pledge with Sam Toller here for a witness, to have all legal proceedings against Leander dropped, and not to trouble him any more, that story shall be spread all over the neighborhood. And I mean what I say. You had better be careful, Darius Fox, just for your own good.

Folks say that you know all about Morgan, and they say some other things that are not exactly to your credit, but I ain't called on to repeat 'em. Just give me that promise. That's all I want of you."

Darius Fox stood for a moment in silence, but he had enough good sense to accept Joe's alternative.

"You're too hard on me, Joe. But that matter about the wall—if I can get Joel Barnes to drop it I will. I was only in the way of my duty serving the writ. A sheriff has to act without respect of persons, you know."

"Oh, yes; Mason or Anti-mason," answered Joe, sarcastically, as he marched off in company with the chuckling Sam. "Good-night, Mr. Fox, I hope you will remember the little talk we've just had and govern yourself accordingly."

One more scene and Darius Fox fades from my story.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

THE MYSTERY OF OAK ORCHARD CREEK.

The appearance of Morgan's book deepened the public agitation and excitement. To many in the Masonic ranks it came like a decree of emancipation. The secrets were out; if not actually proclaimed from the house-tops they were freely sold to the simplest cowan who chose to invest a part of his day's wages in learning the august and sublime mysteries of Freemasonry. Why were they bound to keep secret what was no secret? And some bolder spirits, among whom was Mark Stedman went farther. Why not tear away the veil that hid the higher degrees?—and show Masonry personating Jehovah in the burning bush, or seated as the All-Puissant on his throne of judgment; thus literally fulfilling the New Testament prophecies of the Man of Sin; show Christ's Holy supper profaned in horrible burlesque by deacons and drunkards, ministers and libertines;—and finally the veil entirely withdrawn, show her swearing her devotees "to crush the head of the serpent of ignorance—a serpent which we detest, that is adored by the idiot and vulgar under the name of RELIGION!"

This will surely be the death blow to Masonry. So said and thought the band of patriots which met at Le Roy, and placed on record for all future time their independence as Christian men and American citizens. So thought every honest man and woman who read or heard their testimony. So thought Joe who concluded it was time to surrender his secret. And accordingly one day I found a bundle of foolscap laid in convenient reach for my inspection, all written over with the first three Masonic degrees.

"What under the sun have you got here, Joe?" I exclaimed.

"Only something for Rachel to kindle her fire with," was the cool reply. "That is all it is good for now. Say, Leander, do you remember that old book I was looking at the night you joined the lodge?"

"To be sure I do. Now, how did you come by it?"

"Easy enough. I was walking home from Jake Goodwin's party—"

"Who with?" I interrupted, with that teasing freedom in which elder brothers sometimes indulge.

"Come, Leander," answered Joe, coloring, "that is no business of yours. If you ask impertinent questions I shall stop. Of course I went home with somebody, but we had parted company, and I was just coming over the hill there by the widow Tappan's when I overtook Darius Fox coming home from lodge just half seas over. I never saw him really drunk before but folks say since the Morgan affair happened he's been getting into drinking ways fast."

"I've noticed it myself. Well Joe, go on."

"His gait was very unsteady, and once he nearly pitched over, and in the jerk he give to save himself or some way that book fell out of his pocket. There was a good bright moon and I stopped a minute to examine it. The title Jachin and Boaz sounded as though it was some kind of a religious book, but that kind of reading is not quite in Darius' line; so I looked a lit farther. When I see it was something about Masonry I slapped it into my pocket quick as a wink. 'So ho,' thinks I, 'this is the way you lodge members post yourselves. What is to hinder my learning the signs and grips and initiating Sam Toller?' You know Sam is always ready for a joke, and he was just as much tickled with the idea as I was. But learning it by heart was such a job Sam told me I had better copy it off. So I bought a quire of foolscap and we sat up two whole nights out in the barn to do it."

"I wonder you didn't set the barn on fire, Joe."

"Well, we did come pretty nigh it once," confessed Joe; "when we thought we heard Miss Loker or somebody else coming. Sam scrabbled so to hide our light he tipped it over, and I thought for a minnte we should be all in a blaze. When we got it nicely copied off I had a fine chance to return it on the sly. Miss Loker sent me over to the Fox place for some kind of dried herb she wanted, and while Aunt Subrey was rummaging over her collections up stairs, I clapped the book right back again into the pocket of Darius' coat that was laying over a chair in the keeping room—the very same one he had on that night. And the joke of the matter is Darius had never missed it, so he never thought he was the leaky vessel till I come to blow him up for calling you a traitor. You should have seen his face. But I had the staff in my own hands, and I've kept it there ever since. Darius is like an alligator, bullet proof except in one particular spot. He don't like to be laughed at. Now I know just as well as I want to that he set Joel Barnes on to make trouble about that wall. And you may just thank me that it has all ended in smoke. And another thing Sam tells me, these men that were going to carry off Mark Stedman bragged that Sheriff Fox would never arrest them. 'He's a Royal Arch,' said one, 'and knows as much about Morgan as anybody except them that pushed him into the river.' I'm glad I don't stand in his shoes."

And Joe went off after letting in this flood of light on more than one hitherto mysterious point; among others the sudden stay of proceedings in the before mentioned trespass case. Though one reason may have been that Darius himself was before long in the grasp of that law which under guise of administering he had violated and defied. At the next sitting of the county court a bill of indictment was found against him for procuring a carriage in which to convey Morgan one stage of his journey and otherwise helping on the work of kidnapping and murder. But the trial was put off on account of some technical irregularity, and the same strange difficulties appeared that had beset the way of justice in the case of at least a score of others, formally indicted, but somehow impossible to convict. The hood-wink over the eyes of Masonic juries blinded them to the clearest evidence of guilt. Witnesses were counselled beforehand by Masonic lawyers to withhold the truth; and when examined the questions were so adroitly put that they could be answered without revealing anything on which to frame indictments or prove criminality. And when most important links in the evidence were wanting, witnesses who had knowledge of the desired facts were strangely spirited off nobody knew whither, thus baffling all efforts to forge a chain of clear and decisive proof.

It was plain to see that the whole Masonic fraternity had an interest in stifling investigation; that it intended the fate of Morgan should remain forever one of those shrouded secrets to which the years only add a deeper mystery as they bear them farther and farther on. towards the light of God's great Day of final revealing. But since the time when the earth refused to cover the blood of Abel, there has been a deep seated belief in the human mind, borne out by many a strange and curious fact that subtle agencies are continually at work to dog the murderer's steps and drag his secret into human view,—as if the heart of our great Mother Nature herself rose, in shuddering revolt to cast it out of her bosom.

The Sermon

PREACHED IN THE COLLEGE CHAPEL, WHEATON, BY PRES. C. A. BLANCHARD.

And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred and tongues and people.—Rev. 14:6.

I desire this morning to call your attention to the work of visiting every family in the United States, for the purpose of supplying the whole nation with the Word of God. This work has been undertaken by the American Bible Society, and in its prosecution all Christians are invited to assist. It is an immense undertaking, and should receive our hearty sympathy and co-operation. It involves the visitation of fifty millions of people living in ten million houses, scattered over three and one-half millions square miles of territory. It insures that the question: Have you a Bible? shall be asked hundreds of thousands of times, and that multitudes who have been destitute shall be supplied with some portion of the Word of God. This work demands more than the attention of our minds and the labor of our hands. The Bible put into the hands of one who knows not God, requires the power of the Holy Spirit in order that its truths may be impressed upon the heart and wrought out in the life. Without this, circulating the Scriptures is like putting healthful food into the mouth of a dead man, or playing beautiful music to a statue of stone. It is our duty, then, to give as we are able, money, time, and prayer to this task, and my purpose this morning is to recall to your minds some of the reasons which should cause us to perform this labor with enthusiasm.

THE BIBLE AND MAN'S TEMPORAL INTEREST.

Men, as rational creatures, have interests which the Bible conserves. Let a man be an infidel, and if he be not also lacking in humanity and patriotism he must feel a hearty sympathy for this work. Examine any two countries you please, in one of which this book is generally circulated and read, while in the other it is comparatively unknown. Leave entirely out of the account the truth or falsehood of their respective religions, and consider them with reference to this life alone. Question them as to morality, intelligence, social life, civil order and financial prosperity. You will find, in the one case, virtue, common schools, happy communities, empty prisons, or prisons filled with those who do not use the Bible, valuable land, well painted houses, improved implements, and all the comforts of civilization. On the other hand you will find polygamy, infanticide, ignorance, insecurity of property and life, neighborhood brawls and feuds, a few cheerless palaces and thousands of cheerless hovels, alternating gluttony and starvation, a few colossal fortunes and an ocean of hopeless misery.

It may be denied that the difference in question, which is evident and cannot be disputed, is the result of the Bible's presence or absence. But it would seem that the case of the tribes of Africa and islands of the sea had settled that dispute for all candid minds. Here were people sunk in the deepest depths of savagism. They were universally deceitful, licentious, and bloodthirsty. Dwelling in regions as fair and productive as any in the world, surrounded by all possible sources of material wealth, they were more degraded than the beasts of the forests about them. The Bible came in the hands of missionaries, and in its train followed all the blessings of a Christian civilization. This is the more wonderful when we remember that the same ships which carried the words and men of God, also conveyed the means of spiritual and temporal death. American whisky, English opium, and the dishonesty of traders, who, coming from Christian lands, were supposed to be Christian; these have hindered the progress of both civilization and Christianity in these dark corners of the earth. But notwithstanding these the result has been so wonderful that no unprejudiced observer can behold it without astonishment and delight. If this were all, it were sufficient to warrant all the expenditure of time and money which is proposed, and it is clear that men who are not at all Christian, but who are simply patriotic citizens should be deeply interested in the work. It requires four policemen to take one determined brawler to the calaboose, it sometimes costs several lives to arrest one law-breaker. But a single New Testament has subdued the inhabitants of a whole village so that officers are needless and violence is unknown. Churches are better than jails; preachers of the Gospel are better guardians of the peace than constables; men must be taught to restrain and control themselves or society is impossible.

To those who are believers in our holy religion, however, there is a far more important reason for interest in this work than that it makes the little life which men live in this world better and happier. We believe that the life to come is longer than this; that persons in it do not change their condition, but continue on in endless happiness or endless punishment. And we believe that the Bible is God's chosen instrument for revealing to men both their need and their supply, their condition and their remedy. Our desire then to see the word of God generally circulated will be measured by the interest which we have in the salvation of men. Unbelief will of course see a thousand excuses for inaction. Many of those who receive the word will no doubt trample it under their feet. When seed is sown some will fall by the wayside, some on stony ground and some among thorns, but the faithful keeps scattering the good seed, knowing that some will fall on good ground and that in harvest sower and reaper will rejoice together.

LET US HOWEVER LEAVE THE GENERAL and come to the specific,—leave the subject of the Bible and its distribution and take a view of our text. We find in it three main lines of thought. First, the manner in which the Gospel is to be proclaimed,—the flying angel. Second, the character of the good news delivered,—it is everlasting; and third, the number to whom the good news comes,—every nation, kindred, tongues and people that dwell on the earth.

Already the first portion of this prophetic verse is fulfilled, the word is proclaimed by a flying angel. The messengers, steam and lightning are girdling the world with the everlasting Gospel. Over or through the mountains, over or under the sea, the click of the sounder or the puff of the engine are carrying the news of free salvation to the ends of the earth. In more than two hundred languages and dialects the nations of earth may now read that beautiful prayer to Our Father, which art in heaven. Millions of copies dropping from the press in London, millions dropping from the press in New York. In boxes, bales and bundles, by elevated railroads and railroads that are not elevated, by steamship and sailing craft, on the backs of donkeys and in the bundles of colporteurs the good news is flying through heaven. It was a long time the world had to wait for the fulfilment of this word. One hundred, five hundred, a thousand, fifteen hundred years passed and still the Gospel seemed creeping. Then a German boy whittled out a letter of wood, dropped this into some dye stuff, picked it out and laid it on a piece of parchment, lifted it from the parchment and saw its impress—the art of printing was invented. A Scotch boy was lazily watching the tea kettle cover rise and fall with the pressure and escape of steam. His mother blamed his idleness, and his father wished that there was some practical common sense in the lad, but the idle, worthless lad discovered the power of steam and the stationary engine. Another boy put this stationary engine on wheels, and an American put it into a boat. Another American drew down lightning from the clouds and another still put it into a jar and sent it along a wire, and now the Gospel is threading the rivers, climbing the mountains, and diving under the oceans. I see an angel fly in the midst of heaven having the everlasting Gospel to preach to them that dwell on the earth.

IT IS AN EVERLASTING GOSPEL.

Everything that you can see is not everlasting. The hills wear down, the rivers run dry, the forests are cut away, the coal is burned up, fashions change, science is renewed day by day, advances are made in the art of government, and the implements of mechanic trades and agriculture. On the grave stone you often find the word, "Resurgam"—I shall one day arise. On all the works of nature, and the labors of man's hands you may truly write: I shall one day grow old and perish. But there is a rock which stands firm, there is a place where the heart may rest without fear of disturbance or change, it is the everlasting Gospel of the eternal God. Oh you, my friend, weary and worn with attaching your heart to perishing things, give attention. You need not longer continue that foolish and painful proceeding. You need not say,

"Oh, ever thus from childhood's hour
I've seen my fondest hopes decay."

Your fondest hopes need never decay. There is some everlasting good news for you. God, whom you have so deeply offended is willing to be reconciled; the purity of soul that you have lost can be regained; the peace of conscience that fled from you when the first wilful sin was committed, may come back; there is propitiation made for sins that are past; the water of life is flowing fully, freely, and whosoever will may come and drink. You may not believe this, you may ridicule it, you may neglect it, you may scoff at it, but it is everlasting. It is true now; it will be true to-morrow; it will be true forever that Jesus Christ by the grace of God tasted death for every man, and that all who will may come to him and find life and pardon.

Oh, backslider, you who once knew the joys of salvation, delighted in communion with Jesus, loved the prayer room and the house of God and found the Bible a feast of fat things, it is not well with you to-day. A vague sense of unrest affects your soul. You have not the Spirit witnessing with you that you are born of God. You do not know that your sins are blotted out. You are neglecting known duty. Return to your father's house. But, you say, how can I return? Return as you first came. Your need is the same, the promise is unchanged, the Gospel that you believed was an everlasting one. So long as there is one heart in the world or the universe which broken-hearted and contrite turns to God crying, "Pardon mine iniquity for it is great," so long the good news of full and free salvation will remain.

Let us turn now to the third fact of the text, viz., that this everlasting Gospel is for EVERY NATION, KINDRED TONGUE AND PEOPLE.

Why so many words? Why not say, for all men and stop? I do not know unless it be that this idea of providing an everlasting salvation for everybody was so pleasing to the heart of the great Father of us all that he loved to linger on it, to turn it over, to state it in many ways, so that it should become clear and distinct even to the mind of a child. For whom did Jesus Christ taste death? For every man. Who may drink of the water of life? Whosoever will. To whom will God return? Unto all those who return to him. Who is it that obtains power to become a child of God? As many as receive Jesus. To whom is the everlasting Gospel proclaimed by the angel that flies in the midst of heaven? To every nation, and kindred and people and tongue.

This is the place where the everlasting Gospel compares to such wonderful advantage with the false and lying gospels of earth, such as Masonry, Odd-fellowship and the like. These lodge gospels are for able bodied men, of a certain age, who are not deformed, and who have money. The Gospel of Jesus is not only for every nation, but for every kindred and tongue, in every nation. High and low, rich and poor, learned and ignorant, sound and maimed, seeing and blind, popular and despised, happy and miserable,—for every one. The orphan beggar who lies on his cot in raging fever with not a friend in all the earth to care whether he live or die, has as large a place in the heart of God as any king who ever sat on a throne, or general who led uncounted hosts to battle.

THE FIRST PRACTICAL SUGGESTION

arising from this theme is the complete excuselessness of those who hear and yet refuse the offered salvation. If there were any hard and unreasonable conditions attached to this redemption, above all if there were any impossibility required of men, we might go on without Christ and challenge his justice at the bar of judgment. But when the command is, look and live, wash and be clean, buy wine and milk without money and without price, if we fail we shall be like the one who ignored the provided garment at the wedding, speechless.

Another thought is that we shall be far from guiltless if we, having heard this good news, fail to extend it to all our fellows whom we may reach. If it were a partial offer we might excuse ourselves on the ground that those whom we meet may possibly be not included in the scheme, if it were not an everlasting Gospel, we might imagine that at some particular moment it was not in full force and effect. But now, we can never meet one who is not expressly included in the great proclamation of liberty to the captives and the Gospel is of full force and validity at all times.

Still another blessed thought is that this Gospel will be an everlasting source of strength and consolation to all who will accept it. It will not be like a suit of clothes that can wear out, or like a beautiful apple that must be eaten lest it rot, or a piece of gold that may be stolen from us, but it will be in our hearts a well of water springing up into everlasting life.

OUR TEXT SAYS THAT AN ANGEL

was sent to fly through the midst of heaven proclaiming these good tidings. So likewise we read in Luke that the angel of the Lord appeared to the shepherds, but afterward we are told that there was present a multitude of an heavenly host praising God. So may it be with us. May God so fill us with gratitude and thanksgiving for this good word that we shall go through the world personally or by our agents preaching this Gospel, the declaration of which is the most delightful occupation of the hosts of heaven.

NEW ENGLAND.

THE NEW ENGLAND BOARD of the National Christian Association has it headquarters at No. 8 Portland St., Worcester, Mass. A full supply of books and tracts constantly on hand. Orders promptly filled. Correspondence solicited. E. D. Bailey, N. E. Sec.

—"A vote for principle is saved, and the voter with it. A vote for evil, or for a party winning on grounds of evil, is thrown away and the voter with it."

—The fear of speaking about secret societies is wearing off and people are beginning to mention the subject more freely. The "courage of one's opinions" is contagious.

—Mr. Spaulding will spend a part of this week visiting towns in the vicinity of Worcester and then goes to Vermont for a campaign of a few weeks.

—Said a gentleman the other day who had just confessed to being both a Mason and an Odd-fellow, though he seemed ashamed to confess it, "I never heard of the opposition to secret societies till you came here. But then, I don't care anything about them, I don't go near them now." This is the position of many good men who are pointed to triumphantly as the pillars and supporters of the lodge.

—A young man distributing some reform tracts in a Methodist church in this city, one evening before service and soon after attempted to do the same thing in another Methodist church. The janitor saw him and angrily forbade it. He went out in front of the door and gave them to people coming in and was ordered away from there. So he walked down the pavement and distributed them. He got a fresh supply and intended to try it again at the same place as there was evident need of "more light."

—We frequently see the results—or their beginnings—of the spread of reform literature among the people. Mr. Spaulding sold a book to a gentleman in Connecticut, who loaned it to his brother. The latter became deeply interested and ordered several books of us. The other day he called with a friend to get more books. He said he had been importuned to join both the Masons and Odd-fellows, and was inclined to do it, but now he was too well posted to be drawn into their net. What further results may follow from an enthusiastic young man with half a dozen reform books to read and lend time will show.

—Mr. Spaulding was exhibiting the "Revised Odd-fellowship" in a town in Maine, to some men in a shop. One of them looked it over and expressed his delight to see it, said it was correct, but didn't seem to understand that it was an exposition. He inquired if the encampment degrees were in, looked for it and declared it to be correct too. Then a sudden thought struck him. "Why, you won't sell these to the fellows that haven't taken the upper degrees, will you? Now, there's my son, he hasn't taken the encampment. He oughtn't to have this. If you sell these around generally, Odd-fellowship is up in this town."

Massachusetts under the Lodge Heel.

WORCESTER, MASS., Nov. 6, 1882.

Tomorrow is to decide the issues of an important political campaign in this State. It is specially interesting and important to Anti-masons on account of the bold and unblushing interference of secret societies with the primaries and the prominent influence they have exercised in the canvass. The nomination of Mr. Bishop against Mr. Crapo for governor was the triumph of a new and growing element in the Republican party over the wing of the party which has held the reins for many past years. Governor Long was a Mason and by urbanity and diplomacy he has been a most popular governor.

Mr. Bishop's nomination gave Butler renewed hope, for it became at once evident that he could count on a largely increased support from the fraternities, who received the Bishop nomination as a direct affront, because he was currently reported to be an Anti-mason and publicly "charged" with having contributed toward the Morgan monument! Of course the crime of such an act was unpardonable in the eyes of the Masons and the opinion was at once freely passed from lip to lip that he would be defeated Then came the cringing letter already published in the Cynosure from Mr. Bishop, giving a sop to the fraternities by denying that he had contributed toward the Anti-masonic movement.

At a large ward-meeting in this city composed mostly of Irish and other foreigners, a bolt was made from the regular nominee of the party because he had been forced upon them by a combination of secret societies. This charge was openly made in the ward meeting. In another case in the northern part of this county the daily despatches announced that the secret societies had bolted the regular nominee and would support a Democrat.

But now, in Worcester, comes the most remarkable case of all. At the urgent demand of friends (presumably of Senator Hoar himself) Judge Dewey, a retired judge, of great ability and untarnished character and an Anti-mason, was nominated from this county for State Senator to help Senator Hoar to a re-nomination to the United States Senate. Forthwith a club, styling itself the Young Men's Republican Club, invited a Democratic ex-mayor of the city to be its candidate. The president and secretary of the club are both Masons and it is said the club is notoriously Masonic in its membership, while the only fitness of their chosen candidate for the place is the fact that he is a Mason and that he has money, while his unfitness in all other respects, renders his nomination against Judge Dewey a travesty on common sense.

After the Democratic caucus had selected the ex-mayor which a Masonic club proposed, a card was published summoning members of the fraternity and other friends to a meeting to consult about methods to be employed for electing their candidate. The club deny that they issued the card, but it was doubtless put forth to influence votes.

This series of events is an eye opener to many unsuspicious citizens. They have actually seen the cloven foot of the beast in our State politics and their suspicions are fully aroused. It is impossible to predict what the outcome will be, but it is certain that in this State secret societies are sufficiently emboldened by past successes to venture an unblushing public display, backed by unparalleled secret plotting.

I have recently had the pleasure of attending three ecclesiastical meetings in this vicinity, affording me an opportunity for enlarged acquaintance with ministers and laymen, and of introducing to their notice our reform. We have sent out to the ministers of this section so many circulars, papers and tracts that they are now becoming acquainted partially with the work and some of them manifest a fair degree of interest.

Among the most hopeful events which can be recorded is the success of our mission in the southern part of the city. From the first there has been evidence of vitality and the influence has spread as the work has progressed. There is a very general feeling that is a favorable spot for the growth of a large church and the mission has already attracted considerable attention. "Yes," said one of the pastors, when he heard of the growing interest, "he can build up a strong reform church there." It is a token of the special favor of the Lord that our efforts to raise money for the erection of a chapel have been so signally blessed. First the lot was bought and paid for, then we took breath. Now reliable pledges have been made to erect a chapel with a seating capacity of 250 and prayer meeting room and the frame of the structure is already up. We lack less than $300 to cover the contractor's price for the building if we complete it throughout. A strong force of carpenters are at work and unless extremely cold weather comes on early we shall have the use of the building this winter.

Since the New Hampshire meeting my work has all been in Worcester and vicinity and has been of an important character though it cannot be easily described. If my judgment is not defective, however, our cause has been set forward not a little and the ground work of future operations made more secure. Yesterday it was my good fortune to conduct four services and this morning I have risen "a great while before day" to despatch business so as to leave on an early train for Vermont, where, if there is no hitch in our arrangements, several lecture engagements await me.

Mr. Spaulding has worked for three weeks in Maine with fair success. He went directly to Portland and remained there except during the convention of the Y. M. C. A at Lewiston, when he exhibited and sold books at that meeting. He found many interested persons in Portland and sold books with considerable readiness, taking also a goodly number of subscriptions for some of our reform papers. It does not seem to me that all the friends in New England are yet awake to the importance of sustaining this work. The pledges received fall far short of sustaining the work on its present basis, whereas it seems to me almost a necessity to enlarge it still more as a matter of prudent investment if on no other principle. Some have responded nobly, some have as yet made no response whatever, and the pressure here at headquarters is growing all the time more and more intense.

E. D. BAILEY.

S. GARDNER, Mass., Nov. 6, 1882.

When I hurriedly wrote my letter to the Cynosure this morning, I had not before me the circular appealing to the Masonic fraternity to elect ex-Mayor Pratt, of Worcester, to the State Senate. The Saturday Evening Gazette contains the following card, which is too significant to be overlooked:

AN ILL-ADVISED CIRCULAR.

A manuscript letter, of which the following is a copy, has been circulated among the Masons in this city within a few days to a considerable extent:

"WORCESTER, Nov. 1st, '82.

"BROTHER AND FRIEND:—We appeal to you as a member of the Masonic fraternity to do all you can for the election of Charles B. Pratt. Knowing you to be a true and loyal Mason, we appeal to you to help elect him. We ask you to lay aside all other issues and give him your support.

"We have organized an independent movement in his favor at Room No. 4, Bay State House, where we should be happy to meet you. Your position in the order and in the community in which you live are such that you can do good work in this movement, and with your help and co-operation we hope to succeed.

"Resp. yours, ——"

The Morning Spy contains a card from a member of the club denying the authenticity of the foregoing, but the effort to cover the tracks of the lodge comes too late. Much indignation is felt over the circular.

The bolt against the secret society nominee in Ward VII. (alluded to in my letter) is backed up with a circular, published this morning, signed by some of the best citizens of the city. These things are of interest to Cynosure readers, because they disclose so plainly the hand of the lodge. E. D. BAILEY.

In the statistics of crime in Massachusetts the figures given for the county of Suffolk, which is an average of the State, show that sixty per cent. of the convictions are for direct liquor offences, such as drunkenness, etc., while twenty per cent. of the sentences were for other offences committed under the influence of liquor, making eighty per cent. of the convictions the result of rum.

"What objections have you to Freemasonry?" asks an honest inquirer. Will such an one hear an abbreviated answer and then take steps to learn the proof of our assertions? We charge Masonry with lying about its age, with practicing puerile and blasphemous ceremonies, with requiring blind conformity to unknown usages and customs, with imposing upon its members sinful obligations, with enforcing those obligations by horrible penalties, with teaching the accursed doctrine that an obligation blindly taken to commit sin must be kept; we charge it with practicing religious rites borrowed from the pagan idolatries, with rejecting Christ, with dishonoring the Bible, with inculcating infidel sentiments and doctrines calculated to destroy the Christian religion, with mocking regeneration, the resurrection and sanctification, with claiming to be an all-sufficient religion and thus misleading blinded devotees at its shrine; we charge it with making a boast of benevolence unwarranted by facts, with absorbing the money and employing the time of men in a vain pursuit and thus robbing the church of Christ of the devotion of its members; we charge it with teaching immorality, with furnishing a cloak for crime, with unjust interference in politics and with partiality in business and in society. All this and much more is laid to the charge of Freemasonry and amply demonstrated by facts furnished us by Masonic writers.

"What regeneration by the word of truth is in religion, initiation is in Odd-fellowship." Grosh's Manual p. 90. It is strange that secret orders should always be apeing Christian virtues and doctrines but never equaling them. If the Odd-fellows called their benefits "insurance" the fraud would at once be detected because they only pay out one third as much as they receive. They call it "charity!" If they called their initiation "boys play" there would be nothing fascinating about it. They call it "regeneration." They blindfold a man, put him in chains, lead him around the room, kneel him over a coffin, swear him to secrecy and say that it corresponds to regeneration in the Christian religion! Yet good men see no harm in Odd-fellowship. So much the worse for the judgment of the good men. They are incompetant judges, for they are blinded to the blasphemy of such proceedings. If the young people of one of our churches should play prayer-meeting, should dress up one of their number and after making fun of him all the evening say they had "regenerated" him and he was "born again;" if they should take $3.00 from him, return one and say they were practicing benevolence; if they should then boast that they were doing better than the churches, all this would be harmless as compared with the blasphemous assumptions of the Odd-fellows.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Conservatism.

When you can obey God consistently with your duty to men always do it. Some men are everlastingly blundering by getting this grand old rule reversed and, like Daniel, Paul and Peter, running their heads against the "powers that be." Why not better to be like Naaman of old in the house of Rimmon, a "genial Christian gentleman?" Some folks think God is such a tyrant as to make his own will the law for all intelligences in the universe; and others think they have a special mission to vindicate the Supreme One from such tyranny as they would call it. The old Book that some, even in this advanced age, revere, and suppose that it teaches the sovereignty of God is not very popular in this conservative period.

All conservatives are not far seeing enough to know when to get on the right side of a moral issue. Lyman Beecher and the editor of the Christian Cynosure kicked and pounded Prince Alcohol and slavery when it cost something to be anti-wrong. Of course persecution and danger were the result. Just so the prophets acted with like results. The son of Lyman Beecher, who seems now about to evolve into a transparency, was shrewd enough to know when to take sides with a reform movement as opposed to slavery and intemperance. The Erasmus of this 19th century (smart man that he is) now that liberal Christianity (?) is going it rampant, has just broken connection with his church and denomination and now declares his distellowship of the Westminster declaration of faith. Will not the scientists be glad? We might hope were he not now an old man that he might live to see the day when he could prudently take sides with the anti-lodge reform. When he was requested by the venerated man of God, C. G. Finney, to publish against Masonry, he knew quite well that the auspicious time for a shrewd conservative had not arrived to commit himself to this unpopular reform. He knew the lodge was Lucifer's pet, his anointed, and to touch it would at least be bad policy. See H. W. Beecher's new (?) departure as published to the world. Now it is just as easy to please the flesh and have all men speak well of us as to be like the Old and New Testament saints who so often met with grief just because they failed to be such conservatives as now adorn our churches, our ministry and our religious papers.

The New York Weekly Witness has sweetly ignored the N. C. A. and its annuals. Do you, Mr. Editor, know whether the Witness knew of the Batavia anti-secret convention? Possibly he may have noticed the convention in question yet I have seen no such notice, though a constant reader of the Witness for the past ten years. Did not that paper take notice of many things of less magnitude, I might conclude that the editor in the day of prosperity had come to "despise the day of small things." Fearless and outspoken as he has been in the past, against the secret crafts, and faithful as he is now on all other moral issues, it would be uncharitable to think he is getting conservative on the question of "the orders." Yet how he could overlook the Batavia convention in his own State and then put in a long notice of a Good Templar convention, with seeming endorsement, when a few years ago his testimony against the lodge was frequent and unequivocal, is to me not clear.

From Elder Austin.

GOSHEN, IND.

To my friends of the reform work:—It having been some time since I have appeared before you in the columns of the Cynosure, and feeling that I have many friends who would like to know that I am still alive, and alive in the reform work, and have not turned my back upon the cause nor upon the cause of Christ, I write. I am still endeavoring to fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold on eternal life, and also to declare the whole counsel of God. I am often assured that Freemasonry and secretism has abated none of its malice or persecution towards me. I was assured but a few days ago from an Oddfellow that the Masons and Oddfellows of this place had combined together to prevent my getting business. He told that he considered it the meanest thing he ever knew, and that he had resolved to have no more to do with them.

I have no compromise to make with them, and no retreat from the warfare, it is victory at the end. I want to say to my friends that I have never done more I think for the cause than since I have been here. About three months ago I secured the use of a column in the Independent, published at Goshen, Ind. It has a circulation at present of about four thousand copies weekly, and through that column I have been able to give light on the darkness of Masonry. When I came here last winter the Masons were proud and defiant, now the Masons are long favored and silent. Now we have a county ticket in the field. I have canvassed nearly the whole county, and lectured. Have sent a circular to nearly all the churches addressed to the Christian voters. The German Baptists in this county are quite numerous but non-voting, they are opposed to secretism. God is with us and we feel that victory is drawing nigh. Your fellow laborer in the cause of Christ.

JOEL H. AUSTIN.

Bro. Bancroft's Tour.

MONROE, Wis., Oct. 30, 1882.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I am home once more and suppose you have been wondering what has become of me and the big bundle of Cynosure tracts you kindly furnished me for my Eastern tour. I passed through Michigan, Canada, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont. I scattered a few on almost all the trains I rode on, but most in the cities where I stopped. I attended the county fair at Keene, N. H., spent about two hours in distributing tracts; no one refused to take them. I also had to wait about two hours in St. Albans, Vt. I spent the time on the principal streets, handing tracts to every one I met; a few refused to take them. I was detained also in Belleville, Canada, for several hours after I had made my visit, and I distributed all I had ready. I finished up all I had at Kalamazoo, Mich. I was sorry that I had not taken a few more, for afterward I found a man on the train who said that he believed the saloonists were going to rule our country. I told him I could tell him of a power that ruled them—secret societies. He said he had never thought of that; but after talking awhile to him he said he would like to know more about the secret order. I told him of your publishing house, and that you would send him a list of your publications and price if he would write you; he took your address and said he would surely write.

I expected ere this to be out on a lecturing tour, but I was thrown from my horse and hurt, so I am not able to at present, but shall be, I presume, ere long. I was not hurt much, only brused, and am rather sore and lame yet.

I was well paid for going to the Batavia Convention. It was a grand success—great good will come out of it. Let us press forward until victory is inscribed on all our banners.

Yours for the war, I. BANCROFT.

From the Outlook of a Sick Room.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Through your highly-prized columns I wish to give my testimony of the wonderful dealings of God with his unworthy handmaiden.

For the past two years the furnace fires have been seven times hotter than their wanted heat, and through misfortune and sickness of self and family, I was brought almost to the day, as I thought, when my Father would say, "It is is enough; come up higher."

But his ways are not our ways. He sent a loving brother in the flesh, to lift us from our little Laban post-office, out of our sickness and poverty and lay us gently down in the lap of luxury, and bade us "lay aside every care, and get well." Feeling it was God's will we have quietly submitted, and are obeying to the best of our ability.

I take it all as from the hand of the Lord, in verification of his many precious promises to those who are on promised ground. I know that long since every faculty of my being was wholly submitted to his will, and I have and am living in sweet communion with him.

Though I have so long been shut almost entirely within four walls, I have not been unacquainted with, nor uninterested in the great battle going on between light and darkness in our land.

Such informants as the Cynosure, Wesleyan, Bible Standard, New York Witness, and other like messengers have brought faithful and truthful reports from all our borders.

These, again, have been sent out as seeds scattered to the wind, and I expect to keep them going, even here in Beloit, Mitchell county, Kas., where lodge rule is triumphant, and the M. E. minister goes at midnight to address the Oddfellows at their grand ball. "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness." As far as my ability and opportunity goes, the whole weight shall go right in the face of those who dare stand in the sacred desk, handling the Word of God deceitfully by having bound themselves to other gods, and serving them most faithfully. If I had money of my own to back it up with, I would send out one long, loud Macedonian cry for help for Kansas, especially in this town, to break the power that binds men, and women, too, for here they have a secret lodge.

MRS. L. T. MCKUNE.

Our Mail.

L. Prentice, Easton, Kansas:

"Am thinking strongly of devoting my time to the sale and circulation of anti-secret literature, hoping thereby to aid in arousing the masses who are sleeping like Samson while being bound by the lodge power. * * * My zeal is getting up to white heat. * * I might lecture perhaps occasionally. * * I take six or seven papers but read none with more interest than the Cynosure."

Active Christian workers are much needed. Death is thinning our ranks. New avenues are opening for work. Will be glad to welcome you to the ranks of our noble army.

Laura L. Thompson, Lockport, N. Y.:

"I do not like to lose a chapter of the Reform Story. I shall want the book when it is published. I will also pray for a blessing on your labors. I am a friend of fourscore years. Three score years in the Holy War."

John and Lucy Hepburn, Silver Creek, Oreg.:

"We hear plenty of men talk against Masonry here that we did not hear a word from when we came here four years ago, and begin to take courage. Thanks be to God for all the light of the gospel. * * We love to read the proceedings of the Batavia Convention. Think H. H. Hinman's writings and instructions excellent. The privilege granted to women at the Batavia Convention we regard as a giant step in reform. When men become as little children in Christ Jesus, they are willing to receive woman as an equal."

John B. White, Chandlersville, Ohio:

"Success to the work."

Geo. Brokaw, Washington, Iowa:

"I never expect to vote for a secret order officer knowingly."

Mrs. R. Schnellbecker, Mankato, Kan.:

"There are a good many anti-secret folks, but we need organization, I hope and pray that the time when secrecy will be done away will soon be here. I will do all I can for the reform."

John Whiteford, missionary to poor prisoners, Washington, D. C.:

"Brothers Stoddard and Hinman are evidently men of God, filled with the Holy Ghost. They will puncture the devil's mock figure of light and the world will be astonished at the emptiness of the follies they admired."

D. D. Gibson, Springville, Ia.:

"Our town is cursed with two lodges, one Freemason and one Odd-fellow. * * In walking about town one can feel the chilly atmosphere. I see no great difference here between the church and the lodge."

Wm. M. Bowker, Herrickville, Pa.:

"We had an anti-secret convention at our church in East Herrick. Some accuse us of raising a disturbance. Well, be it so. Christ and the disciples raised the greatest disturbance of any in known history, and yet it needs the Master and the scourge, as when he drove the traders and noble grands out of the temple."

Nathan Callender, Rush, Pa.:

"Permit me to say to our reform friends that our meeting at East Herrick was a success. Noble men and women testified to the truth against the lodge worships in the churches. * * * There are at East Herrick a noble band of live men and women, full of enterprise and of the Holy Spirit. One Odd-fellow, brother Saunders, of Clifford, Susquehanna Co., Pa., gave us his renunciation of the order with very good reasons for his course."

A new book, which the Nation deems, from the circumstances of its production and publication, worthy a place among the "curiosities of literature," has been published in Reykiavik, the capital of Iceland, by Emar Thordarson, the leading publisher of that distant land. Its title is "Brynjolfur Sveinsson," and the author Mrs. Torfhildur Thorstimdottir Holm; who resides in Selkirk West, Manitoba, Canada. It is the first historical novel ever published in Icelandic, and the first novel ever written by an Icelandic woman. The scene of the story is in Iceland, about the middle of the 17th century.

"In The Coils" is proving to be the fastest selling and most popular book ever published in our church. Nearly 1,000 copies have been sold in the four worst book months of the year. A new edition will be issued soon. Evidently the Omaha parson has "struck oil."—Christian Instructor.

Good Literature is growing into a place among the valued and popular literary papers. Its selections from foreign publications are generally good, while its reviews and notes are choice and timely.

Vick's Magazine for November, tells to prune grapes and lay them down for the winter now. Even the hardy Concords are better off for some protection. Parasitic plants, sunflowers, and flowers in school grounds are part of the good things of the number.

St. Nicholas Magazine, (a better name should be found for so rich a periodical), presents one of its most brilliant numbers for November. The sketch of Tad Lincoln and the description of torpedoes are good.

The December number of the North American Review is to contain two symposiums, one on the health of American Women, by Dr. Jas. R. Chadwick, Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Dr. Dio Lewis; and the other on Success on the Stage, by John McCullough, Madame Modjeska, Joseph Jefferson, Lawrence Barrett, Maggie Mitchell and William Warren.

Words of Life for every Day.

SANCTIFY THEM THROUGH THY TRUTH; THY WORD IS TRUTH.

Thursday, November 16.—And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved. Matt. 24:12-13.

Friday, November 17.—But woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye tithe mint and rue and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God: these ought ye to have done and not to leave the other undone. Luke 11: 42.

Saturday, November 18.—A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another. John 13:34-35.

Sabbath, November 19.—For dogs have compassed me: the assembly of the wicked have enclosed me; they pierced my hands and my feet. Ps. 22:16.

Monday, November 20.—If ye keep my commandments ye shall abide in my love, even as I have kept my father's commandments and abide in his love. John 15:10.

Tuesday, November 21.—Ye have not chosen me but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain; that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you. John 15:16.

Wednesday, November 22.—O, righteous Father, the world hath not known thee: but I have known thee, and these have known that thou hast sent me. And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it; that the love wherewith thou hast loved me, may be in them, and I in them. John 17:25-26.

The vague reports which come to us from the upper Nile of the military operations of the so-called "False Prophet," convey but little idea to the average reader of the importance of the wide spreading revival of Mohammedan piety, or fanaticism, of which these operations are the most formidable manifestation. The situation is at least interesting. The danger of the future, whether immediate or more remote, arises from the growing power of the Khoman, or semi-political, semi-religious fraternities, which seem destined to cover all north Africa with a web of Moslem Freemasonry. This powerful brotherhood is less than thirty years old, but already threatens to overshadow, if not absorb, other older but less militant organizations. All these orders differ in form, but claim to be founded on the pure tenets of Islam as expounded in the Koran. Each also claims to have had its origin in a dream of its founder, who is supposed to have had a revelation from Mohammed as to the most acceptable way of salvation. Each order has a Supreme Director, or Khalifa, and the seat of the order in any locality is called a Zaouia, which seems to be at once a chapel, a school, a place of refuge, a hospital, a library and a political debating club. Further, the brethren are charged with the task of preserving a complete record of contemporaneous events. The most celebrated and important of all these Zaouas was that founded by Senoussi, about thirty years ago, at Djarbub, an oasis about twenty-two days' journey inland from Benghazi and not very far, therefore, from the western frontier of upper Egypt. He then established no less than 300 of these convent sanctuaries in every considerable place between Morocco and Mecca, and appointed mukaddemin, or vicars, in every part of Islam.

Senoussi died in 1800, leaving two sons, of whom the eldest bore the name of El Mehdi, or the director. Before dying he sent out many emissaries among his followers, telling of a glorious future in store for his son. Four years ago El Mehdi withdrew from his followers and became a hermit, which greatly increased his influence among them. Then their attention was called to a prophecy that on the 12th of November, 1882, El Mehdi, or Messiah, shall appear. He will be exactly 40 years old, have one arm longer than the other, his father's name Mohammed, his mother's Fatina, and he will be hidden for a time before his manifestation.

The old Senoussi's name was Mohammed, and the right hand of the elder son, El Mehdi, reaches to his knee. But El Mehdi has not waited for the 12th of November to manifest himself. Possibly he found matters ripe in the interior sooner than he anticipated. Possibly events were precipitated by the Egyptian crisis. Be that as it may, he appeared at the head of an army a few months ago at Darfur, and, marching upon the upper Nile, utterly defeated the Egyptian general who, at the head of 2,000 men, went out to meet him. His later operations are surrounded by a good deal of doubt, and it is hard to distinguish new intelligence, now coming down the Nile, from information which started before the interruption of communications by Arabi which was stopped on its way, and now with the removal of the obstructions, is finding its way to Cairo and to Christendom.

Meantime, the Turkish papers at Constantinople always speak of El Mehdi as the "False Prophet," but, though that may be the view taken of him by the Moslems in European Turkey, it remains to be seen how far it will be adopted by the rest of Islam. No doubt much will depend upon his success and upon the sanction he receives from the mosque of El Azhar in Cairo, from the spiritual authorities in Mecca and from the various colleges of Ulemas scattered throughout the East.

All this means that the defeat of Arabi is but the beginning of the contest with the reviving spirit of Mohammedan fanaticism which is arming itself in North Africa for a death-grapple with Christian civilization.—St. Louis Evening Chronicle.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1882.

"We all vote the American Ticket."—This was fretfully said, over and again, on election day by Republicans and Democrats. It was said in our hearing where four out of six county candidates and the Republican and Democratic nominees for State office were members of the lodge which makes no secret of owing supreme allegiance to the laws of the lodge when they conflict with the laws of the United States! The cry, "We all vote the American ticket" is but a confession of what Americans ought to do, but do not when they vote for Masons who are sworn aliens, who have again and again openly defied and still defy our laws, courts and Legislatures.

Elder Eli Farnham.—We give, in another column, a sketch of one of the founders of Galesburg and Knox College. The picture, though given by his youngest child, is not overdrawn; and though longer than we usually publish will be read with interest by the old, and with profit by the younger citizens of Galesburg. Mr. Farnham was a reader of the Cynosure and a friend of the reform which it represents. I have known him long and intimately, and I never knew a more blameless disciple of Christ, or clearer-headed man. He reared an excellent family of children who "rise up and call him blessed." "Mark the perfect man and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace."

The Cynosure.

It is hoped every reader of the Cynosure has wondered deeply at Secretary Stoddard's proposal, in last week's issue, to "Take Washington;" and will ponder with equal zeal and earnestness, his article in the present number; and also, (for he is not through) what may yet follow from his "pen" concerning the paper.

This is the substance: That the lodge dragon is not yet awake, but will awake when his den is invaded and his craft is endangered by our descent on Washington; and that we have no adequate defence against him but to nationalize the Cynosure by a national subscription list. When Mr. Butler was asked, "Is there room for the Cynosure and the Freeman (of which he is editor) in Missouri?" he replied, "Yes, indeed! When you have fifty thousand subscribers, we shall have ten thousand." Mr. Butler comprehends and takes a stateman's view of the relation of a national to State organs for the reform. Each aids the other.

I have written seldom and but little on this subject. I wish now to anticipate and answer all possible objections, and aid, as I may, Mr. Stoddard's plan for raising a subscription list.

And first: "The Cynosure is private property." Ans. So was the Anti-Slavery Philanthropist. Yet we raised several thousand dollars to keep it running in Cincinnati; and when Lewis Tappan raised five thousand dollars and sent it to Washington, it paid handsomely for a time; but was battered by the Know Nothings, and left the owner's family poor. But, under God, it saved the nation.

"It is higher than the New York Witness." Ans.—It is lower than its neighbors. The Weekly Witness began by using the type of the daily, which failed after sinking tens of thousands. But the weekly saved a good list and survived. It prints now 120,000 copies. Give the Cynosure one half as many names and we will give a better paper as cheap.

"Why has it not a large list now?" Ans.—Because it has had neither church nor political party behind it; but has lived on crumbs from denominational and political tables. Because reform papers grow slow. The Religious Telescope, with a church behind it, and every preacher an agent, received eighteen thousand dollars in donations and legacies, which swelled the amount to near thirty thousand before it sustained itself. Again, because it has for years helped to raise the publishing fund; for other years, the monument, etc.; which engrossed Secretary Stoddard's time and thoughts. It had no elections and church meetings to make it a necessity, and thousands have taken it and liked it, but dropped it for their church and party papers.

"But the Cynosure needs improvement." Ans—Give it a national subscription list, and it shall have it. No paper shall excel it.

"How has it lived thus far?" Ans.—Mr. Carpenter virtually sustained the whole movement for several years. Since then, it has lived by the severe economy and self-devotion of Mr. and Mrs. Cook, and the indomitable energy and toil of comparatively a few devoted friends One moderate farmer in Indiana, viz., Benjamin Ulsh, self-moved, has gotten one hundred subscribers. There are others like him, God's heroes, and he has their names in his book.

"Is Chicago the best place?" Ans.—An attempt is now being made to bring Our Union, now published in New York, (women's temperance paper;) and unite it with the Signal in Chicago. Neither of those excellent papers sustain themselves even now, though the wave of temperance floods the whole land. You learn more of Congress from the Chicago dailies than from Washington dailies, and as soon!

"Can the thing be done?" Ans.—We are beginning to vote now. And there are hundreds of thousands in the United States who wish the lodge dead.

"But how can the thing be done?" Ans.—Read Mr. Stoddard and see. Faith conquers all.

The Elections.

Our readers will have learned by telegram before this writing can reach them, that majorities in the thirty-one States which voted Nov. 7th, have "tossed from hand to hand" like Byron's thunderbolts in the Alps; and the hopes and aspirations of politicians have brightened, faded and flitted like the imposing mockeries of a dream.

Republican States have gone Democratic, and at least one Democratic State has gone Republican. The good St. John has been defeated by Republicans in Kansas; while all the other Republican candidates there are elected. This is the work of "The true Temperance party!" The candidate for governor, Bishop, who got on his political knees before the lodge, has gone down before "Sublime Prince" Ben Butler, in the strong Republican State of Massachusetts. Ohio had gone to the Democrats before the great Republican land-slide. The party there went for the Sabbath and against prohibition, and met the fate of trimmers. Nothing looks and fares worse than a man or party whose principles are good and practice bad. Such has been the Republican party between the temperance voters and the voters for liquor. Both sides distrusted it.

If we may venture to generalize results, they teach the following lessons:

1. That both parties, as we have taught, were "dead while they live." They had no principles and no issues; and hence the voters broke loose.

2. The only constant forces in the canvass have been lodge and liquor. The gentlemanly and capable Joseph Hart of LaSalle county, Ill., was Republican candidate for the State Senate of Illinois. In his own Republican town he was beaten by a Democrat, five hundred and upward to 193. The explanation is, he was known to be opposed to both liquor and the lodges, though he took no part with the Prohibitionists or Americans. "The silent hog eats the swill;" and in this canvass, the lodge has proved to be the silent hog fed on still-slops.

3. The results are auguries for reform. In 1844, Clay went down before Polk, when there were Anti-slavery and Whig votes enough to have elected him. So it is ever. The party which has most reformers in it, suffers first from a rising reform. Webster said, "The Whig party is the true liberty party." But, refusing to go for liberty, it sunk and its very name was blotted out.

The Republicans have now nothing to do but to join the American party as the old Whigs went to the Free-Soilers, along with reform Democrats, and called themselves Republicans new naming the Anti-slavery party. The Republican party as such, can never rise from its present fall. It has nothing to rise by or stand on if arisen. There is no more a Democratic party than there is a Republican party. The conquerors of Nov. 7th, are "The Independent Scratchers." The name Democrat is popular, and will live; but that name has succumbed to principle for the last twenty-two years, and it will yield again, to principle and nothing else. The American people may continue to drink wine and cider of their own making; but the still, brewery, and dram-shop are unpopular, and the lodge is unpopular. It has never dared to put itself upon issue before the American people. It has carried thousands of elections, but never one in its own name! It is un-Americau and anti-American. It is coward, sneak, thief, and liar; and lives as they do. It sinks before popular discussion. In Morgan times, it lived, only by feigning dead, like cowards on battle-fields.

When the American people come to see that politics can recognize us without coercing conscience, or oppressing men; that the Bible taken from American children robs them of forty centuries of authentic history; and takes from them the only standard of law and morals; and when they see that the American party platform is the only one which will sweep off Mormonism from marriage, give the laborer his rest-day, and shield him from monopolists, and that this platform consists of the very identical principles in which the United States of America were "born and brought up," men's hearts will turn to it as steel turns to loadstone.

A Political Letter.

TO THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS IN SPICELAND, IND.

Tonica, Ill., Nov. 1, 1882.

Beloved in the Lord:—A letter from my wife speaks of "your fragrant letter from Spiceland." Your town is certainly fortunate in its name, and equally so in its inhabitants. Having, according to a wise prayer, "neither poverty nor riches," you have health, comfort, and intelligence beyond the ordinary lot of men. And judging from my observation in your schools and religious meetings, you ought to be a grateful and happy people.

It is natural that you should be Republicans. In our country's great agony, Democrats, misled by their party name, nearly sold us to national disunion and destruction. But parties like men should die when their work is done.

Your eloquent member of Congress who addressed you in your meeting-house last Saturday night, erected to the Republican party a proud monument, built of broken fetters and restored rights. But it was not an exception to other monuments—it was built for the dead. Gen. Brown's strongest appeal for your votes was based on the fact that he had voted against his party on important bills! Notably the Chinese bill which violated, he said, the fundamental doctrine of the Government, viz., the equality of man. He had also voted against the "River and Harbor Bill," which he denounced as a "steal." It appropriated, he said, millions to improve streams, one of which ordinarily lacked water to swim a goose. But he said this corrupt measure was paped by Republicans and Democrats alike; one reason surely why both the old parties should give way to a third, or new party as the existing parties fell before Republicanism.

But your representative's speech was most significant, for what he did not say. He knew that the party platform ignore and omit God, the source of civil power, from our living politics. He knew that the Bible, with its forty centuries of authentic history, is being pushed from our schools, leaving the national education without a standard of law or morals. He knew that a day of religious rest is being taken from the laborers. Above all, he knew that Mormonism and Masonry are supplanting the civil oath by the strange oaths of the Endowment House and the lodge; yet, as your political adviser, he omitted and left out of his long speech nearly everything which you need to know and which an upright statesman would have said.

The country is reeling and rocking under the question of suppressing the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors; and Gen. Brown told you he was in favor of submitting that question to the people, but he did NOT say whether you should vote for it, or whether he would himself. He said if a majority of the people voted to put prohibition into the Constitution, they had a right to do so, and the minority should acquiesce. But he did not tell you whether his vote would help make the majority for or against liquor, which is what the movement is for! Douglas did not care whether slavery was voted up or down; and Gen. Brown did not tell you whether, in his opinion, liquor or its prohibition should be voted up or down!

But while Gen. Brown would allow the people to have prohibition if a majority should vote it, the Republican party, as such, is against it. Republicans refused to make St. John's nomination unanimous. Leading Republican papers denounce prohibition and local platforms declare it unconstitutional.

There is a swing in nations as there is a libration in planets, and our politics are returning to the recognition of God, in which our Government began. Will the respected friends addressed in these letters—those, at least, into whose hands the paper may fall, turn to "the Platform of the American Party," in another column, and read this mirror of reform, join the American party and vote for its candidates. If, in 1884, we poll no more than fifty thousand votes, in 1888 this party can elect St. John, or some statesman of like principles; intemperance and idolatry will perish before discussion, and the United States become that "happy people whose God is the Lord." J. B.

—Secretary Stoddard says of the proposed Wisconsin convention: "A notice from Rev. E. Collins, President of the Wisconsin State Association, calling their annual convention at Oshkosh, Nov. 21st and 22d inst., has just been received. I have written Bro. Collins that, D. V., I will be present and make an effort to secure the attendance of other speakers. This meeting is very important, and every friend of the cause in Wisconsin who can should be present. Bro. C. premises free entertainment and the public introduction of our work into this center of influence should be attended with numbers of friends and demonstration of the Spirit's power."

—Although our supplement this week relieves in a degree the pressure upon our columns several dear friends whom we dislike to put off are waiting their turn. Good letters from Bro. S. C. Kimball, in New Hampshire, Prof. P. S. Feemster in Kansas, Mrs. J. F. Browne in Kentucky, Bro. A. D. Zaraphonithes the missionary in Greece, now laboring in Smyrna and vicinity in Asia Minor, and others, will be read in the Cynosure next week.

—President J. Blanchard, the editor of the Cynosure, is under promise to go to Oshkosh, Wisconsin, on the 21st and 22nd inst., to help on the State Convention. Friends in Wisconsin, the time is short, but you have brave and earnest spirits. Let there be a good record made at this meeting.

—Attention is called to the circular of Wheaton College on the 13th page of this paper. Among the best equipped of our Western colleges and foremost in the inculcation of those great moral principles which must ever be the bulwark of the Christian church, however unpopular it may be to urge them, the institution at Wheaton deserves the patronage of hundreds of homes that are either neglecting the education of their children or are sending them where there can be no gain of strength to their moral convictions. Read the notice.

—The Vanguard, of St. Louis, has just come under the management of Rev. C. W. Sherman, Rev. W. L. Ellis retiring to resume the work of an evangelist. The paper, a while since, made a sore charge against C. W. Wilson, who has with singular ability and amid many discouragements conducted the Gath Rimmon in the same city. We are glad to see the charge withdrawn in the last Vanguard as erroneous and unjust.

Shall we Plant a Standard in Washington?

CHICAGO, Nov. 10, 1882.

It is easy to say yes or no, but that will not determine the matter. There are costs to be counted and facts to be considered before entering upon an undertaking of such magnitude. Are we able to take a stand and maintain it in the stronghold of our adversary? Our cause does not demand a failure, and it would be perilous, if not ruinous, to make an effort and not succeed. That it is the strategic point of the nation we may learn from the children of this world, who are wise in their generation. The "chief apostate" knows where to intrench and where to strike. Take the "back track" of any important secret movement you may find on the remote frontier, and follow it to its source, and you will land at the corner of Ninth and F streets, Washington, where Freemasonry has erected its "TEMPLE" of worship, the citadel of its strength, the watch-tower of its sentinels, and the bastile of its inquisitorial retribution. Here, too, is the abiding place of the chief executive in the "secret empire," whose simple endorsement has secured lucrative appointments in instances where the recommendations of Congressmen had utterly failed. To meet such an antagonist in his own fastnesses and disarm him of his power, is not a work of simple impulse or a matter of brave resolve, but it requires solid shot and a steady aim. Scattering tracts and making speeches to a few curious listeners or consecrated men and women, will not draw the fire or rouse the energy of the lodge in Washington, but when a sure foundation is laid, and the "roll-call" of anti-secrecy is heard under the shadow of the Capitol, andat the very citadel of secrecy, every "masked battery" from one end of the land to the other would open fire and such an onslaught as would follow the planting of our reform in Washington, no temporary expedient or ill-advised measure could stand for a single year. Better never to make the attempt than to expose our cause to almost certain failure; but better still to take a stand, "trusting in God," use discretion and succeed.

To do this, in my judgment, two or three things are indispensable.

1. The fee-simple of suitable headquarters must be secured, so as to avoid the possibility of being driven from the field or seriously annoyed by timid or unfriendly landlords.

2. The people away from the center must be reached and constantly informed of what is going on at the headquarters of the nation and of the "Secret Empire."

3. Prof. E. D. Bailey, or some other capable, judicious man, must be equipped and stationed where he can gather facts and report regularly every week through our Chicago organ.

The first may be secured by the safe investment of a few thousand dollars; the second by increasing the circulation of the organ of our reform, and the third by the appointing and annointing of the man whom God shall choose, as he chose Dr. Bailey to speak to the nation's conscience through the National Era.

How shall the money be raised to buy or build a home for our reform in Washington? I answer, that it is doubtful if a man can be found who will do for the cause at the national capital what Mr. Carpenter has done for it in Chicago. There are men of means, however, who have expressed a willingness to co-operate in any feasible plan that gives promise of permanent success, and others will be found.

The second point: How to reach the people, is first in importance and ought, perhaps, to be put first in order of time. A successful farmer once said to a young man in my presence, "Clear your land; cultivate your fields; and your farm will build you a fine house, but the fine house won't make the farm." There is truth in this remark of a practical man, that applies to the case in question. Readers whose hearts are enlisted and who are in possession of facts make a good cause strong on the human side, and the cause in turn sustains the paper that furnishes the facts, and the paper builds the house in which the cause may live; but the house won't subdue the fields or develop their resources unless communication is open and kept up between the two. There are two ways in which, as it seems to me, this may be done: First, by employing and paying agents to canvass for subscribers; and second, by the united efforts of all present readers and friends of our organ, in extending its circulation. The first involves an expense which ought if practicable to be saved to the cause, and besides it is less efficient and of necessity more local than the second method. There are now on the Cynosure list 4,153 names of persons who are scattered over a wide range of country, and brought in daily contact with persons who might be enlisted as readers and active workers in reform. I have examined the question of expenses and am clear that the cause is honestly indebted to its organ and that its publisher has born an undue share of the burden of its maintenance. No one wishes him to do so and each by adding one or more names to the list may bear a share in the payment of an honest claim upon the cause, forestall the accumulation of further indebtedness, and at the same time reach homes and hearts that are needing the facts and truth contained in each weekly issue of the Association's organ. The expense thus saved to the cause by volunteer rather than paid canvassers would soon liquidate all claims for past services and put this indispensible agency of our work on a sound basis.

This obstacle removed we could look the next question of entering Washington "to stay" in the face without a quiver. The channels would then be open from the center to the circumference of our country, and as the currents passed through the channels would widen and deepen, until the land would be flooded with light and and the "night lodge" and its twin brother the dram shop flee away as slavery was cast down and is being speedily consumen by the advancing intelligence of the people. Very much will depend upon the ability and skill of the man at Washington in gathering facts; more on the mechanical execution of the work rendering the appearance of our paper attractive; and most of all upon its intrinsic excellence as a teacher and reporter upon the living questions and vital issues pending. Increased circulation will give corresponding increase of names, and make much needed improvement possible. I believe it can be done, and that now when finances are comparitively easy is the time to do it.

—The Illinois Royal Arch Masons report their number at 11,260, an increase of 853 during the year. There are 165 active chapters, but to these the proportion of dead chapters is more than 1 to 9. The suspended members number 201; demitted 370.

—Bishop Wright prints a powerful editorial in his paper. the Richmond Star, with the title, "Should Secretists be Disciplined?" He will publish it also as a tract for wide distribution, especially through the United Brethren church, to whose case it particularly applies.

Wisconsin.

The Wisconsin State Convention will be held at Oshkosh on the 21st and 22d of November. We want every county in the State well represented. Let the friends of reform make a general rally. Little reform work has been done in this part of the State and we wish to make a strong impression in favor of the truth. Let us make some sacrifice to be present. Bro. Stoddard and other able speakers will be present. Ample arrangements will be made for entertainment of delegates. Come then, one and all.

ENOS COLLINS,
President.

Minnesota.

By request of the friends in the southwestern part of the State, the fifth annual convention of the Minnesota Christion Association will be held in the court house in Blue Earth City, Faribault county, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, December 6th, 7th and 8th, 1882. Blue Earth City is the terminus of the Blue Earth City branch of the C. St. Paul, M. & O. railroad. The friends offer free entertainment and invite a full attendance. Those intending to come will please send their names to Rufus Johnson, Blue Earth City, Minn. Reduced railroad fare returning, on all roads, to those who pay full fare coming. Opening lecture Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock, by Rev. J. P. Stoddard. President C. A. Blanchard is expected to deliver a series of lectures.

HOME CIRCLE.

Live with God.

Begin the day with God:
  Kneel down to him in prayer;
Lift up thy heart to his abode,
  And seek his love to share.

Open the book of God,
  And read a portion there,
That it may hallow all thy thoughts,
  And sweeten all thy care.

Go through the day with God:
  Whate'er thy work may be,
Where'er thou art—at home, abroad,
  He still is near to thee.

Converse in mind with God:
  Thy spirit heav'nward raise;
Acknowledge every good bestowed,
  And offer grateful praise.

Conclude the day with God,
  Thy sins to him confess,
Trust in the Lord's atoning blood,
  And plead his righteousness.

Lie down at night with God,
  Who gives his servant sleep;
And when thou tread'st the vale of death,
  He will thee guard and keep.

The Puritan Theory of Amusements.

The questions of amusements was to the Puritans a representative question, in which was involved the whole spirit of Christian living. They brought to its discussion the whole force of their intense religious nature. In their very make they were intense men. They were anthracite on fire. Without flame, or crackle, or smoke, their's was solid heat, burning still day and night. Such intensity of moral being they brought to all questions of practical life.

Such men felt no need of amusements. How could they? They were not born, as some men appear to be, at hap-hazard, without an aim in living, and with no power to create one. Their happiness did not depend on cat's cradle and push-pin. They did not know the meaning of the word "ennui." They came into this world as apostles. They came because they were sent. The echo of the voice which created them always sounded in their ears, and heralded their steps. Their's was a great mission. Their souls were straightened till it was accomplished. When invited, urged, bribed, cajoled, commanded, threatened, browbeaten, to induce them to dance around a Maypole on the village green, they calmly said. "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"

That which seemed to weaker natures a harmless or needful recreation seemed to them frivolity. When charged with excessive precision, said one of them for answer, "I have a precise God to deal with." They saw no record that Christ danced around poles, or amused himself with a jack-of-spades, or laughed at clowns and harlequins, or figured at masquerade balls. As they read his life they saw him seeking relief from life's burdens in the companionship of brothers and sisters, in the homes of Bethany, in the society of angels, in communion with God. They saw that to him midnight prayer took the place of midnight revels. They honestly tried to live as Christ lived. Why should they not?

Right or wrong, they believe this to be the true theory of life; and, what is more, they in good measure lived it. They enjoyed it. As a class, they were the happiest of mortals. If ever in this world men enjoyed life, they did, whenever tyranny would let them alone. And when it would not, they entertained each other with songs in prisons, and broke out with doxologies at the stake.

It may be well enough to revise their theory of amusements for later times and new generations. The constitutions of states rarely last a century without change; still less should a popular theory of recreations. We may wisely let up somewhat of Puritan pressure upon the modern conscience. We may bid Godspeed to anybody who thinks he can improve in this respect the usages of a Christian people. By all means, let us give him a hearing. Specially may we extend the law of Christian liberty in this thing. We may trustfully leave it to every man's conscience to say what recreations, in themselves innocent (as almost all recreations are,) will be a help to him in godly living.

But, after all, who can fail to see that the spirit of the Puritans on this subject was the Christian spirit? Who can help seeing that improvement, if it comes, must come from the same spirit? This was the spirit of a live conscience. It was the spirit of humble inquiry; it sought wisdom from God. It was the conservative spirit; it leaned to the safe side of moral questions. It was the profound spirit; it sought happiness in duties rather than in rights.

It is very easy to fling at the Puritans in this matter, but it is very weak. Every dog must have his bay at the moon, but healthy men sleep through it. So disparagement of the Puritans does not disturb sound thinkers. The world has outlived the wit of it. The libel of the "Blue Laws" has ceased to be amusing. If we could stay long enough to answer such disparagement, our answer would be to point to the men whom the Puritans' theories of life created. Not till the improved theories give us better women can we wisely believe that they are improvements. Not till children trained under such improvements turn out to be more Christlike men and women, more prayerful, more self-denying, more useful, happier, too, in the profound sense of spiritual joy, can we safely admit that their fathers are wiser than our fathers. For that proof the world must wait awhile—must wait long enough for us to do some things which the world is in more pressing need of than of an increase of amusements and of idle time.—From Dr. Phelps' "My Portfolio."

Pray in Secret.

Five minutes for reflection and self examination, ten for reading the Scriptures, and fifteen for prayer, daily, is about as little as most Christians can live upon. Many, it is true, have no special time or place for secret prayer, and therefore do not live. It can be spared as the ever-recurring time for our regular meal, and every consideration, temporal and eternal demands it. I was once profitably impressed with the importance of uniformity in this duty by that venerated ruling elder, the late John Alexander, of Lexington, Virginia. Soon after leaving his bed, and before he had fully dressed, and while others were talking around him, he took his Bible and sat down to enjoy the hidden manna.

The preaching of Larned and the preaching of Payson were pre-eminent for that unction which secret prayer alone can impart, and hence the peculiar power of the men. One of the richest prayers I ever enjoyed was by an eminent merchant in the prime of life, and immersed in business. Nothing but faithfulness in private prayer kept his spirit in this frame. This he intimated in reply to a question on the subject.

The question often arises, as to whether we shall kneel down in the presence of others, or pray mentally or literally in secret. Some feel that the one savors of ostentation, and some that the opposite indicates a fear of man. It is evident that either method is right, and that the one is best that most effectually subserves the great end for which secret prayer was enjoined.

Any Christians who succeed in wresting an hour a day, or possibly half-an-hour from the world, will experience the richness of those promises made in the Apocalypse to him that overcometh."—Presbyterian.

John Ploughman's Wisdom.

Good stuff is often twisted into queer shapes.
Don't spare the butcher and fee the doctor.
Sunday is the summer of the week.
Have no friends you dare not bring home.
Water plants before they wither.
One man's fault should be another man's lesson.
Soft words scald not the mouth.
Mind the corner where life's road turns.
It's no use mending the tank when the water is gone.
When prayers are strongest, mercies are nearest.
Care makes a man old before his time.
Flowers smell sweet whether men are near or not.
One tale is good till another's told.
He who gives before we ask, will give when we ask.
The goodness of news half lies in the hearer's ear.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

Why a Kerosene Lamp Bursts.

BY A CIVIL ENGINEER.

Girls, as well as boys, need to understand about kerosene explosions. A great many fatal accidents happen from trying to pour a little kerosene on the fire to make it kindle better, also by pouring oil into a lamp while it is lighted. Most persons suppose that it is the kerosene itself which explodes, and that if they are very careful to keep the oil itself from being touched by the fire or the light there will be no danger. But this is not so. If a can or a lamp is left about half full of kerosene oil the oil will dry up—that is, "evaporate"—a little, and will form, by mingling with the air in the upper part, a very explosive gas. You cannot see this gas any more than you can see air. But if it is disturbed and driven out, and a blaze reaches it, there will be a terrible explosion, although the blaze did not touch the oil. There are several other liquids used in houses and workshops which will produce an explosive vapor in this way. Benzine is one; burning fluid is another; and naptha, alcohol, ether, chloroform may do the same thing.

In a New York workshop, lately, there was a can of benzine, or gasoline, standing on the floor. A boy sixteen years old lighted a cigarette, and threw the burning match on the floor close to the can. He did not dream there was any danger, because the liquid was corked up in the can. But there was a great explosion, and he was badly hurt. This seems very mysterious. The probability is that the can had been standing there a good while and a good deal of vapor had formed, some of which had leaked out around the stopper and was hanging in a sort of invisible cloud, over and around the can and this cloud, when the match struck it, exploded.

Suppose a girl tries to fill a kerosene lamp without first blowing it out. Of course the lamp is nearly empty, or she would not care to fill it. This empty space is filled with a cloud of explosive vapor arising from the oil in the lamp. When she pushes the nozzle of the can into the lamp at the top, and begins to pour, the oil, running into the lamp, fills the empty space and pushes the cloud of explosive vapor up; the vapor is obliged to pour out over the edges of the lamp, at the top, into the room outside. Of course it strikes against the blazing wick which the girl is holding down by one side. The blaze of the wick sets the invisible cloud of vapor afire, and there is an explosion which ignites the oil and scatters it over her clothes and over the furniture of the room. This is the way in which a kerosene lamp bursts. The same thing may happen when a girl pours the oil over the fire in the range or stove, if there is a cloud of explosive vapor in the upper part of the can, or if the stove is hot enough to vaporize quickly some of the oil as it falls. Remember that it is not the oil but the invisible vapor which explodes. Taking care of the oil will not protect you. There is no safety except in the rule: Never pour oil on a lighted fire or into a lighted lamp.—Christian Union.

The Bridle of the Tongue.

"How have you prospered to-day, my son?" said Mrs. Stone.

"First-rate, mother; and I think it is because I remembered the verse you gave Sadie and me this morning. You see, we were playing at 'blind-man's-buff,' and the boys would peep so as to see us. I was so provoked that I wanted to speak right out sharp; but every time I began I could see that verse real plain: 'He that is slow to anger, is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his spirit, than he that taket ha city;'

and I did not say a word. It was hard work, though, to keep from speaking."

"I do not doubt it, Willie; but I am very glad that my little boy was so brave. I think it often requires more true courage to hold the bridle of the tongue, than that of a horse."

"That verse helped me, too," said Sadie. "I was hurrying along, so as to call on Julia Howard before school, but just as I turned the corner, old Mrs. Lane opened her window and asked me if I would go over to Mr. Pinkham's store and get a bundle for her. I was so disappointed I wanted to say 'No;' but that verse came into my mind so quick, I said 'Yes'm,' and ran along."

"You did quite right, my children," said Mrs. Stone, "and have each gained a victory that is better than taking a city."—Well-Spring.

Scripture Problem.

Set down first the number of men who went to seek Elijah when he was carried up to heaven. Multiply this by the number of days during which Job's friends sat by him without speaking a word, when they came to comfort him. Multiply again by the number of days which Jericho was compassed by the Israelites. Subtract the number of men that Samson killed with the jawbone. Divide by the number of stones which David carried with him when he went to kill Goliah. Subtract the years of the Babylonish captivity. Add the number of furlongs between Bethany and Jerusalem. Add the age that the Psalmist said is generally the limit of the life of man in this world. Multiply the number of Jacob's sons by the number of years in which Solomon was building the temple, and subtract the product from the above sums. Add the number of years in which the Israelites were, for their sins, obliged to wander in the wilderness. Subtract one from the sum and we have the number of chapters in the New Testament. LESSON IX Nov. 26, 1882.—HIS DEATH ON THE CROSS.—Mark xv, 27-37.

(27) And with him they crucify two thieves; the one on his right hand, and the other on his left. (28) And the scripture was fulfilled, which saith, And he was numbered with the transgressors. (29) And they that passed by railed on him, wagging their heads and saying, Ah! thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, (30) Save thyself, and come down from the cross. (31) Likewise also the chief priests, mocking, said among themselves with the scribes, He saved others, himself he cannot save. (32) Let Christ, the King of Israel, descend now from the cross, that we may see and believe. And they that were crucified with him reviled him. (33) And when the sixth hour was come, there was darkness over the whole land until the ninth hour. (34) And at the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eloi, Eloi, lama sabacthani? Which is, being interpreted, My God! my God! why hast thou forsaken me? (35) And some of them that stood by, when they heard it, said, Behold, he calleth Elias. (36) And one ran and filled a sponge full of vinegar, and put it upon a reed, and gave him to drink, saying, Let alone; let us see whether Elias will come to take him down. (37) And Jusus cried with a loud voice, and gave up the ghost.

PROMPTINGS TO FURTHER STUDY.

If we suffer with him, what shall we also do with him? What kingly title is given to Jesus in the Revelation; and what armies are described as following him? What Scripture passage will give you a hint that the mockers would not have believed even if Jesus had come down from the cross? What effect did it have upon them when they learned that he had risen from the dead? Who took pleasure in reproach for Christ's sake? What is said by the apostle to those reproached for the name of Christ? —Scholar's Quarterly.

NOTES.

One on his right hand, and the other on his left. The three crosses which stood together on Mount Calvary are a continual emblem of our world. A dying Saviour had on one side of him an enemy and unbeliever, and on the other side a friend and believer. Thus it is to-day in every part of the globe where Christ is preached; thus it is in every Christian congregation; thus in almost every household.—Nehemiah Adams.

Descend from the cross, that we may believe. Men who hate the gospel are always proposing some test of its value, on which they would give it their confidence; but if that test were fairly met they would be all the more bitter in hostility to it, because of its new triumph. If Jesus had come down from the cross, the chief priests would have seen to it that he was fastened on again more securely than at first. Did it remove their hostility to him when he rose from the dead? Were they any readier to believe in him then? No, no. Whatever else keeps men from believing the gospel, it is not any lack of notable wonders wrought through its power. Whatever else might bring them to give in their confidence, there would be no gain in any fresh or greater miracles in its behalf. The trouble is, that men don't want to believe in Jesus; and they will always have a new excuse for refusing credence to every new proof of his supremacy. —Dr. Robinson.

There was darkness; or, "a darkness came." Early Christian writers speak of this, and appeal to heathen testimony in support of the fact. An eclipse is out of the question, for the moon was full. An earthquake followed (Matt. 27: 51,) but the darkness which precedes an earthquake is not so long or extended. This was supernatural; for since our Lord showed supernatural power in his life, his death, in view of its purpose, might well be attended with such events. It has been supposed to signify the mourning of nature, but it also stands connected with the hiding of God's face.—Riddle.

My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me! This cry refers to one utterly broken down for a time in a wretchedness beyond our conception. It was not mere death, which many a martyr has viewed without dismay, but the bearing of the sin of the world. All the inner horror of sin is revealed to him. Sin in its nakedness is more horrible than death. These words belong to Christ as burdened with the sins of the world. They express the complete separation which sin makes between man and God. He is the Advocate of all mankind, and their separation from God because of sin extends itself to him for a season.—Archbishop Thompson.

"Consider the following facts:" (i) Jesus is represented in the New Testament as subject to the whole experience of spiritual conflict which belongs to man. (2) He is represented in the prophets)Isa. 53; 5, 6) and the Epistles (2 Cor. 5: 21. Gal. 3: 13. 1 Pet. 2: 24) as taking upon himself the penalty of our sins, represented throughout the Bible as spiritual separation from God (Deut. 32: 20. Isa. 64: 7. 2 Thess. 1: 9.) (3) Some help toward an understanding of this cry may be derived from that phase of Christian experience in which, while the intellect still holds fast to its belief in God, the heart feels his presence no more, and the soul is in darkness, in spite of its faith in God (compare Matt. 11: 1-6. Exod. 17: 4. 1 Kings 19: 10. Ps. 10: 1. Jer. 12: 1, 2.) (4) That there was an inward conflict in Christ's soul, is indicated by the twofold nature of the cry: "My God" indicates an unrelaxed hold on him; "forsaken me" indicates a sense of bereavement of the divine presence. If these are inconsistent, the inconsistency repeats itself frequently in Christian experience. (5) It is the cry of innocence; the lost know that they are forsaken, but know why, and do not call on God as their God. It was, therefore, no literal transfer of the experience of remorse and spiritual death which Christ experienced.—Abbott.

The physical cause of his death has been thought by many to have been rupture of the heart. (1) Crucifixion was generally a very lingering death; the victim lived soldom less than twenty-four hours, often three or four days. (2) Usually the victim died of sheer exhaustion; but Christ was not exhausted, as he cried with a loud voice. (3) John records that blood and water flowed from Christ's side when pierced by the spear. This could only occur if the heart had been ruptured, and the blood, before death, had flowed out into the cavity which surrounds the heart. Christ then literally died of a broken heart, caused by his overwhelming mental agony. This theory draws our thoughts away from the mere bodily tortures which Christ endured, to the mysterious woe that pressed upon him on account of imputed sin.—Stock.

TEMPERANCE.

A Revelation.

During the present week an item of business called us to the office of a gentleman in this city who believes that every man has a divine right to take a drink whenever he feels like it, and the man who does not know enough to stop before he gets drunk is a very inferior specimen of the genus homo, and might as well drink himself to death as not.

During the conversation that ensued, the temperance question came in for its share of attention. Some remarks were made by those present about the exhilerating affects of good lager in hot weather, and the folly of attempting by legislation to stop its manufacture and sale.

A stranger present said: "A little over a year ago I was in Wisconsin. It was harvest-time. A gang of men were employed by a wealthy farmer to gather a large harvest. The table which this farmer spread before his men was richly laden with everything that heart could wish. In addition to all the substantials and delicacies that the faithful housewife could prepare, I was greatly surprised to find a goblet by each plate filled with rye whisky."

The narration of this fact turned the conversation away from beer to whisky, when the gentleman in whose office we were proceeded to relate the following instance: "Not very long since I was visiting a celebrated distillery not a thousand miles distant from Detroit. The owner of that distillery is professionally a temperance man, and is one of the wealthiest and most influential citizens. The nephew of the proprietor was showing me through the establishment, and taking a good deal of pains to explain everything that I saw. In one part of the institution I noticed two iron tanks about six feet in diameter and four or five feet high. One of these tanks was full and the other about half full of what I supposed to be whisky. Actuated by motives of curiosity, I approached one of the tanks, and was about to examine the contents by touching the surface with my fingers, when the gentleman who was conducting me through the distillery yelled at me at the top of his voice, 'Don't touch that! Don't touch that!' 'Why not,' I said coolly. 'What harm in just touching the surface?' 'Harm,' he ejaculated excitedly, 'Why that will take the end of your finger right off!' 'Take the end of my finger off!' I exclaimed, 'Why so, is that anything more than whisky?' 'Yes,' said he, that is something more than whisky. It is fusil oil.' 'Fusil oil!' I ejaculated. 'Fusil oil!' I was startled, for I knew that fusil oil would have done all to my fingers that he said if I had touched it. It is powerful enough to bite a gun barrel off. I looked at him somewhat savagely, and said, 'Do you mean to say that you make use of that stuff in the manufacture of your whiskies? Is that the kind of stuff you just offered me to drink? He had just urged me to try some of his whisky. 'We have some good stuff,' he replied, somewhat meekly. He then went on to explain about as follows: 'To tell the truth, we have some grain here that is not very good. It was in the warehouse on one of the docks at Chicago, at the time of the great fire, and when the dock burned it ran down into the river. After lying in the river about a year, it was taken out, and we bought it to manufacture into whisky. Of course after lying in the Chicago river for that length of time, there is not much strength left in it, and we are compelled to make use of fusil oil to tone it up a little.' 'But what do you do with the stuff?' I inquired. 'Oh, we don't know where it is sold,' said he. 'It is all sent East; none of our customers about home get any of it.' 'But,' said I, 'somebody must get it.' 'None of our home customers get any of this,' he repeated.

Obituary.

Eli Farnham, oldest son of Capt Levi, and Eunice Judd Farnham, was born on Pompey Hill, Onandago Co., N. Y., Dec. 1st, 1803. While still an infant his parents removed to Genesee Co., N. Y., where he lived until about 15 years of age. During this formative period of his life he was under the influence, and enjoyed the companionship and counsels of a wise, judicious, and loving mother, from whom, and from whose long line of worthy ancestry he inherited the clear intellect, the sound judgment, and the remarkable mental vigor which distinguished him through life, and which seemed not to abate in any perceptible degree as the burden of years weighed more and more heavily upon him.

During these years also, having been surrounded by the scenes and incidents of the war of 1812, and having been brought personally and closely into contact with the spirit of it, his father being an officer and prisoner in that war; he imbibed much of the spirit of patriotism and intense loyalty to his country which characterized all his after life.

When he was about fifteen years of age his mother died, and the large family of eight brothers and sisters were scattered never to be reunited as a family. He longed for an education, but necessity compelled constant toil to earn his own support, and as far as possible aid his younger brothers and sisters. Meanwhile the coveted knowledge was eagerly and persistently sought by unwearied application to both reading and study. In this way he gained a thorough knowledge of history, biography, the natural sciences and the standard literary works of that day. And the diligent acquisition of useful information was his ruling passion until death.

He was active and earnest in every form of Christian work which came to his hand. He desired, and, for a time, hoped, to enter the ministry; but the giving up of this cherished hope did not mean to him the giving up of active religious work. On the contrary, he labored from time to time as an evangelist during the years which preceded his removal to the West. During seasons of religious revival he would hold meetings during the week and preach on the Sabbath, and was frequently called upon to preach as a supply to vacant pulpits.

After becoming of age he went into business for himself, attending to business in the summer and teaching school winters. In company with his brother-in-law he became proprietor of a carding and cloth-dressing establishment in which business he continued until his removal to Galesburg, Illinois, in 1837. In 1836 he became connected with the colony which was organized in central New York for the establishment of a town and college, on the then unsettled prairies of Knox Co., Illinois. And the following spring, accompanied by his brave and saintly wife, whose heroic and trustful spirit was her heritage from a noble Puritan ancestry, he set out on the long journey of six weeks by wagon, to join in founding Galesburg and Knox College.

From that hour until the hour of his death his life entered into and became an essential part of the life of the town, of the College and of the Church.

He was elected an elder of the church and a trustee of the College at an early day, and continued to discharge the duties of both offices up to the time of his death, serving as secretary of the College Board for the last sixteen years of his life. In their counsels he was wise and moderate, yet firm and faithful. In days of intense anxiety, of storm and confusion in the College, and in the church, growing out of the condition of the College, his self-forgetting devotion continued. And in his latest years, when anxiety and confusion had given place to harmony and mutual trust, his calm and quiet joy in renewed confidence and assured prosperity was a perpetual enjoyment.

His presence for forty-five years, from Sabbath to Sabbath, has been as a pillar of strength to his church, and also in the College, where at public meetings, and at the morning chapel service on Pres. Bateman's morning, his venerable form and benignant face were expected and seldom failed to be seen.

And thus, while in his old age he was reaping the fruits of a well spent life, so serene and peaceful was his soul, so vigorous his bodily powers that it seemed as though he was to be spared for many years of usefulnes, but the news of his sudden death startled and afflicted the entire communitv.

Elder R. Faurot.—The sad news comes to us from Mississippi through the Christian Standard of Cincinati, that this esteemed and faithful brother and servant of Christ is dead. He was living at Edwards, Hinds county, near Jackson, Mississippi, where he was conducting with others a theological or training school for colored preachers known as the Southern Christian Institute. To this labor of self-sacrifice and love he had given several years of his life. A letter to the Standard from one of the teachers reads:

"We are in deep affliction here, for our beloved leader has left us. He saw the gates of heaven ajar, and now he has entered that beautiful land that his tongue failed to describe to us.

"Brother Randal Faurot gently fell asleep at 1 p. m., Oct. 10, after an illness of nearly three weeks of typhoid fever. Sister Faurot is completely broken down, but we hope she will regain her strength, for we feel that we cannot spare her.

"The burden on our shoulders is very heavy, but we mean to take it up bravely and hopefully, trusting that the brotherhood will give us the financial aid we so much need, and will very soon find us a successor.

"We do not suppose the forty preachers who promised to come will all be here, but we will do our best with those who come, and try to hold the fort till reinforcements are sent to us."

In the death of Bro. Faurot the reform loses an able advocate and a fearless friend, and the N. C. A. laborers in the Southern field will especially feel the loss of his warm sympathy and co-operation.

Died at Crystal Lake, Ills., October the 18th, 1882, of apoplexy of the heart, Nancy Betts Paddock, wife of Richard Paddock, of Crystal Lake. The subject of this notice was born in Onondaga Co. N. Y., town of Manlius, August the 19th, 1811; and at the time of her decease, she had just entered upon her seventy-second year. When eight years of age, her parents moved to Camilius, N. Y., where she lived till she was married to Richard Paddock, on Aug. the 16th 1835. The year following their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Paddock came to Illinois where they have since lived. Mrs. Paddock leaves behind her seven children; and three have preceded her in their entrance upon the spirit-world. One son she laid upon the altar of her country in 1863. For the last twelve years, she has been almost an invalid, going out from her home but rarely to mingle in society, yet she had drawn to her a large circle of choice friends. Modest and unassuming in her ways, kind and sympathetic in her feelings, earnest and helpful in her acts, she was ever attracting friends to herself, repelling none. Early in life she sought the friendship of God and united with the M. E. church at Camillus, or Van Buren, as the town is now called, and ever since has lived an exemplary and consistant Christian life. She was faithful in the religious instruc- of her children and lived to see the fruit appear in their lives. As a wife, as a mother and as a friend, she was faithful in the discharge of the duties devolving upon her and loyal to her God. "After she had served her own generation by the will of God she fell on sleep."

—L. W. Bacon, pastor of the Park Church Norwich, Conn., son of the late eminent Leonard Bacon, is to tender his resignation and retire from active pastoral labors, to devote time to the preparation of a biography of his father, and also to the compilation of a book of hymns for the Congregational churches.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

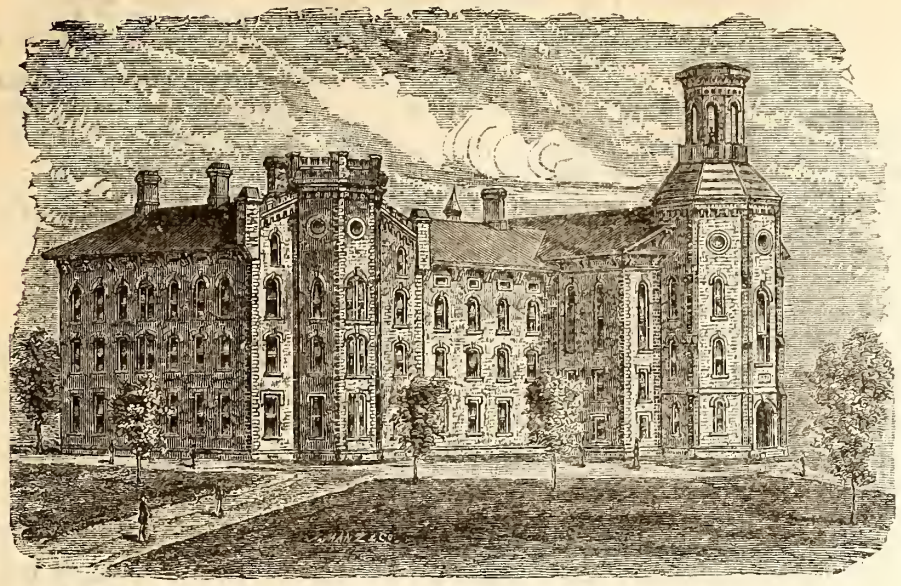
—J. L. Benton, an influential Wesleyan brother, proposes the title M. C. (minister of Christ) instead of Rev. to distinguish the pastoral office.

—We are reminded that the annual meeting of the Associated Churches of Christ in Mississippi meets December 6th, at Cedar Grove church, Loundes county, Miss. As this meeting will represent the reform against the un Christian usurpation of the lodge, it should be fostered and encouraged. Churches at the North should remember these Southern brethren, and aid them by prayer and letters of sympathy and cheer. The latter may be sent to Mrs. M. A. Tapley, Columbus, Miss.

—The Telescope says that Bro. J. V. Potts, of Ohio, author of two works that have been widely circulated among the United Brethren, "Christian Co-operation" and the "Itinerant Plan," and an occasional contributor to the Cynosure, is about joining the Reformed church. We learn, also, that Rev. O. W. Van Swearingen, of this State, a seceded Odd-fellow and author of a work on the order, has united with the Congregationalists.

—A revival is in progress in the King street United Brethren church, Chambersburg, Pa., of which Bro. Tobey, editor of the United Brethren in Christ, has lately become pastor.

—Bro. Edward Mathews has accepted the oversight of one or two districts to which he was appointed by the Michigan Conference of Free Methodist churches. He met a hearty response at his first general quarterly meeting at Wellsville, Mich., Nov. 2d and 5th. Though secretists refused to contribute to a man's support who "abused them," as they call it, yet the voluntary gift on Sabbath morning was over $25. In the evening Bro. Mathews raised over $30 for building a wall under the church, which has stood on blocks for years. On Monday he let the job. He speaks in Firman Hall, Blissfield, Mich., Nov. 14 and 15, by request of the banker who pays the rent of the room, and who is a pronounced Anti-mason, though not a Christian man professedly. The prospect of building a church at that place is good.



—At the quarter-centennial of the Bureau, Ill., Congregational Association, in the historical sketch it was stated that "in reform this body has been an early and earnest pioneer. Slavery, secretism, intemperance have all received heavy blows from its valiant men."

—The Rock River U. B. Conference at their late meeting maintained the good report for which this body has long been esteemed, as true on Christian reforms. Their resolution on secretism reads:

Whereas, We still see the terrible and life-sapping tendency of oath-bound societies in destroying the vitality of the Church; and, Whereas, Our politicians have their minds biased and thereby corrupt our courts; therefore,

Resolved, That we will use all proper means to circulate light on this subject, and ask especially our ministers to acquaint themselves with this terrible, corrupting, Christ-denying monster in church and state.

—Rev. Andrew Watson, D. D., United Presbyterian missionary writes on his return to his field in Alexandria, Egypt: "I have been amazed to find in American papers a good deal of sympathy with the military leaders in the late rebellion. Indeed I have seen no paper whose editor understood the situation except the New York Evening Post. Any man who stirs up the fanatical portion of Mohammedans, can never be a reformer. Any man who opposes the intelligent classes of his country and puts the ignorant in power, can never be a reformer. Any man who by the sword suppresses the expression of private opinion in the newspapers, as well as in the social circle, and compels all to support him and his party and his opinions for fear of personal violence, can never be a reformer. All this Arabi did continually, and much more in the same direction. Had he succeeded Egypt would have gone back one hundred years. But, thanks be to God for his blessing on the English army, we may now breathe more freely, and hope to see Egypt re-

FACULTY.

PRES. CHAS. A. BLANCHARD,

PROF. W. H. FISCHER,
MISS A. J. CAROTHERS,
PROF. S. WESLEY MARTIN,
PROF. O. F. LUMRY,
PROF. R. T. MORGAN,
MR. D. A. STRAW,
MISS F. H. HIATT,
MRS. S. H. NUTTING.

Pres. J. Blanchard and Dr. J. B. Walker also Assist in the Work of Instruction.

This circular of WHEATON COLLEGE is prepared specially for the readers of the Christian Cynosure, and is intended to call their attention to the Educational advantages afforded by this Institution. Many of you have young people to educate, and those of you who have not, have influence over others who have. Is it wise to send these young people to Institutions where the drift is steadily against the truths that you value? If you do send your children to such schools is it likely that they will hold your principles? It is a well known fact that a large majority of our educational institutions are conducted by those who are silent on the questions of the hour, or are on the wrong side of them. Yet schools, newspapers and churches of this silent or Masonic sort are patronized by thousands of men and women who know of, and personally hate these evils.

THE CHILDREN OF THIS WORLD

are wiser. They patronize those who actively befriend them, and in this they are right. Those opposed to the lodge outnumber those who favor it, probably, one hundred to one, but they are comparatively uninfluential because they do not concentrate their forces. If you to whom this circular is sent unite in supporting those Colleges which are leading in your work you will have strong, efficient schools, sending out your sons and daughters trained and equipped as leaders of society in this great work which is now opening before you. If you send them to Colleges where you are hated as disturbers of the peace or pitied as fanatics, you will see the lodge grow strong and the church grow weak.

FACILITIES, BUILDINGS, ETC.

Wheaton College does not, however, appeal to you on the ground of its work against the lodge alone. Its, buildings, apparatus, libraries and instructors are well adapted to the work of instruction. There are no better teachers in the West than give their time and strength to the work of this College. Students can make their expenses quite light by boarding themselves, and if they choose to hire their board they can secure it at from $2.50 to $3.50 per week. Some parents desire to be with their children while they are pursuing their studies. Those who desire to do so can rent homes in Wheaton as reasonably as elsewhere, and thus secure the education of their children and the progress and strength of the Reform. The undersigned will answer, so far as possible, any inquiries and assist students or their parents in obtaining locations.

THE COURSES OF STUDY

are adapted to the needs of the present age. They are the Classical, Philosophical and Laureate in the College, and the Classical, Normal and Laureate in the Preparatory school. Students can enter any one of these courses at any time in the term or year, though it is evidently a great advantage to be in at the opening. Classes in German, Bookkeeping, Penmanship and Elocution are organized each term, and there is no extra charge for these branches. Classes are also organized each term in Arithmetic, Grammar, Geography, Reading and Spelling, so that those who have lacked opportunity to study at their homes on these elemental studies can be accommodated.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC.

The Conservatory of Music is under the charge of Prof. S. Wesley Martin, an author and Conductor of note in the West. His charges are very reasonable, and will be made known on application. Students desiring to take lessons on the Piano, Organ and Violin, or in Vocal culture, Harmony or Chorus singing, can be accommodated.

DRAWING AND PAINTING

are still under the care of Mrs. Nutting, whose pupils have had unusual success in exhibitions and teaching. She still gives gratuitous instruction in Black Board Drawing, and her rates for tuition are low. Inquiries may be addressed to her at Wheaton, Ill.

THE WINTER AND SPRING

terms begin December 12th, 1882, and March 20th, 1883. Students from a distance would do wisely to get to Wheaton on Saturday previous to the opening of the term. Those who are near at hand can come on Monday.

It is fitting to return thanks to the many friends throughout the country who have so generously aided us with their children, money and prayers, in days past. Our College is now out of debt, the number of students is good, and we are encouraged to hope for great things in time to come. We wish to have an attendance of four or five hundred students who shall be filled with knowledge and zeal, and thus educate the coming people on the great questions of the hour.

Inquiries or other communications may be addressed to CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres't.

ceive some of the benefits of Western civilization under the protecton if England. As America civilizes all tribes and peoples who settle within her bounds, so England civilizes the nations to which she goes. Would that the few civil American dignitaries who reside in Egypt lent a helping hand to England in her noble work, instead of being filled with jealousy and censuring every effort made by Englishmen to institute reforms in the Egyptian government. I preached in Arabic last Sabbath in the church —men about as many before the war — women 34, and 4 children. It was a day of joy to me."

—On the 16th of September there sailed from New York, eight missionaries, two men and six women, who have consecrated their hearts, their all, to mission work in distant India. Two of them, Albert Norton and his wife, go from Burr Oak, Mich.; three of them, G. L. Wharton, his wife and Miss Graybiel, from Buffalo, N. Y.; Miss Boyd, from Harrodsburg, Ky.; Miss Kinzie from Portland, Ind.; and Miss Kingsbury, from Freeport, Ill. Four of them, the two men and their wives, go out under the direction and auspices of the Foreign Christian missionary Society of the Disciple church, and the four young women are sent by the Christian Woman's Board of Missions of the same church. Heretofore this church had missions in Jamaica, Paris, Copenhagen, and in Constantinople, but this is the first strictly heathen mission.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

—Three cadets have been dismissed from the Naval Academy at Annapolis for hazing. The young ruffians were tried by court-martial in secret; and as two of them pleaded guilty very little testimony was obtained as to the general practice.

—The annual Fat Stock Show will be opened in the Chicago Exposition Building, Thursday, Nov. 16, and continue day and evening until the following Thursday night, Nov. 23, at ten o'clock. During the week the following important meetings will be held, all at the Grand Pacific Hotel: Nov. 21, the Board of Directors of the American Short-horn Breeders Association; Nov. 22, the American Short-horn Breeders Association; Nov. 23, the American Hereford Breeders Association; Nov. 16, the American Clydesdale Breeders Association; Nov. 22, the breeders of Polled Angus and Galways will meet and form an association.

—The Mayor of Iowa City will grant licenses to the saloons of the city, the decision of Judge Hayes declaring the amendment unconstitutional, and the result of the election in Iowa, especially the defeat of the Republican candidate for District Attorney, having caused the mayor to reconsider his refusal to renew licenses when they expired.

—An earthquake all along the line of the Union Pacific Railroad in Wyoming was so distinctly felt in Denver that all the reporters and editors in the third story of the Republican office rushed down stairs and into the street, thinking that the building was about to fall. Considerable damage was done to buildings and railroad bridges in the northern portion of the State. The earthquake at Cheyenne was accompanied by an electric flash that lighted up the northern sky. The shock was violent.

—It has come to light that at a meeting of the higher priest-hood, President Taylor instructed them that priests and bishops and their counselors are not entitled to hold their positions unless they qualify by becoming polygamists. There are a few such officers who are monogamists. One has since resigned rather than take another wife. This shows that until the Government proves itself to be stronger than the Mormon Church in Utah, polygamy will not be suppressed, but rather stimulated in its growth and expansion.

—A fire broke out at midnight in the eastern end of the Provincial Poor Asylum, an immense six-story brick structure in the southeastern suburbs of Halifax, containing about four hundred people. At 1:30 a. m. half the building is a mass of flames. The fire originated in the bakery, where there were twenty-one cords of wood stored. The flames, catching this, spread with lightning rapidity soon enveloping that part of the building used as a hospital. In spite of every effort 31 persons perished.

—The question of adopting Gladstone's closure programme in the British House of Commons was virtually decided Friday. Sir Stafford Northcote moved to reject the Government programme of rules relating to closure, and the motion was voted down—yeas 216, nays 304. Debate on the closure proposition ended with this vote, and only the minor details of the new anti-obstruction rules remain to be discussed.

—The Freeman's Journal, of Dublin says: "Premier Gladstone has never before yesterday declared so distinctly and clearly his opinion of the necessity of home rule or the extent to which it should be conceded. It is impossible to exaggerate the significance of his utterances. Gladstone would not dare use the words he did without there was some real meaning behind them The proposition that England will recognize home rule was distinctly advanced and brought more clearly into the domain of practical politics by Gladstone in his speech."

—A colliery explosion occurred at the Clay Cross Mines in Derbyshire. Four of the managers of the mines were blown to atoms. The explosion which was terrific in its force and deadly effect, shattered buildings in localities five miles distant from the mines. The greatest consternation prevails in the neighborhood. The number of deaths are reported at fifty.

Health Hints.

HEADACHES IN CHILDREN.

When a child complains of headache our most careful scrutiny is demanded, and if it be too young to describe its sufferings its manner and appearance are highly suggestive of some cerebral disturbance. Look at a little child of some ten or twelve months old, who is well developed and comes of healthy parents. There is the excitement of dentition, and the little thing is observed to put its tiny hand to its head, which it rolls, perhaps, from side to side, and the anxious mother at last detects a slight irregularity in the muscular movements of the eyeball. Reflex nervous irritation is conveyed through the fifth nerve to the brain, and irritation so awakened may be followed at any moment by a convulsion. The child is wakeful, uneasy and restless. The brain, so needful of rest at this early period of life, is susceptible of mischief. Habitual headaches in older children indicate an exhausted and irritable brain, and if intellectual exertion be carried too far in such cases mischief is likely to ensue. It seems extraordinary that educated men who have the care of young persons should not see this danger in the anemie produced by overstudy, the irritability and excitability of manner, and the impossibility of concentration, so necessary to the accomplishment of any undertaking. If intellectual exertion be carried beyond a certain point the brain becomes anemic, fatigued, and the nutrition in the ganglionic cells of the cortex becomes impaired, diseased, or in some way altered from health. Whatever may be the exact change in these cells the inference is most probably correct that children so suffering cannot readily grasp new ideas; and if strong and powerful efforts are put forward in this direction the knowledge is not retained, the object is frustrated, one idea is mixed up with another, and confusion results. This, I apprehend, is just enough to illustrate the grand problem, that the body must be looked to as well as the mind, and the younger the child the greater is the necessity for the delay of intellectual training. And it does strike one as very extraordinary that the nervous system, which is the last to attain complete development, should be the first to be overtaxed in this age of forcing and strain, when revolutionary ideas are apt to overrule the judgment. It is not that the moderate exercise of the brain in early life is injurious; on the contrary, it is conducive to health. The mind is then flexible and plastic, impressions are enduring, and habits of concentration are easily acquired. It is the premature and excessive exercise of it which is prejudicial when the bodily powers need the chief attention.

No rigid rules, no cast-iron system, will do for the training of all children. All are not cast in the same mold. Any system of education must be elastic, since mediocrity is the rule; and if more be expected of some children, whose physical development is at the same time feeble, then disease or premature ill health is the consequence. —W. H. Day, D. D., "Medical Press and Circular."

Stimulants.

Stimulants exalt nervous action temporarily and compel the wheels to revolve rapidly, but they supply no threads to either the woof or warp, and soon or later break the shuttle.

The man who has eaten one pound of beef daily for one year does not find it necessary, in order to obtain the same effect, to eat two pounds daily for the next year; but he who drinks one pint of whisky daily for one year, must take two pints daily the second year to obtain the same effect.

Any article of food or drink, the use of which creates the necessity for larger quantities and at shorter intervals in order to attain the same mental or physical elevation, by that fact proves itself pernicious.

It is no proof because a man grows fat and his face becomes red under the use of stimulants, that he is improving in health.

Cholera and all other pestilential diseases make their first visits to those who use habitually stimulating drinks.

Of tobacco, Franklin has said that "he could not think that it had ever done much good in the world, since he never knew a person who used it habitually who would recommend another to do the same."

Tobacco is certainly not food for man, nor has it much value as a medicine. The tobacco worm is the only animal known to thrive upon its use.—Health Aphorisms of Dr. F. H. Hamilton.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 60 cents; per dozen, $5.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.00. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞ The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degrees of Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. This confession of Henry L. Valance, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan in the Niagara River, was taken from the lips of the dying man, by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine County, Wisconsin, in 1848. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense prescnted by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen $1.25

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2 00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geesiin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen

MISCELLANEOUS.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen. $2 00

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on one Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. Each of these able writers in clear, forcible language treats the subject in one or more of its varied phases. Rev. David McDill in six chapters treats of 1. "Their Antiquity; 2 Their Secrecy; 3. "Oaths and Promises;" 4. "Profaneness" 5. "Their Exclusiveness;" 6. "False Claims." Prest. Blanchard handles the topic: "Shall Christians join Secret Societies?" in a masterly way, showing clearly that they are all opposed to the genius of Christianity; and Dr. Beecher closes with his Report on Secret Societies, which was adopted by the Congregational Association of Illinois at Ottawa in 1866. In cloth, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.25. Paper cover, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the admtnistration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen. $1.25.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and alms to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association, condition of the Carpenter donation, with engraving of building donated by Mr. Carpenter; tables showing the number of pastors and communicants in churches that exclude members of secret societies, tabular view of local, county, state and national conventions, and list of organizations auxiliary to the National Christian Association; brief opinions of eminent men on secret societies, and testimonies of religious bodies against them. 25 cents each; per dozen, $1.50.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Greene, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. Unpublished Reminiscences of the Morgan Times, by Elder David Bernard; Recollections of the Morgan Trials, as related by Victory Birdseye, Esq., and presented by his daughter, Mrs. C. B. Miller; Secretary's Report; Roll of Delegates; Songs of Mr. G. W. Clark; Paper by Enoch Honeywell; Constitution N. C. A.; Reports of Committees and a Report of the Political Meeting. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing Official Reports; Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, I. D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D. D., Prest. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D. D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquilette; also Report of the Political Mass Convention, with Platform and Candidates for the Presidential Campaign of 1876. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 31 Cynosure tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies; and the dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized secrecy are shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public. Those who wish to circulate anti-Masonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from. 20 cents each, per dozen, $1.75.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. W. P. M'Nary, pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind. This is a very clear, thorough, candid and remarkably concise Scriptural argument on the character of Freemasonry. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

ANTI-MASONIC BOOKS,

NOT OUR OWN PUBLICATIONS,

FOR SALE BY

EZRA A. COOK,

No. 7 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

In the Coils; or the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historial sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of every-day life, and showing how individual, domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. Parents who wish, not only to keep their children out of these night-schools of Satan, but to give them arguments against them in the most attractive dress, will do well to purchase this book. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses. In this scathing review the lying pretensions of the order are clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Letters on Masonry. Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian religion. Paper cover, 30 cents each; per dozen, $2.50.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers; price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2 00.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship (old work), by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen, $7.50

Freemasonry and the M. E. Church. Let every lover of truth and justice read this report of the trial of Rev. J. T. Michael, showing how he was driven out of the M. E. church for opposing Masonry and loving Methodism. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocate, and afterward in pamphlet form. The Evangelical Repository, reviewing it, says: "This pamphlet consists of a series of articles originally published in the Church Advocate, Lancaster, Pa. Elder M. S. Newcomer opposes secret societies, and especially Freemasonry and Elder G. W. Wilson defends the system. We are free to say that Mr. Newcomer has thoroughly routed his opponent at every point. Mr. Wilson speaks by the book, as he is a Royal Arch Mason." 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT.

A. G. McKeown sends eighteen subscribers for a year each and orders blank subscription papers and other matter to aid in securing subscribers. He writes: "It has required quite an effort to get this work done, but I thank God who has disposed the hearts of so many to respond to the good cause, and my prayer is that all who labor in this leading reform, may be abundantly blessed by the Master." Two more subscribers would make him count two in the one hundred list.

Mrs. M. E. R. Jones sends $15.00 with the wish of "unbounded success to the cause."

A. M. Paul sends $15.00 and will forward the names soon and writes, "Give me a well bound copy of 'Holden with Cords' when it is issued." With pleasure we will do so.

P. S. Feemster, whose name was enrolled among the one hundred last week, sends three names for a year and four for six months.

John Morrison sends in the ten names for a year each. His name was reported last week.

W. I. Phillips hands in five for a year each, more than fulfilling his pledge as one of the one hundred.

Wm. D. Clay, sends three subscriptions for a year each.

J. N. Norris will try to keep up the noble Birningham list and increase it if possible.

A. Stalker also will try for subscribers.

G. N. Williams will stand as the one hundredth man if the other ninety nine are on hand.

Some of the volunteers probably have letters on the way who have not yet been heard from. Six hares less two subscriptions have been taken during the last week making a total of twenty-eight and one half on the one hundred.

D. Miller, sends two for a year each and writes. "I will send more if I can.

J. Munger, "I have the promise of some subscribers soon."

Cynosure Extension Fund.

Statement for the week ending Nov. 11th, 1882:

Mrs. S. G. Moore $2.00 G. Gurney $1.00 Maria G. Strong and D. Quick, 50cts each.

Total cash received, - -	$518 62
Total cash used, - -	354 35
Cash available, - -	$164 27

This Fund is designed to aid in getting subscribers from among those who do not take the Cynosure, and who may be induced to read it by paying themselves $1.00 per year. The Fund pays 50 cents, making up the club rate. It will now aid 328 new subscribers to get the paper for $1.00.

The $10.00 credited to the Extension fund last week belonged to the "one hundred" list. It was contributed to help pay for a club of ten, under the October 12th, proposition. The mistake is now corrected.

MASONIC BOOKS

FOR SALE BY

EZRA A. COOK,

7 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

Books sent post-paid on receipt of retail price, but books by mail are at risk of person ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express are sold at 10 per cent. discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority because they tell too much.

General Ahiman Rezon and Freemasons' Guide. By Daniel Sickels, 33d degree. The most perfect Masonic monitor published in the United States. Embellished with many engravings and containing monitorial instructions in the degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow-Craft and Master Masons, with explanatory lectures, the ceremonies of consecration and dedication of new lodges, installation of officers, laying foundation stones, dedication of Masonic halls, burial services, Masonic calendar, ritual for a Lodge of Sorrow, Masonic trials, etc. Bound in fine cloth, extra large 12mo, $2.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the entire ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Scores of Masons have privately admitted that this is a standard text-book in the lodge and is strictly correct; but publicly it is not acknowledged as authority, though many officers of the lodge make use of it. Price, in cloth, $2.50.

Female Masonry. Manual of the Order of the Eastern Star. Containing the ritual, symbols, lectures, etc., of the five degrees of "Adoptive Masonry," Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound. Price. $1.50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. A practical guide to the ceremonies in the degrees conferred in Masonic Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated edition. In cloth, $1.25; in paper, 75 cents.

Although this Monitor is extensively used by the lodge, especially in conferring the higher degrees, it is publicly called an exposition, and not allowed as authority.

Sickels' Freemasons' Monitor. Containing the degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic illustrations, together with tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. AMERICAN PLATFORM.

PREAMBLE.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands working secretly to compass political ends—a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a new party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence both inevitable and indispensable;

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of Jesuitism, of priestcraft, or of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained of God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and therefore that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion, or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties, as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins, and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare.

We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and, while we consider government without God as mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so, having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes:

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

THE Connecticut American party ticket was not reported to the Cynosure in time to be printed before election. It reads: For Governor, George P. Rogers; Lieutenant-Governor, William S. Williams; Secretary of State, Isaac J. Gilbert; Treasurer, Edmund Tuttle; Comptroller, Joseph S. Perry; for Congress, 1st district, David J. Ellsworth.

—The editor of the Michigan American manifested a noble public spirit in his effort to secure a good vote in that State. His expense to circulate 20,000 copies of his paper for this end, has but partly been made up. Friends will receive his thanks who will aid in this matter. Send to H. A. Day, Coldwater, Mich.

—The Michigan American has regular subscribers in Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Minnesota, Ohio, Nebraska, and Indiana.

Election Returns.

The press dispatches, as usual, ignore the American vote, unless in considerable numbers. A careful review of the returns in the leading dailies of the country, printed in half a dozen cities, fails to discover the report of a single vote against the lodge in Michigan, Iowa, or Connecticut, though in each an American State ticket was voted.

In Illinois there were in Wheaton 32 votes for Superintendent of Public Instruction and 27 for Treasurer. For Congressman, 23 votes are reported; for Representative, 48 votes. In Clark county, D. B. Turney, Anti-monopoly and Anti-masonic candidate for Congress, received 237 votes. In Chatsworth 9 votes are reported by S. D. Webster; in Wyanet 3, by A. S. Lathrop; in Newark 12, by T. S. Bibbin; in Amboy 4, by Rev. J. W. Lewis; in Nora 6, by C. J. Puckett.

From this beginning, the official returns will foot up quite a respectable vote in Illinois, and we hope for no less in the other States where the issue was made.

The November Elections and their Lessons.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 9, 1882.

There are two most remarkable facts in connection with the election of Tuesday last: 1st, That there has never been so great a political revolution in so brief a space, as that of the last eighteen months, and 2nd, there never has been one for which the general condition of the country gave so little reason. Nearly all political changes come as the result of financial distress. Now abundant crops, abundant currency and great commercial activity are the rule. Never have we had a period of more substantial prosperity. Nor is there any reason to think that there has been any great change in the convictions of the people. A careful analysis of the vote will show that where the question was between the parties simply, and was disconnected with other issues, the relative strength has remained about the same. The matured convictions of the past twenty years have not been suddenly reversed, nor are they likely to be. The causes of this political cyclone are: 1. A weakening of the power of party. There have been no issues presented that fixed public attention, the main and almost only issue was the question of spoils; and in such a struggle the people have had no other interest than that the officers chosen should be honest and competant.

2. There has been a most emphatic repudiation of the domination of party leaders. One would have supposed that these leaders would have seen the hand writing on the wall, and taken warning, but their eyes were blinded. No tears are shed over their political graves.

3. The vote of Tuesday was a most emphatic rebuke of the Republican party, for its betrayal of the Civil Service reform, and the assessments on those in the employ of the government for political purposes. That this rebuke has been given should occasion profound thanksgiving. Had they kept in power by such means we might begin to despair of our country.

Lastly, we see the power of evil combinations, secret and open. In most of the States, but especially in Ohio, Indiana and Kansas, the whisky interest was at stake. That interest combined put vast sums into the balance, and made use of the other secret combinations to compass its ends. It controlled all of the lowest and some of the best elements of society. It has succeeded just as the slave power used to succeed in controlling the nation, and just as the Know Nothings succeeded for a time, not because they were a majority, but because they could secretly decieve and seduce the majority. Such games have often been played and with great success, but are not often played more than once. Political fraud has been rebuked in New York and Pennsylvania, but as an instrument of whisky rings has had a partial triumph in the West.

THE OUTLOOK.

Several things are apparent: 1st. There must be a re-cast of parties. In place of dead issues will come real questions. The change may not be in party names. It may be rather in declared principles, but the change is inevitable, and such change is ominous for good to the nation.

2. The questions that will be regarded as of paramount importance are Prohibition and Civil Service reform. The questions can neither of them be kept in abeyance. They may not triumph on their first submission to the people, but their final triumph is inevitable.

3d. The success of the Civil Service reform demands the utter destruction of all rings and systems of favoritism. Masonic and other secret fraternities must come to the bar of public opinion and be examined in the light of human and divine law. No pretext of being ancient and honorable will excuse them. They must bow before the majesty of awakened and outraged public sentiment.

Lastly, there is a striking amalogy between the signs of the times now, and twenty-five years ago. Then the death of the Whig party necessitated the formation of the Republican party, and the deliverance of the nation from the domination of the slave power. So now the power of the lodge and of the dram shop have a brief triumph that they may perish forever.

REFORM NEWS.

The Indiana State Meeting.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The Indiana State Christian Anti-secrecy Association convened in its tenth annual session at Friends' Church, Carthage, Rush county, Indiana, on Tuesday evening, October 24th, 1882.

The Association was called to order by Dr. S. L. Cook. The first Psalm was read by Dr. Cook, and the congregation joined in singing "All hail the power of Jesus name," and were led in prayer by Pres. J. Blanchard of Wheaton, Ill. The evening's exercises consisted of short introductory addresses by Rev. S. Y. Miller, Elder I. W. Lowman, Dr. S. L. Cook, and Pres. J. Blanchard.

Wednesday morning, after a season of prayer, the business of the Association was entered upon. Elder I. W. Lowman was chosen president of the Association; S. Y. Miller, secretary, and Benjamin Ulsh, treasurer, for the ensuing year.

Committees on enrollment and resolutions were appointed. An opportunity was given for the discussion of the secrecy question, and profitably improved by a number of the delegates. Rev. A. C. Wilmore and Rev. Z. McNew of the U. B. Church were introduced and each spoke for a few minutes very much to the point.

In the afternoon Rev. A. C. Wilmore of Indianapolis, was invited to address the meeting. He gave an interesting account of his experience with the Odd-fellows, and his reasons for renouncing allegiance to the order. He was followed by Rev. E. Mathews of Michigan, whose manner of address is very inspiring.

Pres. J. Blanchard was announced as the speaker for the evening, the Association adjourned, and joined in the funeral service of the dear little boy of the Friends' church.

At the hour appointed for the evening meeting a large, intelligent audience had assembled, filling the entire auditorium of the new and beautiful Friends meeting-house.

After devotional exercises, Elder I. W. Lowman delivered a short address introducing Pres. J. Blanchard of Wheaton College, Ill., who for an hour or more received the close attention of the large audience, while he spoke with power from Matt. 6:10. "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven." Rev. E. Mathews then spoke for some time, in his usual earnest and interesting manner, and the evening's exercises were closed by singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," and benediction by Pres. Blanchard.

On the morning of the third day Benjamin Ulsh, Treasurer, reported cash received during the year, $177.25, which was paid to the State agent.

The hour for the Friends "fifth day meeting" having arrived, the Association adjourned, and by invitation joined with them in their services. The Spirit of God was upon the meeting. Many were moved to speak, pray and sing to the honor of Jesus and the glory of God.

The following resolutions were read and adopted in the afternoon:

RESOLVED, 1. That we are in favor of starting a monthly paper, as the organ of the American party, at 25 cts. a year for single copies, and 15 cts. a year for clubs of 40, so soon as 1000 subscribers can be obtained and the money paid.

2. The State Executive Committee, consisting of five men and four women, be authorized to start such a political paper, and that Elder I. W. Lowman be the editor, authorized to take subscriptions and money; and that if the 1000 subscribers are not obtained, he shall pay the money received, to Benj. Ulsh, Treasurer of the State Association for the State work.

WHEREAS, We allow men to vote, who pay no taxes, and thousands of whom cannot read the names on their ballots it is wrong and absurd to deny the ballot to thousands of women who pay taxes, and who can read and write; therefore RESOLVED, 1. That we are in favor of impartial suffrage excluding the illiterate, drunkards, convicts and aliens; including in the last class all who have sworn and who owe another allegiance than that to the United States. We understand adhering Masons to belong to the latter class.

2. Before excluding from the ballot those men who cannot read a vote or write one, we are in favor of giving them three years in which to learn to read, and also of compulsory education of all children at the public expense.

RESOLVED, That we exhort all friends of our reform to vote for Prohibition candidates where no candidates of the American party are in the field.

RESOLVED, That Dr. S. L. Cook be continued as State Lecturer and Agent for another year, and that Elder I. W. Lowman be appointed as his associate, and that the two co-operate together in canvassing the State as they may agree.

2. That with such aid as they may receive from Secretary Stoddard, of the National Association, they be authorized to collect their salaries on the field and report the same fully to this State Association, at its next annual meeting, and that we call earnestly on all citizens to aid in their work.

RESOLVED, that the earnest thanks of the Indiana State Christian Association be tendered to the Friends for the use of their house, and to the community for its hospitality.

On motion of Dr. S. L. Cook it was agreed to adjourn at the close of the evening session, to meet again in annual session at the call of the Executive Committee.

An opportunity was given for persons to give pledges to support the State work, to be paid during the year to Benjamin Ulsh, treasurer. Pledges to the amount of $76 were secured, and $22 of the amount paid.

Mrs. Keturah Miles, Mrs. Carrie Clark, Mrs. R. P. Hill, Mrs. Jemima D. White and Mrs. Sarah Ann White were appointed an executive committee with instructions to canvass thoroughly for the Indiana American.

After devotional exercises in the evening Dr. S. L. Cook was introduced and with his skillful manner of presenting documents and facts to prove his propositions, held the close attention of his auditors.

Rev. E. Mathews then spoke until 9:30, closing with a very affecting account of a young Friend who joined the Masonic fraternity, and when presented with an exposition by his kind, Christian mother, who asked him if it was true, denied the truthfulness of it, and said he "hoped God would strike him dead if he lied to her." Then followed his conviction, repentance, acknowledgment of his awful sin to his mother, and his renunciation of allegiance to the soul-destroying order. Many were moved to tears during the relating of this account by Bro. Mathews. Pres. J. Blanchard made a few closing remarks. The doxology was sung, the benediction pronounced by Pres. Blanchard and the convention closed. We all felt it was good to be there.

S. Y. MILLER.

LECTURER'S REPORT.

ALBION, Nov. 10, 1882.

The friends of Reform are no doubt expecting some word from me in reference to our annual meeting at Carthage, Oct. 24-26. We tried to make preparation. One of the measures preparatory was the issuing of 500 personal circulars of invitation by myself, I. W. Lowman and Benj. Ulsh, at our own expense. I received three responses containing financial aid, I believe the others received none. The fact is this that our Christian brethren ought to notice is that none of those persons responding publicly profess the religion of Christ. These persons are most excellent men and have all their lives stood in the front of reform work, and manifest a practical religion worthy of our imitation. It is a singular fact that almost universally where I find an avowed infidel out side of the lodge, he is an anti-secret man and puts the question on moral grounds; while many of our Christian people think that religion makes them so amiable that they must not rebuke sin except in very mild generalities. My Christian friends, you forget that the whole Gospel is a rebuke to sin. Our Saviour's reproofs were thrilling and terrible both personal and general. Paul made Felix tremble by forcing Gospel truth home to him, and there is no grander spectacle to my mind than his standing with his soul full of the Gospel power before that Roman court. My friends, in many cases I fear this fear of offending bad men is a lazy device of the devil to induce you to preserve an indolent quiet and your personal popularity. Buckle on the whole armor. Fight; go forth; be good soldiers is the Bible proclamation.

Our meeting came and I feel that much good was done. Pres. Blanchard's discourse on the topic "Thy Kingdom come" was a grand one. I attribute largely the succes of our work in that locality to Dr. J. M. Clark's quiet, clear and prudent planning. He is a real "Quaker Boy," and always works in a way that suits me. Our executive committee deserves much praise in planning and helping by their presence to execute.

Revs. Wilmore, McNew and S. Y. Miller, and many others, added much to the interest and success of our meeting. We had a good meeting.

Friends, we have a large harvest ripening,—is ripe. "Thrust in thy sickle nor wait for reapers more. Shall sheaves lie there ungathered and waste upon the plain?"

S. L. COOK.

National Reform Convention at Clarinda, Iowa.

The convention held in Hawley's Opera Hall, Clarinda, October 25, 26, in the interests of the movement for the Religious Amendment of the constitution of the United States, was one of a series of similar conventions now being held by the National Reform Association in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois. They are the mustering of the Christian forces of our country, to meet the tide of infidel godlessness which threatens to sweep away the Sabbath, and other Christian features of our government.

TheConstitution of the United States acknowledges no authority higher than man, and the enemies of Christianity are claiming that Sabbath laws, civil oaths, the Bible in the schools and prayers in the legislative bodies are unconstitutional, and should be abolished.

The friends of these Christian institutions have discovered what the friends of temperance have at length learned, that without constitutional law they are laboring at a great disadvantage. The Clarinda convention in nearly every particular was an undoubted success. It differed from other conventions in that it was called to discuss those deep, underlying principles which constitute the basis of all true reforms. Its delegates were those who aim to hew to the line, and lay bare the bed rock. They were, therefore, those who are working in the highest department of moral reform. Never before had a convention met in Clarinda composed of such able and earnest advocates of true reform, representing such a wide field, and having behind them such a high moral constituency. Delegates were present from eastern Iowa, southern and western Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska. They were composed of eighteen ministers representing six Evangelical churches and an equal number of Christian laymen, and earnest friends of the cause. Kansas and Iowa, who are at the front in the Prohibition conflict also sent the largest delegation to this convention. Missouri also sent a good delegation, and to recognize the rapid progress made by that State in moral reform, the convention elected for its president a prominent minister of the St. Joseph M. E. conference, Rev. H. L. Powers, of Bolckow, and for its secretary, Rev. W. T. Gordon, of Burlington Junction. Much of the interest of the convention was owing to the splendid executive ability of the president, and his enthusiastic devotion to the cause.

The addresses on the first evening by Rev. Wm. Johnston, of College Springs, and Hon. T. E. Clark, of Clarinda, the first on "The World's Conspiracy against Christ," and the second on "The Legal Aspect of the Sabbath Question," were listened to by a large audience which nearly filled the Hall. Both addresses were masterly.

The morning session of Thursday was spent in discussing two topics. First, "The Strength of a Free Republic: In what does it consist?" It was opened by Elder Smith, of Maryville, Mo., who has heartily enlisted in the movement. He was followed by several other speakers. The second was, "Absolute Freedom of Conscience: Is it Consistent with Safe Popular Government?" It was opened by Rev. Wm. Johnston.

Two topics also occupied the discussions of the afternoon session. The first, "Should a Nation Recognize the Author of Its Moral Code? And is the Constitution the Place for such Recognition?" was opened by Rev. J. S. T. Milligan, of North Cedar, Kansas. The second "Should there be moral Qualifications for Civil Rulers?" was opened by Rev. W. R. Cox, of Red Oak. His address was carefully prepared and impressively delivered. Quite a number took part in the general discussion, among whom were Rev. J. M. Armour, of Sterling, Kansas, Rev. R. C. Allen, of Superior, Nebraska, Rev. J. F. Campbell, Rev. D. McKee and Wm. Aiken, of Clarinda, and others. The interest and attendance increased at each session. The last evening was occupied with an able and logical address by Rev. D. H. Coulter, of Winchester, Kansas, on the "Practical Value of the Proposed Amendment." In the absence of Dr. T. J. Kennedy, of Des Moines, stirring addresses were made by Elder Smith, the president, Rev. Wm. Johnston and Mrs. Rev. W. T. Gordon. Many of the delegates agreed with the chairman when he said that for the talent displayed and for the able presentation of those principles which constitute Christian statesmanship, it excelled any convention he had ever attended. We felt that it excelled in one feature and that was enthusiasm. Zeal for Christ's honor was the manifest spirit pervading the convention. Its power was to attract Christ's friends as the magnet does the steel. Some of the people of Clarinda, among them a few of the editors and ministers, seemed disposed to misapprehend and misrepresent the movement. But we do not forget, as an old citizen reminded us, that before the war, when some of these same reformers held meetings in Clarinda, calling their attention to the defect in our constitution regarding human slavery, there were those who ignored such agitation as useless. But when the war came, and dug a million graves for our dead, and imposed millions on millions in taxes on the living, we learned who were right on that great issue. So the day is not far distant when the question must be settled, "Can a nation live and ignore the law and authority of God?"

One practical result of the Clarinda convention was to form an organization for south-western Iowa and north-western Missouri in order to hold conventions and agitate this question. President S. C. Marshall, of Amity College, was elected president, Rev. Wm. Johnston, of College Springs, secretary, and Rev M. A. Gault, corresponding secretary. Among the vice presidents were Rev. W. R. Cox, of Red Oak, Dr. E. K. Bailey, of Shenandoah, Rev. R. Johnson, of Blanchard, Rev. W. T. Gordon, of Burlington Junction, Rev. H. L. Powers, of Bolckow, Thomas Tomlinson and Rev. D. McKee, of Clarinda, Capt. Brown, of Malvern, and others. The time and place of the meeting of the next convention was left to executive committee.

The thirty days covered by the proposition of Oct. 12th, expired last Saturday. Twenty-six remittances of $15.00 each are recorded on our books. Crops, absence from home, inability to reach funds on so short notice, sickness, etc., are among the causes which have hindered the remaining seventy-four, ten of whom have assured us that we could count them in. Such a response so promptly made gives a cheerful outlook for this season's campaign and the opening although not grand is a hopeful one. If the call for ten thousand subscribers is accepted (see eighth page) and the mail list grows rapidly, the paper will at an early day be mailed earlier and in better shape than present receipts will allow. Secretary Stoddard writes, forcibly on this subject: "Permanent improvements in this paper depend upon the number of subscribers sent in, and the number of subscribers sent in depends upon the amount of work we do." etc. Reports of the number of subscribers will be made monthly through the winter.

In the great work of the hour let us be enthusiastic, thorough, persevering, and with the blessing of God we may reasonably expect success.

TOPICS OF THE TIME.

Say the dispatches: "The first words of Butler's speech on Tuesday night, to the cheering multitude in front of the Revere House, Boston, were: 'Fellow-citizens, the stone that the builders rejected the same stone has become the head of the corner.'" A Christian editor of New York can hardly believes that Ben. Butler could be guilty of such heaven-defying blasphemy; and infers that since the impious and scoffing old man was not smitten down of God, he was spared that a time for repentance might yet be given. Such surprise may be pardonable in one who is unaware that Butler has in the lodge borne a number of the most precious titles that belong to Christ; that he has mocked the resurrection of Christ in the Hiram Abiff farce; has played blasphemously with the miraculous appearance of the Lord at the burning bush in the Royal Arch degree; has invoked a double damnation upon his soul in the Knight Templar initiation in defiance of the death of Jesus for the remission of sins; and, in short, has sported with blasphemy all through the thirty-two or three Masonic degrees he has taken. That he should use the language quoted is a trifle to the record he has made in this line. Yet how few papers are willing to point out the sin that pretends concealment in the Lodge!

Our Kansas letter gives a good reason for the defeat of Gov. St. John. The independent pioneers of the State are jealous of such railroad monopoly as had attached itself to his cause. "Third-termism" was another fatal element in his cause. The term was made odious by the Conkling-Cameron-Logan triumvirate of political bosses, in their efforts to reinstate Grant. The newly elected Governor Glick has been making speeches to the whiskyites claiming a victory of the people over prohibition. Glick himself is a moral invertebrate, if we may credit the papers, who has no principle but to get into office. He will find the next election worse than a Kansas tornado if he keeps parading himself as a toady to the whisky party. Kansas people are not of the sort to give up so a good a thing as their constitutional amendment.

Judge Hayes of Davenport, Iowa, has decided a test case against the prohibition amendment adopted June 27th. His reasons are largely technical, and are, briefly, that the legislative records do not contain the aye and nay vote; former laws permitted the liquor traffic, hence the amendment impaired vested rights with out providing for compensation; the punctuation was changed; the words "to be used" were omitted after action was first taken by the State Legislature. To urge these objections in the face of 30,000 majority shows how bold men may be made by a single election. It is not likely that the Supreme Court will agree with the Davenport judge, but if otherwise the delay will only make the final triumph of prohibition the more complete.

The report of the Irish Land Commission shows that the amount of assistance asked for by the tenants under the Arrears of Rent bill is far less than was expected, is insignificant, indeed, compared with the large sums due the landlords. The agreements between landlord and tenant aside from the courts are increasing, and the outrages are rapidly falling off. Mr. Gladstone sees with undisguised satisfaction the effect of his work and in a speech a few days since, spoke of the profound interest he felt in local self-government in Ireland. A measure to establish county officers and courts among the unhappy Irish would be a noble celebration of the fifty years Gladstone has been in Parliament.

The telegraph has opened another field of investigation for the scientist. It reveals the presence, duration and extent of a singular phenomenon known as electric storms. One such on Friday last stopped the telegraphic business all through the Northern States and was even felt in England and Europe. Wires were melted, dispatches sent by aerial electricity alone, and electric lights flashed though the batteries were disconnected. On Sunday night there was another storm accompanied with a brilliant aurora.

The alarm at the threatened communistic uprising at Lyons, France, subsided as quickly as it arose, the prompt action of the authorities being a notice to the ringleaders that the hand of the Republic would be heavy should it fall upon them. The power of a republic to maintain itself against such insurrections is thus again shown since Thiers suppressed the Commune twelve years ago. The Napoleons could not have been more successful; in truth, a republic which represents fairly in its government the mass of its citizens must be more swift, more certain and more powerful against lawless uprisings than a monarch, whose cause must of necessity be largely selfish, and therefore weak. A republic provides at recurring elections, too, a means of correcting abuses, but a dynasty changes only by revolution. The example of France is no strength to the confidence of the monarchs of Europe in the perpetuity of their governments.

The Stalwart and Liberal Republican.

BY ALEXANDER THOMSON.

[Day after Election.]

STALWART.

Shade of the sainted Garfield! What a day
Of route and ruin, terror and dismay.
From sea to sea our party banners drop,
And all our hosts in many a baffled group,
Stand in amazement, while the Bourbons rise
With resurrected strength, 'neath smiling skies.
Like famished wolves from this long winter fast
They view with gloating eyes the rich repast;
While, like a lamb with low and moaning cries,
Within their grasp the helpless nation lies,
Shall Bourbon rye and Southern shot-guns keep
With godly grace our Nation's gentle sheep,
Lead them in pastures green, and give them peace,
And ask but homage and the silky fleece?
Have Toombs and Kelly zealously embraced
The holy cause to guard the eagle's nest,
Protect the eaglets from the buzzard crew
With honor bright, and courage ever new?
As soon the slums of Limerick shall create
A polished people and a Christian state.

LIBERAL.

Ye need not be surprised, nor yet despair,
Though Bourbon banners fly in Northern air,
Nor yet amazed that good men do not bother
To see one Bourbon casting down another.
There was a day when Lincoln led the van,
And Stanton stood for all the rights of man;
When Wilson, Greeley, Garfield and the rest,
Wore Honor's garment each on dauntless breast.
When Northern Kelleys and the Southern Toombs
Made bitter war, or planned in midnight rooms,
When I had rather seen this right hand rot
Than failed in freedom's ranks to cast a vote.

Now, craft the place of statesmanship supplies,
And scanty good is eked by ample lies;
Now no high movement for the general weal
Proclaim the heads that think, the hearts that feel;
Now vast monopolies, by protection fed
The people's rights audaciously invade,
Live on their substance, all their powers deride,
And o'er their laws on golden chariots ride.

Who bears the stain of that tremendous fraud
With face unblushing as a city bawd,
That hurled great Colfax from his lofty place
Down to the dark oblivion of disgrace?
Who were the authors of that "back-pay" game
That crimson's every patriot's face with shame?
Who turns on temperance a contemptuous back
And wards with party shield the brave attack,
By patriots made, at once to overthrow
At one brave charge, our strongest, deadliest foe?
Who use the power and patronage of place
To win ignoble victory by disgrace,
And by manipulator's fatal skill
Defeat and overthrow the general will?
Who but the party you and I have known,
And proudly boasted that it was our own.

Its buildings all the work of other days,
Long stand the monuments it lived to raise,
And from its effete body may there spring
Another knight full-armed into the ring,
With arm to strike and head and heart to plan
For all the rights and liberties of man.

The Priests and Lodges of Ireland.

The Observer of Bradford, England, reports the opinions of a correspondent who has marked the collusion of the Romish priests with the secret societies which have been stabbing men in parks and shooting women from behind hedges and shrubbery. The correspondent writes:

In the course of conversation with a Roman Catholic priest, whose name I advisedly withhold, the opinion was expressed to me that many of the priests in Ireland are very blameworthy in respect of Irish murders and outrages. From his knowledge of Irish Catholics my informant is convinced that most of the crimes and outrages have been committed under the auspices of the secret organization. It is, of course, a strict rule in the Roman Catholic Church that its members renounce, on being received into its bosom, all connection with secret societies. The priests in England, without any known exception receive and carry out their bishop's instructions to meet every application for the confessional with the question whether the individual making the application has connection, as a member or as an active supporter, with any secret society. If the question is not satisfactorily answered in the negative, confession is refused. By this means a very effectual check is kept on the tendencies of Irishmen to join themselves to the desperate and lawless organizations which lure many members to their ranks by a show of patriotism. Unfortunately the priests in this country to a large extent have to grapple with a difficulty which they have no very readily apparent means of surmounting. This is the laxity shown in the matter on the part of many Roman Catholic priests in Ireland. In a word, many priests on the other side of the channel wink at this breach of an important rule of their church, and to the extent, at least, of not denouncing the offence lend countenance to it. The result is that these treasonable brotherhoods include in their ranks large numbers of Irishmen who openly disavow all connection with them, and yet help in secret, both with moral and material support, the purposes, frequently outrageous, and, as we now see, even murderous, of its leaders. In England members of these brotherhoods are lost to the confessional, and rarely frequent the churches, but the influence they exercise amongst the Irish community in any town is extensive. One dangerous practice, and which can be vouched for by the clearest evidence, is that of common lodginghouses, and such places where young Irishmen, strangers to England, invariably go to on entering a town, they are inveigled into the society of Fenians, and, as is often the case, in the midst of a drunken revel these young men are prevailed upon to take the terrible oaths of the society, and, once entrapped, it is difficult for them to withdraw. Many such young men, it is feared—indeed, it is in some instances known to be a fact—are sent off to commit outrages in spots where they are total strangers, and after the first crimes of this character the influence exercised over them is immense, as they are frequently threatened with delivery to justice if they do not obey the behest of the meeting. It is by such means that many crimes recently committed in Ireland, the perpetrators of which have remained undiscovered, have been brought about.

Personal Preaching.

BY JOHN TANNER, JR.

There is something beautiful as well as powerful in the man who fearlessly declares the truth under all circumstances where his duty calls him, and very few in these days are the men who can stand beside Nathan in this respect.

Look for a moment at the circumstances in which the prophet Nathan was placed at the time when he said to David, "Thou art the man." He stood in the presence of the King of Israel. David had been a man after God's own heart, and God had raised him from the humble sphere of a shepherd boy, to sway the scepter over his people Israel in that nation's palmiest days. In this exalted position he had committed one of and now here comes to him this humble man of foulest crimes of which man was ever guilty; God to rebuke the king. He has in his mouth the words of the Lord; no Jonah is found in him. He tells the king of a man who has cruelly wronged an innocent neighbor. The king is angry at such a deed and declares the wicked man shall die. Then the prophet makes the startling declaration, "THOU ART THE MAN." Methinks if this picture has an equal in Holy Writ, it is in John the Baptist as he stood in the presence of Herod and rebuked him for the same wickedness.

Where are the prophets of the Most High today, who dare rebuke their rulers? There be few who will put salary, influence, and all at stake to tell the truth. In their hearts is the fear of man more than the fear of God. There are men of wealth occupying places of honor and trust to-day, who are guilty of the ruin of many an innocent girl; but where is the Nathan that dare stand before them and declare, you are the men, who are responsible for their ruin.

Our fair land is cursed to day by the sin of intemperance, our National and State law-makers are enacting laws to protect and defend it. Why should not those men be told from every pulpit that they are responsible for this misery and woe?

We write with regret that our present chief magistrate has ignobly insulted his two predecessors in office, as well as that most exemplary woman, Mrs. Lucy B. Hayes, by again introducing the wine cup at the White House. We may suppose if Nathan were to occupy the pulpit in the presence of our President next Sabbath, he would point his finger at him and cry in tones of thunder, "Thou art the man," more responsible than any other for the continuation of the burden, curse and ruin of intemperance, in the United States.

The want of more Boanerges, sons of thunder, to ocupy our pulpits is too apparent to be denied. When one man can launch out into the waters of heresy and carry with him a professorship like that at Andover, to the regret of the church and the great delight of the infidel, it is very evident that the faith and spiritual life of the people is in a low state, and all for the want of a faithful and personal presentation of God's truth on the part of the ministry. The teaching from the sacred desk to-day is more complimentary to the unbelieving than rebuking to their sinful life. How many pulpits in the land protested against and now condemn the late action of Congress in passing a bill restricting the best class of emigration that comes to our shores, all for the sake of gratifying a few peace-disturbing Irishmen, who are insatiable. Would these things have happened under a Puritanic pulpit, no, and they ought not to be countenanced today by an intelligent Christian people.

And the writer would ask of every candid reader if these things are not satisfactory evidence of a want of conscience, judgment, and self-denial on the part of these leaders of the people occupying our pulpits?

Beacon Hill, Boston.

A WITHERING rebuke was administered by Attorney-General Brewster, during the recent Star Route trial, to Mr. Ingersoll of infidel notoriety and counsel for the accused conspirators. To give effect to his plea in their behalf, he alluded in very strong langnage to the crucifixion scene. Mr. Brewster protested against dragging that sacred scene into that court for clap-trap purposes. In so doing he turned to Ingersoll and said: "And introduced by a gentleman of whom I have to say, What has he got to do with the crucifixion? Did he beiieve in it, that he used it for the purpose of influencing the jury? When a man applies to an occasion an illustration, he should believe in what he says. Of what value is it, if it is not true?"—Ex.

At the M. E. Conference in Indiana, held lately, it was resolved, "That no minister be admitted to this conference on trial who will not pledge himself to abstain from using tobacco."

—The Capitol building, Washington, is assessed at $15,099,656, the grounds at $7,907,595, and the White House at $753,580. The national capital is firmly anchored.

REFORM STORY.

Holden with Cords.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "LITTLE PEOPLE," "A SUNNY LIFE," ETC.

Chapter XXVIII—The Mystery of Orchard Creek.

On the day of October 8, 1827, a little over a year from the mysterious dirappearance of Morgan, the body of an unknown man was cast ashore at Oak Orchard Creek, and hastily buried after an equally hurried inquest. This fact soon became noised abroad, and the question arose and passed from lip to lip, "What if this unknown man should prove to be Morgan?" The fact that all were Masons who officiated at the inquest, and that as soon as the body came ashore members of the fraternity were on the watch to inter it as quickly and quietly as possible, pointed suspicion.

A second inquest was resolved upon; Mrs. Morgan was notified, and invitations sent out to his old friends and neighbors in Batavia to appear and give testimony. But the story of this second inquest as well as some curious after circumstances which finally led to a third one after the identity of the body was supposed to be established beyond doubt, I can best give in the words of my grandfather's old friend, Mr. Jedediah Mills, whom I came across one day when on a visit to a neighboring town.

I thought Mr. Mills looked thinner and a trifle careworn, but he shook my hand with the same hearty cordiality that had welcomed me to Tonawanda; and a few words sufficed to launch him on a subject which was just then the theme of universal conversation — the strange discovery of Morgan's body, and the still stranger circumstances attending the efforts made to identify it.

"It's a queer story from beginning to end. If I had read it somewhere in a novel I vow I wouldn't have believed it. You see the river had been dragged to find the body, and I suppose it got started somehow from the weight that held it to the bottom, and floated on top. The water of Niagara river ain't just like common river water; it's clearer and colder. Why, I've known a man that was lost over the falls and when they found him a year after he hadn't hardly changed. Now I ain't any surer that I'm a living man than I am that this was Morgan's body. Mr. Greene was there to the inquest, and Colonel Miller and Captain Davids, and they all said the same thing. And his poor wife, when she come to look at the corpse, she just said, 'My God!' and it seemed for a minute as if she was going to faint dead away. I declare, I felt—I don't know how, to see that poor young thing—pretty as a picture, too, with the tears a running down her cheeks, and thought how she was left all alone in the world with her two fatherless babes. What if it had been my Hannah now! I can't feel reconciled to some things that happen in this world, nohow."

And Mr. Mills pulled out his handkerchief and made vigorous use thereof, while I echoed inwardly, "Poor young thing!" hardly older than—Rachel, yet called to such a baptism of suspense and anguish; mocked in her perplexity and distress by the very men who had taken her husband's life, as related in the words of her simple and touching affidavit. Verily there are things that make us wonder at the patience of the Infinite; but among the promises of Holy Writ is one that shines with that awful glory which is finally to destroy every system of darkness and oppression. Well may the Church herself look to it that she is not in unholy league with a power that persecutes the saints of the Most High and hides in its skirts innocent blood. "The day of vengeance of our God shall surely come; it shall come and will not tarry."

"Mrs. Morgan's testimony was very clear, I understood, about the marks on the body," said I.

"Clear!" echoed Mr. Mills. "There wan't a flaw in it. She testified before the lid of the coffin was opened, about the hair—chesnut color, long and silky; and about his having double teeth all around, and told where he'd had one pulled out. And the very doctor that pulled it was there from Batavia and had the tooth with him, and it fitted right into the place. And she told too, about a scar on his foot made by cutting it with an ax, and sure enough when they come to look there it was plain as day. Oh, there was no getting over such evidence if she didn't tell right about the clothes. But that is easy enough explained to my mind. I believe the Masons changed Morgan's clothes when they had him shut up in the fort."

"You're idea is rather reasonable, Mr. Mills;" said I, after thinking it over for a moment. "They intended in the event of the body ever being found to prevent identification as far as possible."

"Just so. Exactly;" answered Mr. Mills. "Well of course the body was brought to Batavia and buried; and then came the queer part of the story. It begun to be told round among Masons that it was a Timothy Munroe, a man that was drowned in Niagara river a few weeks before that we'd got buried there. So a third inquest was held and this Munroe's wife and son or a woman and a boy that called themselves by that name, came before the coroner's jury and swore to its being Munroe instead of Morgan."

"What kind of a testimony did the woman give?" I inquired.

"I didn't think much of it," answered Mr. Mills, emphatically. "She told about the double teeth all round, but she couldn't tell to which jaw the tooth that was pulled belonged. She said his hair was short and black, and she didn't know anything about the scar on his foot. But come to the clothes, and she run on as glibly as an auctioneer. She even told of a place in the heel of his stocking that had been mended with yarn of a different color. There was something mysterious about that woman," added Mr. Mills, lowering his voice. "You've read in the Bible I suppose about the judgment of Solomon. Well, if I had been Solomon, and that case was brought before me, I should have known mighty quick on which side to give judgment, Morgan's wife or that Munroe woman. I've got my own thoughts about her that I don't tell to everybody. I believe she was a man dressed up in woman's clothes."

I stared at Mr. Mills in astonishment. Could it be that the ancient and glorious order of Freemasonry which treats the whole female sex with such sublime contempt, was actually not above borrowing its dress in an emergency when some little irregularity, entirely Masonic, but which the general sense of mankind strangely enough disapproves of, needed to be covered up?—as for instance kidnapping and murder?

"She kept her veil down over her face," continued Mr. Mills; "so it was her gait and her voice I judged by mostly, but them two things were enough for me. The boy with her was the greenest kind of a fellow that I ever sat eyes on, just the chap to be make a tool of in any such business. And when the affair was over they both disappeared, nobody knew where. But I'll just tell you—" and here Mr. Mills again lowered his voice confidentially, "what my wife's cousin Joshua says about it. He lives in Wayne county, next door to a doctor by the name of Lewis, a Royal Arch Mason, and one that had considerable to do with taking off Morgan. He says the Masons round there were dreadful flurried when they knew Morgan's body was recognized. The doctor give out that he had a very dangerous patient in the next town, and hurried off post haste with his hostler Mike, but instead of going to perform an operation as he said, it was found out afterwards that he had gone in the direction of Batavia. I described the woman and boy as well as I could to Joshua and he just clapped his hands on his knees, and says he, 'I'd be willing to lay you a five dollar gold piece that Miss Munroe and her son was Dr. Lewis and his coach-boy.' It's a queer kind of a world;" and Mr. Mills sighed with that deep drawn sigh that only comes from the hidden places of trouble. "Now I never thought that in my old age I should be in danger of losing my farm. But the title deed wan't quite right; something put in or something left out, I hardly know which, and I'm here after a lawyer, though I hain't much opinion of lawyers nor courts nuther nowadays."

It was the old story over again—of persecution and wrong that was to find no redress this side of the grave; of injustice shielded under the sacred form of law; of the wicked laying a snare for the righteous in the secret chambers of iniquity, and saying, "Behold the Lord doth not regard."

Testimony of the Illinois Wesleyan Conference.

There is but one name given under heaven or among men whereby we can be saved.

Freemasonry repudiates the mediatorship of Jesus. She encourages her votaries to attempt to climb up to heaven in some other way than by Christ. Like all other false systems of religion, she teaches salvation by works, instead of salvation bp grace received through faith.

As Masonry rejects Christ and seeks to climb up to heaven by merit of her own works, Freemasonry is therefore organized infidelity. Nor is the virus of infidelity to be found only in Freemasonry. Other secret societies are tainted with it also.

Rev. Mr. Crook, a Baptist minister of Bear Lake, Manistee Co., Mich., who has been a member of the order of Good Templars, testified that Good Templarism teaches the same infidel heresy that Freemasonry does, namely, salvation by works that we can do, instead of salvation by grace, received through faith.

Is it any wonder, then, that Christ so positively prohibits his people from being yoked with unbelievers in any of the carnal brotherhoods? Or if his people are already yoked with unbelievers, that he commands them to come out and be separate—so entirely separate as not again to touch the unclean thing? Does not that person deceive himself who hopes for heaven while refusing to obey the word of God? Why, then, should any person be received into the church who is yoked with unbelievers in the lodge? God says he will receive them if they will come out and separate themselves so entirely as not to touch the unclean thing. Do not the churches who receive those who are yoked with unbelievers, and refuse to come out and be separate, practically teach that Christ will justify a man who wilfully clings to sin? Do not those ministers who refuse to renounce their covenant relations with unbelievers, practically teach the damnable heresy that a man may refuse to obey Christ and yet be trusting in him for salavtion? Who does not see that in the nature of things there must be entire submission to the Divine will in the heart of him who now trusts in Jesus to save him from his sins? What those persons have who do not submit to obey Christ, is a false, deceptive hope that they will be saved. The faith that Jesus does save is impossible to a rebellious heart.

—What a picture is a wagon loaded with corn, of you and me as loaded with God's mercies! From our cradle up till now, every day has added a sheaf of blessing. Let us adore his goodness and yield him a cheerful gratitude. When the children of Israel were in the wilderness, they went forth every morning and gathered the manna. Our manna does not come to us every morning, but it comes once a year. If we went out into the field and gathered food which dropped from the clouds, we should think it a great miracle; and is it not as great a marvel that our bread should come up from the earth, as that it should come down from the sky? Therefore, whenever we find the harvest comes, let us be greatful to God, and let us not suffer the season to pass over without psalms and thanksgiving. I believe I shall be correct if I say that there is never in the world, as a rule, more than sixteen months' supply of food; that is to say, when the harvest is gathered in, there may be sixteen months' supply; but at the time of harvest there is not usually enough wheat in the whole world to last the population more than four or five months, so that if the harvest did not come we should be on the verge of famine. We still live from hand to mouth. To the Christian it should be great joy, by means of the harvest to receive an assurance of God's faithfulness. The Lord has promised that seed-time and harvest, summer and winter, shall never cease; and when you see the loaded wain, carrying in the crop, you may say to yourself, "God is true to his promise."—Spurgeon.

TEMPERANCE.

Size of the Temperance Question.

It does no good for men to sneer at the agitation in regard to the liquor traffiic. The subject is too important to be laughed down. It may be that prohibition is not the right way to settle it, or that license is not, or that taxation is not; these are fair questions upon which a difference of opinion between sincere and candid men is possible. But the subject has become altogether too important to be ignored, or passed over without any serious attempt to settle it. Aside from the law-defying spirit which it has elicited, aside from all its moral and religious aspects, the question considered purely as one of the dollars and cents, in its effect upon the national prosperity and wealth, is one of the most important that can be named.

Directly and indirectly, this country spends in the liquor traffic every year a sum exceeding half the National debt. The cost of that traffic to the country, direct and indirect, is greater that the profits of all its capital not invested in real estate. It costs every year more than our whole Civil Service, our Army, our Navy, our Congress, including the River and Harbor and the Pension bills, our wasteful local governments, and all National, State, county and local debts, besides all the schools in the country. In fact, this Nation pays more for liquor than for every function of every kind of government. How is a question of that size to be put aside with a sneer?

As these statements may seem surprising to those who have not looked into the matter, a few figures may be of service. A glass of beer costs the consumer five cents, and there are at least twenty in the gallon, and 640 in the barrel, so that beer retails at about $32 a barrel, while ale costs still more. The consumption of beer and ale last year was about 15,000,000 barrels; cost to consumers about $480,000,000. The cheapest kind of liquor used, ordinary whisky, is rarely sold at five cents, and averages at least seven cents a drink; at half a gill to the "horn," this makes $4.48 per gallon. The consumption last year was about 70,000,000 gallons; cost to consumers about $313,000,000. Adding wines, there is certainly spent for drink more than $800,000,000, and the entire sum raised by taxes of all kinds, National, State, county, city, town and school district, is stated on authority of the census bureau to be not more than about $700,000,000.

But the cost of the liquor drunk is not by any means the whole cost of the liquor traffic. An official report, prepared with much labor by the Bureau of Statistics of Massachusetts under authority from the Legislature, states that eighty-four per cent. of all the crime and criminal expense in the State comes directly from the abuse of liquor. There are at least one in twenty of the able-bodied men in this country who are rendered idle by their habits or incapacitated for work, and these persons, as the ordinary wages of workingmen, would earn, if industrious and fairly employed, over $200,000,000 yearly. The proportion of persons in hospitals who reach them because of excess in drink is very large, but cannot be definitely ascertained.

A traffic that costs in actual payment and in loss of productive labor more than half the National debt every year is not to be ignored by the economist. It may be assumed that the entire wealth of the country has risen from thirty billions in 1870 to fifty billions in 1880, about one-half being in real estate. Probably it does not average profits exceeding four per cent. yearly, taking bad investments with good, but at that rate the yearly interest on all personal property of all kinds is only one billion dollars, and the direct or indirect cost of liquor traffic must be greater.

These comparisons do not constitute reasons for doing any unjust or unwise thing. What ought to be done about the liquor traffic is not to be decided hastily or without due regard for the rights of all classes of citizens. But the time has gone by in this country when a serious discussion of a question that involves such a vast expense to the Nation can be prevented by bullying, intolerance, insolence or ridicule. This very practical people, having begun to think about the matter in earnest, perceives that it is much too important to be put aside at the dictation of saloon keepers. It is certain that the entire savings of the people and all additions to their wealth are not twice as much as the sum expended for liquor and because of the abuse of liquor. If any just and reasonable proposition can be made that will add one-half to the savings and the prosperity of the Nation, it will not be put down by a sneer, nor defeated by a law-breaking mob.—N. Y. Tribune.

Note from Secretary Stoddard.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18th, 1882.

An unexpected tax upon my time and thoughts has prevented me from submitting what I have to say further about Washington and extending the circulation of the Cynosure; but this need not, and I trust will not prevent any one from efforts to introduce our organ into families and secure the subscriptions so much needed. I go to Oshkosh, Wis.; Blue Earth City, Minn.; and to Kansas, to attend State meetings, and I shall do what I can in connection with these annual gatherings. I earnestly solicit the co-operation of all friends of the cause every where, and D. V., I will submit further reasons next week. J. P. STODDARD.

Washington Letter.

REFORMERS THAT NEED TO BE REFORMED.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11, 1882.

The Dashaway Reform (Temperance) Club of this city advertises a grand fair and bazaar on the 15-17th, at the Masonic Temple, the principal feature being a lottery of which the following are some of the prizes: "An organ worth $200; Chamber set costing $100; a magnificent silver pitcher and goblets, to the temperance order that gets the highest number of votes;" "Lady's silk fur-lined cloak to the lady who sells the greatest number of tickets;" "A full suit of clothes to the most popular temperance man." "Tickets 50cts., for sale at news and cigar stands."

I wish to record my protest against this prostitution of the temperance reform. I do so in the name of civil law, and Christian morals. Because:

1st. It violates the spirit, if not the letter of the laws against gambling and lotteries in many of the States and in this District.

2. It appeals to, and promotes that coveteous "love of money which is the root of all evil," and depresses patient endeavor, and honest industry.

3. It dishonors the name of Christian benevolence which it assumes to be, while in fact it is only a scheme to get gain at others expense.

4. It offers an opportunity for, and temptation to all manner of fraud.

5. It depresses all serious conviction, and makes what should be an earnest Christian work, of prayer, faith and labor, to be a mere frolic or worse.

6. Experience has shown that all such appeals to selfishness do but strengthen the selfish principle, lower the standard of public morals, loosen the restraints upon appetite, and tend to promote the evil they were designed to remove. Let if possible, this Reform Club be reformed. At least let all God-fearing people avoid all such methods of reformation. H. H. HINMAN.

FALSE LIVERY.—Secret societies certainly do not lack audacity and insolence. No theologian's spirit and teachings were more opposed to the evils of such societies of darkness than Luther's, and still we find his fair name abused by some of the fraternities in New York city, and possibly elsewhere, who call themselves "The Martin Luther Lodges." Seeking the prestige his honored name imparts they make the Reformer appear to sanction a system that he would have abhored from the bottom of his soul.—Lutheran Standard.

NEW ENGLAND.

THE NEW ENGLAND BOARD of the National Christian Association has it headquarters at No. 8 Portland St., Worcester, Mass. A full supply of books and tracts constantly on hand. Orders promptly filled. Correspondence solicited. E. D. BAILEY, N. E. Sec.

—A gentleman, who belonged to the Oddfellows and being sick was entitled to a weekly stipend, proposed to sue the lodge for what was due him, but learned from the lawyers that the lodge was not incorporated and therefore not responsible in law. So it appears that those who have claims against secret orders are without redress when their benefits are withheld.

—The New England Secretary preached last Sunday (12th) at Wayland, Mass. This church has become famous of late by reason of the refusal of a Council to install the pastor whom they had chosen. The young man was a graduate of Andover Theological Seminary but believed in a future probation for the wicked. He claimed that the professors in the Seminary taught that doctrine and he felt it his duty to preach it. The council promptly declined to endorse him and the church acquiesced. He preached there ten Sabbaths without making known in any way his erratic doctrines, so that the church was in ignorance of his views on the subject.

—Elder D. DeWolf of Green River, Vt., preaches alternate Sabbaths at a school-house near his home and secures a good audience, many of whom do not attend church elsewhere. This is much better than abandoning all Christian work in old age. Mrs. DeWolf ably seconds his efforts.

—Deacon Leadbetter dropped into the old Wesleyan meeting house at Cochituate one Sunday night recently and found that a layman was maintaining a prayer-meeting regularly with an average attendance of about sixty, mostly young people. He said he had never seen a better prayer-meeting or more profound attention from the persons present. Who knows but this barren field may yet blossom with spiritual grace? Perhaps the Wesleyans will repossess the field.

Seed-sowing among the Green Mountains.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 14th, 1882.

Politics, preaching, visiting and lecturing have been the agreeable occupations of the past week. There is no need of resting for want of work. If there were three men here now ready for work they would not have to wait over night to find it. Several friends in the vicinity of Brattleboro, Vt., had invited me to lecture at various points about there when convenient and I had promised to do so. I notified them when I would lecture in each place and last Monday commenced the campaign, with a lecture at Green River, a few miles from Brattleboro. The pastor of the church gave a good notice of the lecture Sunday morning and urged the people to attend. I was hospitably entertained at the home of Bro. Charles Potter during my stay and his horse and buggy conveyed me to the places for lecturing. There was a fair and attentive audience at Green River, and for the most part an apparent sincerity in receiving the facts. At the close of the lecture two young men felt it their duty to expose their ignorance and display their folly, but they were of too low an order of beings to make any impression on respectable people.

The second lecture was at Hinesburg, in the Baptist church, of which Rev. C. S. Sherman is pastor. The moral atmosphere of this place was far in advance of Green River. The pastor came forward cordially to greet me on entering the church and tendered his kind offices for any service desired. He conducted the devotional exercises and introduced me in a happy manner to the audience, which was fair in size and good in quality. This Baptist church has kept itself unspotted from the lodge and is proud of its record. The degree of interest in the discussion may be judged somewhat by the fact that the people here, as also in the other places, listened to an address two hours in length with apparently undiminished attention to the last. There are probably few subjects now before the people which would hold the undivided attention of an audience for the same length of time.

The third lecture was at Halifax. Stephen Niles and A. F. S. Niles arranged this lecture in a Baptist church, where also the Methodists worship. Elder D. DeWolf and wife and Mr. J. E. Gates and wife were also among the faithful helpers. These names are all familiar to Vermont readers and the persons themselves are faithful laborers in the good cause. The pleasantest part of the work is the meeting of such friends whose warm sympathy is a solace for fatiguing labors.

The fourth lecture was at Jamaica, where Bro. Abijah Muzzy and wife, and Dr. Houlton and wife have for many years maintained a faithful testimony against the lodge. The meeting was in the town hall, the upper part of which is occupied by the Congregational church, Rev. Mr. Baker, pastor. The train on which I went reached the place late in the evening and the people were in doubt whether I would be there. At 8 P. M. I reached the hall and met persons going away. The hall soon filled up again at the ringing of the bell and we had a very pleasant and successful evening. They were anxious for a second lecture Friday evening, but as I had spoken eight times since Sunday morning and had another engagement at Wayland, Mass., for Sunday it seemed imprudent to crowd myself any further and I returned Friday.

I am under great obligations to Bro. Charles Potter and family, as also to the other friends mentioned above for their hospitality and generosity. I spent Thursday in Brattleboro, hospitably entertained by our veteran brother R. G. Wood and his accomplished daughters, who say they are staunch Anti-masons everywhere except in Brattleboro, where their friends live! I think however they would not be the first to retreat if the battle should wax warm near home. I missed Gen. Phelps, who had not returned from the west.

Brother Wood introduced me to the man who some years ago presented a petition in the Vermont legislature praying for the prohibition of extra judicial oaths. For his services in the cause he says the lodge "took his head off" so quick he hardly knew what struck him. He was not returned to the legislature again. One cannot converse with men, who have passed through such experiences, without realizing the powerful control which the secret orders maintain over our politics. It is the certainty of speedy vengeance from the lodge which deters many men from a bold and aggressive warfare against it.

There was an opening for a lecture in West Brattleboro which I was unable to fill at this time. We obtained the promise of the large opera house in Brattleboro for a lecture or a State convention soon, if we wish it. I did not close a bargain for two reasons. Is Brattleboro the most convenient place for holding a convention? Mr. Spaulding is now in Vermont canvassing and is to see what can be done for a place nearer Montpelier, in the centre of the State. If he finds an opening there friends may prefer that location. This is one point to consider but a second and very important consideration is whether residents in Vermont will themselves take interest enough in organizing the State to attend a convention. If we hold it at Brattleboro this fall there would be a fair attendance of persons living in the southeastern portion. These persons are among the most zealous workers, but will the people come from other parts of the State! Nothing will determine the answer but the decision of the people themselves. I should be pleased to hear by letter from others on this point. Meanwhile Mr. Spaulding will push the canvassing business as much as possible.

The political revolution in Massachusetts which puts Ben. F. Butler in the Gubernatorial chair is perhaps as significant as any political event in the country. It is evident that this result is not due to the ordinary causes which operated elsewhere, for the Republican State ticket, except the governor, was elected. It is also evident that the result is not due to the great popularity of Butler for he has six times before run for Governor and failed. The result cannot be due to any conspicuous inability on the part of Mr. Bishop, the defeated candidate, for it was his marked ability and honest record in the legislature, defeating especially the salary grab, which made him strong enough before the people to secure a nomination against the wishes of the politicians. Two causes operated to defeat him—he was a prohibitionist and an anti-secretist. These points have been made prominent in the canvas and have done their work. Judge Dewey, whom the Masons in Worcester opposed for the State Senate, as I wrote last week, was also defeated, although he is said to be one of the most upright, capable men in the State and the nomination was forced upon him against his will. His opponent is an ignorant demagogue who relies upon his Masonry and money for office. These events will not soon be forgotten in this State. It is now probable that Geo. Long, a Mason, will be the candidate of our Masonic Governor Butler, for the Senate, to succeed Mr. Hoar, and we shall witness in this the consummation of the conspiracy by which the lodge will control the Republican party in the State. It is not always easy to prove complicity, but in this case the evidence is so overwhelming as to leave no doubt.

Obituary.

West Newton, Ind.

Editor Cynosure:—I write to inform you, and, through the Cynosure, the many friends of light, of the death of one of its most earnest supporters, Preston Allen, on Monday, Oct. 30, at 7:30 p. m.

Born in Ohio in 1821, he came with his father to central Indiana when the country was an unbroken wilderness, and was one of the pioneers who bore the privations and hardships which were incident to that time. The hard labor, exposure, and irregular life which seems unavoidable in clearing and cultivating the land produced disease of the digestive organs which led to ossification in the arteries.

He was distinguished in the community for his earnest and active opposition to slavery, intemperance and secret orders. The last few years of his active life being spent especially in endeavors to overthrow the latter evil. He fought Masonry and not Masons, as he fought all sin and not sinners; so that he always retained the respect and good will of those who were opposed to him. His work is done and well done and his reward will be great.

C. F. Allen.

Died in Bloomingdale, Ill., Nov. 8th of typhoid fever, Charles Northrop, son of Deacon Northrop, aged 24 years.

Bro. Waters Northrop and his family who are thus sorely afflicted, have our earnest sympathy. He has long been among the warmest supporters of the reform in northern Illinois, and has had the satisfaction of seeing a brother who had taken many degrees in Masonry, renounce them for Christ's sake.

—"I haven't a son or a daughter that I would not rather see carried to their graves than to have one of them listen to Christian teachings. I would rather take my child and throw it into hell than to send it to an outside school. That's the kind of a Latter-Day Saint I am." said Brigham Young, Jr., at a recent Mormon conference.

REFORM NEWS.

Northeast Pennsylvania Christian Association.

According to previous announcements, the Northeast Pennsylvania Christian Association met at the East Herrick church, in Bradford Co., Pa., on Tuesday, Oct. 24, 1882, at 7:30 o'clock p. m. The president, S. E. Miller, being absent, Rev. Edwin Barnetson was elected in his stead, and B. H. Phelps secretary.

Elder Nathan Callender addressed the people upon the religion of Freemasonry as a universal religion, making numerous good points which were very interesting as well as beneficial and instructive.

He was followed by Rev. G. L. Paine and Rev. Jas. Richmond. The president warned young men against the allurements of Freemasonry.

The next morning, after devotional exercises, speeches were made by Rev. Paine and G. R. Sanders, the latter giving his experience as an Odd-fellow, having gone as high as possible in that order.

Opportunity being given for persons to have their names enrolled as members of the Association, twenty-one responded. The conference meeting was renewed by speeches, interspersed with singing.

In the afternoon twelve additional members were enrolled. The report of the nominating committee was adopted as follows:

President—S. E. Miller, of Clifford.

Vice-Presidents—J. J. Barnes, Robert Burlington, J. A. Bowker, H. L. Phelps, Horton Taylor, E. Owen, Burgess Smith, G. Sanders, S. W. Elliott, Newel Callender, Silas Ferris.

Recording Secretary—B. H. Phelps, Leraysville.

Corresponding Secretary—Nathan Callender, Thompson.

Treasurer—Wm. Bertels, Wilkesberre.

The subject of politics being discussed, a few short speeches were made; after which a vote of thanks was returned the people for their hospitality.

In the evening Mr. G. R. Sanders was called upon to relate his experience as an Odd-fellow. He responded, reading several times from the "Odd-Fellows' Manual," and was followed by the president, who made some very strong points in opposition to Freemasonry and its influences.

Elder Callender also made some remarks which were very expressive and to the point. He was followed by N. W. Barnes, who acknowledged he was opposed to secret societies, but thought we should be silent workers in the reform.

The doxology was sung by the congregation, the benediction pronounced by Elder Callender, and the meeting closed.

B. H. Phelps, Recording Secretary.

What hath God Wrought!

In reading Bro. Bailey's account of the Sixth Annual Meeting of the New Hampshire Christian Association at Center Strafford, it occurred to me that it might still more encourage the friends in other States to know that our second annual meeting was held in the same place under quite different circumstances. Then Bro. J. P. Stoddard and Bro. J. F. Browne were the chief speakers. Bro. Stoddard had hardly commenced his first lecture when he was interrupted by a Freemason church member who belched out, "You are a perjured man!" Bro. Stoddard hastened to say that he was not a Freemason, but was reciting Masonic oaths as revealed by others. The mob spirit was very manifest in the meeting and when the closing prayer was announced the Satanic spirit broke loose and this Freemason church member mounted a seat and as spokesman for the rioters forbade prayer. The lodge mob kept up such an uproar that the moderator deemed it not advisable to have a formal closing prayer and Bro. Stoddard in stentorian voice closed the meeting with a benediction.

I will now quote from the official record to show the public feeling on the last day of the meeting: "The secretary was privately notified by several persons that they had received information that the rioters of last evening were preparing to use greater violence and to assault the speakers at the evening meeting, and urging that legal precautions be taken. After consultation the friends of the convention decided to pray to God and leave the event with him who is able to "turn the wrath of man to his praise." Contrary to the fears of some, good order prevailed; but the next morning we found one of the large windows, sash and glass, smashed in by a sled-stake. What a change for the better in six years!

These scandalous proceedings are not rehearsed to torture the guilty men who thus defied all law, human and divine, but to encourage our friends in other States not to fear a little Satanic bluster, noise, threatening and even violence. One Masonic mob will do more to overthrow Masonry in a State than forty good Anti-masonic lectures. To be sure it is not pleasant to contend with Satan in the mob, but we have the sure promise, "Resist the devil and he will flee from you." The Christian must be willing to resist Satan in whatever guise he may present himself, whether in the soft prattle of a Masonic elder or the fierce howl of a Masonic mob. I second the timely advice of Bro. Bailey to our good friends in Maine and Vermont. "Organize! organize!" No doubt Satan will hinder you but he is a conquered enemy. Lift up the standard in the name of Jehovah and one shall chase a thousand and two shall put ten thousand to flight. "Be not afraid of them that kill the body and after that have no more that they can do." That arm that holds the world is over us with tender care. No evil can befall the just. "Fear not, little flock. It is your father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom".

S. C. Kimball.

—A convention in favor of the National Reform is about to be held in Coulterville in southwestern Illinois. Revs. R. C. Wylie, J. M. Faris and others have been holding meetings in various places in the vicinity in preparation for the convention.

—The Lake Local of Sandy Lake, Mercer county, Pa., speaks with enthusiasm of a recent address of Dr. A. M. Milligan of Pittsburg on the National Reform issues, thus:

"An immense audience greeted Dr. Milligan at Stoneboro Wednesday evening to hear his great lecture, 'Our Country for Christ.' Few such able lectures have ever been delivered in this county. The Dr. excelled himself. He showed from Scripture the two great Powers waring in the Universe. "There was war in heaven; Michæl and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought Michæl and his angels." He graphically portrayed the conflicts of these two powers in our nation in the past, and pointed out many of those yet to come before our nation, the battle-ground of moral issues for the world, shall be regenerated, and become a kingdom of the Lord and of his Christ."

Vermont pays three cents tax on whiskey, per capita, against $4.50 for Connecticut, $6.50 for Illinois, etc. There is probably less money paid into secret lodges in that State than any other. It is called a good State to emigrate from. It looks like a good State to stay in.

—Telegraphing with mirrors for instruments and sunbeams for wires is not a new thing, but it is perhaps more generally employed in military operations than people generally suppose. A very interesting experiment was tried in Egypt recently when Colonel Keyser ascended one of the pyramids, and setting up a heliographic miror reflected rays of sunshine to the coast of Alexandria, 120 miles distant. In that way a message from Sir Garnet Wolseley was communicated to the Khedive. Where the topographical condition of the country will admit of it this form of telegraphing in very convenient and useful, since no wires are necessary and hence the message cannot be arrrested or stolen.

—Who is wise? He that is teachable. Who is mighty? He that conquors himself. Who is rich? He that is contented. Who is honored? He that honoreth others.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Irrepressible Conflict.

STRAWBERRY, KANS.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The conflict is becoming fiercer in this county between God's people and the lodge. The M. E. church has had another of those celebrated church trials similar to that of Bro. J. T. Michael and others—that of F. H. Bennett, of Clifton, this county. Bennett declared himself opposed to secret societies some months ago but said nothing further on the subject and things went on very smoothly for awhile. For several years he has filled many offices in the church, has been offered an exhorter's license and even asked to fill the minister's place while he went to conference last spring. In short, he was a prominent and useful member, but poor. After conference, however, he displeased the Masonic minister in some way and was suddenly found out to be a very bad man and his character assailed by the minister and others; when he and the minister had a tilt closely followed by a church trial. A committee of five was chosen by the minister, his own warm friends to all appearances, two of them Freemasons and two of them rank jack Masons. The result was Bennett was expelled on a very trivial specification under the charge of falsehood. Out of seven or eight specifications under the charge of dishonesty and falsehood, this was the only one sustained, and Bennett declares that he believes from all appearances four of the committee were asleep at the time this specification was under consideration—the trial continuing all night.

This trial took place August 25th, last. Bennett has tried for an appeal, but I understand is denied. He demanded a public trial, but the elder wrote to not let him have a public trial, especially not in a public building where the doors could not be closed against certain classes. The letter closed: "If Bro. B. was tried by an Odd-fellow or Freemason lodge, could he expect a public trial?"

I wonder if the Methodist church is to follow the lodge policy in everything. Some will insist that the lodge is at the bottom of the expulsion. But it surely can't be so; for they deny it, and the minister was prostrated after the trial and came near dying. After four weeks he is on the wing again and filled his appointment at Maple Grove, evidently seeking whom he may —turn out of the church—if they don't behave. During his remarks he said that "some were disturbers of the church; didn't like secret societies; couldn't have their own way; couldn't run things and therefore had to leave the church. Some took letters, but some had to show their contempt for the church by leaving without letters. These people that were jumping about from one church to another were no loss to the church—the M. E. church—nor benefit to the church that got them. If a few more would leave the church we would have a pretty good community." Now of the twelve who have left this class and joined the United Brethren church on account of secret societies in the M. E. church only one of them has ever belonged to any other church and some of them have been active members for ten to twenty years. They were all good enough till they left the M. E. church and then were "sour grapes." He said "the Methodist church was no prison. If any didn't like secret societies they could get out of the church. If they didn't keep still about it they would have to take a back seat. It has got to be stopped. The next one that mentions this subject in class I will bring charges against."

A rich Freemason said that sermon did him a hundred dollars worth of good. The minister went home with him after the sermon. Next day he called on H. E. Prentice, the Anti-masonic class leader at this point, (Maple Grove) took his class book and turned him out of office. He admitted to Prentice that he had met his approbation completely as leader, but in the Bennett trial a few weeks ago he had leaned toward the Bennett side in his argument in summing up the case—in short, was in sympathy with the Anti-masons. These are not the exact words but the substance of his objections to Prentice. Now Bennett was class and recording steward and as an Anti-mason was likely to make a record against the lodge if allowed to stay in office; and Prentice was an able man in Quarterly Conference. If one or two more officers are turned out the lodge will have a majority in Quarterly Conference.

The Methodist minister belongs to a number of lodges, uses tobacco, and gets about seven hundred dollars a year for preaching at three points—two weeks' preaching.

Yours for the cause, S.

A Birthday Letter.

GOODWINE, ILL. Nov. 6th, 1882.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—This day fifty-one years ago I was born in the little State of Deleware, and now as I have just entered upon a new year of my life, I feel like covenanting anew in the good and noble work of our reform. Not long since, while on a Wabash train, I accidently seated myself by Rev. N. R. Woods, a Free Methodist preacher; as soon as I learned this, I felt as if I had found a friend—felt at home. Of course the lodge question soon came up and although an entire stranger to him he risked a bright silver dollar with me to pay for the Cynosure. See what confidence he put in me (not wishing to praise myself,) because I was earnestly opposing the lodge. But suppose we on the other hand had both been Masons and I had proved myself to be a true "brother" "on the square" by the usual signs, does any one think he would have risked a dollar with his "cut throat" brother? Not a penny of it! Why? Because one fraud is always afraid of another. If Masonry is not a fraud there is no such thing as fraud. Their secrets are all out and yet they are peddling the three degree secrets out for usually about $30. The lodge magnates, like "horse tamers," know their animal must first be broken. A man is devoid of manhood when he submits to be "roped;" and being devoid of manhood makes him an animal. This is fair reasoning. Masons first commence to train their dupes by throwing around them a blue rope called a cable tow. Once tamed he is at their mercy. Masons say it is the covenant that makes the Mason. We say it is not true—it is only a part of it. We say a man is made a Mason only when he is entered, passed, knocked down, scooped and raised. We appeal for the truth of this to those preachers who are Masons.

And now one word about supporting Masonic ministers. It is getting to be poor policy to support a minister to preach the gospel (?) when he is training behind tyled doors and in such dens.

While visiting my aged parents in Indiana and going to church with them I was approached by Roger Adams, aged 76. He said he had no money (Mr. A. is a rich man) for Masonic preachers, but he gave me money for the Cynosure. It would nearly break a heart of stone to hear him recite how the fraternity approached him when away off in Missouri among strangers, and engaged in a heavy criminal suit where his son was the party on trial. It cost the father about $1,500 to defend him. Mr. A. was asked if he was a Mason, giving him to understand if he was, everything would certainly come out all right, telling the old man at the same time they did not believe his son guilty, but for want of the hellish(excuse the word! I don't know of any other suit) badge, his son had to langnish in a prison and before these Masonic officials could decide the case the son sickened and died in prison and was sent home in a coffin to fond parents, brothers and sisters! I have known the Adamses forty years and they are highly respected folks.

While at father's I learned with the deepest sorrow of two friends of mine who had joined the lodge, both of whom knew in advance just how they would be treated during initiation. I can not understand what they joined for. One of them went with me to Philadelphia to the Centennial when I gave out thousands of tracts going and coming—was told he would give me timely warning if the lodge carried out threats. I have been threatened—but would rather had his friendship outside than inside of the lodge.

J. S. HICKMAN.

Letter to a Washington Pastor.

The following letter was lately addressed to a Methodist Episcopal pastor of Washington city by a gentleman who was about to enter into full communion of his church, but drew back when he learned that the pastor was a worshiper at Masonic altars:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 11, '82.

Rev. ——, pastor of —— M. E. church:

DEAR SIR:—Were I to consult my feelings, I would have prefixed the word "Brother" where the formal "Sir" appears at the opening sentence of this letter; but, for reasons which will duly appear, it is not placed where my heart would most gladly write it.

I must request that you do not call out my name to approach the altar-rail to receive the right hand of fellowship until I shall indicate my willingness to take that step.

Never did I regret anything much more than I do this necessary step which I am taking conscientiously.

"The blood of Jesus cleanseth from all sin." O, how true is this! In my own case, I have no more doubt of the efficacy of that sacrifice than I doubt my present duty to write this epistle. Blessed be his name! it is because I am cleansed from all sin and sinfulness, that I write to request that the action of the church in favor of my admission be not regarded as an obligation on my part to comply with the usual invitation.

You will please call to mind your remark in your parlor the day I consulted you on the subject of placing myself on probation. You said I was testing the church. Now to-night I learned a fact from brother P—— which places me, at the end of my probation and at the incipiency of full membership, in such an anomalous position that I find myself most reluctantly compelled to withdraw my attitude of quest as to full membership of the dearest church I have ever known. I am more of a Methodist than ever, I am less of a Romanist than ever before. I have burned my bridges, I am a l'outrance with any so called church, which dares to reverse two important mandates of the Savior. I refer to Matt. 20: 25-28; and again to his plain and clear and explicit and binding mandate in Matt. 23: 9, on which subject I present you the following extracts from my letter of this date to my Roman Catholic daughter:

"As to 'tirades' against your religion; you ought never to use such a term to your own father. Indeed your religion is the subject of just criticism so long as it does not teach you to reverence your papa. I hate to be the only 'father' you possess who cannot claim your respect; and I regret that you place as first objects of your love those whose claims are founded on the blasphemous tradition which violates the command of Jesus, without whom there can be no church, and whose plain command to call no man father on earth (meaning Spiritual father) no church can reverse without denying the Lord that bought them. Jesus only; Jesus all in all! That is my central truth, the pivotal point of my entire theology. No church without Jesus. All who truly obey Jesus only are members of my church, be they Romanists or Protestants."

If you, dear sir, will now read the next verse, Matthew 23:10, you will see that I am, in conscience, just as much opposed to the order, of which I am now informed you are a member, and on the very same grounds. Jesus only is your "Master," or else you are entirely out of place in his pulpit.

You, however, acknowledge a "Grand Master," on earth and are perhaps, partaker of the title. You cannot, therefore, be my pastor. "Jesus only," is my motto.

While our paths necessarily diverge there is no reason why you should regard me with aversion for having thus addressed you. I am older than you and I know that the great obstacles to the spread of genuine doctrine and practice of Jesus are the loose ways of the Christians who are to a great extent violating Matthew 20:25-28; 23:9-10; 19:9, or at least quietly minding their own business and letting others live as they please and with whom they please.

As to the religion of Masonry it is abhorent to Jesus, whom it excludes from its pale. Its ablest advocate has said that it is a religion of pure "Theism" beyond which, as a Mason you "must not and cannot go." (Mackey's Masonic Jurisp. p. 95.; Mackey's Lex., Art. "Religion.") "It is Anti-masonic to require any religious test other than the candidate should believe in a God, the creator and governor of the Universe." (Chase's Dig. of M. Law p. 206.) "Freemasonry calls no man to account for his belief of any religion on the globe." (Cons. Gr. Orient of France. Chase's Dig. 207.)

I will not multiply quotations to prove that Masonry is a Christless religion. Let it suffice to say that the "Liberty wherewith Christ has set me free is deservedly dear to me; nor will I, God helping me, be again entangled with the yoke of bondage, or fellowship the "works of darkness." I cannot fellowship with any save Christians, and as no man can serve two masters, no man can be a Christian, such as Jesus requires and secretly fellowship with idolaters, polygamists and anti-Christians; for the beloved disciple defines the spirit of anti-Christ, in his first Epistle 4: 3, to be any spirit "that confesses not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh." The spirit of Masonry excludes the very subject from its "religion."

I have never sought admission into Masonic order; I neither know, or wish to know its secret. If it be good, then ought I to communicate it to the public; if evil, I would be under the same obligation. The religion of Jesus is all I want; and of course, I regard the pulpit the sole and exclusive property (with all its consistent incumbent,) of Jesus only.

Doubtless you have your own opinion of the matter, which will not be affected by that of an outsider; but, as you are precluded by your obligation, in which you have invoked your own destruction in manner and form which would revolt an inquisitor, from showing me my errors from, or outside, the pulpit of Jesus, of course, we must remain antipodal in this matter.

With the sincere prayer that you may withdraw from evil associations, as I must regard them, and confine yourself to the work of the ministry of Jesus alone, I am, my dear sir, your true friend.

—There are said to be 110,000 members of the United Workmen lodges in this country. They pay an initiation fee of $10, and the aggregate insurance they expect to get at death is $226,000,000. But if they should stop taking in members, how much would they get?

Our Mail.

G. H. Williams, Putnam, Conn.:

"Our cause progresses and the battle grows hotter of course."

Jas. Barnes, Sr., Strawberry Point, Iowa:

"I feel that all preachers who are Masons ought to be rebuked severely and stop preaching till they repent and confess that great sin. * * I once thought some of joining the lodge because so many ministers belonged to it. I thank the good Lord that I have not fallen into that dreadful snare."

Mrs. Rachel P. Hill, Carthage, Ind., writes of the Indiana State Convention:

"We think the convention did much good. The devil overshot his mark in opposition and caused a reaction in favor of anti-secretism. The Methodist minister would not let the singers into his Sabbath-school because they were connected with the anti-secret movement, which caused some of his scholars to come down to the Friends Sabbath-school which was opened and closed by the singers."

W. H. McChesney, Corresponding Sec'y of Minnesota Christian Association writes from his former home in New York:

"I am holding up the cause of reform here and find the people in much ignorance in regard to the terrible institution of Freemasonry. They think it horrible for a Christian man to take such oaths and I tell them that they do."

J. C. Card, Seattle, W. T.:

"I believe you are preaching the everlasting gospel as foretold under the third angel's proclamation in Revelation 14 and verse 9, and that we are living in the reaping time as foretold in verse 15, when the tares are being bound in bundles to be burned as Christ taught they should be, in Matthew 13:30, for men are being gathered into all kinds of societies (bundles) and bound by all kinds of oaths. Surely here is the patience and the faith the saints and they will soon rest from their labors and their works will follow them."

John Motter, Lyons, Kan.:

"Bro. Feemster has paid us a visit and lectured here in the U. B. church. He is doing great good in the lecture field in Kansas."

C. H. Gillett, Maple, Mich., gives this as the judgment of his experience:

"There is no person who understands what Freemasonry is and loves it, but hates the Lord Jesus Christ, I care not how many ministers, deacons and church members you make out, it will prove true at the judgment of the last great day."

Thos. C. Haines, Portland, Oregon:

"When showing the Cynosure and the monument pictures to a sister, she said she supposed Morgan was really killed; that her mother said she had two brothers at that time Masons, and they left the lodge, yet of course never dare tell about it. She also remembered a man who a good many years ago preached in Portland against secret orders; most everybody got mad at him and the papers abused him. On asking his name it proved to be Bro. Chamberlain of Washington Territory. That seed may yet bear much fruit."

Books and Magazines.

The first volume of the tasteful edition of Green's "History of the English People" published by the Useful Knowledge Publishing Co., New York, appeared some time ago. Four handy volumes complete the work, clearly printed and finely bound. This history, while the latest, is also the best of those which cover the whole period of English history from the earliest times to our own century. It is a history of the people no less than of their rulers, showing them as they lived as well as how they warred and managed the politics of their times. The student of Macauley will miss the versatility, the elegance of diction and the philosophical analysis of that great writer; but will be none the less pleased with the clearness, the happy sketches of character and of historical incidents that enliven, diversify and render the narrative deeply impressive. One could wish that the author had been less brief with the closing chapters, especially those respecting the American Revolution and the wars with Napoleon. These periods are quite fully written up by other authors, however. The publishers have presented excellent work in very attractive style and at this very low price.

The Century for November is a rich number, both in its matchless illustrations and the excellence of some of its articles. "A new Profession for Women" recounts the obstacles surmounting and the present successful operation of the Training School for Nurses connected with Bellevue Hospital, New York. This is not a new profession, but this systematic education of devoted young women has not before been tried in this country. Their work in hospital, tenement house and as private nurses is very touchingly told. Their self-sacrifice inspires emulation and banishes misanthropy. Rev. Washington Gladden contributes the first of a series of articles on "The Christian League of Connecticut," which deserves a more extended notice than can here be given. Edward Eggleston also begins a historical series "The Beginning of a Nation," which tells much that is entertaining and some things that are new about the settlement of this continent. This article is freely illustrated with old and rare cuts. An article on the failure of the Jury System by Albert Stickney, and on England by Charles Dudley Warner help to make this a substantial number of the Century.

Purdy's Fruit Recorder for this month pictures for us the boasted "Big Bob" strawberry, which the publisher puts at the head of the list. If the fruit equals the representation we can believe all that is said in favor of the new berry.

The Quarterly Report of the Kansas State Board of Agriculture for quarter ending September 30, is strong in statistics. The crop reports for 1882 place Kansas among the most promising of the agricultural States. Many counties report as yet but half the land in cultivation. Nearly a million and a half acres were sown to winter wheat, and the average yield was about thirty-two bushels per acre; corn nearly thirty-six.

REFORM NOTE-PAPER AND ENVELOPES.

As a needed means of spreading the truth regarding secrecy, a collection of the utterances of Scripture and various noted statesmen and ministers has been prepared and printed in tasteful form at the top of note-paper and on both sides of envelopes (the matter on the paper being entirely different from that on the envelopes.) A blank line for date is also printed in. The envelopes can be furnished either white or colored; both envelopes and paper being of the ordinary size and of good quality.

PRICES:

No. 5 Envelopes, 3x5½ inches, $4 per 1000; postpaid, 60 cents per 100.
Note Paper, 5½x8½ " $3 " " 40 "

The matter contained on this Stationery is pithy and forcible, and will do good work. Use it.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1882.

The Cynosure Again.

An unexpected pressure of business has prevented Secretary Stoddard writing his intended article for this week. But the article will come. All he has yet suggested, is, that 4000 subscribers get, each, one subscriber added to his own. This looks feasible. For a man who has business, as Lewis Tappan used to have, can get those who come to do business with him, to subscribe as Lewis Tappan always did; while abolitionism was much more hated than anti-secretism now is. That accomplished, will give a list of more than eight thousand subscribers, just by each subscriber obtaining one.

But there are many Father Auten's who will get ten instead of one; that is, one for himself, and nine to double nine others, who may be sick or timid. Let every Father Auten on the list strike now, for the iron is getting hot.

But to get the minimum, which is ten thousand, before we go to Washington—the least list which will save us from contempt when we go there—we must not only ask each subscriber to add one beside his own; but every Benjamin Ulsh on the list must be employed and paid for canvassing. Mr. Stoddard has been canvassing accounts with his usual integrity and care, and he will show you that the cause owes its organ something, more or less. That something should be paid: but paid in subscribers. This is all the publisher wants. He will give a receipt in full if the list reaches a square ten thousand; we shall go to Washington with a decent backing and the cause will triumph.

Governor St. John.

The defeat of this statesman in Kansas, while every other Republican candidate is elected by a fair majority, is an interesting study. The Cynosure will give the matter its profound attention, and our readers shall have the benefit of our study of it. Doubtless it will be found that distiller and brewer money has bought stock in popular Kansas papers and defeated St. John in the name of pretended Prohibition. Then the anti-third term argument was used with many. But over and beyond all, it will be found that the secret lodge has defeated him. We know a secret distiller's society was formed there, which was Masonry by an alias, using the Masonic lodge-rooms nightly and run by Masons, who hate and distrust St. John, not because he has opposed Masonry, but because they hate God and goodness. But > "The busy triflers deem themselves alone; > Frame many a purpose and God works his own."

The outcome will be to throw St. John and ex-Senator Pomeroy (who has also felt the teeth of the snake) into the American party. Let us raise the Cynosure list and then move on Washington. Mark our prophecy.

Christian Union.

Not a few of the readers of the Cynosure have seen with gratitude the attempts to call together the Christian churches into a union of organization, sympathy and work, which it is evident they do not now enjoy. At the same time there has been at intervals a crudity of theory on this topic which has displeased good men who are anxious to be one with all the host of God below in practical effort for the kingdom of Christ. None who have thought upon the matter will fail to read with interest some practical hints gathered from the article of Washington Gladden in the Century for the current month, on the "Christian League of Connecticut."

A banker and his pastor having with deep regret observed the need of a practical effort to bring Christian living and doctrine into the homes of the poor and neglected classes as well as to awaken an interest among inexcusable non-church goers, called together the pastors of their city, including the Universalist, but not of the Roman Catholic or the colored churches. With the pastors they invited three of the best members of each church, upright and well-reputed men. This company organized by agreeing to a constitution which provided that there should be no voting, no records, no permanent officers, no creed, nor doctrinal discussion. The meetings were to be monthly at the houses of different members by invitation, the member at whose house the meeting was held to preside and appoint any committees. Unanimous consent must be given to every successful proposition. This company began the work of visitation and evangelization of the churchless classes, distribution of Bibles, care of the poor, etc., the idea that the work was that of the churches being paramount.

The reason for leaving out the colored brethren is given thus by the banker:

"The colored brethren must be left out," was the answer; "not for social, but for ecclesiastical reasons. One of the first duties of this league of ours if it ever gets into operation, will be the suppression of these colored churches. When the colored people abandon their own organizations, and join the other churches, they may come in as representatives from them. We will have no color-line in the Christianity for which this club stands. I'll go as far as any other man in fraternizing with colored men; but with colored churches, never. The sectarianism whose only basis is the color of the skin is the meanest kind of sectarianism."

A sentiment that has much sense behind it though having a look of severing on its front. Not less pointed is the sentiment of one pastor respecting mission work among the poor in reply to the suggestion that they would often attend mission chapels but avoid the churches:

"The first thing to do in such a case", replied Mr. Strong with emphasis, "is to convert or kill the churches of which this is true. A church into which poor people cannot be induced to go ought to be born again or blotted out. The church whose methods of administration and whose social atmosphere are such as to discourage the attendance of the poor, is driving Christ from its door. Is not this his own word, 'Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto me'? It is entirely possible to create and maintain in our churches a spirit and a way of working that shall make the poorest people feel perfectly at home in them. The church in which these are not found needs a missionary as much as the Patagonians do. It has not yet learned the alphabet of Christianity."

* * * "I think not," was the answer. "The one injurious and fatal fact of our present church work is the barrier between the churches and the poorest classes. The first thing for us to do is to demolish this barrier. The impression is abroad among the poor that they are not wanted in the churches. This impression is either correct or incorrect. If it is correct, then there is no missionary work, for us who are pastors, half so urgent as the conversion of our congregations to Christianity. If it is incorrect, we are still guilty before God in that we have allowed such an impression to go abroad; and we are bound to address ourselves, at once and with all diligence, to the business of convincing the poor people that they are wanted, and will be made welcome, in the churches. But every mission chapel planted in the neighborhood of a church, and intended for the poor, is an ostentatious proclamation to the poor that they are right in their impression; that we freely consent to the separation of the rich from the poor in worship; that we approve of the religion that is founded on caste. To that proclamation I will never put my signature. The time has come when judgment should begin at the house of God, and when the paganism that masquerades in our stylish churches, in the guise of Christianity, should be stripped of its disguises and banished from our altars."

The town having been districted among the different churches the work of visitation begun with this result:

"So it came about that, before the winter was over, the whole town had been covered by the canvassers, and no household was left in ignorance of the fact that a place and a welcome were waiting for it in one of its churches. Some of the canvassers carried with them cards on which were printed the hours of their various services. The spirit of good-will and co-operation was such that the visitors generally sought to gratify the denominational preferences of those on whom they called. If a Congregational visitor found a family with Baptist proclivities, he sent the address of this family to the nearest Baptist visitor. In this way the poor people obtained a strong impression of the unity of the churches. It became evident that this enterprise was not undertaken for the aggrandizement of any sect or of any local church, but rather for the sake of carrying the gospel greeting and invitation to all the destitute. Many cases of sickness and want were also discovered by the visitors, and the practical charities of the churches began to be developed in an effective way. A colporter of the Bible Society appeared upon the scene as the work was beginning, himself proposing to canvass the town in the interest of his society; but he was easily persuaded to relinquish the work into the hands of the local visitors."

This brief sketch of a long article is given for its suggestions respecting united work for Christ in a community. Mr. Gladden might have such a union with unorthodox churches in the city of Springfield where he preaches, but such an arrangement, while liberal toward men is slighting and dishonoring Christ. So too, we should consider union with a church as such that openly fellowshipped the lodge and was under its control. But beyond these hindrances there are methods of Christian union in practical work for the kingdom of Christ which are neglected in every village and city, and which should be used in bringing many souls to the Lord.

JOSEPH COOK, the great Boston lecturer left this country for England in September, 1880. After nine months in the United Kingdom he made the circuit of the great German Universities, and then visited Italy, Greece, Egypt, and Palestine. Going by way of the Red Sea he reached Bombay in January, 1882. In India and Ceylon he spent eighty-four days, and delivered forty-two lectures. Then he went up the Chinese coast and to Japan, and from Yokohama sailed for South Australia. After visiting the various Australasian colonies he set sail for San Francisco, having delivered more than two hundred and fifty lectures in foreign lands. He spoke in Lincoln, Nebraska, on the 15th and reached Chicago last week. He spoke for two hours on Sabbath afternoon to an immense audience in Farwell Hall on "The Signs of the Times." He will, while here, be moved, we hope, to leave an emphatic testimony against the lodge system

THURLOW WEED, after eighty-five years political life, equalled in its activity perhaps by no other American, is dying. There is no acute trouble, but inability to take nutritious food and the exhaustion of old age have brought him to an extremity. He last week conversed cheerfully and with clearness and force on political questions to one or two old friends, but is conscious that his end is approaching. "I do not expect to go down stairs again," he said to his physician. On Sabbath day he had a consultation of physicians. One of them said he did did not take food enough to keep a canary bird alive, but there was no local affection which should prevent the digestion of food. The nation waits at his bedside, and doubtless the end will soon come.

—If wonder possessed any reader, because the leading editorial of last week hoped that all had "wondered at" Secretary Stoddard's article, let them revise by using the word pondered and all will be plain. So in the next article it was written that "politics can recognize God [not us] without coercing conscience or oppressing men."

—The Nebraska State Association holds its annual meeting in May next. The friends in that State wish to secure the benefits of an early notice and the attendance of Secretary Stoddard.

THE AMERICAN PARTY.

Nominations for 1884.

For President,
JONATHAN BLANCHARD,
of Illinois.
For Vice-President.
JOHN A. CONANT.
of Connecticut.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

—The American vote in Cook county Ill., was reported as 65.

—The first report from Michigan is by J. Van Halteren, who writes that in Holland City there were 23 votes; in the township outside, 6; and in Grand Haven 6 votes.

—In the 11th Illinois Congressional district Rev. A. G. McCoy of Monmouth was on the Prohibition ticket for State Senator and our good friend John A. Gordon of Roseville, for county surveyor.

—From each county where an American vote was polled there can now be obtained from the county clerk's office a record of the vote. Let the friends who are interested, get the report and forward by postal card to the Cynosure.

The Survival of the Fittest.

EMPORIA, KANSAS, Nov. 5, 1882.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I am writing under the cooling shadow of George W. Glick, Governor elect of the State of Kansas.

It seems a little awkward. A whisky Governor of Kansas, and Butler, Governor of Massachusetts, and a Democratic tornado all the way between. It seems a little rough. Tornado's are always rough, but they are said to purify the air. If such is the result we will praise the Lord for it; for the air was bad.

FUNERAL OF DEAD ISSUES.

As we stand to-day and look round over the scattered debris of parties, one thing at least is clear: The dead issues of the past can no longer hold parties together. When the institution of slavery was the one power to be feared in our land, it was no doubt most important to elect officers who were sound on that question. But now that slavery is dead and rotton as Hiram Abiff himself, its importance is not so clear in the minds of the people; and the past election is to my mind the funeral procession of the issues of twenty years ago.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE GONE.

Another important question seems scarcely less definitely settled. In the light of the past election, the woman's suffrage movement seems to be rather the impulse of gallantry than the cry of the oppressed. The matter was fairly presented to the people in Kansas and Nebraska, but it awakened no enthusiasm. The party leaders endorsed it, but the women laughed at it. If the wives and mothers and sweethearts of the land had said to their husbands, sons and lovers: "We feel wronged by being deprived of our vote, and we would be glad to have you extend to us this privilege"—does any one doubt the result? I don't. I do not believe there is one man in a hundred who would not have gone to the polls, and gone quick, and voted to strike the fetters from woman's hands.

But woman's suffrage is hopelessly buried in the general wreck of Tuesday last, and buried because the women wanted it buried. Requiescat in pace.

TEMPERANCE IN POLITICS.

Temperance is no doubt a question of no secondary importance, but it is not the only important question before the country. It is a good plank in any platform, but no party can stand on that alone. It is too narrow. Governor St. John ran far behind his ticket, and why? Partly no doubt because of a reaction on the temperance question, but on the eve of election the A., T. & S. F. railroad issued a circular to its employes to vote for St. John or be dismissed. This single fact was as a millstone around his neck.

No party can permanently succeed which does not plant itself squarely against monopoly and ring rule. To this, not only Kansas, but New York and Pennsylvania say, Amen, with a voice of thunder.

AMERICAN PARTY TO THE FRONT.

All these things are so many index fingers pointing to the American party as the party of the future. Happy the American people, if they may but know the day of their merciful visitation.

Now that the door is open let us gird us to the work. Let us stop at once all trifling with woman's suffrage. I would be glad, too, to drop out that article of our platform demanding a direct vote for President and Vice President, for though personally I believe in it, I do not think it worth while to come down from the high moral principle for which we are contending to spend time or lose votes over this matter.

Let us rather plant ourselves on the great moral questions of the day, such as temperance and opposition to monopolies and ring rule in every form. Thus we will gather in all that is free in the prohibition party. I had almost said we would get all that is honest in the Greenback-labor party, and all that is alive in Republicanism.

Thus, with truth and justice on our side and a wide door before us, let us rise up and possess the land in the name of the Lord of Hosts.

P. S. FEEMSTER.

Another Advocate for a New Party.

The New York Witness, as a wise observer of the signs of the times, regards the hour favorable for planting the standard of revolt against the old and corrupt parties, and establishing in the revolution a new party which shall have a basis of moral principles and measures for the benefit of the whole people without distinction of race, color, or property qualification. The Witness has always favored the Republican party but is now inclined to moralize thus upon its late defeat:

"So long as the Republican party was the only one to which the nation could look for justice to our brethren of African decent, or to our Indian tribes and Chinese immigrants—so long as it was the only party from which temperance legislation could be hoped, or which was likely to maintain a sound currency, or to check the encroachments of Rome upon our school system; and, above all, when it was the only party to maintain the Union, it had imperative claims upon the better classes of the community, and these claims were acknowledged by continued victories in six consecutive Presidential elections. But when this great party got mixed up with all kinds of corruption and fraud, when junketing and favoritism reigned in it, when it put some of the worst men of the country into most important political positions; when it would do nothing for the temperance cause, not even to investigate the evils of the liquor traffic; when it was seen to be committed to bossism, and that it consented to unjust legislation against the Chinese, and that it did not prevent cheating the Indians and making war upon them; when all this was fully realized, the last feather which proverbially breaks the horse's back was added in the River and Harbor bill, the Hubbell assessments, and the fraud and forgery committed by the Republican machine men at the Saratoga Nominating Convention, and the defeat was fully expected which has just been made certain by last week's election."

That there is more hope from the Democratic party than the other the editor proceeds to show is likely, and finally enunciates a platform for a new party which, with one or two exceptions, seems strong and sound; and proves by its likeness to the American platform how nearly men of conviction and principle will come to think alike on political issues a year or two hence.

A new party, says the Witness, likely to attract the best men from all present parties, and free from all previous scandals and complications, should, we think, be formed now; and take the liberty of suggesting the following basis:

1. Prohibition of the liquor traffic.
2. Civil Service Reform.
3. A purely revenue tariff.
4. Sound currency, based on gold standard.
5. Constitutional prohibition of free passes by corporations to officials or representatives.
6. The recognition of women as citizens.
7. The recognition in the Constitution of the Creator and Saviour of the world.
8. A strict adherence to Washington's advice, to enter into no entangling alliances with foreign powers.
9. Not only to do justice to what are called inferior races, but to treat them kindly and considerately.
10. National laws of marriage and divorce, and a national registry of births, marriages, and deaths.
11. Two-cent postage, postal telegraphy and post-office savings banks.

It will be seen that the proposed new party would include six already existing parties.

NOTICES.

Minnesota.

By request of the friends in the southwestern part of the State, the fifth annual convention of the Minnesota Christian Association will be held in the court house in Blue Earth City, Faribault county, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, December 6th, 7th and 8th, 1882. Blue Earth City is the terminus of the Blue Earth City branch of the C., St. Paul, M. & O. railroad. The friends offer free entertainment and invite a full attendance. Those intending to come will please send their names to Rufus Johnson, Blue Earth City, Minn. Reduced railroad fare returning, on all roads, to those who pay full fare coming. Opening lecture Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock, by Rev. J. P. Stoddard. President C. A. Blanchard is expected to deliver a series of lectures.

THOMAS HARTLEY,
Rec. Secretary.

E. G. PAINE,
President.

Kansas.

The Kansas State Christian Association, opposed to secret societies, will meet in convention at the Free Methodist Church, Emporia, at 7 o'clock p. m., Dec. 19th, and continue in session until the 21st. Secretary Stoddard and other active and able workers are expected to be present. The place is central and easy of access, and we urge the friends of reform from all parts of the State to be present. Important business will come before the Association. Come, brethren, "to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty." JOS. ALTER, Sec'y.

AVALON COLLEGE announces the opening of its winter term on December 13th. The College is better equipped than ever before, has a full attendance, and is doing thorough work in all departments. Its students represent fifteen counties of North Missouri and the States of Illinois, Iowa and Kansas, and are good exponents of the intelligence and educational interest of the people of these sections. Avalon, the seat of the College, is not cursed with a saloon. No other places of vice are tolerated in the town. Students are especially forbidden to engage in any conduct that may lead them or their companions to the formation of vicious habits. The trustees have lately decided to increase the capacity of the College buildings by adding a fourth story with a mansard roof. Any information will be freely given by Pres. C. J. Kephart, Avalon, Mo.

HOME CIRCLE.

In Fellowship of Service.

We work together if far apart:
Loyal and strong is each servant's heart;
One is our Master, Christ the Lord,
And we catch the sound of his guiding word,
And onward go where he shows the way
Till we stand with him in the perfect day.

The work we do is not quite the same.
Some as heralds the news proclaim,
Some are working among the vines,
Some in the fields where the hot sun shines,
And some work quietly in the gloom
Of a shady place or a narrow room.

Some are singing the Master's praise,
Some are cleansing the dusty ways,
Some are teaching the young with care,
Some are spending the days in prayer;
We all are working with voice or pen,
The young and the old, the women and men.

For how shall the servants of Christ be still
When his kingdom is hindered by force of ill?
His will being done, the world would be Happy and prosperous, good and free.
Shall we not labor until is won
The whole glad world for God's dear Son?

We work together, if far apart,
Hands in unison, heart to heart!
We work as having one common aim,
We work as bearing the same good name,
We dare not loiter, but still pursue
The work of the Master, with him in view.

Brothers and sisters, I send you greeting!
Not yet is the time of our happy meeting;
But progress is made, it is now the noon,
And the sweet rest-hour will be coming soon.
I hear your voices sometimes in song,
And all our work will be done ere long.

—Marianne Farningham.

Seeing Christ in the Poor.

The poet, Longfellow, puts into exquisite verse a mediæval legend of fine significance. At the hour of noon it was customary in the old monastery for the neighboring poor to receive alms at the gate, from the monks who took the service in succession. One day the father whose turn it was to dispense that day the customary charity, was engaged in prayer in his cell, when his Lord suddenly appeared to him in an epiphany of love and glory, and the saint could only lie at his feet in adoration and joy. While this vision tarried, suddenly the convent bell rang out the hour of the noon, and the worshipper knew that the needy were waiting at the grated doors with gaunt faces and thin skeleton hands for his charity. Should he tarry with his Lord, or go to wait upon his Lord's suffering ones? Should he linger at the gate of heaven or hasten to the gate of earthly misery? It was a moment of suspense, but duty triumphed. He rose from the radiant Presence and spent the hour in deeds of love, wondering all the while at the strange joy which filled his spirit, and not daring to think that the glorious vision would ever meet his eyes again. He had done his Lord's will and work; he was satisfied with the consciousness of his approval. But as he slowly returns to the sacred spot, what was his surprise and delight to see the Master waiting to welcome him with a smile of commendation he had not worn before, and the words of benediction, "If thou hadst staid, I would have gone."

We lose many a blessing by seeking blessing when we should rather seek to please and honor him. "He is not here—he goeth before you into Galilee," might be said to many a despondent seeker after spiritual peace, looking in vain for blessing in religious selfishness. There is one place we are ever sure of his presence, and that is in obedience to the command coupled with its companion promise, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, and lo, I am with you always,even unto the end of the world."—Gospel in all Lands.

—To be satisfied with the acquittal of the world, though accompanied with the secret condemnation of conscience, this is the mark of a little mind; but it requires a soul of no common stamp to be satisfied with its own acquittal, and to despise the condemnation of the world. —Colton.

Rewards of Giving.

A THANKSGIVING LESSON.

"Blessed is he that considereth the poor; the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble. The Lord will preserve him and keep him alive; and he shall be blessed upon the earth; and thou will not deliver him unto the will of his enemies. The Lord will strengthen him up on the bed of languishing; thou wilt make all his bed in his sickness."—Ps. xli. 1.

"Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed."—Ps. xxxvii. 3.

"Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase: so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine."—Prov. iii. 6.

"There is that scattereth and yet increaseth; there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty. The liberal soul shall be made fat, and he that watereth shall be watered also himself."—Prov. xix. 17.

"And if thou draw out thy soul to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted soul, then shall thy light shine in obscurity, and thy darkness be as noonday; and the Lord shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought, and make fat thy bones; and thou shalt be watered like a garden, and the springs of water whose waters fail not." —Isa. lviii. 10.

"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in my house; and prove me now, herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground, neither shall the vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts."—Mal. iii. 10.

"Give and it shall be given unto you—good measure, pressed down, shaken together and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure you mete withal it shall be measured to you again."—Luke vi. 38.

"I have showed you all things, how that so laboring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive." —Acts xx. 35.

"Every man as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver. And God is able to make all grace [the word "grace" here refers to temporal blessings] abound towards you; that ye always having all sufficiency in all things may abound to every good work."—2d Cor. ix. 7.—Compiled by author of Christian Giving.

Cultivating Selfishness in Children.

The mother who in the fullness of generous love runs hither and thither continually to do for the various members of the family those things which they should do themselves, comes to be regarded as a useful piece of machinery, suited to minister to their wants. By-and-by, when the mother is worn out in body and spirit, when the child, grown older, feels no need of her as its slave, it finds other more attractive playmates and companions.

The mother has necessarily far more labor, care, and anxiety than any other member of the household. She is constantly occupied, and her work seems to have no end. Neither husband nor children will love her the more for sacrificing herself wholly to them, as many a sad, weary mother has learned to her cost. Let her be just to herself. Not that she should make slaves of the children any more than they should make a slave of her. But children like to be useful, like to feel that they are a help to older persons, and if a little praise and perhaps, too, a little money is given them, they will learn to enjoy the pleasure of helping mother and of earning something for themselves, and be early taught the dignity of labor as well as to save their mother a little time to keep herself in advance of them in study and thought, in general information, and in spiritual growth, so as to be always reverenced as their intellectual and spiritual guide and friend and counsellor.

It has been truly said by Miss Sewell, author of an excellent work on education, that "Unselfish mothers make selfish children." This may seem startling, but the truth is, that the mother who is continually giving up her own time, money, strength, and pleasure for the gratification of her children, teaches them to expect it always. They learn to be importunate in their demands and to expect more and more. If the mother wears an old dress that her daughter may play, she is helping to make her vain, selfish, and ignorant, and very likely she will be ungrateful and disrespectful, and this is equally true of the husband and other members of the family. Unselfish wives make selfish husbands. How frequently do we see the pathetic ballad, "Hannah Jane," enacted in real life.

"No negro ever worked so hard a servant's pay to save,
She made herself most willingly a household drudge and slave;
What wonder if she never read a magazine or book,
Combining as she did in one, nurse, housemaid, seamstress, cook;
What wonder that the beauty fled that once was so adored;
Her beautiful complexion the fierce kitchen fire devoured;
Her plump, soft, rounded arm, was once too fair to be concealed,
Hard work for me that softness into sinewy strength congealed.
I was her altar and her love the sacrificial flame,
Ah! with what pure devotion she to that altar came,
And tearful flung thereon—alas, I did not know it then,
All that she was, and more than that—all thatshe might have been."

The American Singer.

Of Madam Antoinette Sterling, the American singer, the London World says:

Entering the London concert-room at a time when it was the fashion for performers there to paint, bedizen, and decolleter themselves in the same manner as for the stage, Antoinette Sterling from the first refused to resort to any tricks of toilet. Although at first her refusal to wear low dress was made the subject of a sneer from some critics, she persisted in her intention, never once finding her listeners less kind to her on that account; and she has the satisfaction to-day of seeing the high dress the prevailing mode, adopted by the generality of concert singers even in the evening, while the berouged, low-necked and bare-armed songstress is a rare survival. With a thorough Italian musical education, and receiving advice unceasingly in that school from her cherished master, Signor Garcia; with a contralto voice unequalled since Alboni, and a most dramatic style, why does not Antoinette Sterling go upon the operatic stage? "I cannot," she says; "I stand by every word I utter when I sing, and I feel I must, to the death. It is not alone song with me—melodious sounds—it is the lesson inculcated; hope in the future, bright joys to come, the mercy of an all-wise God. I would not sing a wicked or frivolous word before my audience for anything on earth. I love them and I know they love me."

Providence.

[From the Italian.]

Just as a mother, with sweet pious face,
Yearns towards her little children from her seat,
Gives one a kiss, another an embrace,
Takes this upon her knees, that on her feet;
And while from actions, looks, complaints, pretenses,
She learns their feelings and their various will,
To this a look, to that a word dispenses.
And, whether stern or smiling, loves them still;
So Providence for us, high, infinite,
Makes our necessities its watchful task,
Hearkens to all our prayers, helps all our wants,
And, even if it denies what seems our right,
Either denies because 'twould have us ask,
Or seems but to deny, or in denying grants.

—Leigh Hunt.

—Blotting paper was discovered in 1845. Previous to that, when a man dropped a splotch of ink on the lower left-hand corner of his paper, he would give it a lick with his tongue towards the upper right hand corner and make a better picture of the comet of 1882 than any that has yet appeared in the illustrated papers.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

My Mother's been Praying.

In February, 1861, a terrible gale raged along the coast of England. In one bay (Hartlepool) it wrecked eighty-one vessels. While the storm was at its highth, the Rising Sun, a stout brig, struck on Longrear Rock, a reef extending a mile from one side of the bay. She sank, leaving only her two topmasts above the foaming waves.

The life boats were away, rescuing wrecked crews. The only means of saving the men clinging to the swaying masts was the rocket-apparatus. Before it could be adjusted, one mast fell. Just as the rocket bearing the life line went booming out of the mortar, the other mast toppled over.

Sadly the rocket-men began to draw in their line, when suddenly they felt that something was attached to it, and in a few minutes hauled on to the beach the apparently lifeless body of a sailor-boy. Trained and tender hands worked, and in a short time he became conscious.

With amazement he gazed around on the crowd of kind and sympathizing friends. He looked up into the weather-beaten face of the old fisherman near him and asked:

"Where am I?"

"Thou art safe, my lad."

"Where's is the cap'n?"

"Drowned, my lad."

"The mate, then?"

"He's drowned too."

"The crew?"

"They are all lost, my lad; thou art the only one saved."

The boy stood overwhelmed for a few moments; then he raised both his hands and cried, in a loud voice:

"My mother's been praying for me! my mother's been praying for me!" and then he dropped on his knees on the wet sand and hid his sobbing face in his hands.

Hundreds heard that day this tribute to a mother's love, and to God's faithfulness in listening to a mother's prayers.—Selected.

SABBATH SCHOOL.

LESSON X Dec. 3, 1882.—After His Death.—Mark 15:38-47.

(38) And the vail of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom. (39) And when the centurion which stood over against him, saw that he so cried out, and gave up the ghost, he said, Truly this man was the Son of God. (40) There were also women looking on afar off: among whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James the less and of Joses, and Salome: (41) Who also, when he was in Galilee, followed him, and ministered unto him; and many other women which came up with him unto Jerusalem. (42) And now when the even was come, because it was the preparation, that is, the day before the Sabbath, (43) Joseph of Arimathea, an honorable counsellor, which also waited for the kingdom of God, came, and went in boldly unto Pilate, and craved the body of Jesus. (44) And Pilate marvelled if he were already dead; and calling unto him the centurion, he asked him if he had been any while dead. (45) And when he knew it of the centurion he gave the body to Joseph. (46) And he bought fine linen, and took him down, and wrapped him in the linen, and laid him in a sepulchre which was hewn out of a rock, and rolled a stone unto the door of the sepulchre. (47) And Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of Joses beheld where he was laid.

PROMPTINGS TO FURTHER STUDY.

On what occasion did a heathen multitude take two preachers for gods in human shape? What was the Old Testament rule about taking down the body when a criminal was hung; and what was the reason therefor? How did the Jews generally show their regard for the command in the case of Jesus? When, during Moses' time, were people hung to turn away the fierce anger of the Lord? What other men, in the New Testament, besides Joseph, are described as looking for the kingdom of God?

NOTES.

From top to the bottom. How emphatic the statement "from top to the bottom!" as if to say, Come boldly now to the throne of grace; the veil is clean gone; the mercy-seat stands open to the gaze of sinners, and the way to it is sprinkled with the blood of Him "who through the eternal Spirit hath offered himself without spot to God!" Before, it was death to go in; now it is death to stay out. See more on this glorious subject, Heb. 9: 9-12: 10: 20.—J. F. and B.

This man was the Son of God. Or, "God's Son." The heathen officer may have used these words in the heathen sense, hero or demi-god; but this is not probable. For he had heard this accusation, and must have known something of Jewish opinion: heathen became Christians through the preaching of the cross, why not through the sight of the dying Redeemer? Such a conversion would be thus indicated. Only the centurion thus spoke; but, as the soldiers "feared," some decided spiritual effect may have been produced on them also.—Schaff.

The cross is early giving tokens of its power. It lays hold of the dying thief, and opens to him the gates of paradise. It lays hold of this centurion, and works in him a faith which, let us hope, deepened into a trust in Jesus as his Saviour. From such unlikely quarters came the two testimonies borne to the Lord's divinity the day he died.—Hanna.

There were also women. Forerunners of the noble army of holy women, who were, in the ages to come, throughout the length and breadth of Christendom, to minister at many a death-bed out of love for him who died "the death."—Cambridge Bible.

Because it was the preparation. The day was now drawing to a close, and at sunset (soon after 6 p. m.) the Sabbath would begin. "That Sabbath day was a high day;" especially as being the second day of the feast of unleavened bread, when the first-fruits of the harvest were offered in the temple, and whence the 50 days were reckoned to the Day of Pentecost. For that Sabbath this day itself was the "preparation." This statement, twice made by St. John, has caused much debate; but it seems to refer simply to the custom of preparing for any sacred festival on the previous day. On this "preparation day" especially, they would put away all pollutions and signs of mourning that might mar the coming feast. So, though they had not scrupled to enact on it a deed which would have profaned any day, they could not endure its defilement by the consequences of their judicial murder.—Smith.

Went in boldly unto Pilate. Mark alone, as his manner is, notices the boldness which this required. The act would, without doubt, identify him for the first time with the disciples of Christ. Marvellous it certainly is, that one who, while Jesus was yet alive, merely refrained from condemning him, not having the courage to espouse his cause by one positive act, should, now that he was dead, and his cause apparently dead with him, summon up courage to go in personally to the Roman governor, and ask permission to take down and inter the body. But if this be the first instance, it is not the last, that a seemingly dead Christ has awakened a sympathy which a living one had failed to evoke. The heroism of faith is usually kindled by desperate circumstances, and is not seldom displayed by those who before were the most timid, and scarce known as disciples at all.—J. F. and B. The cross transfigures cowards into heroes.—Maclear. It was no light matter Joseph had undertaken: for to take part in a burial, at any time, would defile him for seven days, and make everything unclean which he touched (Num. 19: 11. Hag. 2: 13); and to do so now involved his seclusion through the whole passover week, with all its holy observances and rejoicings.—Geikie. In later martyrdoms such a request cost men their lives; in this case it must at least have cost Joseph much obloquy.—Abbott.

Calling unto him the centurion. Pilate, before giving up the body to his friends, would learn how the fact stood from the centurion, whose business it was to oversee the execution. "And when he knew it of the centurion," that it was as Joseph had said, "he gave"—rather, "made a gift of"—"the body to Joseph;" struck, possibly, with the rank of the petitioner and the dignified boldness of the petition, in contrast with the spirit of the other party and the low rank to which he had been led to believe all the followers of Christ belonged. But, whatever were Pilate's motives, two most blessed objects were thus secured: (1) The reality of our Lord's death was attested by the party of all others most competent to decide on it, and certainly free from all bias,—the officer in attendance. (2) The dead Redeemer, thus committed by the supreme political authority to the care of his friends, was thereby protected from all further indignities; a thing most befitting indeed, now that his work was done, but impossible, so far as we can see, if his enemies had been at liberty to do with him as they pleased. How wonderful are even the minutest features of this matchless history!—J. F. and B.

He bought fine linen. A winding-sheet. This would enclose the spices used in the temporary embalming, which now took place, Nicodemus having bought the spices (John 19: 39, 40). There was not time enough to embalm on Friday evening, so the costly gifts of Nicodemus were used to preserve the body, the women preparing in the interval what they thought necessary for the further anointing.—Schaff.

The neighborhood of Jerusalem, like all other parts of Palestine, has, since the earliest times, abounded in tombs hewn out in the limestone rock. (They were cut horizontally, and not downward.) Princes, rich men, every one who could by any means secure it, desired, above all things, to prepare for themselves and their families an "everlasting house;" and such a tomb, never yet used, had been hewn out in the hillside for himself, by Joseph, in a garden not far from Calvary.—Geikie.

Rolled a stone unto the door. The mouth of these rocky tombs was closed with a large stone (like a millstone), called by the Jews Golal, which could only be rolled there by the labor of several men (John 11: 39).—Cambridge Bible. The Evangelists seem to have been thus particular in the narrative of the burial, to prove, beyond all possibility of doubt, those two great points of the Christian religion, the death and resurrection of Jesus.—Stanhope.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

—Charles H. Spurgeon, son of the great London preacher, who has been visiting our American cities and preaching the Word, sails for England next week.

—Elder Hezekiah Davis, president of the Bible Banner publishing association, and a warm helper of Bro. Bailey in New England, has removed from Putnam to Southington, Conn., in which place he is pastor of the Gospel Mission chapel.

—The Christian Instructor publishes in full the able paper on secret societies of Rev. Wm. Johnston, read before the Iowa United Presbyterian Synod. The United Presbyterian, of Pittsburg, also prints the grater part of the paper.

—The editor of the Cynosure, in response to an invitation to preach on the Sabbath at Oshkosh, left for that city on Saturday.

—Special religious services are appointed in the College at Wheaton this week, there being hopeful indications of the presence of the Holy Spirit.

—Rev. A. S. Bartholomew, of the Lutheran church at Lima, Ohio, died on the 23d of September. Several years ago he took a decided stand against the lodge in his congregation, but was so strenuously opposed bysome members connected with the Masonic order that the church was divided and a long and trying litigation followed. Mr. Bartholomew had been sick for years and had retired from the active duties of the Ministry.

—Major Whittle who is now stopping in Chicago sends the following word to the Advance: "Should not the churches be warned against dissipating their strength in engaging to such an extent in educational and political work that the distinctive work of laboring for spiritual results is neglected? Statesmen and men of the world are recognizing that the great need of the hour is an awakening of the people in revivals of religion. Let us sound the trumpet on that line. From personal observation I am convinced that the churches, as a rule, are in a very low spiritual state."

—One of the most promising features of our missionary work in Burmah is found in the fact that many of the churches are becoming self-supporting. This is especially the case among the Karens, who, out of their deep poverty, are abounding in the riches of their liberality. The last reports from this important field show that the liberality of the members of the Karen churches averages more than that of our own country, while their zeal in educational and evangelizing work is putting to shame the sloth of American Christians through whom they received the knowledge of the way of life.

—The Moravian Mission Department reports a deficiency between the ordinary receipts and expenditures the past year of upward of $6,800. This deficiency was removed, however, together with a small deficit of the previous year, by using a portion of legacies received. The disbursements amounted to $98,930. The larger half of this sum was expended for expenses of management and pensions for retired missionaries, widows and children, and education of children of missionaries. The Tibetan mission has completed the translation of the New Testament into Tibetan, and the British and Foreign Bible Society is to print it.

—Perhaps there is a thought worth heeding in the remark of Dr. A. T. Pierson, a Presbyterian pastor, formerly of Watertown, N. Y., and now in Indianapolis. Addressing the Synod of Indiana he said that pastors too often made idols of their church edifices. "I had a magnificent church in 1875," he said, "and $35,000 was spent on the interior decoration. Then and there I said to God that I would renounce all the idols of which I had been made conscious if He would only let me do His work. While I was praying for this blessing the church took fire, and in half an hour it was in ashes."

—The United Brethren in Christ reports this statement from Samuel Stoddard of Lawrence, Michigan, which reveals a subtle and fearful power in the secret order system to enslave men: "My father was living in Hartford, Conn., at the time that Wm. Morgan revealed the secrets of Masonry. A revivalist by the name of L. N. Moffat came to the city and began to hold meetings. Father attended them. One evening the revivalist was opening the meeting and had just announced the hymn, when in came a notoriously wicked man of the city and spoke to him. Moffat immediately went away with the man, without even dismissing the congregation. The lodge had summoned him to appear before it, and he could not delay for a moment. Since then my father will not hear a Mason preach if he knows him to be such."

—A dispatch from Washington, Pa., reports this wonderful case: "Richard Hoffman, of Somerset township, has been a cripple for years, being paralyzed in his lower limbs, so that he was compelled to use a wheel chair. On last Thursday he crawled behind a barn, and while engaged in prayer he heard a voice say 'Arise and walk'. He obeyed the command, and has been walking ever since."

—Prof. S. C. Kimball, editor of the Christian Witness of New Market, N. H., was lately prostrated by severe and painful illness. All ordinary remedies seemed to be used in vain. While suffering greatly during the night he called upon God and was heard. The pain ceased, the disease departed and he is now in usual health glorifying God for his gracious power and love.

—The Jesuits driven from France have established themselves in considerable numbers in Turkey—their purpose being to renew the attempt which so lamentably failed in 1692, to bring the Armenians to the feet of the Pope.

—The resignation of Dr. Scudder on the ground that he could not, in justice to the church, accept their offer to release him from one of his sermons each Sabbath, will be likely to revive the question of two preaching services—their propriety and their practicability. Only let it be understood that it is not the ministry who ask it. They are willing, anxious to preach twice on the Lord's day, if the opportunity is afforded. At the same time, the increased duty performed by church members in Sabbath-school and mission work, together with the greater need of seventh-day repose in this intense and exhausting life of ours, furnishes a strong argument for a modification of the second service, if not a relaxation of the obligation to attend it. In large populations, why should it not be devoted more particularly to evangelistic work; and in smaller neighborhoods, to a more social and flexible and, so to speak, voluntary service? But each church, minister, and locality can best judge of their own duty and interest.—Intelligencer.

—Bishop Weaver of the United Brethren Church seems to be modifying his views of the lodge question. He has been counted, and with good reason, on the side of those who wish to break down the rule of the church and admit, at least, a part of the secret orders without question. But a letter from W. S. Spooner of Kearney Junction says, that at a dedication in Hamilton county on Nov. 12th, just after the sitting of the Nebraska Conference, Bishop Weaver said in his sermon, speaking of secret societies: "They remind me of this pencil [exhibiting a sharpened pencil]; they are this way, the Masons first, the Odd-fellows next, then the minor secret orders, ending say in the grange. They are whittled to a point. There is nothing there, and the persons who join find it so. Think of a minister of the Gospel going down to join one of these societies; for it is going down; it is laying aside ministerial dignity, for there is a dignity in the ministerial character, not the dignity of pride, but the dignity of purity. It is vile degradation to leave the Christian's exalted station and associate with these societies." If Bishop Weaver maintains such views and puts them into practical effect he will give great support to the true men who aim to uphold the supremacy of Christ in the church.

Letter from Smyrna, Turkey.

Bro. Zaraphonithes removes from Andros—Preaching in the interior—Greek and English School in Smyrna.

Smyrna Rest, Smyrna, Turkey,
Oct. 12, 1882.

Dear Bro. Kellogg:—We received your very kind letter and the check which you sent with it. Many thanks for your continued kindness to us.

Now I have something to tell you about my trip. I came to Smyrna and also went as far as one hundred miles into the interior. The name of the place is Idine. About twenty years ago the American Board took action to send native preachers there on the Sabbath from time to time; but the main thing is that the Turkish Bazaar takes place on that day and that hinders the work. The missionaries of Constantinople once changed the day of the Bazaar; but the Turks made some trickery and got it back to the Sabbath again. I preached to the people in Idine twice; and in regard to the Sabbath I told them that they ought to keep the Sabbath, and if they lose anything because the Turks have the Bazaar on the Sabbath, God will repay them. I had many discussions with the Greeks and Turks. One of the Turks was very much surprised in regard to the idea of loving your enemies. He said that Mohammed says, if a man puts your eye out, you must put his eye out also. I told him that Mohammed came six hundred years after Christ and he ought to give them a good example, and because he did not, it showed that he was not a very good man.

The text, "Love your enemies," made a great impression on the Turk, for I had a long discussion with him and he saw that to "love your enemies" is not a damage but a gain. He also said to a friend of mine that he never heard such things said before; but that it seemed after all to be a pretty good thing.

I had also many discussions on drinking and smoking, and it seems also a new and very strange thing to them not to drink or smoke. So it is a good thing to have the gospel preached all around for most of them never heard the gospel before. But where are the men to send around?

You will be taken by surprise to hear that we are in the city of Smyrna. When I came last July to travel in Asia Minor, Rev. Geo. Constantine persuaded me to come here and try to reopen a school, which school-house was builded by the English population of the two railroads here. We will receive both English and Greek children. We will first try to get acquainted with the people about us, and after New Year, we will open; but we can only say that even if there be no school, there is very much to be done in this great city which is all wickedness. For want of time I must close, but will write again soon and tell you about the city and the missionary work here.

We have not left Andros entirely but will go there for our school vacation. There is so much work to be done here and Andros is not ready yet to receive the gospel, for the people are very much behind. It is a great undertaking for us to leave our home and come here and begin housekeeping anew, for as we expect to spend our school vacation in Andros, it costs too much to move our furniture back and forth. Though we do not see our way through exactly, because the running expenses are so heavy, yet we have faith that the Lord who brought us here will not leave us or forsake us.

Last Sunday the new church of the American Board was dedicated, of which Rev. Mr. Bowen is the pastor or missionary. There were present from Constantinople, Dr. Wood and Dr. Riggs, Rev. Mr. Crawford of Manasia and also different missionaries of this place. The exercises were conducted in five different languages.

I did not go to visit those places which I expected because I decided to come here and open a school and I thought to go and bring my family here before winter comes on, and so those places are left for the future.

Your brother in Christ,
A. D. Zaraphonithes.

The Work in Kentucky.

Mrs. Browne's Report of her Northern visit—The present prospect and need of the schools.

CABIN CREEK, KY., Nov. 9, 1882.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—It has been quite two months since I returned from my trip North, and at this late day I am almost ashamed to say anything of it. I had fully intended to give you a full report, but when we find so many things around us claiming our time and attention, it is very easy to neglect those less urgent. I visited Wenona, Tonica, Morrison, Ustick, Lanark, Lena, Warren, Martin, Monroe, Evansville, Wheaton and Chicago. I saw many old friends and formed the acquaintance of many new ones. May the Father above reward them all for their kindness to me; not one of them is forgotten. The thought of them makes glad many a long day. I received financial aid both for ourselves and for our work here from many, for all which we are very thankful.

To-day I received a letter from the Monroe, Wis., friends, saying they had started a box for us containing a carpet for our own use, and other things for our new dormitory at Camp Nelson. Word comes from Wheaton saying the ladies of the College church are working for us. A short time ago I received, through a New Hampshire friend, $3 from a lady I know nothing of, saying she wanted me to use that in getting something I needed, as she knew I must deny myself of many things she enjoyed.

As I look around our home I think we do deny ourselves of many things our Northern friends enjoy, but we have much to be thankful for. We look at these gifts as coming from the Master for whom we are working. He knows we get scarcely anything for our work here, so he opens the hearts of you who have more than you need.

Not only we ourselves, but the work hera suffers for lack of funds. In our building we cannot go in debt, so when our money is out the work stops. The schools both here and at Camp Nelson are in session, though neither of the new buildings are fit for occupancy, consequently our work is much hindered. I often think of a friend who gave me five dollars while I was North, saying, "Don't thank me; it is God's tenth." Friends, are you all doing that—giving God his "tenth."

Here in this place, by the terms of the deed by which the Academy's land was conveyed to it, no intoxicating liquors, no tobacco, opium, or other substance of like nature, are to be made, sold, or otherwise trafficked in, except for scientific or medicinal purposes; no secret society is to meet on the premises, nor any of the teachers or students allowed to have connection with such societies; no religious sect is to have control of the institution. By violation of any of these requirements the title to the land is forfeited, and reverts to the one by whom it was donated. Not only is instruction to be given in the studies usually taught in such schools, but it is stipulated that Bible morals and principles shall be taught, and that nothing shall be taught at variance with the religion of Christ.

Now, friends, it seems as though this is a good place to invest money.

I must stop. If any of our friends happen this way, they will find our latch string out.

Yours truly, M. C. BROWNE.

A Maine Conference Discusses Lodgery.

PITTSTON, ME.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Here is good news from a far country. We have "toiled all night" (for years) and I seem to hear a voice saying Cast the net on the right side of the ship;" for there is a prospect of a draught, providing we have the right man with a strong arm to draw in the net.

The Kenebec Co. Conference met with the church in Gardiner on the 17th and 18th of Oct. The forenoon of the 18th was devoted to a discussion on "The Development of Christian Character." Topics, such as the relation of truth, work and of society to character were assigned. At the end of the discussion half an hour was left and nothing to talk about.

By the permission of the moderator I ventured to ask a question: "What is the relation of secret organizations to Christian character?" It was responded to by three ministers, who unhesitatingly denounced secretism, giving Freemasonry the heaviest blow.

Dea. M— of Monmouth said, in substance that his father was a Mason and loved Masonry so much that when he came along he was named Mason, with the expectation that when he became a man he would be a member of the order; but his father was mistaken. He related some facts of the Morgan excitement. His father obtained Morgan's expose and wanted him to read it; then asked what he thought of it. "I believe every word of it" said he. The father replied, "a man that would take that oath and break it ought to be killed!"

This remark sealed the opinion of young Maaon, and from that time he has been an Antimason. The half-hour was all used in the discussion, and certainly with more zeal than the former topics.

Two years ago this same house was closed to Eld. Brown, but this time the Masonic church committee were not asked whether Masonry might be discussed or not. It don't always pay to ask a cable-towed church committee when and where and how and what we may speak.

Surely the field is white already to harvest. I pray the Lord he will send forth more laborers into the harvest. F. M. M.

The American Missionary Association.

From the reports made at the late annual meeting of this society at Cleveland a year of success appears to have been given to its efforts. The "General Survey" says:

"At the South we count 8 chartered institutions, 11 high and normal schools, and 38 common schools—in all 57. During the year we have employed 241 teachers, an increase over the last year of 11. Of these, 13 have performed the duties of matrons and 15 have been engaged in the business departments. The number of students has been 9,608, a gain of 500 over last year. Of these, 72 have been in the theological department, 28 in the law, 104 in the collegiate, 139 in the preparatory, 2,542 in the normal, 1,103 in the grammar, 2,185 in the intermediate, and 3,481 in the primary."

The colored churches have increased to 83, of which 22 have pastors from the North. They have a total of 5,641 members, an average of 68, while the average membership of the Congregational churches west of the Mississippi River is only 45, and of all west of Pennsylvania, 63. The additions on profession were 709; the Sunday-school scholars numbered 1,835; the amount raised for church purposes, $9,306, and the benevolent contributions reached $1,496.50.

The total number of scholars enrolled during the year in the 15 Chinese schools was 2,567, a gain over the previous year of 935, while that year had a gain over the former one of seventy-six. Of these during the past year 156 have ceased from idolatry and 106 have given evidence of conversion.

French Missions.

The work among the French Catholics in New York and vicinity, though attended with many vexations, is accomplishing great things for Christ's kingdom. Pastor Seguin says that from Sunday, the 19th, his French work will be combined with the work of Rev. Dr. Judson of New York. Besides worshipping with Dr. Judson's congregation in the morning and evening, there will be a special service in French at 4 p. m., as formerly in Bleecker street. We hope, says the Witness, that this new arrangement will accomplish much toward the evangelization of our French colony located, the most part of them, near the Berean Baptist church. We understand that Pastor Seguin will now concentrate all his strength and ability upon the French of every description, European and American, in that neighborhood.

From Brooklyn, Bro. J. F. McNamee writes: "Our work in Brooklyn is growing stronger and firmer day by day, and making a greater impression among the Roman Catholic element. I shall soon be one year in Brooklyn, and as I look over the past year I certainly recognize the hand of God guiding us all the way.

"Our church-building is incapable of containing the large numbers of Roman Catholics and Protestants that come to our services. However, we hope to have larger church buildings of our own in the near future. Efforts are being put forth towards this object, and already some of the most prominent ministers of Brooklyn have interested themselves in this behalf.

"Last Sunday morning we celebrated the feast of the Lord's Supper, and held a reception of members. Among those received into church-membership was a young lady who but a short time ago was in the novitiate of a convent in Brooklyn. Last Thursday evening, after prayer-meeting, a lady came to me and said: 'Hitherto I have been a Roman Catholic. I would like so much to join your church next Sunday morning, but I am afraid of trouble from my people. However, my heart is with you and the church.' Persecution has a harsh sound, and generally when we hear the word uttered our thoughts travel back to the days of the stake and the rack. The word can be applied in our midst, and the practical meaning of the word illustrated in the case of some who have recently left the Church of Rome and united with the Reformed Catholic Church."

The Chicago Noon Prayer Meeting.

In the noon Sabbath School lesson meeting at Farwell Hall on Saturday, when the leader, Rev. Herrick Johnson, invited questions, a voice said: "You spoke, sir, of the soldiers mocking the Saviour. Do you not think that the Freemasons mock him when they pretend to kill the candidate, raise him from the dead, and profess to save his soul without Jesus Christ, while they use the Bible?"

Mr. Johnson replied that he did not pretend to answer the question.

Now, Mr. Editor, with all the testimony of seceding Masons, from the time Captain Morgan was murdered for writing the secrets of Masonry down to the present day, and such testimony as hangs men, being confirmed by the sworn affidavits of Freemasons in lawful manner, undenied, but rather confirmed by adhering Masons, when they call these seceders Masonically "perjured villians;" and this testimony being published broadcast all over the country, I ask, is it not a shame that any minister of the Gospel can not answer that question? Do let the Rev. Herrick Johnson be supplied with the necessary information. W. FENTON.

Who can Answer for William Taylor.

OBERLIN, OHIO.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I have observed commendatory remarks of Rev. Mr. Taylor's missionary work in the Cynosure occasionally, and truly hope they are well deserved. He has awakened my suspicion, however, to such a degree, that he is in league with Freemasonry, that I am in doubt abont his whole work. The wily craftiness of that stupendous fraud, Freemasonry, will bear watching. If you will turn to "Our South American Cousins," by Mr. Taylor, and about the middle of the book, you will find that he is at the pains to inform his readers that there is a Masonic lodge in almost every town of note on the South American coast. Now, why is this? Is it to add force to his appeals for missionaries? If so, his missionary work is in league with the Masonic institution, and ought to be condemned. If his work is not in league with that institution, then why did he give Masonry the benefit of that mention or advertisement in his book? I do not care to enter into a public discussion of the question in the Cynosure, but it asks for attention. ENQUIRER.

HOME AND FARM.

Agricultural.

FALL WORK IN THE GARDEN.—Grounds and beds may be remodelled, transplanting of trees, shrubs, bulbs, and all hardy plants may be done, vines and trees may be pruned, grass-seed may be sown, and planting made of some seeds, protection given to plants needing it. It is a good time, says Vick's Magazine, to dig, and grade and seed down lawns, to get the earliest possible start in the spring.

Transplanting trees and shrubs, with the exception of evergreens, is better than to wait until spring, with suitable protection in winter. In case of trees liable to be blown away by winds, stakes should be driven and the trees tied to them; together with a mound of soil a foot or eighteen inches high about the base, to be levelled early in the spring. Shrubs need no stakes, but a few inches of extra soil is a good protection. Roses may be protected by raising a good mound of earth around them.

The tender varieties of raspberries should be protected in the same manner. Where it is known to be necessary, grape-vines, after pruning, may also be laid down and covered with leaves. Grape-vines generally should receive their pruning in the fall: it is dangerous to postpone this operation until spring, as in that case it is apt to be neglected until too late. The Virginia Creeper is greatly benefited by a judicious annual pruning, and there will be no better time than the present to perform it; by annually shortening in the new wood a more vigorous growth is secured.

Bulb-planting can be carried on as long as the ground remains open; so, too, may asparagus-beds be made, and planted with one or two year-old plants. Hardly herbaceous plants will be all the better for a light covering of leaves. Care bestowed on the garden now will be plentifully repaid the season to follow.

Preparing Plants for Winter.

It is a great mistake to delay the work of preparation for winter until it is suggested by cool nights or a warning given by blighting frosts. When a plant has been taken from a pot and planted in open ground it usually outgrows its former place, and is too large for any vessel of convenient size. The root should be cut away to a considerable extent; and likewise the top, or foliage, must be correspondingly reduced. Novices often fail at this point, for they dislike to part with any of the new growth, and set the plant in a pot unpruned and expect, what is not possible, that it will flourish. Cut back root system and branch system equally is the rule.

Fasting in Acute Rheumatism.

Dr. Wood, professor of chemistry in the medical department of Bishop's College, Montreal, reports in the Canada Medical Record a number of cases in which articular rheumatism was cured by fasting, usually from four to eight days. In no case was it necessary to fast more than ten days. Less positive results were obtained in chronic rheumatism. The patients were allowed to drink freely of cold water or lemonade in moderate quantities if they preferred. No medicines were given. Dr. Wood says that from the quick and almost invariably good results obtained by simple abstinence from food, in more than forty cases in his own practice, he is inclined to believe that rheumatism is, after all, only a phase of indigestion, to be cured by giving complete and continued rest to all the viscera.

CORN-FODDER.—Mr. Ansel W. Putnam says that whatever theorists may argue, his cows prove to him by the milk that corn-fodder is at its best before the stalk-hardening begins, and as soon as all the leaves of the heavy part of the stems are fully grown. The second growth as he calls it—of top-stalks and husks—he thinks as good milk-making material as the first, but not any better. His policy is to plant very thickly and cut when the first growth is fully developed, which is in six or seven weeks after planting, in good growing weather; and in this way he can raise two crops in one season. Thick planting is advised to the second or top growth, unless with varieties of sweet corn.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, sigus, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 60 cents; per dozen, $5.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.00. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degrees of Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. This confession of Henry L. Valance, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan in the Niagara River, was taken from the lips of the dying man by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine County, Wisconsin, in 1848. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian This book has opened the eyes of multitudes In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen-$3 50

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each: per dozen $1 25

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Broekman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on one Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. Each of these able writers in clear, forcible language treats the subject in one or more of its varied phases. Rev. David McDill in six chapters treats of 1. "Their Antiquity; 2 Their Secrecy; 3. "Oaths and Promises;" 4. "Profaneness" 5. "Their Exclusiveness;" 6. "False Claims." Prest. Blanchard handles the topic: "Shall Christians join Secret Societies?" in a masterly way, showing clearly that they are all opposed to the genius of Christianity; and Dr. Beecher closes with his Report on Secret Societies, which was adopted by the Congregational Association of Illinois at Ottawa in 1866. In cloth, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.25. Paper cover, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfers with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Coquilette; also Report of the Political Mass Convention, with Platform and Candidates for the Presidential Campaign of 1876. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 31 Cynosure tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies; and the dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized secrecy are shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public Those who wish to circulate anti-Masonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. W. P. M'Nary, pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind. This is a very clear, thorough, candid and remarkably concise Scriptural argument on the character of Freemasonry. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen. 75 cents

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

FOR SALE BY

EZRA A. COOK,

No. 7 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

In the Coils; or the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historial sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of every-day life, and showing how individual, domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. Parents who wish, not only to keep their children out of these night-schools of Satan, but to give them arguments against them in the most attractive dress, will do well to purchase this book. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses. In this scathing review the lying pretensions of the order are clearly shown. 10 cents each: per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Letters on Masonry. Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian religion. Paper cover, 30 cents each; per dozen, $2.50.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2 00

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship (old work), by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen, $7.50

Freemasonry and the M. E. Church. Let every lover of truth and justice read this report of the trial of Rev. J. T. Michael, showing how he was driven out of the M. E. church for opposing Masonry and loving Methodism. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocate, and afterward in pamphlet form. The Evangelical Repository, reviewing it, says: "This pamphlet consists of a series of articles originally published in the Church Advocate, Lancaster, Pa. Elder M. S. Newcomer opposes secret societies, and especially Freemasonry and Elder G. W. Wilson defends the system. We are free to say that Mr. Newcomer has thoroughly routed his opponent at every point. Mr. Wilson speaks by the book, as he is a Royal Arch Mason." 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

—It has been decided by Secretary Lincoln to recommend in his annual report that no River and Harbor bill be passed by Congress this winter, as there will remain out of the enormous appropriation made at the last session as much money as can be judiciously expended during the ensuing year.

—The Wilson Packing Company of Chicago, which for many years has been the largest canner of meats in the world, is on the point of abandoning the business, since the trade in dressed beef by refrigerator cars has begun.

—The reception of Mrs. John Brown in the Senate Chamber at Topeka, was a creditable expression of the reverence in which Kansas holds the memory of her brave husband. John Brown's weapons and other relics of the times in which he figured were exhibited, and several of his companions in arms were present. Gov. St. John opened the meeting with a short speech.

—Since Aug. 24 there have been in Cincinnati upwards of 4 000 cases and 1,500 deaths from the small-pox, and it is expected that with the advent of cold weather the disease will become epidemic.

—A Quebec Judge has decided that the rule of trades-unions forbidding their members to work with non-unionists is illegal, and has given judgment in favor of a non-union man who sued the Ship-Laborers' Benevolent Society for damages for enforcing his dismissal by a shipmaster.

—An immense business consolidation is announced from London. The celebrated cannon-foundry establishment of Sir Walter Armstrong has amalgamated with Mitchell & Co., shipbuilders, and will establish works on the Tyne, the capital of the joint concern being $10,000,000. Ships of war and guns for their armament will be turned out ready for action.

—A fearful explosion of dynamite occurred Nov. 17, at the works of Burryport, Llanelly, Wales, instantly killing three girls and two men, and wounding seven others.

—In a fire yesterday at Crozen, France, the Council buildings schools, and post-office were destroyed, and a teacher and eight children perished in the flames.

—The assassins of the Joyce family in Ireland are being tried singly at Dublin, two of the accomplices testifying. Patrick Casey was yesterday found guilty and sentenced to be hanged Dec. 17.

—The printing business is well-nigh paralyzed in Vienna owing to the strike of the compositors, who demanded an advance of 30 per cent. Eighteen leading establishments refused the demand and closed their offices.

—The illness of President Grevy is of so critical a character that his death is looked for, and discussion as to who shall be his successor has already begun.

PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT.

Seven remittances of $15.00 or more each were received last week from David Horning, Geo. Cowley, Isaac Bancroft, E. D. Tillson, Mary E. McPherson, M. & M. Roberts, and Maria B. Nichols, who were duly enrolled on the one hundred list. David Horning accompanied his remittance with four names and the following: "May God bless your work and save the country and his people."

Geo. Cowley—eleven subscriptions for a year each. He writes: "Will try to get more subscribers when the rush of work is over."

Isaac Bancroft would have responded earlier if he had not been thrown from a horse and temporarily disabled.

E. D. Tillson accompanies his remittance with two subscriptions for a year and three for six months each.

G. D. Frizzell renews his subscription and intimates that he may send a club often after he turns his crop of hay and grain.

Martin Myers sends five subscriptions for a year each. He writes: "I am trying to do all I can to spread the truth."

Four subscriptions for a year each came from Shade, O.

W. H Layton sends five for a year each on his club of ten.

Clinton Mallory sends three for a year each.

Several send two for a year each, and thus on the threshold of the winter campaign the canvass opens encouragingly.

MASONIC BOOKS

FOR SALE BY

EZRA A. COOK,

7 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

Books sent post-paid on receipt of retail price, but books by mail are at risk of person ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express are sold at 10 per cent. discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority because they tell too much.

General Ahiman Rezon and Freemasons' Guide. By Daniel Sickels, 33d degree. The most perfect Masonic monitor published in the United States. Embellished with many engravings and containing monitorial instructions in the degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow-Craft and Master Masons, with explanatory leetnres, the ceremonies of consecration and dedication of new lodges, installation of officers, laying foundation stones, dedication of Masonic halls, burial services, Masonic calendar, ritual for a Lodge of Sorrow, Masonic trials, etc. Bound in fine cloth, extra large 12mo, $2.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the entire ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Scores of Masons have privately admitted that this is a standard text-book in the lodge and is strictly correct; but publicly it is not acknowledged as authority, though many officers of the lodge make use of it. Price, in cloth, $2.50.

Female Masonry. Manual of the Order of the Eastern Star. Containing the ritual, symbols, lectures, etc., of the five degrees of "Adoptive Masonry," Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound. Price, $1.50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. A practical guide to the ceremonies in the degrees conferred in Masonic Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated edition. In cloth, $1.25; in paper, 75 cents.

Although this Monitor is extensively used by the lodge, especially in conferring the higher degrees, it is publicly called an exposition, and not allowed as authority.

Sickels' Freemasons' Monitor. Containing the degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic illustrations, together with tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also forms of Masonic documents, notes, songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels; 32mo. In tuck, $1.50; cloth, $1.00.

Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry. Containing a Definition of Terms, Notes on its History, Traditions and Antiquities, and an Account of all the Rites and Mysteries of the Ancient World. 12 mo., 526 pages, $3.00.

Mackey's Manual of the Lodge, or Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow-Craft and Master Mason, with Ceremonies relating to installations, dedications, consecrations, laying of corner-stones, etc. Price, $2.00.

Mackey's Masonic Ritualist, or Monitorial Instruction Book. By Albert G. Mackey, Past General High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of the United States, Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prince of Mercy, etc. Price, cloth, $1.25; tuck, $1.75.

Mackey's Text-Book of Masonic Jurisprudence. Illustrating the laws of Freemasonry, both written and unwritten. This is the great law book of Freemasonry. 570 pages. Price, $2.50.

Allyn's Ritual of Masonry. Illustrated by a large number of engravings, and containing a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, Orange and Odd-fellows' Societies Price, $5.00.

TOPICS OF THE TIME.

The temperance cause in Kansas labors under a peculiar and unusual disadvantage. The metropolis of the State is just across the eastern border in Missouri. Kansas City is the great stock and grain market of the southwest. The press of that city has probably double the circulation and influence in Kansas that it has in its own State; and it is estimated that the Kansas City Times and Journal have a greater circulation in Kansas than any three home papers. The whisky interest is located also there in power, and from this most favorable and guarded position can maintain the battle against prohibition with perfect impunity. Liquor dealers driven out of Kansas took refuge in the city and swelled the gale of war with all the bitterness of revenge. The enemy were thus within the gates yet protected by the laws of another State. The papers mentioned made superhuman efforts to defeat St. John, and gave the word to the renegade Republican press of the State. This factor in the defeat of St. John must not be overlooked in making up the estimate of the defeat of Nov. 7th.

Governor St. John, though badly defeated, is cheerful and brave. "Though beaten," he writes, "I am neither dishonored, discouraged nor whipped." He has profound faith in the principles of prohibition, and prophesies ultimate and glorious victory, though a thousand St. Johns go down in the fight. May God cheer the brave spirits in Kansas who faint not in this day of adversity. Their reward shall appear at the last, and all the enemies of the truth shall see it with confusion and shame.

Postmaster-General Howe is in favor of a postal telegraph system and the postal savings bank. He says the Department is at present a monopoly of all the slow methods for transmitting letters while private corporations have developed and enjoy the privilege of sending rapid system messages exclusively. Mr. Howe is right, but it will take a shrewd and able man to bring about a reform. The objection to the postal savings banks, that a national debt is necessary in order that they should be profitable to the government, is not very forcible so long as we are paying out over one hundred millions a year for pensions.

The Romish hierarchy of Canada have been in great tribulation over the introduction of Sir Walter Scott's poem "Marmion" as a text book in schools. The story, it will be remembered, includes a secret trial of a young woman by a dungeon council of priests—unpleasant reading for those who hope to cast out of our histories all reference to the persecutions and cruelties of Rome. On the other hand a deputation representing the Episcopal, Presbyterian and Methodist churches of Canada lately called upon the Attorney General and urged that the Bible should be made a text book in the public schools. The official replied at length that the request of the deputation should receive the earnest consideration of the government. To ask that the Holy Scriptures should be read was a reasonable request. He also said that under the present regulations religious instruction should be given by ministers of the various denominations to the children after usual school hours. Romish superstition and servility to priest rule cannot stand long where the government maintains such principles.

The gold gambling during the war, or the stock sales in San Francisco following the discoveries in the Nevada mines, hardly surpassed the speculation in oil of the past few weeks, which has centered in Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Bradford and Oil City, Pennsylvania. Within a month the price of crude petroleum has run up from about 80 or 90 cents to $1.35 per barrel and back again, immense quantities changing hands. Thus at Pittsburg the sales on the 6th inst. were 11,370,000 barrels; at Oil City, 14,545,000; and at Bradford, 30,000,000. This fever of oil speculation began some months ago, when a new district was opened where wells for a few days produced enormously. In July the oil product was 111,000 barrels per day; it is now only 65,000. But the chief disturbing element is the great monopoly, the Standard Oil Company of Cleveland, which is managing the market to get control of all the crude oil to run through its refineries. Already the retail price has advanced several cents a gallon. A few hundred people, whose covetousness is greater than their scruples, and has led them into the vortex of speculation and ruin, have lost their all, but the whole land is laid under tribute to this Cleveland monopoly, whose extortions have for years been notorious, but whose wealth and facilities have choked competition and defied public opinion and the laws.

The results of speculative over-production are beginning to be felt in some severity. As in 1873, the railroads promise to lead in the procession of panic and loss. It is notorious that the extension of roads, through rivalry, or the ambition of the magnates of the business, has been disproportioned to the business demand. For the millions thus expended the whole country must pay. The threatened closing up of steel mills in Chicago and Pittsburg is another sign of the coming financial storm. Not a few wise observers are furling their sails and trimming their spars to be ready for the blast.

The Methodist ministers of Chicago took up the Sabbath question last week, Rev. Wm. Fawcett (the same who proposed a new political party with American principles and name) leading the discussion with an able address. The Sunday newspapers were more severely condemned than any other business that desecrates the day. Bishop Merrill considered them worse than the open saloons. They keep more people from church than theaters and saloons combined. The Tribune, which is the chief sinner in this respect, is badly hurt and full of wrath. The pastors "display a degree of bigotry, intolerance and ignorance not at all creditable;" "The Sunday paper has become a necessity in this country," etc. The fact is the Sunday sheet is a necessity only to those who make money by it. The Sunday Tribune is one of the best advertising mediums in the country, and that makes all the difference. As much may be said of any other form of Sabbath-breaking that has been tolerated until people are accustomed to it. There is no more need of a Sunday paper than of a fifth wheel to a coach.

—It is suggested that many friends have the impression that because the N. C. A. now publishes all the tracts that they are therefore free. It is true that a large circulation is desired and to secure this many thousand pages are distributed gratuitously; but as the Association is at considerable expense for the publication it is hoped that friends will, so far as possible, send the price, noted with the tract list, when they send an order.

An Anti-Liquor Campaign at the Heart of Massachusetts.

BY REV. HENRY T. CHEEVER.

Sabbath, Nov. 19, was a memorable field-day for temperance in Worcester. The annual agitation, under the Local Option law, for No License, opened auspiciously under Christan conduct. A crowded meeting was held in the now historic Mechanics' Hall, presided over and opened by a minister, and forcibly addressed by Robert Scot, of the Massachusetts Total Abstinence Society, and by Rev. Dr. Mears, of this city, in support of these principles, which were offered as the basis for discussion through successive meetings:

1. To license the liquor traffic by law is erroneous and wrong in theory, demoralizing and vicious in practice, ruinous in results.
2. Constitutional and statutory prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks by a major vote of the people is the most effectual way of preventing drunkenness that is in the power of organized society, because it is virtually stopping the supplies of that drunkenness.
3. The great reform party of the future, to carry this Christian republic, must therefore be a national American party, that shall make suppression of the liquor traffic in all the States by Constitution and law, one of its fundamental principles.

In the evening Piedmont church was thronged long before the hours of service to hear the veteran lecturer, John B. Gough. At 7 o'clock all the available seating and standing room of the large auditory was occupied, and more than were admitted are said to have gone away unable even to get into the vestibule. Mr. Gough characterized the business of liquor selling in the most scorching language, as the foulest business a creature could follow. He depicted, by numerous illustrations and instances in his own wide observation, the inexpressible horrors of the life and death of the drunkard; and the terrors consequent upon the ruin of the beloved son of a friend by liquor—closing with a climax of emphasis Gough only can master, that the licensing of the sale of liquors in dear Worcester must and shall be stopped. This is the first of a series of Sunday afternoon mass meetings for the healthy toning and concentrating of public sentiment. It is to continue until what I trust will prove the day of doom for the liquor traffic, the pending 12th of December. At the last meeting an opportunity will probably be given, with other resident ministers, for your "Corresponding Editor, E. D. Bailey," to lift up his voice in Mechanics' Hall. His reformative and his preaching work are alike acceptable and effective, and he is winning a good reputation as the right man in the right place.

Worcester.

A Thanksgiving Hymn.

Once more the rolling year brings round
The day when festal joys abound;
Our land, from East to Western sea,
Sends up united praise to Thee.

Why should we thank Thee, Lord of all?
What are Thy gifts that daily fall
And yearly crown us with their store,
That we have oft received before?

These are Thy gifts! We thank Thee, Lord,
For harvests yielding rich reward;
For orchard's fruitage, full and free,
And plenty's reign from sea to sea.

We thank Thee, Lord, for evil crushed,
That wives and mother's bowed in dust,
May hail the dawn of that glad hour,
That breaks in twain the rum-fiend's power.

We thank Thee, Lord, for friendship spared,
For dear love given, taken, shared;
For infant treasures lent us here,
For sweet home-fires to bless and cheer.

Help us to say, "We thank Thee, Lord,"
When dear graves dot the mossy sward;
When hopes lie buried 'neath the sod,
And we are crushed by Thy stern rod.

Help us to praise in hours of pain,
With quivering heart and throbbing brain;
When weak, pale hands close folded lie,
While all the world goes hurrying by.

So we would thank Thee, Lord of all,
For every gift Thy hand lets fall,
For joy, for sorrow, pleasure, pain,
Let all Thy people say, "Amen!"

Sinful Precautions.

BY ELDER S. C. KIMBALL.

Adam and Eve sinned to increase their knowledge. Abraham told Sarah to lie to secure the favor of Pharaoh. Rebekah taught Jacob to deceive his father for temporal advantage. Achan broke the command of God for gold. Young Elder Gehazi swindled money out of Naaman so as to turn heathen property into the support of the Lord's servants. Thus it appears no recent invention to do evil that good may come. These ancients who had no Bible and comparatively little moral instruction must be beaten with few stripes. What shall we say of ministers and professed Christians who in the last years of the nineteenth century and under the blaze of Gospel light continue the same folly and sin? Says the church: We cannot raise money to pay our preacher and hence we must turn the temple of God into a play house. We cannot repair our house of worship unless we gamble the money out of sinners.

Says the minister: I cannot get a desirable preaching place unless I take the blasphemous oaths of the Masonic lodge. I do not quite like to do it but then it will increase my influence and sphere of usefulness. I fear if I should be sick I should not be cared for, and hence I will join some brotherhood of ungodly men. If I preach a full Gospel I shall offend my hearers and lose my preaching place, and hence I will tone down the message to suit the people.

Says the layman: I must pay the preacher if I cheat a little in my business to do it.

Says the rumseller: I know I rob women and children of their bread, but then I pay liberally to the church and other benevolent causes.

And so it goes; but what saith the Scriptures of all this? Their "damnation is just." Rom. 3:8. Silly church, you may gamble to increase your revenues, but your "damnation is just." Foolish preacher, you may daub with untempered mortar to please the back-slidden in heart, but your "damnation is just." Stupid professor, you may sin with Balaam for the wages of unrighteousness, but your "damnation is just." "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God, and at his right hand are joys forever more.

Religious Claims of Speculative Masonry.

SELECTIONS FROM MASONIC WRITERS WITH NOTES BY REV. J. F. RAYNOR.

"Almost all the circumstances attending the promulgation of the Jewish dispensation have been introduced in Freemasonry, and the particular observances incorporated with its ceremonial. The divine appearance at the burning bush, the shoes, the rod, the serpent and the sacred name are equally embodied in the system. The plagues of Egypt, with the signs which attended the divine deliverance of the children of Israel from captivity, the pillar of a cloud and of fire, the mighty winds, the division of the Red Sea, the salvation of God's people, and the destruction of Pharaoh and his host, the wanderings in the wilderness, the delivery of the law, the building of the Tabernacle, and the establishment of the hierarchy, the order observed in the frequent migrations led by the banners of each tribe, and other important events, all form parts of the complicated system of Freemasonry, and show its connection with the offices of religion."—Oliver and McCoy, Encyclopedia, p. 193, Art. Observances.

Ibid., p. 236-7, Art. Rod: "The rod of Moses, fearful as the attack of a serpent to the Egyptians, was a scepter of righteousness to the children of Israel. It was a sign of the divine authority, and a visible demonstration of God's power used to confound the pretended skill of the magicians; to show the omnipotence of the Deity, and to humble the pride of Pharaoh when he beheld the mighty wonders wrought by so contemptible an agent as a shepherd's staff. But above all, this rod metamorphosed, was a type of Christ's death, to which, indeed, Freemasonry ultimately points; for as by a serpent death came into the world, so by the death of the Son of God, the serpent or Satan was fully vanquished and trodden underfoot."

Ibid., p. 51, Art. Center: "The labors of a Freemason must penetrate to the center of the earth, and his spirit inquire all into the operations of nature, and either be capable satisfactorily to explain or humbly admire them."—Gadicke.

Ibid., p. 51, Art. Central Point: "Masonry is truly the sister of religion; for she boasts her efficacy in all its native influence, and is continually the assistant, promoter of like principles and like actions. The central point of all her innumerable lines, squares and circles is the love of God; and upon this central point she builds her faith; from it she derives her hope of glory here and hereafter, and by it she squares her conduct in strict justice and universal charity. The central point of all true Christianity is the love of God. Masonry is dedicated only to the Gospel."

Ibid., p. 18, Art. Angel of Jehovah: "The angel of Jehovah was really and truly the Captain of Salvation or Jehovah himself, the Creator of the World, or Jesus Christ, called by Masons T. G. A. O. T. U., who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto. This divine being called to Moses by his name, and commanded him to approach with naked feet because the ground on which he stood was holy, or consecrated by the divine presence, and, therefore, Moses took off his shoes in obedience to the divine command, and prostrated himself before the Deity.

Regeneration, p. 226: "The Triple Cross of Royal Arch Masonry signifies alike the cross of Christ, regeneration and life."

Serpent and Cross, p. 251: "A type of salvation to the Israelites. Hence the cross became the emblem of life and salvation, and, being in a higher degree tripled amongst ourselves, signifies the Tetragrammaton, or Him who made the worlds, even the Author of our Redemption—Jesus Christ."

Art Arcana: "In the secret Arcana of our mysteries, a series of valuable truths are preserved, which correspond with the teachings of Christianity, and point to the appearance of a Saviour in the world to atone for human transgression, and carry us from earth to heaven; and being the conservator of such valuable mysteries, it is not surprising that in these days of superior piety and intelligence it should so rapidly increase in public estimation, and be practised by the wise and good, not merely as a source of rational amusement, but as a means of promoting the blessings of morality and virtue amongst mankind, and augmenting a respect for the institution of religion."

Angular Trial: "At the establishment of the Royal Arch degree, the angular trial bore a reference to the three great lights, what, at that period, were interpreted to symbolize the light of the Gospel and the sublime mystery of the Trinity."

Christianity: "Masonry is the excellency of Christianity, and every Mason is, if he is in reality a Mason, a true Christian, or, at least, he is, in reality, truly religious, according to his profession, whether he be a Jew or Christian.—Inwood.

NOTE.—The above references show that Masonry originated in a Christian land, and that in its earlier stages, the Christian religion had a considerable molding and shaping influence upon it.

REFORM STORY.

Holden with Cords.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "LITTLE PEOPLE," "A SUNNY LIFE," ETC.

Chapter XIX—Which Contains Sundry Happenings.

Though it still continued in many minds an unsettled question whether or no Morgan's body had actually been discovered, popular excitement was wakened anew. Masons were exultant over the Timothy Munroe story, while the opposite party saw in it nothing but a clever ruse by which to deceive the public and influence the approaching elections. For the whole subject from being a mere matter for the courts to deal with had now come to play an important part in our national politics. In a country where the unbiased will of the people constitutes the only court of appeal it follows naturally that all great moral evils must stand their trial sooner or later before that august tribunal. And Masonry had reached the point sooner for the reason that her haughty defiance of law and justice, as well as her arrogant assumption of an authority superior to that of the State had alarmed all candid and thoughtful men, and fairly forced the question to a political issue.

That the strife as it went on should develop a spirit of heat and acrimony and unfairness even on the side of the partisans of truth, is nothing strange considering the infirmities of human nature. For in every rising of popular wrath against an established wrong or abuse there is a grand intolerance, like an earthquake or a whirlwind that levels indiscriminately; it makes no allowance for possible honesty on the part of some who support that particular evil against which the arrows are for the time being hurled. Timorous Masons cowered before the storm, and withdrew from the lodge in shame and silence; while others of different caliber roused to a perfect frenzy of bitterness and hate at the threatened downfall of their cherished institution persecuted, with all the weapons malice could invent, those recreant brethren who had testified to its evil works.

Such was the situation in the Fall of 1827, a year after the death of Morgan.

Elder Cushing preached on; his congregation, as regarded the male members almost entirely Masonic, sustained him. But there had been no revival in the church since the period of its first planting, and it was soon apparent to all that the candle-stick was being slowly moved out of its place, especially when a series of religious meetings in the neighborhood had drawn in many of the young people, and caused not a few to inquire anxiously the way of salvation. For so deep was the interest manifested that these meetings were continued and formed the seed of a new church, small in numbers but rich in faith, and full of that spiritual life and energy which naturally abounds where most of the members are new converts. It took in Rachel and I, and baptized our little one; dear old Methodist Episcopal church whom I shall never cease to love, though I love the Church Universal better. And though people and pastor alike have in too many instances forgotten the faith of their early founders, and turned aside to a strange worship, God visit them in mercy and bring them back to their first love!

The Morgan trials dragged slowly along with out reaching any definite result. His murderers still at large defied the hand of law to touch them, and before winter was over Brownsville had its sensation in the sudden flight of Darius Fox, against whom new evidence had appeared implicating him still more deeply in the plot, so that another warrant was speedily issued for his arrest.

"They say the officers were after him," said Joe, who brought in the news; "but somehow he got wind of it and cleared out. It wasn't an hour before they come to arrest him that Seth Briggs says he was talking with him about a young horse he wanted to buy. They couldn't seem to come to a bargain, and while they were chaffing, he saw Darius look up and grow sort of white about the mouth. 'I'm in a hurry now,' said he; 'we'll let the matter go till another time.' And Seth says he noticed a man come in while they were talking that he is sure give Fox the Masonic sign. Any how, he's left Brownsville," concluded Joe, "and I hope his place will be filled by a better man."

In which expression Joe was not alone, but there remained another surprise for the people of Brownsville in the fact that the ex-sheriff had not left his affairs in the confused state which would seem to follow naturally on such a sudden flight. All his property, including the distillery, was soon found to have been secretly purchased—rumor said by the lodge—at a price so far in advance of its real value as to cover all pecuniary loss sustained in his abrupt departure. As it is on record by indisputable authority that the Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter of the State contributed large sums during the time the Morgan trials were pending for the aid and defence of their distressed Masonic brethren it will be seen that their claim to benevolence is not without a certain foundation; but as a band of thieves and murderers would probably be just as benevolent under similar circumstances I will cite one historical instance and let the subject pass.

The following spring, Richard Howard, the midnight incendiary, closely pursued by the officers of justice, entered an encampment of Knight Templars in the city of New York, and there confessed himself guilty of the murder of Morgan. He was helped to embark on board a vessel bound for some European port; and with the wages of sin in his hand, fled his native country, and how or where he died only the Judgment Day will reveal. The two others also escaped the grasp of the law by a flight into what was then the extreme western boundaries of the Union, but who shall say they went unpunished?—that in dreams haunted by the last look of their victim, in the sigh of the wind or the rustle of a leaf instinct with startling messages of fear for their guilty souls God did not vindicate his righteous judgment against all murderers.

Mark Stedman had been appointed on a circuit that came very near the Tonawanda line. For this reason or some other we soon found out by his letters that he was a frequent guest in the family of Mr. Jedediah Mills, whose troubles he was not slow to ascribe to their true origin—the machinations of the lodge

"They mean to ruin him for the part he played in the rescue of Colonel Miller," wrote Mark. "When a vast secret power like Masonry sets itself against one solitary individual that individual must go to the wall. They mean to ruin Mr. Greene of the Park Tavern, and they are doing it as fast as they can by 'deranging his business' in every possible way. To tell you all the outrages he has suffered would fill a volume. He is making a brave fight, but what avails it against such an enemy? How long, O Lord, shall the wicked persecute? How long shall they bend their bow and make ready their arrows upon the string that they may privily shoot at the upright in heart!"

"Leander," said Rachel, suddenly, "I have heard of Hannah Mills through one of the Lokers—Miss Alvira Loker you know has connections in Tonawanda. She calls Hannah a real good Christian girl, and if Mark has taken a liking to her I am glad. He needs just such a wife as she would make him. Mark is all spirit, he forgets he has a body to be taken care of. I saw that plain enough when he was here two months ago. He was pale and thin and had a hacking cough on him. No wonder, catching cold every little while and never taking anything for it. Riding for miles wet to the skin, and then preaching, and then off again to hold another service somewhere else. He wants some body to see to him, that he don't break down in a consumption before his work is half done; to lecture him every time he forgets to wear an overcoat or tie up his throat; to insist on his taking a hot drink after he has been out in the wet and cold, and see that his flannels are in order, and a thousand and one things that only a wife can do for him,—a plain sensible Christian woman that will glory in his usefulness and share his love for souls, and yet be a practical common sense adviser in all the ordinary affairs of life. Mark is all spirituality and ideality and heroism and what not, and I consider it a beneficent arrangement of Providence that such men are usually attracted to their opposites."

"Dear me, Rachel," I said, "you talk as if the whole matter was prearranged. Mark hasn't even mentioned Hannah Mills in this letter."

"Precisely the circumstance that adds weight to my suspicions," answered Rachel, briskly. "If he had mentioned her I should think there was nothing in it. You don't know everything, Leander."

And Rachel, who I must confess had in her secret heart a little of that love of matchmaking not uncommon in happily married wives, smiled with the pleasant complacency of superior knowledge; while I only uttered that sage and safe remark appropriate to all conditions of mortal uncertainty, "We shall see."

At the very time this conversation occurred, Mark Stedman was travelling on his circuit through woods just leafing out with the emerald hues of spring, and thinking over the subject on which he intended to preach when he reached his destination, a lonely school house where meetings were held at stated periods. He rode slowly, occasionally referring to his pocket Bible for some text, a kind of holy rapture filling his soul as he thought of the grandeur of the struggle before him, and the joys of that final victory when the kingdoms of this world should become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ—when every refuge of lies should be swept away and that embodiment of Satanic power and malice, the man of sin to which the New Testament writers point in dim and awful prophecy, should be forever destroyed in the brightness of his glorious second coming. For to such a mind as Mark's, things unseen and eternal have a palpable reality impossible to comprehend by any soul that lingers outside the pale of a full consecration. As he rode along intent on the message he was to deliver, earth seemed nothing and less than nothing; God and his eternal truth, everything.

Suddenly a shot split the air fired from the thicket through which Mark was passing. It took effect, wounding him in the arm. Another and another followed in quick succession but the flash and report so frightened his horse that it needed no spurring but broke at once into a furious run, and the second and third balls whizzed harmlessly past.

Providence doubtless ordered that the affair should happen near Tonawanda, and that when his trembling horse finally stopped, reeking with foam, it was close by Mr. Jedediah Mills gate. His injury proved to be a flesh wound and nothing very serious, but he had to submit to considerable dressing and bandaging for a few days, during which time his resolution was taken to do what he had more than once half resolved upon doing in some of his lonely rides, and then abandoned as too great a sacrifice to require of the woman he loved,—ask Hannah Mills if in deed and in truth she was willing to be the wife of a poor circuit preacher who felt it his mission to take side with every unpopular reform, and preach all sorts of unpalatable truths, and whom the world would frown upon accordingly, reserving its smiles for those prophets who prophesy unto it smooth things; who moreover was now engaged in deadly conflict with an unsparing foe sworn to persecute him to the death—would she knowing all theses things consent to share his lot.

I happen to know Hannah's answer. It came in the words of a certain old Hebrew idyl which has stood for ages and will stand while time lasts as the epitome of that self-sacrificing devotion which shrinks from no trial with the loved one at its side.

And so Hannah Mills became Hannah Stedman, the elder's wife; and in process of time Rachel's wish was realized in that unlooked for way in which our wishes so often become prophecies, by their eventually occupying the very cottage from which we had moved on our grandfather's death.

As for Rachel, she would scarcely have been human if she had never once said, "I told you so."

The Sermon.

SYNOPSIS OF SERMON PREACHED BY E. D BAILEY AT WASHBURN HALL, WORCESTER, SUNDAY MORNING, NOV. 19TH.

Text:—"For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit."

Doubtless you are all as anxious as I am to know what is essential to the progress of Christian work in this city, and what hinders its progress. We shall welcome joyfully anything which will help us in our endeavors to bring men to a saving knowledge of the truth. It is this desire on my part which leads to the discussion of a practical theme in the light of this passage of Scripture. Let us first understand the meaning of the text.

In many places in the New Testament a contrast is drawn between those who follow the interests of their spiritual natures and those who study only to gratify their carnal desires. Thus Paul speaks of "sowing to the flesh" and "sowing to the spirit," and draws a contrast between the fruits of the two. He also speaks of certain classes of persons as being "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." Again he writes concerning his helpers in the ministry that "they all seek their own, not the things which are Christ's." He records of Demas that he had forsaken him, "having loved this present world." All these passages throw light upon the contrast drawn in the text between the "carnal" and the "spiritual" natures.

The meaning of the text is that some persons spend their labors chiefly to gratify the lower nature, while others, under the lead of God's Spirit, are engaged in mortifying the sensual nature and cultivating those nobler virtues which are pleasing to a Holy God.

SPIRITUAL POWER

comes from minding "the things of the Spirit." Cases can be called to the mind of every individual of persons among their acquaintances who are noted for their spirituality, or of other persons who are notoriously unspiritual. There are some whose sole ambition is to walk with God, to commune with His Spirit through the Word, while there are others to whom such things are wholly distasteful. There are two classes in our churches, and they represent two opposite tendencies.

If we wish to ascertain what the carnal mind loves we have only to consult the practices of those who profess only to follow carnal desires and we shall have a plain answer. If we wish to know what the spiritually minded desire we have only to consult the sacred Word, and the lives of godly men and women will furnish the answer. The carnal mind craves

AMUSEMENTS.

A person does not need to be converted to the Lord to love the dance, the theater, the card table, billiards, oyster suppers, strong drink, dramas and apron sales. These things are the amusements of the unregenerate, hence it is not necessary to be filled with the Spirit to enjoy them. They are the class of things meant by the apostle when he speaks of being "lovers of pleasure," and they are also what he means when he enumerates among the fruits of the flesh "revellings." The unregenerate man craves such entertainment. The less of the Spirit one has the more he loves such things. From the world has come a demand that the churches shall furnish such amusement for the sake of the young people, and little by little the church has acceded to this demand until the concessions are nothing less than appalling. The daily papers of the city have announced nearly forty entertainments during the past week in this vicinity, about one-fourth of which are by the churches. The first class of these entertainments are by the

the Knights of Pythias, G. A. R., and others. The theaters, the New Garden, and other secular places join this class and display their attractions in flaming colors. Then come the Reform club, the Temperance club, the Y. M. C. A., and other moral and religious accessories. These advertise dramas, games, social concerts and the the like. Lastly came he churches with dramas, concerts, fairs, oyster suppers, apron sales, old folks concerts and a host of other things, all calculated to "draw." It is safe to say that there are not three churches in the city of Worcester, Catholic, Episcopal, Universalist, Methodist, Baptist or Congregational, which will not have one or more such entertainments between the first of September and the first of January, while many of them will have a series of such things. One looking on from the outside is puzzled to discern the difference between the shows outside of the churches and those inside. The advertisements read alike, the same kind of inducements are offered, and doubtless the people who patronize them feel about alike. There was an old popular superstition that the churches existed to promote but that was long since exploded. The church has now become the rival of the world in furnishing amusement and entertainment. The world said it wouldn't go to church if it couldn't be entertained, and the church replied, "We'll do the best we can," and it has been at it ever since. The question is not whether these things are wrong per se, but the question is should the church, whose business it is to preach salvation, forsake its legitimate work and undertake to satisfy the carnal desires of the world? Our great mistake is in teaching our young people, or allowing them to believe that they should not be expected to do anything which has not in it their own personal gratification. Children are not sent to school for fun, neither should they be sent to church for fun. There is a sober, serious, earnest, important duty devolving upon them, and their carnal desires are not what we are to gratify, but their spiritual needs. Unless there is a radical change soon we can easily prophesy what kind of

there will be this winter. The minister, deacons, and a few faithful brethren and sisters will soon begin to be worried at the thin attendance at prayer-meeting, and the little interest in religious things prevailing in the church. After a good deal of talk some extra meetings will be called. The minister will speak with more than usual fervor, and the deacons will pray better. All will bemoan the fact that so few are interested in this revival. Two or three young persons, whose parents are praying for them, will rise for prayers, but "outsiders," the "young people" and the "society" will not be present. Nobody alludes to the reason of their absence, but the fact is they are too busy preparing their "parts" for the next entertainment. Then comes and all religious efforts must give way to a general pious carnival, and then comes the week of prayer, when another spurt of effort will be made, and the heated season will hurry on when "no man worketh" (in these modern days).

A father was once remonstrating with his son for playing ball all day long instead of going to school. "Father," said the son, "you don't mean to say playing ball is wicked, do you? "My son," answered the father, "the question is not whether it is wicked, but whether you can afford to waste your precious time." The question is not now whether theatres, dances, and oyster suppers are wrong, but the question is can the churches afford to engage in these things to the exclusion and destruction of their legitimate work. Let the world, if it will, gratify the carnal desires, but let the church follow after the Spirit.

will increase their power and usefulness immeasureably if they will retrace their steps to the place where first they departed from their legitimate work, and take up anew the struggle against the over-mastering power of the world. There is no surer token of the decay of spirituality than the popularity and multiplicity of worldly amusements in the churches. Let us banish them. We may lose in numbers, but we shall gain in power.

THE SOUTHERN FIELD.

Along the Potomac.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17, 1882.

DEAR BRO. K.:—On Wednesday the 15th inst., I visited the "National Home for destitute colored children and aged women," on the border of the city not far from Howard University. It has about 100 children and seven aged women. All are under the care of Miss E. Heacock, assisted by able teachers. It receives about $6,000 annually from the national government, and is a most deserving charity. I was glad to find Miss H. in warm sympathy with our reform.

In the evening I took passage for Fortress Monroe on the steamer Lady of the Lake, and woke up next morning in time to see the lights on the capes at the entrance of Chesapeake Bay, and a large number of fine ships bound to and from Baltimore, Norfolk and other points. At 7:30 we reached Fortress Monroe, which covers about 75 acres, and is the largest defensive structure on the coast. The Rip Raps, a rocky island just opposite the Fortress, is a foundation for another fort, on which much money and labor has been spent. Here are Hampton Roads, one of the finest natural harbors in the world, and here was fought the battle between the Merrimac and the Monitor, which changed the whole character of naval warfare. Here was the prison of Jeff. Davis, until a false kindness released him on bail, and saved him from trial and punishment. I saw lying in the harbor three large government frigates, and in the yards of the Fortress a vast number of cannon and other implements of war.

On landing here I found that I had reached that undefined region known as "The South." I knew by the Bermuda grass that grew in the yards, but especially by the many little carts, each drawn by one small, poor ox, and loaded with colored people. I had seen this often in the barren ricelands of Georgia and Alabama. I was surprised and saddened to see it in a fertile region.

A hack took me three miles, through the sleepy village of Hampton, to Hampton Industrial and Normal Institute, with its fine buildings, busy workshops, and intelligent and enterprising managers and pupils. This school was commenced soon after the close of the war by the American Missionary Association, and is for the education of the African and Indian races.

The last catalogue shows 501 pupils, of whom 89 were Indians and 412 of the negro race. At present there are about 100 Indians and a proportionate increase of the colored. The Indians are from many different tribes, from the Sioux of the northwest to the Seminoles of Florida. The colored represent twelve different States, but are mostly from Virginia and North Carolina. The whole are under the able and efficient management of Gen. S. C. Armstrong, assisted by many excellent co-laborers, male and female. They have a farm of 500 acres of fair soil, well adapted to the growth of wheat, corn and garden vegetables, which are the principal articles raised. The farm buildings are large and neat, and the business seems well conducted. They have besides a large saw and planing mill, a carriage and a harness manufactory, tin shop and a printing office, which publishes monthly the Southern Workman, a large, illustrated paper. They also made last year over two millions of bricks. Contiguous to the Institute are the Soldier's Home and the National Cemetery, with its fine granite monument.

I was most kindly entertained by Gen. Armstrong, and greatly admired nearly all that I saw. I visited the school rooms and workshops of the Indians, saw them working in blacksmith and tin shops and in other departments; and found that both in the shop and in the schoolroom they are much like other people, with just such obstacles and successes as their darker and paler brethren meet. There seems to be no race prejudice here, and if this institution helps to destroy the spirit of caste, it will for that reason be worth all that it has cost.

I have but a single criticism to make. This school is semi-military. Military drill is conducted by Lieut. G. L. Brown, U. S. A. With my views of war I cannot approve of anything that looks to preparation for war. I earnestly hope that the American Missionary Association, which will not allow its African missionaries to deal in or have implements of war, lest they countenance the war spirit, will seriously consider the question of consistency, and will drop this worse than needless appendage.

ANTI-SECRETISM.

I was much gratified to find that Gen. Armstrong and the efficient Treasurer, Gen. J. F. B. Marshall, are in accord with us in opposition to secret societies, though neither had given the subject much attention. Gen. Armstrong said that he had always kept out of college secret societies, and regarded them as clannish and unmanly. He called the school together at three P. M., and I had the privilege of speaking thirty-five minutes to over 400 students and teachers. Gen. A. spoke at some length, approving and enforcing what I said. I left a good supply of tracts for distribution, some books for the library and ordered the Cynosure for their reading-room. There seemed to be but one man connected with the business who advertised his Masonry by wearing a Knight Templar badge, though I think some of the students are Masons and belong to other secret orders. Gen. Armstrong seemed pleased with my visit and what I had said. I was provided with an early tea and sent down to the steamer in a carriage. I reached this city at 9 A. M., having had, on coming up the Potomac, a fine view of Mt. Vernon, Ft. Washington, and other points of interest.

Nov. 22.—To-day I visited Wayland University, a Baptist institution for collegiate and theological education of colored students. It has a fine building near the head of Fourteenth street, N W., and has more than a hundred students in attendance. It is under the care of Rev. G. M. P. King, assisted by Prof. W. B. Johnson and others. These brethren received me most kindly, expressed much sympathy and interest in my work, and invited me to address the students at 1 o'clock p. m. They were all in attendance, and some young men from Howard University. I was listened to with most respectful attention for an hour.

Among those present was a young medical student who had heard me speak three times at Atlanta University, Georgia, and who told me that the discussion had resulted in a marked change of sentiment among the students in Atlanta. Quite a number of the students here are Masons or Odd-fellows, but unlike some of their white brethren they were not disposed to deny the correctness of the expositions or that Masonry is largely used for the perversion of justice. It seemed never to have occurred to them that any one had ever been opposed to Masonry or other secret societies. I distributed a considerable quantity of tracts, and have promised some books to the University library. Should any of our Baptist brethren desire to aid the good work that is being done here, let them address President G. M. King, Wayland University, Washton, D. C. Yours, in the Lord,

H. H. HINMAN.

Answer to the Scripture Problem of Nov. 16.

1. Set down first the number of men who went to seek Elijah when he was carried up to heaven? Ans.—Fifty men. 2 Kings 2:16.

2. Multiply this by the number of days during which Job's friends sat by him without speaking a word when they came to comfort him? Ans.—Seven days. Job, 2:13.

3. Multiply again by the number of days which Jericho, was compassed by the Israelites? Ans.—Seven days. Joshua 6:4.

4. Subtract the number of men that Samson killed with the jaw-bone? Ans.—A thousand men. Judges 15:15. 5. Divide by the number of stones which David carried with him when he went to kill Goliah? Ans.—Five stones. 1 Samuel 17:40. 6. Subtract the years of the Babylonish captivity? Ans.—Seventy years. Jer. 25:11. 7. Add the number of furlongs between Bethany and Jerusalem. Ans.—Fifteen furlongs. John 11:18. 8. Add the age that the Psalmist said is generally the limit of life of man in this world? Ans.—Three score and ten. Ps. 90:10. 9. Multiply the number of Jacob's sons, (Twelve) by—

10. The number of years in which Solomon was building the temple subtract the product from the above sum. Ans.—Seven years. 1 Kings 6:38. 11. Add the number of years in which the Israelites were for their sins obliged to wander in the wilderness. Ans.—Forty years. Num. 14:34.

12. Subtract one from the sum and we have the number of chapters in the New Testament. Ans.— 260. ALICE ANGELL,

Delavan, Wisconsin. (12 years old.)

Our Cynosure boys and girls will all agree that Alice has answered the problem beautifully. And here come a fine company of bright-eyed, sharp witted little folks who have been studying diligently in the Bible to find the same answer; and all have it correctly: Gilbert J. Dake, Columbus city, Iowa. Rollie Lyman (aged 13,) Arcade, N. Y. Rosa H. Culbertson (aged 13,) Doud's Station, Iowa. Herschel L. Carnahan (aged 8,) and Frank Carnahan (aged 6.) Ada O. Perry, Burlington, Iowa, Rubie Rogers (age 9,) Union Mills, Ind.

We shall be glad to give our little readers another problem.

Day of Prayer for Temperance.

The General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church of North America, at its meeting in Monmouth, Ill., May 24th to June 1st, 1882, took the following action with reference to the appointment of a day of prayer in behalf of the temperance cause:

"RESOLVED, that we cordialy second the request of the W. C. T. Union of this city, in referance to securing the assignment, by the Evangelical Alliance in their programme for the Week of Prayer, of one day to the subject of Temperance; and re-affirming the action of the last Assembly in reference to this matter, we direct our principal clerk to present this request to the Alliance. We further recommend that in case of the refusal of this request, our clerk be authorized and directed, on the appearance of the programme of the Alliance, to designate the day on which this subject shall be considered, and to give notice of such designation through the papers of the church."—Minutes of General Assembly, Vol. V., page 534.

This action was forwarded to the committee of the Evangelical Alliance, but in the programme for the Week of Prayer no "one day or its equivalent on different days" (Minutes, Vol. V., page 364,) has been assigned to the subject of Temperance. The sin of intemperance is referred to only in connection with many other sins, for which confession should be made.

Therefore, by the authority and direction of the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church, I designate Tuesday, January 9th, 1883, as the day of the Week of Prayer on which the cause of temperance shall be made the subject of conference and prayer.

WILLIAM J. REID, Principal Clerk.

—The Odd-fellow order throughout the country is in great disturbance over the establishment of an aristocratic ring, known as the circle degrees, which will play Knight Templar snob to the ordinary Odd-fellow who is bound down by his three links and a lean purse.

NEW ENGLAND.

THE NEW ENGLAND BOARD of the National Christian Association has it headquarters at No. 8 Portland St., Worcester, Mass. A full supply of books and tracts constntly on hand. Orders promptly filled. Correspondence solicited. E. D. BAILEY, N. E. Sec.

—Places to hold State Conventions in Maine and Vermont have been secured. Now we want to find men and money to make them a success.

—A lady connected with the theatre in Worcester advertises to give dramatic training for private theatricals, church fairs, festivals, etc. Now our young people will probably be able to win the same compliment given to one last winter of whom the paper said her acting in a church drama "would have done credit to the regular stage."

—A gentleman reports that ninety-nine out of every hundred Odd-fellows, who were seen going into their hall one night, entered with cigars in their mouths. Yet Christian men pretend there is nothing evil in such associations.

—A young man who despises the lodge was saluted by a Masonic church member after prayer-meeting and the Masonic brother introduced Freemasonry to substantiate some assertions he was making. The young man stood his ground against the Masons who flocked about him. The conversation was interrupted by the Worshipful Master of a lodge, who led the prayer-meeting that night. He told the young man he must not mention Freemasonry there again —"If you do we will put you out."

—"I have quit the Odd-fellows," said a young man a few days since. "How did that come about?" we inquired, "Well I am a Christian and always felt some doubt about what I saw in the lodge, but when I bought of your agent a book on the subject I saw plainly the evil of the order." Others are seeing the same thing. The wonder is that they did not see it sooner.

—The same young man said that the larger part of the 140 members of his lodge were irreligious persons, while many of them considered Odd-fellowship a substitute for Christianity. This he said, was the first thing which alarmed him. The same young man has told some of his relatives, who are Masons, what he has concluded, and he found they were of the same mind and were ready to renounce.

—Governor Long and other distinguished citizens of the Commonwealth have formed a citizens' league (not secret) to secure a vote against licensing saloons. They have appealed to the people to reclaim the cities of the State from the control of license men.

—Is this in America? Read it and see if it sounds like it: "The Grand Temple of Vermont, Ancient Arabic Order of Masonic Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, was instituted at Masonic hall, Montpelier, October 24." The following are the titles of some of the officers: "Illustrious Grand Potentate," "Illustrious Chief Rabban," "Illustrious Assistant Rabban," "Illustrious High Priest," "Illustrious Oriental Guide," and much more of the same stuff.

—If you wish to know why so-called Christians find the lodges so congenial, talk with them and you will be surprised at their imperfect knowledge of Christianity. One lodge man, a church member, recently defended the necessity and the right of Christians to be "unequally yoked together with unbelievers."

—Another case of Odd-fellowship "benevolence" has come to light. A gentleman was twenty years a member of the order and regularly paid his dues, under the rules of the lodge which promised him $4 per week should he be disabled. He was seriously injured by an accident and was an invalid for eight years. At first the lodge kept its agreement, but finally wearied of that kind of benevolence and refused to stand by its rules. The man was advised to sue for what he was entitled to, but found the order was not incorporated and no suit could be maintained.

—Connecticut and New Hampshire are the only New England States which joined the Western States in putting in nomination a full American party ticket. The associated press despatches gave us some statements about the Illinois Anti-masonic ticket. The other States were not mentioned.

—These lines from the "Bigelow Papers" will do very well for a modern confession of faith—not what "I believe," but "what I'm willing you should believe:"

> "I'm willin' a man should go tollable strong
> Agin wrong in the abstract, fer that kind of wrong
> Is allers unpop'lar, an' never gits pitied,
> Because it's a crime no one ever committed;
> But he mus'n't be hard on partickler sins,
> Cos then he'll be kickin' the people's own shins."

—A man in Connecticut publishes a political card signed by "C. H. Cooley, grand dictator of the Knights of Honor, district director of the Knights of Honor Mutual Benefit Association, past regent of the Royal Arcanum, and director of the Pratt and Whitney Mutual Benefit Association."

A Peep into an Odd-fellows' Lodge.

Not many "profanes" have such a chance. The "vulgar" are generally exclnded. Before us lies an Odd-fellow journal full of that particular kind of news which that gentry are supposed to delight in. A few sample paragraphs will reveal to us at once wherein the work of the lodge excels in valne and importance that of the church. Here is a report of an Odd-fellows' prayer meeting!

After doing the initiatory work and completing lodge business the brethren were invited to the banquet hall, where the fourth degree paraphernalia confronted them in the shape of smoking chowder, hot coffee, etc. They all seemed proficient in working this degree, at the completion of which we are informed "the brethren were supplied with a choice grade of Dublin cigarettes, under the soothing influences of which, while the aromatic clouds of smoke rose to the ceiling, a general season of good feeling prevailed, enlivened by stories, jokes and recitations."

Doubtless the Odd-fellow pastor was present, together with the good deacon, both of whom came out talking of the glories of the order, its noble work and announcing in grave accents that they "see nothing in Odd-fellowship inconsistent with Christianity."

Another brother lauds the efforts of a member to commit the ritual. Here are his statements:

One Odd-fellow I have in mind began his reformed experience by committing to memory the conductor's initiatory charge. It probably took him two hours to learn that charge so he could say it without the book. Was that all he did? To my certain knowledge that brother spent weeks and months of all the leisure time he could spare upon that short composition. What was he doing? the reader will ask. He was posturing before a mirror, (for effect on the brethren) was repeating it in the presence of competent critics, was studying the inflection and every shade of meaning of each emphatic word so that the impression (on both lodge and candidate) might be the best one. In initiating a man, especially should the candidate be one well educated, which conductor would you choose to produce the best results upon a lodge, that one or the ordinary officer?

Doubtless the conductor practiced most on the dramatic act of chaining the man and leading him in good style up to the skeleton in the coffin!

But all Odd-fellows do not posture two hours before a looking glass to become proficient in the sublime ridiculousness of the order. Another writer describes the ignorami as follows:

A favorite expression with this class is that they "know the old five degrees very well; they can pass a good examination in them, but haven't posted up in the new order of things." Occasionally they have to take back-water from the questionings of some one, who, expert in the new work, likewise remembers the old. When thus cornered the grumblers "hedge" again under some convenient pretext.

Now while the ministers of the Gospel are diligently preparing to do nothing this winter, and while they are boldly and courageously determined not to mention the evils of secret societies, they may learn from the following quotation how the Odd-fellows propose to have a revival:

These winter months are just the best time for brothers to find out the best men to become members of our fraternity, and we hope the time may be when there is not a man on the earth who is in every way desirable who is not or who will not soon become, an Odd-fellow.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Example of Jesus.

Editor Cynosure:—I like the bold, clear, decided and Scriptural stand which you have taken and endeavor to maintain on the subjects which you have so ably discussed in your paper. Jesus said to the high priest (John 18:20) when on trial for his life: "I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing." All his acts, his words and his ways were manifest to mankind. He came to benefit man; to teach him the right kind of truths; to set before him a perfect example, to pursue a course that it would be safe for men to follow. He belonged to no secret organization or secluded body of men; but the church which he established was to be as open in its teachings and ways as he himself was. Its members were to imitate him, let their light shine before the world and not confine themselves to a room where signs were to be given, an oath taken, and where the doors must be kept carefully closed lest an intruder should appear and see what was going on within. Who ever started an organization of this kind could not have been a follower of Christ, at least in this respect; and it is a little difficult for us to see how any true follower of the meek and lowly Jesus can unite with, remain in, and take pleasure in belonging to such societies. And yet many professed followers of him do join them and remain in them; but whether their connection with them adds to their piety, their spiritual purity, or their usefulness in the world, is a question. If such societies had been needful for the purity, piety and spiritual influence of the church, would not Christ have established and patronized them? And would not his apostles have followed him in this as in other respects? But in all my study and reading of the New Testament, I never have found the least intimation that one of them, either Paul, Peter or James, had anything to do or connection with such organizations as are common at the present day.

It is to be hoped that you will have success in your enterprise, and you surely will, if properly conducted; for the cause of truth and of right, though it may struggle hard and be contemned for a time, must prevail at last. Christianity has met with violent opposition for these 1800 years, but it must finally triumph. When the seventh angel sounds, Rev. 18:15, great voices will be heard in heaven, saying, "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever." The persecuted will finally triumph. His name is "King of kings and Lord of lords." There will be no secret societies then.

Our Mail.

M. A. W. asks us to describe the Masonic sign of death. One away down in the thirty-first or second degree answers as follows:

"The 'sign of death' referred to in the inclosed letter may mean either one of the morality, scientific or religious signs, viz., throat cutting, tongue pulling, breast tearing, heart plucking, body severing or ashes scattering. If the destroying angels are Holy Royal Arch Masons and wish to assist a gentleman according to Masonic holiness rules they may cut off his right ear and hand, split his tongue, throw away his heart and smite off his skull. Or if the Masonic angels have gone way down, down, down, into Masonic holiness and are in direct communication with the supreme author and finisher of Masonic faith, the said author (devil) may suggest a score or more plans to murder, all of which may be strictly Masonic, named in the obligations, the keeping of which according to Mackey will make them free from sin. Masonry tells how to cut throats and retain the moral part of the transaction, viz., cut the throat across and from ear to ear."

A cripple nearly seventy-four years of age orders his his Cynosure changed to Windsor, Mass., and writes:

"May heaven richly reward the kind hearted one who ordered the paper for me and grant success to every effort against the anti-Christian system of oath-bound secrecy. I know not how much longer I may be able to read or write, but of late I seem to be drawing nearer the close of my pilgrimage. Nearly seventy-four years I have lived in this world; nearly sixteen of the years last past have been unable to stand on my feet, and the confinement has been far from pleasant. But it is not my purpose to complain of my lot, or murmur at the dealings of him who doeth all things well. No, no; if this be the chastisement from a loving Father's hand, and for my profit that I might be partaker of his holiness I certainly should not complain. Yours in the comforting hope of the ultimate triumphs of Gospel truth and righteousness and in the appropriate use of intelligent instrumentalities in such triumphs, James M. Whipple."

Sec'y Nat'l Christian Ass'n:

Dear Sir:—You can have no appreciable idea of how much the cause of our Christ could be extended by distributing your Anti-Masonic tracts, and other similar publications not only in Chicago, but throughout the United States, among the colored people. I hasten to sound this alarm with all the power of one who daily sees the growing and malignant evil of this agency of Satan. In view of the fact that many of our prominent ministers and leaders are identified with that institution and other secret societies, thereby impeding the progress of Christianity, I beg that you will give this yoar early attention in the hope that our Heavenly Father may control and make successful your every effort.

We hope to issue it next March.

Wm. A. Pratt, Deep River, Conn.:

"I believe God is on our side and we will win some day."

Clayton Mallory, Panacea, Mo.:

"I well remember the part Thurlow Weed took in the Morgan affair. The first vote I cast was Anti-masonic and if I live I shall cast one for Blanchard and Conant, and will try to get more to do so."

Martin Myers, Weston, Oregon:

"Hope the time will soon come when Christians at least will learn to let secretism alone."

W. H. Layton, Blackmore, Iowa:

"I am still working. I love to work for Christ. I think the path grows brighter, and I believe it will until the perfect day."

M. M. Ames, Menomonee, Wis.:

"The Cynosure and tracts are doing a silent but thorough and good work in this region of country. 'In the Coils' burns its way. We hope 'Holden with Cords' will be bound soon."

We expect to issue it in the spring.

SABBATH SCHOOL.

LESSON XI Dec. 10, 1882.—His Resurrection.—Mark 16:1-8.

(1) And when the Sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him. (2) And very early in the morning, the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun. (3) And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre? (4) And when they looked they saw that the stone was rolled away: for it was very great. (5) And entering into the sepulchre they saw a young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment: and they were affrighted. (6) And he saith unto them, Be not affrighted: ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: he is risen; he is not here: behold the place where they laid him. (7) But go your way, tell his disciples and Peter that he goeth before you into Galilee: there shall ye see him as he said unto you. (8) And they went out quickly, and fled from the sepulchre; for they trembled and were amazed: neither said they any thing to any man; for they were afraid.

PROMPTINGS TO FURTHER STUDY.

Where in the New Testament is the first day of the week called "the Lord's day?" In what instance had Jesus directed the stone to be taken away from the mouth of a tomb? If Christ hath not been raised, then what is vain, and who are of all men most pitiable? Where is the resurrection spoken of as the powerful declaration that Jesus was the Son of God? Where is the resurrection set forth as the measure of God's power toward them who believe; and in what particulars?

—Scholar's Quarterly.

At the moment Christ died, nothing could have seemed more abjectly weak, more painfully hopeless, more absolutely doomed to scorn and extinction and dispair, than the church which he had founded. It numbered but a handful of weak followers. They were poor, they were ignorant, they were hopeless. They could not claim a single synagogue or a single sword. So feeble were they, and insignificant, that it would have looked like foolish partiality to prophesy for them the limited existence of a Galilean sect. How was it that these dull and ignorant men, with their cross of wood, triumphed over the deadly fascinations of sensual mythologists, conquered kings and their armies, and overcame the world? There is one, and only one, possible answer—the resurrection from the dead. All this vast revolution was due to the power of Christ's resurrection.—Farrar.

Come and anoint him. Embalm him; or apply these spices to his body to keep it from putrefaction. This is proof that they did not suppose he would rise again. And the fact that they did not expect he would rise, gives more strength to the evidence for his resurrection.—Jacobus. The hurried burial had not permitted this anointing to be completed; it had been commenced by Nicodemus at the time of the interment (John 19:39, 40). Perhaps the women were ignorant of that; perhaps they wished to add their own offerings.—Abbott.

He is risen. "Through woman death was first introduced into the world; to woman the first announcement was made of the resurrection."

Proofs of Christ's Resurrection. I have been used for many years to study the history of other times, and to examine and weigh the evidences of those who have written about them; and I know of no one fact in the history of mankind which is proved by better and fuller evidence of every sort, to the mind of a fair inquirer, than that Christ died, and rose again from the dead.—Dr. Arnold. Moreover, it was precisely the same body which was buried that rose again, or all proofs fail.

I. Proved by the friends of Christ. (1) The apostles had the most powerful faith in the fact. They were unanimous in their declaration of it a few days after, on the very spot on which it occurred, and that to men who were prepared to do anything to conceal the fact. (2) This faith came in direct opposition to their previous beliefs and worldly interests. They had no expectation and no hope of such resurrection. (3) They had every opportunity for thoroughly satisfying themselves on this point. (4) By their declaration of the fact they induced thousands of the very enemies of Christ to believe in it, and that close to the time and near the very spot on which it occurred. The early church universally believed in it; and it is incredible that a myth, a false story, should have so grown up without substantial foundation.—From Thomas' Genius of the Gospel. (5) They attested this fact not only by their lives but by their death. (6) Only the fact of the resurrection can account for the marvellous change in the spirit and character of the apostles. The resurrection completely transformed them; inspired them with a new conception of Christ's kingdom as for all people, with a new courage to suffer for the sake of their risen Lord and his kingdom, and with a new purpose to preach Christ and him crucified everywhere as a spiritual redemption for sin (Acts 2:39; 5:41; 10:43). Neither fraud nor fiction is competent to account for the moral contrast. (7) A singular and significant testimony to the truth of the resurrection is afforded by the change in the Sabbath day. It was changed, not by any express command in the New Testament, but by the almost universal consent of the church, which could not endure to observe as a day of joy and gladness that on which Christ lay in the tomb, nor forbear to mark as a weekly festival that on which he arose.—Abbott.

II. Proved by the enemies of Christ. (2) It was impossible for these enemies to deny that Christ had by some means left the grave. (3) It was impossible for them to give any other explanation than that which they now invented—that his disciples stole the body. (3) It was impossible for this, the only explanation they could give, to be credited; for (a) the disciples could not have stolen him if they would: (b) it was in the last degree improbable that all the Roman watch were asleep; (c) nor would the Jewish council have voted money merely to have reported a truth; (d) if the soldiers slept, they could not have known that the disciples stole the body; their story contradicted itself.—Genius of the Gospel.

The Importance of the Resurrection. (1) This resurrection is the crowning proof that Christ is the Son of God. If he could not conquer death, and come back from heaven, he could not prove that at the first he came from heaven. (2) It is proof of immortal life beyond the grave; that death does not end all, but the soul lives after the body dies. (3) It is the assurance of our own resurrection. (4) It shows that our Saviour has power over every one of our enemies. (5) It teaches the moral resurrection, that being dead to sin we should be alive unto God.—Peloubet.

—Dr. Holland said, "Faith draws the poison from every grief, takes the sting from every loss, and quenches the fire of every pain; and only faith can do it."

HOME AND FARM.

The Fat Stock Show.

The annual exhibition of fat stock has grown to be one of the permanent features of Chicago. This great city furnishes disappointment and vexation enough to its tributary country in parades, fairs, races and exhibitions which are all show and nothing substantial behind them. This one, however, is a fine exception,—it is all solid, substantial, ponderous. It is moreover a show in which the city furnishes only the accommodation, while the country exhibits some of its best products to the admiration of the town people. The size of this exhibition may be inferred from the fact that there were set up on the wide floor of the Exhibition building 226 stalls for horses and cattle and 83 for sheep and swine, and the poultry exhibition beside was quite a display of itself.

The horses shown were few, eleven English draft horses, imported by J. H. Truman of this city, powerful, heavy-limbed animals, more attractive to the eye of the city teamster than the country plowman. They have not the weight, but seem more muscular than the Norman stock.

The herds of Short horns, Herefords and Polled Angus cattle were the great attraction. Mr. Sherman, of the Union Stock Yards, leads year by year in specialities. His heavy steer led the list at 3055 pounds, a huge red beast, equalled nearly in size but not in weight by two white steers, one owned by Allen Varner of Indianola, Ill., weighing 2850lbs, the other by H. B. Varnum, Marshall, Iowa, weight, 2715lbs. A pair of twin steers from Ashtabula Co., Ohio, were a great attraction—a handsome red in color, and tipping the scales at 2765 and 2485lbs. A lot of five fine white and roan Short horns from Canada were noted for their beauty of form and fine keeping. The Short horns were most numerous and showed a capacity for greater development than the Herefords, while for the latter is claimed the best beef and quicker maturity. The contest between the breeds has at several exhibitions been warm; this year however the former led, exhibiting the best lot of five and best single steer. D. McMoninger, Galvin, Iowa; J. D. Gillett Elkhart, Ill.; and J. H. Potts & Son, Jacksonville, Ill., exhibited the largest herds of Short horns. Potts and Gillett each listed fourteen animals which had gained over two pounds weight per day of their lives. T. L. Miller of Beecher, Ill., made a fine display of Hereford cattle which presented more uniformity in weight and growth than their rivals. A half dozen of the black, hornless Polled Angus breed were exhibited by a Canada owner. This Scotch breed, while less attractive in form and size, are said to have qualities of quick development and fine grade of beef which render them in these respects superior. Considerable importations of these have have been made within a year or two past by wealthy Chicagoans who own stock farms.

The sheep on exhibition were fine representatives of the Oxford, Cotswold, Southdown, Shropshire, Merino and Leicester breeds. M. N. Hood of Guelph, Canada, was one of the largest exhibitors. To Simon Beattie, Annan, Scotland, were credited four pens of fine animals. Mrs. Annie Newton of Pontiac, Mich., had also a fine display, chiefly of the Shropshire strain.

J. A. Countryman of Rochelle, Ill., and Taylor Bros. of Waynesville, Ill., exhibited the largest show of hogs. The latter took the premium for the heaviest fat hog, a Berkshire. They owned also the hog showing the largest daily gain, which averaged 2.90lbs. from date of birth. Mr. Countryman's fine exhibit were all of the Poland China breed and attracted universal attention. One hog a Chester White, owned by J. A. Brown & Son, Decatur, Ill., was scheduled at 650 pounds. G. W. Stoner, LaPlace, Ill., showed a Jersey Red weighing 600lbs.; twelve other hogs in the show were marked over 500; while thirty-two showed an average gain of over one pound per day.

The Poultry show was not large but fine, leading off with a huge Thanksgiving gobbler of 29lbs. weight, raised by Bush & Blodgett, Downers Grove, Ill. This firm owned the premium gobler, wt. 27lbs.; also a huge gander, wt. 24lbs. Their White Brahma fowls were fine, but we have seen better specimens of the Plymouth Rocks.

The show closed on Wednesday, having been open a week, and attracting daily from office, store and parlor thousands of people who were thankful to thus gratify their taste for something more serious, substantial and useful than the stock quotations or the gewgaws of fashion.

Words of Life for every Day.

SANCTIFY THEM THROUGH THY TRUTH; THY WORD IS TRUTH.

Thursday, Nov. 30.—As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten; be zealous, therefore, and repent. Rev. 3:19.

Friday, Dec. 1.—And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul; but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell. Matt. 10:28.

Saturday, Dec. 2.—Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into the harvest. Matt. 9:38.

Sabbath, Dec. 3.—And when the centurion, which stood over against him, saw that he so cried out, and gave up the ghost, he said, Truly this man was the Son of God. Mark 15:39.

Monday, Dec. 4.—But the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear ye not therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows. Matt. 10:30-31.

Tuesday, Dec. 5.—Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal; but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal.—Matt. 6:19 20.

Wednesday, Dec. 6.—Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us. Heb. 12:1.

—A century since, in the north of Europe stood an old cathedral, upon one of the arches of which was a sculptured face of wondrous beauty. It was long hidden, until one day the sun light striking through a slanted window revealed its matchless features. And ever after, year by year, upon the days when for a brief hour it was thus illumed, crowds came and waited eagerly to catch but a glimpse of that face. It had a strange history. When the cathedral was being built an old man, broken with the weight of years and care, came and besought the architect to let him work upon it. Out of pity for his age, but fearful lest his failing sight and trembling touch might mar some fair design, the master set him to work in the shadows of the vaulted roof. One day they found the old man asleep in death, the tools of his craft laid in order beside him, the cunning of his right hand gone, his face upturned to this other marvelous face which he had wrought there—the face of one whom he had loved and lost in his early manhood. And when the artists and sculptors and workmen from all parts of the cathedral came and looked upon that face they said. "This is the grandest work of all; love wrought this?"

In the great cathedral of the ages—the Temple being built for an habitation of God—we shall all learn sometime that love's work is the grandest of all.—J. L. Russell.

American Party Papers.

These papers represent and seek to promote the principles of the American Party. Four of them are now published as follows:

New England American, by E. D. Bailey, 8 Portland St., Worcester, Mass.;

Illinois American, by Ezra A. Cook, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.;

Michigan American, by Elder H. A. Day, Coldwater, Mich.;

Iowa American, by N. Bourne, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

The Indiana American has been voted by the State Association; Elder I. W. Lowman, Goshen, Ind., editor.

These papers are published monthly and are uniform in size and in price as follows:

TERMS, POST-PAID:

Single copies, per year								25 cents.
5 copies to one address 1 year								$ 1.00
12	"	"	or 9 to	9 addresses 1 year				2.00
50	"	"	" 40 "	40	"	"		7.00
150	"	"	" 100 "	100	"	"		15.00

Most of the matter in these papers is also used in the Cynosure, and the great object in starting them is to afford friends an extremely efficient and cheap way of introducing and promoting this reform. A few friends could club in together and by raising $15.00 per year, either have the paper sent directly to 100 different, persons or have one hundred and fifty copies sent monthly for distribution.

The influence of these papers for good, when received regularly by 100 families in any neighborhood, can scarcely be overestimated.

REFORM NOTE-PAPER AND ENVELOPES.

As a needed means of spreading the truth regarding secrecy, a collection of the utterances of Scripture and various noted statesmen and ministers has been prepared and printed in tasteful form at the top of note-paper and on both sides of envelopes (the matter on the paper being entirely different from that on the envelopes.) A blank line for date is also printed in. The envelopes can be furnished either white or colored; both envelopes and paper being of the ordinary size and of good quality.

PRICES:

No. 5 Envelopes, 3x5¼ inches, $4 per 1000; postpaid 60 cents per 100
Note Paper, 5½x8¼ " $3 " 40

The matter contained on this stationery is pithy and forcible, and will do good work. Use it.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1882.

WOMEN POLITICIANS.—In England women property-holders have long voted, and this leads educated English women to study politics. Read carefully Lady Russell's, the Court ladies', and the Queen of England's prevention of a double war at once, with England and the South, in Thurlow Weed's statement to Secretary Stoddard.

A THING OMITTED in Mr. Weed's statement herein given, is this, Lincoln sent him to England to prevent war. To avoid offending our minister Charles Francis Adams, he first landed in France till Adams sent for him. Before seeing Lord John Russell's grounds with Lady Russell, he had a map of them given him and he knew all about them before he saw them. This pleased his hostess.

A NEW THING IN THE EARTH.—A private citizen has died, and the press from center to circumference of the United States, has gazetted his sickness from day to day, as a President's sickness in this country, or that of a monarch in Europe! And now the columns of city dailies, and remote frontier weeklies will be loaded, for a time, with intelligence concerning him. We knew that our government was in the hands of Anti-masons during the Rebellion; but we did not know, till we heard Secretary Stoddard's statement, that Thurlow Weed was God's hand in moving Mr. Lincoln to place it there. Seward, Stevens, Stanton and Chase were Mr. Weed's nominees.

The Oshkosh Meeting.

The hand bills were sixty miles away at Calono; the weather was cold, and the people utterly ignorant of even the name and nature of the N. C. A.

But president Collins and agent Lowe met us. They had toiled unweariedly; and though the meetings began small, the second night the hall was filled, and some standing about the door.

The death of Thurlow Weed came in the papers, and we spent a day beyond time allotted for the Convention, to hold a memorial meeting and I spoke at evening at large in the Presbyterian church, where we had an important though small congregation. The snow fell in the night, and, a sfirst snows do, chilled the attendance, which the lodge had sufficiently chilled before. But several ministers and church officers and "honorable women" were out; and although I did not speak well, they understood every point made.

The Presbyterian minister's name is Bacon, and he bears a strong resemblance to his remote relative, the late Leonard Bacon, and has his long-headedness with more of the simplicity there is in Christ. Mrs. Bacon has promised a poem for the Cynosure. There are calls for our "Holden with Cords," and we have writers of genius, but this lady may if God please, write the Uncle Tom's Cabin of this reform.

Editorial Letters.

OSHKOSH, Nov. 21, 1882.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Our Convention opens today. Brethren Lowe and Collins are here and assiduous. Yesterday (Monday) I attended the ministers meeting. Ten were present. One, Rev. Mr. Jones, Methodist, gave an interesting report of his European travel, just returned. I gave notice of our Convention here, and Mr. Jones gave notice that Masonic degrees would be worked, and bore witness to our Bro. Collins, that he "knew him and that he was a good man." I do not know Bro. Jones' status as to the lodge, but he certainly did God good service in giving the notice of the degree-work.

In the afternoon I visited the magnificent Normal school building. President Albee is a born Vermonter, an able educator, and withal, a gentlemanly man. He has alternative Bible reading in the morning, and has thus far been enabled to keep all his students (three to five hundred) pleased with chapel exercises. Dr. Bascom, President of Madison (State) University, meets only a handful of students there in morning recognition of God. I think there is a swinging back in these institutions from infidelity and scepticism. The European citizens of Wisconsin want to learn that there is no "by law established" religion in this country; and, when satisfied on that head, will not wish to kick out the Bible, with its forty centuries of authentic history, from our schools.

I am at the house of the Presbyterian minister of this city, whose sweet children were transferred in early childhood, to begin for him and his excellent wife, a family circle in heaven. I hope for a blessed and profitable convention. Surely it is needed. Some Congregational ministers in this part of the State are in the lodges, and one, a pastor, says he "does not wish to be saved by Christ's blood." "The theory," he says, "makes God the murderer of his Son." This is Masonic theology.

Nov. 23.—Our Convention proper closed last night, but as the attendance was diminished by miscarriage of bills, etc., we have concluded that I should stay and speak on the lodge system in the Presbyterian church to-night. Last night Gill's Hall was filled, some standing at the door, and the interest in our meetings is just beginning to awake.

I have never heard Mr. Lowe before. He was an able lodge master and confers the degrees with fluency and accuracy, and the impression on the people last night was very strong. Rev. E. Collins, president of the State Association, Wesleyan; Rev. Mr. Bergen, German Methodist; Rev. Mr. Wheeler, Free Will Baptist; Rev. W. Warner, Wesleyan, and his son, a Wheaton student who preaches at Waupun; and Bro. Ames, down from Menomonee, have taken a lively interest in the meetings. The death of Hon. Thurlow Weed was announced yesterday and memorial services are set for 10 o'clock today. Secretary Stoddard speaks.

On the whole, our Convention has made a very encouraging beginning in this part of the State, where almost nothing has heretofore been known or said of the reform. The summersault in politics will season the temperance reform, which has made such rapid summer growth that it was likely to winter kill. The reverse will blow off the chaff. The politicians who were making prohibition their political kite, will turn back, but the cause will go forward. As old Dr. Beecher used to say, "It has only let go to spit on its hands and take hold afresh."

It is interesting to see the New York Witness give its platform of a new party vs. rings, leaving out the worst of all, the secret rings. There will be a plank against them, all the same. I think Prof. Feemster is mistaken in thinking that woman suffrage is dead. The defeat of St. John will not kill it. It will prune the discussion of false reasoning, and the idea that women are enslaved by not having the ballot; but the discussion is not done. J. BLANCHARD.

THURLOW WEED.—The memorial meeting on Thursday last at Oshkosh adopted the following tribute of respect to the memory of Mr. Weed:

WHEREAS, God has dismissed this distinguished American from his sufferings we hasten to record our gratitude that he was permitted to live to give his dying testimony to the cause which his life did so much to promote.

RESOLVED, that we tender to the members of his family who survive him, the sympathies of the Wisconsin State Christian Association in their affliction and our congratulations for the light in which his long day has closed.

2. That we congratulate the country that he lived to give his dying testimony against the lodge, and seal it with his oath.

3. That we will use our best endeavors to circulate Mr. Weed's pamphlet forthwith throughout the United States.

—Bro. Stoddard returned from Oshkosh on Friday but remained but a short time in the city, hence the promised article on the Cynosure list he has not been able to prepare for this number. While waiting for it, let some good work for new subscribers and especially for renewals prepare for its welcome.

—Again the Cynosure, though full of good things, has the pleasure of saying to its readers that there is more to follow. Reports from Bro. Matthews' work in Iowa last month, and from Father Taylor in Ohio, wait for them, also a letter of deepest interest from Michigan, with the personal statement of another eye-witness to the seizure of Morgan at the Canandaigua jail, and of another witness to the fact that the "Mrs. Monroe," who was of so great assistance to the Masons, was no other than Dr. Lewis, as Mrs. Mather testified so clearly in the Batavia Convention. We give way also this week for Secretary Stoddard's recollections of his visits to Thurlow Weed, and postpone some facts of interest gleaned from the press.

—The disposition of the Knights of Pythias to desecrate the Sabbath with parades and other lodge business, has just caused the Illinois Grand Lodge to take special action against it.

—Every member of the Knights of Pythias order in Illinois is taxed 40 cents a year to sustain the Grand Lodge. This body meets but once a year; estimate, therefore, the round sum which is taxed for all the lodge meetings of the year with special services for dancing,, etc.

—Pres. B. H. Hinsdale of Hiram College wrote some time since in answer to an inquiry respecting President Garfield, that Freemasonry was "a mere incident in his life and his personal friends do not regard his connection with the lodge as of sufficient importance to deserve attention."

—Sabbath school superintendents are now looking about for lesson helps for the coming year, when the schools will generally take up the study of the Acts for the first six months, and of the Old Testament history through Joshua, Judges and 1 Samuel during the second. The "Lesson Helper Quarterly," published by Eugene R. Smith, New York, and with departments by Dr. C. F. Deems, is one of these helps which we should recommend to avoid. During the past few years Dr. Deems has been prominent among the Freemasons of New York; being used by them on public occasions, much as Thomas, Locke, Lorimer and Fallows are used by the Chicago lodges. On the lesson Mark 10:1-16, he makes this comment: "Have I not made unsatisfactory excuses for neglect of home duties? Have I not neglected my home for the school, the society, the order, or the church? Can a man be very useful as a teacher, as a temperance or missionary worker, as a Mason, as a church-member, who does not have daily family worship." This putting the blasphemy, the rejection of Christ, the falsehood, sham and heathenism of Freemasonry along with the Christian church and Christian duty, and teaching it to the children in the Sabbath school is worthy of a Jesuit. Let publishers who allow such teaching in their papers have a wide berth.

NOTICES.

Minnesota.

By request of the friends in the southwestern part of the State, the fifth annual convention of the Minnesota Christian Association will be held in the court house in Blue Earth City, Faribault county, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, December 6th, 7th and 8th, 1882. Blue Earth City is the terminus of the Blue Earth City branch of the C., St. Paul, M. & O. railroad. The friends offer free entertainment and invite a full attendance. Those intending to come will please send their names to Rufus Johnson, Blue Earth City, Minn. Reduced railroad fare returning, on all roads, to those who pay full fare coming. Opening lecture Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock, by Rev. J. P. Stoddard. President C. A. Blanchard is expected to deliver a series of lectures. THOMAS HARTLEY,
Rec. Secretary.

E. G. PAINE,
President.

Kansas.

The Kansas State Christian Association, opposed to secret societies, will meet in convention at the Free Methodist Church, Emporia, at 7 o'clock p. m., Dec. 19th, and continue in session until the 21st Secretary Stoddard and other active and able workers are expected to be present. The place is central and easy of access, and we urge the friends of reform from all parts of the State to be present. Important business will come before the Association. Come, brethren, 'to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty." JOS. ALTER, Sec'y.

Hon. Thurlow Weed.--Remniscences.

RELATION GIVEN TO THE WISCONSIN CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. REPORTED BY VOTE OF THE BODY, FOR THE CYNOSURE BY SECRETARY STODDARD.

The press of this city announced last evening the death of Hon. Thurlow Weed. The announcement accompanied with a rather imperfect likeness of that great, and, I believe, Christian man, revived the memory of many interesting incidents and important facts which he related to me when at his house in September last. It has occurred to me that mention of a few among the many things related during three interviews, might escape the notice of those who will write biographical notices of Mr. Weed.

My first interview with him was at his house No. 12, 12th St. New York, July 24th, 1882. He received me cordially; and when I stated the object of my call he seemed to forget all else and entered at once into a detailed account of the abduction and murder of Captain William Morgan. I told him of the monument that was to be erected to Mr. Morgan at Batavia and asked him to be present and take part in the unveiling ceremonies on the 13th of September. He listened with interest and expressed his entire approval, and gave encouragement that if health would permit he would be present, and if unable to attend in person, he would, if possible, prepare and send to be read on the occasion, a statement of facts. Impaired eye-sight and ill health prevented his attendance, but he was able, by the aid of an amanuensis, to furnish one of the ablest, clearest and most conclusive solutions of the "Morgan mystery" given to the American public. It is a document that should be read by every citizen of our country. It has been issued by the National Christian Association, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, in pamphlet form accompanied with a cut of the Morgan monument and is sent to any address on receipt of five cents.

My next call was on September 23d, after the unveiling at Batavia, and on the day when that terrible storm was raging that swept the Atlantic seaboard. Mr. Weed's grand-daughter answered the door bell and, on learning my name, said "we have been expecting you;" and then led the way to the room where Mr. Weed was resting on an old-fashioned lounge. At the mention of my name, he arose and extending his hand, said, "I am glad to see you. I have been reading about your meeting at Batavia in the papers, and I want to know all about it." I gave him an account of the convention, and answered his questions, as well as I was able. He then proposed to affix his affidavit to that document read at the Convention, if I thought it would add weight to it with the people. I approved of the suggestion and at his request left the document for review, and his affidavit. To show the kindness of his heart, I will mention one little incident. When I was about to leave Mr. Weed accompanied me to the door and, hearing the rain which was falling profusely, he asked, "Have you a good umbrella?" I replied "No, but I do not mind the rain, I shall get along very well without one." He replied "you must take mine;" and, stretching out his hand to where three or four were standing in a case, he selected one with a silk cover and, drawing it out said, "Here take this; you can return it when convenient." I, of course accepted of his kind offer.

I called again on Monday the 25th, and found him cheerful and very ready to converse. He had carefully reviewed his paper to the Convention and wished me to leave it for additions, to which I assented. He then related in an easy, colloquial way many incidents of his life. His earliest recollections were in his father's "log cabin," when he used to climb up a ladder to his little bed in the "loft." He began his public life as a journalist and continued his connection with the press as editor and correspondent up to within a few days of his death. He entered the arena of politics from compulsion rather than choice.

When a journeyman printer in Rochester, N. Y., which at the time was only a village, there was great need for increased banking facilities. Two unsuccessful attempts, attended with heavy expense, had been made to obtain a charter. Mr. Weed was selected to make a third effort and, by careful management succeeded at a comparatively trifling expense. This success was his first introduction to the favorable notice of men of political influence; and, by making judicious use of the advantage gained, his influence increased until he attained a place in the counsels of statesmen, seldom, if ever, possessed by any other American citizen.

About this time (1826) occurred the abduction and murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. News reached Rochester from Batavia, only some thirty miles distant, of a meeting for inquiry and there was a general excitement among the citizens. Mr. Weed alluded to the report in a paper which he was then publishing, which so incensed the Masons that they withdrew their subscriptions in large numbers, and began hostile movements against him. Mr. Weed promptly resigned connection with the paper to save his partner from financial ruin, and looked elsewhere for employment. At Albany, Troy, and other points he found the "craft" had anticipated his applications, and managed to defeat his efforts. These things began to open his eyes, and to reveal to him the true character of the lodge. It was not until he had seen the lodges carry a municipal election in Rochester over both the political parties, that he fully comprehended their power; and, even then, he strove with all his ability to keep the question of Anti-masonry out of State politics, and so preserve intact the Whig party to which he belonged.

The people, however, were aroused, and, despite the efforts of Seward, Granger, Weed and others, they took the question to the ballot-box and kept it there until they triumphed in the State politics of New York and several other States, and 228,000 votes were cast for Wirt and Ellmaker. Seward and Weed were firm friends, and Mr. Weed ardently desired Mr. Seward's election to the Presidency. In this desire almost the whole country concurred. Extensive preparations were made for Mr. Seward's nomination at the Chicago convention in 1860. Mr. Greeley was opposed to Seward's nomination, and secured the appointment of delegates in Vermont, who entertained the same views. In relating the history of that movement Mr. Weed remarked, "It is said Greeley packed the Vermont delegation through the lodges; but I never could believe that he would resort to such a measure. Yet it is said that every Vermont delegate was a Freemason, and the delegation went solid against Seward." Speaking of the Virginia delegates he said they were instructed for Seward, but in convention they disregarded their instructions. Afterwards two of those Virginia delegates explained to Mr. Weed the reason of their course in the convention by saying: "We were not aware, until we reached Chicago, that this was the Seward who had so much to do with the Anti-masonic excitement in western New York."

After Mr. Lincoln's election, he often summoned Mr. Weed for counsel at critical periods during the war and was largely influenced by his advice in making appointments. When our affairs with Great Britain were becoming complicated on account of the Mason-Slidell case and the Alabama difficulty, President Lincoln sent Mr. Weed on a mission of peace. With his daughter, he landed in Paris and there waited advices from Hon. Charles Francis Adams, then Minister at her Majesty's court. Receiving an invitation, he hastened to London and, after a conference with Mr. Adams, at length secured an interview with Lord John Russell, Prime Minister of England, at his country seat. The great rebellion, and especially the Alabama difficulty, was the theme of discussion. Lord Russell was unyielding in his demands that humiliating reparation should be made for the insult offered to the British flag. Earnest conference followed in which the whole case was canvassed and the wrong which our goverment had done was freely acknowledged. Lord Russell was stern, and the conversation closed with little prospect of an amicable settlement. Lady Russell had been a silent, but a deeply interested listener. She invited Mr. Weed to view the parks and grounds around their mansion and when about to dismiss him, said quietly, "Women are not supposed to know anything of politics, or to have any influence in affairs of state, but I thought it might be a comfort to you to know that you have one friend." Mr. Weed assured me that this was the first ray of hope that appeared in the case, and that it lifted a heavy load from his heart. He then gave a detailed account of how, through the influence of Lady Russell, aided by other ladies at court whom she enlisted with her, the document that had been prepared as the final demand of the British government on our own, was brought to the Queen's notice. After reading it the Queen exclaimed, "Oh I cannot think of a bloody war between our government and the United States!" She then took her pen, and with her own hand erased the most offensive features of the demand, and, then sent for Prince Albert to ask his advice. The Prince was too ill to leave his room. She then sent the revised paper to him. He made still further modifications which so changed the conditions imposed that our government could make the concession without compromising its own honor and self respect; England was kept from open alliance with the confederate States; and thus a double war, with Great Britain and the Rebellion, was averted at the most critical moment of our nation's existence, under God by the sagacious statesmanship of Mr. Weed, aided by Lady Russell and other ladies at court. Thousands of lives and millions of property were saved, and amicable relations maintained between the two dominant powers in the civilized world! Had Mr. Weed accomplished nothing more than this one victory, he would have deserved the deepest gratitude of every patriot and philanthropist on this globe, and merited a place among the most distinguished of the great men of earth.

After listening for hours to the recital of unwritten history in connection with the most important events in our civil history, I said, "Mr. Weed, how does it come that while you have been making other men Presidents, senators and governors, you have never been President yourself?" He replied, "I never wanted an office, and wouldn't have one. This the politicians knew; and they always confided in me, knowing that I would not betray or supplant them. The men who have the greatest influence in shaping national movements are not, as a rule, the men who come prominently before the people; but the men who study public affairs, and wisely but quietly control them." It will be acknowledged, I think, by all who knew Mr. Weed, that he practiced his own theory with great fidelity, and that this, with other great qualities, was the secret of his success.

My last visit to Mr. Weed was on the 28th of September. He had carefully revised his letter and made such additions as he wished; so that it is the thoroughly considered and carefully revised statement of his accurate recollections. He called in a notary and said, "I wish to make oath to this paper in the most direct and simple form." Mr. Doty then wrote the following form of oath:

Thurlow Weed, being duly sworn, says that the foregoing statements are true.

THURLOW WEED.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 28th day of September, 1882.

SPENCER C. DOTY, Notary Public,
17 Union Square, New York City.

to which Mr. Weed, while I looked on, affixed his signature, with his own trembling hand.

—A mural tablet has been erected in the 1st church of New Haven reading as follows:

BY THE GRACE OF GOD
LEONARD BACON.

A servant of Jesus Christ and of all men for his sake, here preached the gospel for fifty-seven years. Fearing God and having no fear beside, loving righteousness and hating iniquity, friend of liberty and law, helper of Christian missions, teacher of teachers, promoter of every good work. He blessed the city and the Nation by ceaseless labors and a holy life, and departed peacefully into rest December 24th, 1881, leaving the world better for having lived in it.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1882.

WOMEN POLITICIANS.—In England women property-holders have long voted, and this leads educated English women to study politics. Read carefully Lady Russell's, the Court ladies', and the Queen of England's prevention of a double war at once, with England and the South, in Thurlow Weed's statement to Secretary Stoddard.

A THING OMITTED in Mr. Weed's statement herein given, is this, Lincoln sent him to England to prevent war. To avoid offending our minister Charles Francis Adams, he first landed in France till Adams sent for him. Before seeing Lord John Russell's grounds with Lady Russell, he had a map of them given him and he knew all about them before he saw them. This pleased his hostess.

A NEW THING IN THE EARTH.—A private citizen has died, and the press from center to circumference of the United States, has gazetted his sickness from day to day, as a President's sickness in this country, or that of a monarch in Europe! And now the columns of city dailies, and remote frontier weeklies will be loaded, for a time, with intelligence concerning him. We knew that our government was in the hands of Anti-masons during the Rebellion; but we did not know, till we heard Secretary Stoddard's statement, that Thurlow Weed was God's hand in moving Mr. Lincoln to place it there. Seward, Stevens, Stanton and Chase were Mr. Weed's nominees.

The Oshkosh Meeting.

The hand bills were sixty miles away at Calono; the weather was cold, and the people utterly ignorant of even the name and nature of the N. C. A.

But president Collins and agent Lowe met us. They had toiled unweariedly; and though the meetings began small, the second night the hall was filled, and some standing about the door.

The death of Thurlow Weed came in the papers, and we spent a day beyond time allotted for the Convention, to hold a memorial meeting and I spoke at evening at large in the Presbyterian church, where we had an important though small congregation. The snow fell in the night, and, a sfirst snows do, chilled the attendance, which the lodge had sufficiently chilled before. But several ministers and church officers and "honorable women" were out; and although I did not speak well, they understood every point made.

The Presbyterian minister's name is Bacon, and he bears a strong resemblance to his remote relative, the late Leonard Bacon, and has his long-headedness with more of the simplicity there is in Christ. Mrs. Bacon has promised a poem for the Cynosure. There are calls for our "Holden with Cords," and we have writers of genius, but this lady may if God please, write the Uncle Tom's Cabin of this reform.

Editorial Letters.

OSHKOSH, Nov. 21, 1882.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Our Convention opens today. Brethren Lowe and Collins are here and assiduous. Yesterday (Monday) I attended the ministers meeting. Ten were present. One, Rev. Mr. Jones, Methodist, gave an interesting report of his European travel, just returned. I gave notice of our Convention here, and Mr. Jones gave notice that Masonic degrees would be worked, and bore witness to our Bro. Collins, that he "knew him and that he was a good man." I do not know Bro. Jones' status as to the lodge, but he certainly did God good service in giving the notice of the degree-work.

In the afternoon I visited the magnificent Normal school building. President Albee is a born Vermonter, an able educator, and withal, a gentlemanly man. He has alternative Bible reading in the morning, and has thus far been enabled to keep all his students (three to five hundred) pleased with chapel exercises. Dr. Bascom, President of Madison (State) University, meets only a handful of students there in morning recognition of God. I think there is a swinging back in these institutions from infidelity and scepticism. The European citizens of Wisconsin want to learn that there is no "by law established" religion in this country; and, when satisfied on that head, will not wish to kick out the Bible, with its forty centuries of authentic history, from our schools.

I am at the house of the Presbyterian minister of this city, whose sweet children were transferred in early childhood, to begin for him and his excellent wife, a family circle in heaven. I hope for a blessed and profitable convention. Surely it is needed. Some Congregational ministers in this part of the State are in the lodges, and one, a pastor, says he "does not wish to be saved by Christ's blood." "The theory," he says, "makes God the murderer of his Son." This is Masonic theology.

Nov. 23.—Our Convention proper closed last night, but as the attendance was diminished by miscarriage of bills, etc., we have concluded that I should stay and speak on the lodge system in the Presbyterian church to-night. Last night Gill's Hall was filled, some standing at the door, and the interest in our meetings is just beginning to awake.

I have never heard Mr. Lowe before. He was an able lodge master and confers the degrees with fluency and accuracy, and the impression on the people last night was very strong. Rev. E. Collins, president of the State Association, Wesleyan; Rev. Mr. Bergen, German Methodist; Rev. Mr. Wheeler, Free Will Baptist; Rev. W. Warner, Wesleyan, and his son, a Wheaton student who preaches at Waupun; and Bro. Ames, down from Menomonee, have taken a lively interest in the meetings. The death of Hon. Thurlow Weed was announced yesterday and memorial services are set for 10 o'clock today. Secretary Stoddard speaks.

On the whole, our Convention has made a very encouraging beginning in this part of the State, where almost nothing has heretofore been known or said of the reform. The summersault in politics will season the temperance reform, which has made such rapid summer growth that it was likely to winter kill. The reverse will blow off the chaff. The politicians who were making prohibition their political kite, will turn back, but the cause will go forward. As old Dr. Beecher used to say, "It has only let go to spit on its hands and take hold afresh."

It is interesting to see the New York Witness give its platform of a new party vs. rings, leaving out the worst of all, the secret rings. There will be a plank against them, all the same. I think Prof. Feemster is mistaken in thinking that woman suffrage is dead. The defeat of St. John will not kill it. It will prune the discussion of false reasoning, and the idea that women are enslaved by not having the ballot; but the discussion is not done. J. BLANCHARD.

THURLOW WEED.—The memorial meeting on Thursday last at Oshkosh adopted the following tribute of respect to the memory of Mr. Weed:

WHEREAS, God has dismissed this distinguished American from his sufferings we hasten to record our gratitude that he was permitted to live to give his dying testimony to the cause which his life did so much to promote.

RESOLVED, that we tender to the members of his family who survive him, the sympathies of the Wisconsin State Christian Association in their affliction and our congratulations for the light in which his long day has closed.

2. That we congratulate the country that he lived to give his dying testimony against the lodge, and seal it with his oath.

3. That we will use our best endeavors to circulate Mr. Weed's pamphlet forthwith throughout the United States.

—Bro. Stoddard returned from Oshkosh on Friday but remained but a short time in the city, hence the promised article on the Cynosure list he has not been able to prepare for this number. While waiting for it, let some good work for new subscribers and especially for renewals prepare for its welcome.

—Again the Cynosure, though full of good things, has the pleasure of saying to its readers that there is more to follow. Reports from Bro. Matthews' work in Iowa last month, and from Father Taylor in Ohio, wait for them, also a letter of deepest interest from Michigan, with the personal statement of another eye-witness to the seizure of Morgan at the Canandaigua jail, and of another witness to the fact that the "Mrs. Monroe," who was of so great assistance to the Masons, was no other than Dr. Lewis, as Mrs. Mather testified so clearly in the Batavia Convention. We give way also this week for Secretary Stoddard's recollections of his visits to Thurlow Weed, and postpone some facts of interest gleaned from the press.

—The disposition of the Knights of Pythias to desecrate the Sabbath with parades and other lodge business, has just caused the Illinois Grand Lodge to take special action against it.

—Every member of the Knights of Pythias order in Illinois is taxed 40 cents a year to sustain the Grand Lodge. This body meets but once a year; estimate, therefore, the round sum which is taxed for all the lodge meetings of the year with special services for dancing,, etc.

—Pres. B. H. Hinsdale of Hiram College wrote some time since in answer to an inquiry respecting President Garfield, that Freemasonry was "a mere incident in his life and his personal friends do not regard his connection with the lodge as of sufficient importance to deserve attention."

—Sabbath school superintendents are now looking about for lesson helps for the coming year, when the schools will generally take up the study of the Acts for the first six months, and of the Old Testament history through Joshua, Judges and 1 Samuel during the second. The "Lesson Helper Quarterly," published by Eugene R. Smith, New York, and with departments by Dr. C. F. Deems, is one of these helps which we should recommend to avoid. During the past few years Dr. Deems has been prominent among the Freemasons of New York; being used by them on public occasions, much as Thomas, Locke, Lorimer and Fallows are used by the Chicago lodges. On the lesson Mark 10:1-16, he makes this comment: "Have I not made unsatisfactory excuses for neglect of home duties? Have I not neglected my home for the school, the society, the order, or the church? Can a man be very useful as a teacher, as a temperance or missionary worker, as a Mason, as a church-member, who does not have daily family worship." This putting the blasphemy, the rejection of Christ, the falsehood, sham and heathenism of Freemasonry along with the Christian church and Christian duty, and teaching it to the children in the Sabbath school is worthy of a Jesuit. Let publishers who allow such teaching in their papers have a wide berth.

NOTICES.

Minnesota.

By request of the friends in the southwestern part of the State, the fifth annual convention of the Minnesota Christian Association will be held in the court house in Blue Earth City, Faribault county, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, December 6th, 7th and 8th, 1882. Blue Earth City is the terminus of the Blue Earth City branch of the C., St. Paul, M. & O. railroad. The friends offer free entertainment and invite a full attendance. Those intending to come will please send their names to Rufus Johnson, Blue Earth City, Minn. Reduced railroad fare returning, on all roads, to those who pay full fare coming. Opening lecture Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock, by Rev. J. P. Stoddard. President C. A. Blanchard is expected to deliver a series of lectures. THOMAS HARTLEY,
Rec. Secretary.

E. G. PAINE,
President.
